A Knowest thou the time when the wilde goates bring foorth their yonge, among the stonye rockes? Or layest thou waite when the hindes vse to fawne? reckenest thou the monethes after they engender: that thou knowest the time of their bearing? Or when they lye downe, when they caste their younge ones, and when they are deliuered of their trauaile and paine? Howe their yong ones growe vp, and waxe great B through good feeding? When they go forth, & returne not again vnto them? Who letteth the wilde Asse go free, or who loseth the bonds of the mule? Euen I which haue geuen the wildernesse to be their house, and the vntilled lande to bee their dwellinge place. That they maye gene no force for the multitude of people in the Cities, neyther regarde the crying of the driuer: but seke their pasture aboute the mountaines, and folowe greene grasse. Will the Unicorne be so tame as to do thee seruice, or to abide stil by the cribbe? Canst thou binde the yoke aboue the Unicorne in the furrowe, to make him plowe after thee in the valleyes? Wayest thou truste him (because he is stronge) or commit thy laboure vnto him? Wayest thou beleue him, that he will bringe home thy corne, or to carye anye thinge into C thy barne? Gauest thou the fayre winges vnto the Peacockes, or winges and feathers vnto the Storke? For he leaueth his egges in the earth and layeth theim in the duste. He remembreth not, that they mighte bee troden with feete, or broken with some wilde beast. So hard is he vnto his yonge ones, as though they were not his, and laboureth in vain, without anye feare. And that because God hath taken wisedome from him, and hath not geuen him vnderstandinge. When his time is, that he flyeth vp on hye, he careth neither for horse nor man. Haste thou geuen the horse his strengthe, or learned him to bowe downe his necke with feare, that he letteth him selfe be driuen forth like a grashopper, where as the stowte D neyinge that he maketh, is fearefull? hee breaketh the grounde with the hoofes of his feete cherefullye in his strength, and runneth to mete the harneste men. He layeth aside all feare, his stomacke is not abated, neither starteth he abacke for any swearde. Thoughe the quiuers rattle vppon him, though the speare and shield glister: yet rusheth he in fiersly, and beateth vpon the ground. He feareth not the noise of the trompets: but as sone as he heareth the shawmes blowe, tushe (sayeth he) for he smelleth the battaile a farre off, the noise, the captaines, and the showtinge. Commethe it thoroughe thy wisedome, that the Goshawke flyeth towarde the Southe? Doeth the Egle mount vp, and make his neste on hye at thy commaundement? He abideth in stonye rockes, and vpon the hye tops of hard mountaines, where no man can come. From thence seketh he his praye and loketh farre about with his eyes. His yonge ones are fed with bloud, mat.24. * and where anye deade bodie lyeth, there is he immediately.

MOreouer, God spake vnto Job, and saide: Can he that striueth with the almightie, bee at rest? Shoulde not he which disputeth with God, geue him an answer? Job answered the Lord saying: Beholde, I am to vile a person to answer the: therfore wil I lay my hande vpon my mouthe. Once or twice haue I spoken, but I will say no more. Then answered the Lorde vnto Job out of the storme, and saide: Job.38 * Gird vp thy loines nowe like a man and tell me the thinges that I will aske thee. Wilt thou disanul my iudgement? his mouth go torches, and out of his nostreiles there goeth a smoke, lyke as out of an hotte seething pott. His

℣ The voyce of the Lorde is mighty in operation: the voyce of the Lorde is a glorious voyce.

The voice of the Lord breaketh the Ps.17g • Ceder trees: yea, the Lord breaketh the ceders of Libanus.

He made them also to skippe lyke a Calfe: Lybanus also, and Sirion lyke a yonge vnicorne.

℣ The voyce of the Lorde deuideth the flames of fyre: the voyce of the Lorde shaketh the wildernesse, yea, the Lorde shaketh the wildernesse of Cades.

The voyce of the Lorde maketh the hyndes to bringe foorth yonge, and discouereth the thicke bushes: in his temple doeth euery man speake of his honoure.

The Lorde sytteth aboue the water floude, and the Lorde remayneth a king for euer.

The Lord shall geue strength vnto his people, the Lord shall geue his people the blessing of peace.

Morning prayer.

I Will magnifye thee, O Lord, for thou hast sette me vp, and not made my foes to triumphe ouer me. ℟

O Lorde my God, I cryed vnto thee, and thou hast healed me.

Thou Lord haste brought my soule out of hell: thou haste kepte my lyfe from them that goe downe into the pitte.

Synge prayses vnto the Lorde, (O ye Sainctes of his) and geeue thanks vnto him for a remembraunce of his holynesse. ℟

• For his wrath endureth but the 1 Cor.4.6 twinckelinge of an eye, and in his pleasure is lyfe.

Heuinesse may endure for a night, but ioye commeth in the morning.

And in my prosperitie, I saide, I shall neuer be remoued: thou Lorde of thy goodnes haddest made my hill so stronge,

Thou diddest turne thy face (fro me) and I was troubled. ℣

Then cried I vnto thee, O Lord, and gatte me to my Lorde right humblye.

What profite is there in my bloud, when I go downe to the pitte?

Shall the dust geue thankes vnto thee? Or shall it declare thy trueth? ℟

Heare, O Lorde, and haue mercy vpon me: Lorde be thou my helper.

Thou haste turned my heauines into ioye: thou haste put of my sackcloth and gyrded me with gladnesse.

Therfore shall (euery good man) synge of thy prayse without ceasing: O my God I will geue thankes vnto thee for euer.

℣ The.xxxi. Psalme.

In te domine sperani.

A IN thee, O Lorde, haue I put my truste, let me neuer be put to confusion: deliuer me in thy righteousnesse.

Bowe downe thine eare to mee, make haste to deliuer me.

And be thou my stronge rocke, and an house of defence, that thou mayest saue me.

For thou art my stronge rocke, and my castell: Be thou also my guide, and leade me for thy names sake.

Drawe me out of the net that they haue laide priuely for me: for thou art my strength.

Luk.23a Into thy hands I commend my Acts.7g spirite: for thou hast redemed me, O B Lorde, thou God of trueth.

I haue hated them that holde of superstitious vanities, and my truste hath bene in the Lorde.

I will be glad and reioyce in thy mercy: for thou haste considered my trouble, and hast knowen my soule in aduersities.

Thou hast not shut me vp into the hand of the enemie: but hast sette my feete in a large roome.

Haue mercy vpon me, O Lord, for I am in trouble: and mine eye is consumed for very heauines, yea my soule and my body.

For my lyfe is waxen old with heuinesse: and my yeares with mournynge.

My strength fayleth me, because of myne iniquitie, and my bones are corrupt.

I became a reproche among al mine enemies: but specially amonge my neighbors, and they of mine acquaintaunce were afraide of me.

C And they that did see me without: conueyed them selues fro me.

I am cleane forgotten: as a deade man out of minde.

I am become, lyke a broken vessell.

For I haue hearde the blasphemy of the multitude: and feare is on euery syde.

Whyle they conspire together agaynst me: and take their counsell to take away my lyfe.

But my hope hath bene in thee, O Lord, I haue said: thou art my god.

My time is in thy hand: deliuer me from the hande of mine enemies, and from them that persecute me.

D Shewe thy seruaunt the light of thy countenaunce, and saue me for thy mercies sake.

Let me not be confounded, O Lord, for I haue called vpon thee: lette the vngodly be put to confusion, and bee put to silence in the graue.

Lette thy lying lyppes be put to silence, whiche cruelly, disdaynefully, and despitefully speake agaynst the righteous.

O howe plentifull is thy goodnesse, whiche thou hast layde vp for theym that feare thee: and that thou hast prepared for them, that put their truste in thee, euen before the sonnes of menne.

Thou shalt hyde them priuily by thine owne presence from the prouoking of all men: thou shalt kepe them secretly in thy tabernacle, from the stryfe of tongues.

Thanks be to the Lord: for he hath shewed me marueylous great kyndnesse in a stronge citie.

And when I made haste, I saide: I am cast out of the sight of thine eyes.

Neuertheless, thou heardest the voyce of my prayer, whenne I cried vnto thee.

O loue the Lorde, all ye his saintes, for the Lord preserueth them that are faithfull, and plenteously rewardeth he the proude doer.

Psa.27 and.31 Be stronge, and he shall stablishe your harte, all ye that put your truste in the Lorde.

¶ The.lxxiiii. Psalme.

Vt quid Deus repulisti.

O God, wherfore art thou absent frõ vs so long? why is thy wrath so hot against the sheepe of thy pasture? A

O thinke vpon thy congregation, whom thou haste purchased and redemed of olde.

Thynke vpon the tribe of thyne enheritance: and mount Syon wherin thou haste dwelt.

Lift vp thy fete, that thou maist vterly destroy euery enemye whiche hath done euill in the Sanctuarie.

Thyne aduersaries roze in the middes of thy congregations, and sette vp their banners for tokens.

He that hewed tymbre afore out of the thick trees, was knowen to bring it to an excellent worke.

But nowe they breake downe all the carued woorke therof with axes and hammers.

* They haue set fyre vpon thy ho- 4.Re.25.a lye places, and haue defiled the dwel-lyng place of thy name, euen vnto the grounde.

Yea, they sayde in their hertes: let vs make hauoke of them altogether: thus haue they vzente vp all the houles of God in the lande.

We see not our tokens, there is not one prophet moze, no not one is there among vs y vnderstandeth any moze.

O God, howe longe shall the aduersarye do this dishonoure? howe longe shall the enemye blaspheme thy name, foz euer?

C Whye withdrawest thou thyne hande? whye pluckest thou not thy ryght hand out of thy bosome, to consume the enemye?

Foz God is my kyng of olde: the helpe that is done vpon earth, he doth it hym selfe.

Exo.14.e * Thou dydste deuide the sea tho-row thy power: thou brakest the hea-des of the dragons in the waters.

Iob.40.d Thou smotest the heads of * Leuia-Esa.27.a than in peces, and gauest hym to be meat foz the people in the wildernes.

Thou broughtest out fountaynes and waters out of the harde rockes: thou driedst vp mighty waters.

The daye is thyne, and the nighte is thyne: thou hast prepared the light and the sunne.

Thou haste set all the borders of the earth, thou hast made summer and wynter.

D Remember thys, O Lorde, howe the enemye hath rebuked, and howe the folyshe people hath blasphemed thy name.

O deliuer not the soule of thy turtle doue vnto the multitude of the ene mies: and forget not the congregation of the poore foz euer.

Loke vpon the couenaunt, foz all the earth is full of darknes, and cruel habitacions.

O let not the simple go awaye ashamed, but let the poore and nedye geue prayse vnto thy name.

Aryse, O God, mayntayne thyne owne cause: remember howe the fo-lyshe man blasphemeth thee dayly.

Forget not the voyce of thine enemies: the presumption of thē that hate thee, increased euer moze and moze.

inhabitoures thereof: I beare vp the pyllers of it. Sela.

I sayde vnto the foules: deale not so madly, and to the vngodly: set not vp youre hozne.

Set not vp your hozne on hye: and speake not with a stytte necke.

Foz promocion commeth neyther from the East, noz from the west, noz yet from the south.

And why? * God is the iudge, he put Eccl.3.f teth downe one, & setteth vp another.

Foz in the hand of the Lozd ther is Esa.51

But I wyll talke of the God of Iacob: and prayse him foz euer.

All the hoznes of the vngodly also wyll I breake: and the hoznes of the righteous shalbe exalted.

HEare my law, O my people: A encline your eares vnto the wordes of my mouth.

• I will open my mouth in a pa- mat.13.c rable: I will declare darke sentences of olde.

Whyche we haue herde and knowen: and • suche as oure fathers haue Deu.4.b 6.b.f.11 told vs. Ephe.6 a

That we shold not hide them from the childzen of the generacions to come, but to shewe the honoure of the Lorde: hys mighte and wonderfull workes that he hath done.

He made a couenaunte with Jacob, and gaue Israell a lawe, • which he commaunded oure forefathers to teache theyr chyldren.

That their posteritie might knowe it: and theyr chylderene whiche were yet vnborne.

To thintent that when they came vp, they myght shewe their children the same.

That they myght put theyr trust in God, and not to forget the workes of God, but to kepe hys commaundementes.

Exo.24 e De.32.a And not to be • as their forefathers • a faythiesse and stubburne generacion: a generacion that set not theyr hert a ryght, and whose spirit cleaued not stedfastly vnto God.

Lyke as the children of Ephraim, which beynge harnessed and carying bowes, turned them selues backe in the daye of battayle.

They kepte not the conenaunt of God: & wolde not walke in his law.

But forgot what he had done, and the wonderfull workes that he had shewed for them.

Marueilous thynges did he in the sight of our fathers in the land of Egypt, euen in the fielde of Zoan.

Exo.14d • He deuided the sea, and let them go therowe: he made the waters to stande on a heape.

Exo.14c Nu.20b • In the day tyme also he led them with a cloude, and all the nyght throwe with a lyght of fyre.

He claue the • harde rockes in the wildernesse, and gaue them drynke thereof, as it had bene out of the great deapth.

He broughte waters oute of the 1Co.17c • stonye rocke, so that it gushed oute lyke the ryuers.

Yet for all thys, they synned moze agaynst him, and prouoked the moste hyest in the wyldernes.

C They tempted God in ther herts: and required meat for their luste.

They spake agaynst God also, sayExo.16b inge: Shall God prepare a • table in Nu.11b the wildernesse.

He smote the stonye rocke in dede, that the water gushed oute, and the streames flowed withall: but can he geue breade also? or prouyde flesshe for hys people?

When the Lord heard this, he was wroth: so the fire was kindled in Jacob, and there came vp heauy displeasure agaynst Israell.

Because they beleued not in God, and put not theyr trust in his helpe.

So he commaunded the cloudes aboue, and opened the dores of heauen.

He reyned downe Manna also vpon them, for to eate, and gaue them • foode from heauen. Exo.16b

So man dyd eate angels foode, for Deu.8.a he sent them meate ynough. Sa.16.d

He caused the East wynd to blow John.6d vnder the heue̅, & through his power he brought in the southwest wynd.

• He reyned flesshe vpon them, as Exo.16d thicke as duste: and fethered foules Nu.11§ lyke as the sand of the sea.

He let it fall among their tentes, euen round about their habitacion.

So they dyd eate, and were well fylled, for he gaue them their owne desyre: they were not dysapoynted C of theyr luste.

Nu.11§ • But whyle the meate was yet in theyr mouthes: the heauy wrath of God came vpon them, and slue the welthiest of them: yea, & smote downe the chosen men that were in Israel.

Nu.14 • But for all thys, they synned yet moze, and beleued not hys wonderous workes.

Therfore their days did he consume in vanitye, & theyr yeares in trouble.

Nu.11b • When he slewe them, they sought 1.Co.10a hym, and turned them early, and enquired after God.

And they remembred that God was their strength: and that the hye God was their redemer.

Neuertheless, they did but flatter him with their mouths, & dyssembled with him in their tonges.

For theyr herte was not whole with him: neyther continued they stedfast in his couenaunt.

But he was so mercifull, that he forgaue theyr mysdedes, and destroyed them not.

Yea, manye a tyme turned he hys wrath away, and wold not suffer his whole displeasure to aryse.

• For he considered that they pla.103f were but flesshe: and that they were, euen a wynde that passeth away, and com-

E Many a tyme dyd they prouoke hym in the wildernesse, and greued hym in the deserte.

They turned backe, & tempted god, and moued the holy one of Israel.

They thought not of his hand, and of the daye when he deliuered them from the hand of the enemye.

Howe he had wrought hys myracles in Egypt, and his wonders in the fielde of Zoan.

Exod.9f • He destroyed theyr wynes with hayle stones, and theyr mulbery trees with the froste.

Exod.9e • He smote theyr cattell also with hayle stones, and theyr flockes with hote thonderbolte.

He cast vpon thē the furiousnes of hys wrath, anger, displeasure & trouble, and sent euill angels amonge thē.

Exod.9,f • He made away to hys indignation: and spared not theyr soule from death: but gaue their lyfe ouer to the pestilence.

Exo.12e • And smote all the firste borne in

F

But as for his owen people, he led them forth lyke shepe: and caryed thē in the wildernes like a flocke.

He brought them oute safely, that they should not feare, and ouerwhelmed their enemyes with the sea.

And brought them within the borders of the sanctuary: euen into this mountaine which he purchased with his ryght hande.

Deu.3.a • He caste out the heathen, also before them, caused their lande to be deuyded amonge them for an heritage, and made the tribes of Israel to dwell in theyr tentes.

So they tempted and displeased the moste hye God, and kepte not his testimonyes.

But turned theyr backes, and fell away lyke their forfathers: startyng asyde like a broken bowe.

For they greued him with theyr hill aulters, and prouoked him to displeasure with their ymages.

When god hard this, he was wroth and toke sore displeasure at Israell.

So that he forsoke the Tabernacle in Silo, euen the tente that he had pitched among them.

He deliuered their power into captiuitye, and theyr beawtye into the enemyes hande.

He gaue hys people ouer also into the sweard, and was wroth with his inherytaunce.

The fyre consumed theyr yonge men, and theyr maidens were not geuen to marryage.

Their prestes were slayne with the sweard, and there were no wyddowes to make lamentacion.

So the Lorde awaked as one out of slepe: and lyke a gyaunt refreshed with wyne.

• He smote hys enemyes in the 1.Re.5b

He refused the tabernacle of Joseph and chose not the tribe of Ephraim.

• But chose the tribe of Juda: euen Pſa.87a the hill of Sion which he loued.

And there he buylded his temple on hye, and layde the foundacion of it lyke the grounde, whiche he hath made continually.

• He chose Dauid also hys ser- 1Re.16a uaunte, and toke hym away from the shepe foldes.

As he was folowynge the ewes gret with yong ons: he toke him, that he might fede Jacob his people, and Israell his inheritaunce.

So he fed them with a faythfull and true hearte, and ruled them prudently with all his power.

O God

A morning prayer. pa.36. Mac.7 er.15.a id.16.a

O God the Hethen are come into thy enheritaunce: thy holy temple haue they defiled and made Jerusalem an heape of stones.

* The dead bodies of thy seruantes haue they geuen to be meate, vnto the foules of the ayre, and the flesshe of the saintes vnto the beastes of the lande.

Theyr bloode haue they shed lyke water on euery syde of Jerusalem, and there was no man to bury them.

* We are become an open shame vnto oure enemyes, a verye scorne and derision vnto them that are rounde about vs.

Lorde, how long wylt thou be angry? shall thy iealousy burne like fyre for euer?

* Poure out thyne indignation vpon the Heathen, that haue not knowen thee, and vppon the kyngdomes that haue not called vpon thy name.

For they haue deuoured Jacob, and layde waste hys dwellyng place.

* O remembre not our olde sinnes, but haue mercy vpō vs, and that sone for we are come to great myserie.

Helpe vs, O God of our saluation for the glory of thy name.

O deliuer vs, and be mercifull vnto our synnes, for thy names sake.

* Wherfore doo the Heathen saye: where is now their God?

O let the vengeance of thy seruantes blood that is shed, bee openly shewed vpon the Heathen in our sight.

O lette the sorowfull syghynge of the prisoners come before the: accordyng vnto the greatenesse of thy power, preserue thou those that are appoynted to dye.

And as for the blasphemy (wherewith our neighbours haue blasphemed the) reward thou them, O lord, seuen folde in their bosome.

So we, that be thy people & sheepe of thy pasture, shal geue the thankes for euer, and wyll alway be shewing forth thy prayse from generation to generation.

Shew some token vpō me for good, that they which hate me, may see it, and be ashamed, because thou Lorde hast holped me, and comforted me.

Fundamenta eius.

HEr foundations are vpon the holy hilles: the Lorde loueth the gates of Sion more then all the dwellinges of Jacob. ℣

Mervye excellent thinges are spoken of thee, thou citie of God. Sela.

I will thinke vpon Rahab and Babilon, with them that knowe me.

Beholde, yea the Philistines also and they of Tyre, with the Morrians: lo, there was he borne.

And of Sion shalbe reported, that he was borne in her, and the moost highest shall stablishe her. ℣

The Lorde shall rehearse it, when he writeth vp the people, that he was borne there. Sela.

The singers also and trompetters shall he rehearse: all my freshe springes shalbe in thee.

¶ The.lxxxviii. Psalme.
Domine deus salutis.

O Lorde God of my saluation, I haue cryed daye and night before thee. ℣

O let my prayer enter into thy presence, encline thyne eare vnto my calling.

For my soule is full of trouble: and my life drawyeth nye vnto hell.

I am counted as one of them that go downe vnto the pitte, and I haue bene euen as a man that hath no strength.

Free

Free among the dead, lyke vnto them that be wounded, and lye in the graue, which be out of remembrance, and are cut away from thy hand.

Thou hast laid me in the lowest pit: in a place of darknes, and in the depe.

Thine indignation lieth hard vpon me, and thou hast vexed me with all thy stormes. Sela.

Thou hast put away mine acquaintaunce farre from me, and made me to be abhorred of them: I am so fast in prison, that I can not get foorth.

My sight fayleth for very trouble: Lord I haue called dayly vpon thee, I haue stretched out mine handes vnto thee.

Psal.5 a Esa.38 d * Doest thou shew wonders among the dead? Or shall the dead rise vp agayne, and prayse thee?

C Shall thy louing kindnesse be shewed in the graue, or thy faythfulnesse in destruction?

Shall thy wonderous workes be knowen in the darke, and thy righteousnes in the land, where all thinges are forgotten?

Vnto thee haue I cried, O Lorde, and early shall my prayer comme before thee.

Lord, why abhorrest thou my soule? and hidest thou thy face fro me?

I am in mysery, and like vnto him that is at the point to dye (euen fro my youth vp) thy terrours haue I suffered with a troubled minde.

D Thy wrathful displesure goth ouer me, & the feare of thee hath vndon me.

They came round about me dayly like water, and compassed me together on euery side.

My louers and frendes hast thou put away fro me, and hidde mine acquaintaunce out of my sight.

* Thy seede will I stablishe for euer, and set vp thy throne from one generation to another. Sela. 2.reg.7 b Psa.131

O Lorde * the verye heauens shall prayse thy wonderous workes, and thy trueth in the congregation of the saintes. Psa.19 i

For who is he among the cloudes, that shalbe compared vnto the Lorde. Psa.70. B

And what is he among the goddes, that shalbe lyke vnto the Lord?

God is very greatly to be feared in the counsell of the sainctes, and to be had in reuerence of all theym that are about him.

O Lord God of hostes, who is like vnto thee? thy trueth (most mightie Lord) is on euery syde.

* Thou rulest the raging of the sea, thou stillest the waues therof, when they arise. Exo.14 Mat.8 d

Thou hast subdued Egipt and destroyed it, thou hast scattred thine enemies abrode with thy mightie arme.

The heauens are thine, the earthe also is thine: thou hast layd the foundation of the round world, and al that therein is. C

Thou hast made the North and the South, Tabor and Hermon shall reioyce in thy name.

Thou hast a mightie arme, strong is thy hand, and hie is thy right hand.

Righteousnesse and equitie is the habitation of thy seate, mercye and truth shall go before thy face.

Blessed is the people (O Lord) that can reioyce in thee: they shall walke in the light of thy countenaunce.

Their delight shalbe dayly in thy name, and in thy righteousnes shall they make their boast.

Morning prayer. A

LOrde thou hast bene our refuge, from one generation to another.

Beefore the mountaynes were brought foorth, or euer the earth and the worlde were made, thou art God from euerlasting, and worlde without ende.

Thou turnest man to destruction, agayne, thou sayest: come agayne ye childzen of men.

In the mozning it is greene, and groweth vp, but in the euening it is cut downe (dzied vp) and withered.

For we consume away in thy displeasure, and are afraide at thy wzathfull indignation.

Thou hast set our misdedes before thee, and our secrete synnes in the lyght of thy countenaunce.

For when thou art angry, all our dayes are gone, we bzing our yeres to an ende, as it were a tale that is tolde.

The daies of our age are thzee score yeres and ten: and though men be so stronge, that they come to foure score yeres: yet is their strength then but labour and sozowe: so soone passeth it away, and we are gone.

C But who regardeth the power of thy wzathe: for euen thereafter as a man feareth, so is thy displeasure.

Psa.39a • O teach vs to number our dayes, that we may apply our hertes vnto wisedome.

Turne thee agayn (O Lozd) at the last, & be gracious vnto thy seruants.

O satisfie vs with thy mercy, and that soone: so shall we reioyce and be glad all the dayes of our life.

Comfozte vs agayne, nowe after the time that thou hast plagued vs, and for the yeres wherein we haue suffred aduersitie.

And there he setteth the hungrye, that they maye builde theym a Citie to dwell in.

That they maye sowe their lande, and plant vineyardes, to yelde them fruites of increase.

He blesseth them, so that they multiply exceedingly, and suffreth not their catteil to decrease.

And agayne, when they are minished and brought low thorow oppression, thorow any plague or trouble.

A I Am wel pleased that the Lord hath heard the voyce of my prayer.

That he hath enclined his eare vnto me: therfore will I call vpon him as long as I liue.

Psa. 18 a 1. Re. 22 The snares of death compalled me rounte about: and the paynes of hell gat holde vpon me.

I shall fynde trouble and heauynesse, and I shall call vpon the name of the Lord, (O Lorde) I beseech thee deliuer my soule.

B Gracious is the Lorde and righteous: yea our God is mercifull.

The Lord preserueth the simple: I was in misery, and he helped me.

Turne agayne then vnto thy rest, O my soule: for the Lorde hath rewarded thee.

Psa. 59 c And why? * thou hast deliuered my soule from deathe, myne eyes from teares, and my fete from falling.

I will walke before the Lorde, in the lande of the liuing.

* I beleued, and therfore will I speake, but I was sore troubled, I sayd in my hast: * all men are lyers. 2 Cor. 4 C Rom. 3

What rewarde shall I geue vnto the Lord, for all the benefyts that he hath done vnto me?

I will receaue the cup of saluation: and call vpon the name of the Lord.

I will paye my vowes nowe in the presence of all his people, right deare in the sight of the Lorde is the death of his saintes. D

Behold (O Lorde) how that I am thy seruaunt: I am thy seruaunt, and the sonne of thy handmayde, thou hast broken my bones in sunder.

I will offer to thee the sacrifice, of thankesgeuing, and will call vpon the name of the Lorde.

The

The Lorde taketh my parte with them that helpe me: therfore shall I see my desyre vpon mine enemies.

It is better to trust in the Lorde: then to put any confidence in man.

It is better to trust in the Lorde, then to put any confidence in princes.

All nations compassed me rounde about: but in the name of the Lorde will I destroy them.

They kepte me in on euery syde: they kepte me in (I saye) on euery syde: but in the name of the Lorde, I will destroy them.

They came about me like bees, and are extincte, euen as the fyre among the thornes: for in the name of the Lorde I will destroy them.

Thou hast thrust sore at me, that I might fal, but the Lord was my help.

Exo.15.a • The Lord is my strength, and my song, and is become my saluation.

The voyce of ioye and health is in the dwelling of the righteous: the righte hande of the Lorde bryngeth mightie thinges to passe.

The ryghte hande of the Lorde hath the preeminence: the right hand of the Lorde bryngeth mightie thinges to passe.

I will not dye, but liue: and declare the workes of the Lorde.

The Lord hath chastened and corrected me: but he hath not geuen me ouer vnto death.

Open me the gates of righteousnes, that I maye go into them, and geue thankes vnto the Lord.

This is the gate of the Lorde: the righteous shall enter into it.

I will thanke thee, for thou hast heard me: & art become my saluation.

THE Prouerbes of Salomon, the sonne of Dauid kinge of Israel: to lerne wisdome, and to perceiue the instruction, and to perceiue the wordes of vnderstanding: and thereby to receiue prudence, righteousnes, iudgement and equitie. That the very symple might haue wit, and that the yong men might haue knowledge and true vnderstanding. By hearing, the wise man shal come by more wisedome: and he that is endued with vnderstanding, shall obtayne wit to perceiue a parable, and the interpretation therof, the wordes of the wyse, and the darke

My sonne, consente not vnto sinners yf they entyse thee, and say: come with vs, we will laye wayte for bloud, and lurke priuelie for the innocent without a cause: wee shall swalowe them vp like the hell, and deuoure them quicke and whole, as those that go downe into the pitte. So shall we finde all maner of costly ryches, and fill our houses with spoiles. Cast in thy lot among vs: and let vs haue all one purse. My son, walke not thou with them: refraine thy fote

The. ij. Chapter.

MY sonne, yf thou wilt receiue A my woordes, and keepe my commaundementes by thee, that thou wilt encline thine eare vnto wisedome, applye thyne hearte then to vnderstanding. For yf thou cryest after wisedome, and callest for knowledge: yf thou seekest after her as after money, and diggest for her as for treasure, then shalte thou vnderstande the feare of the Lord, and fynde the knowledge of God. For it is the Lorde that geueth wisedome: out of his mouth commeth knowe-ledge and vnderstanding, he hydeth B vp health for the righteous. He preserueth the welfare of the righteous, and defendeth thē that walke sincerely: he kepeth them in the right pathe, & preserueth the way of such as serue him with godlynes. Then shalt thou vnderstand righteousnes, iudgement, and equitie: yea, and euery good path. Whē wisdome entreth into thine hert and thy soule delite in knowlege, then shal counsel preserue thee, & vnderstanding shal kepe thee that thou mayst be deliuered from the euil way, and from the man that speketh froward things. From suche as leaue the hye streate, and walke in the waies of darkenes: which reioyce in doing euill: and delyte in wicked thinges, whose waies are croked, and they froward in their pathes. and.7.a and from her that is not thine owne: which geueth sweete wordes, forsaketh the husbād of her youth, and forgetteth the couenaunte of her God. For her house is enclined vnto death, and her pathes vnto hell. All they that go in vnto her, come not agayne, neyther take they holde of the waye of lyfe. Therefore, walke thou in the way of such as be vertuous, and kepe the pathes of the righteous. For the iuste shall dwell in the land: and they that be perfecte shall remaine in it: but the vngodly shall be roted out of the lande: and the wicked doers shall be roted out of it.

A My sonne • forget not thou my lawe, but see that thyne herte kepe my commaundementes. For they shall prolong the dayes and yeres of thy life, and bring thee peace. Let mercy and faythfulnesse neuer go from thee, bind them about thy necke, and write them in the tables of thine herte. So shalt thou finde fauour and vnderstanding in the syght of God & men. Put thy truste in God with all thine herte: and leane not vnto thyne owne witte. In all thy waies haue respecte vnto him: and he shall order thy goynges. • Be not wise in thine B

Thorow his wisdome the depthes breake vp, and the cloudes droppe downe the dewe. My sonne, let not these thinges departe from thine eyes: but kepe my law and my counsell, that thou maiest haue the pleasure of long lyfe and vnderstanding: for they shall be lyfe vnto my soule, and grace vnto my mouthe. Then shalt thou walke safely in thy waye, and thy fote shall not stumble. • If thou slepest, thou shalt not be a- Psa.4 violent rushing in of the vngodlye, when it commeth. For the Lord shall stande by thy syde, and kepe thy fote, that thou be not taken. Withdraw no good thing from them that haue nede, so long as thine hand is able to do it.

say not vnto thy neighbour: go thy way, and come againe, to morow will I geue thee, where as thou hast now to geue him. Intende no hurte vnto thy neighbour, seing he doth dwell in rest by thee. Strine not lightly with any man without a cause, whereas Pro.1.a. he hath done thee no harme. ¶ Folow not a wicked man, and chose none of his waies: for the Lord abhorreth the frowarde: but his councell is amonge the righteous. The curse of the Lorde is in the house of the vngodly: but he blesseth the dwellinges of the righteous. As for the scornefull doeth not he laugh them to scorne: but he geueth grace vnto the lowly. The wise shall haue honour in possession: but shame is the promotion that foles shal haue.

HEare, O ye children, the fatherly exhortation, and take good hede, that ye may learne wisedome. For I haue geuen you a good doctrine, forsake not ye my law. For when I my self was my fathers deare sonne, and tenderlye beloued of my mother: he taught me also, & saide Deu.5.b vnto me: ¶ Let thine heart receiue my wordes, keepe my commaundements, and thou shalt liue. Get thee wisedome: and get thee vnderstanding: forget not the wordes of my mouth, and shrinke not from them. Forsake her not, and she shall preserue thee. Loue her, and she shal kepe thee. The chiefe point of wisdom is, that thou be willing to obtaine wisedome: and before all thy goodes to get thee vnderstan- Deu.26.d dinge. ¶ Make muche of her, and she shall promote thee: Yea, yf thou embrace her, she shall bringe the vnto honoure. Shee shall make thee a gracious heade, and garnishe thee with a crowne of glory. Heare my sonne, and receiue my wordes, and the yeares of thy life shalbe manye. I haue shewed thee the way of wisedome, and ledde thee into the right pathes. So that yf thou goest therein, there shall no straitnes hinder thee: and when thou runnest, thou shalt not fall. Take fast holde of doctrine, and let her not go: kepe her, for she is thy life. ¶ Come not in the path of the vngodlye: and Psal. 1.a and. 27.a walke not in the waye of the wicked. Abhorre it, and go not therein: depart aside, and passe ouer by it. For they can not sleepe, except they haue firste done some mischiefe: neither take they any rest, except they haue firste done some harme. For they eate the breade of wickednes, and drinke the wine of robberye. The pathe of the righteous shineth as the light that is euer brighter and brighter vnto the perfect daye. But the waye of the vngodlye is as the darkenesse: they know not where Deu.6.b they fall. ¶ My sonne, marke my wor- and.11.c des, and encline thine eare vnto my sayinges. Let them not departe from thine eyes, but kepe them euen in the middest of thine heart. For they are life vnto all those that finde them, and health vnto al their bodies. Kepe thine heart with all diligence, for therevpon hangeth life. Put away from thee a froward mouthe, and let the lippes of slaunder be farre from thee. Let thine eyes beholde the thing that is right, and let thine eye lidder lose straight before thee. Ponder the path of thy feete, and let all thy waies be ordred a right. ¶ Tourne not aside, Deu.5.a neither to the right hande, nor to the and.27.d lefte, but withholde thy fote fro euill. ¶ The. vij. Chapter.

MY sonne * kepe my wordes, and laye vp my commaundementes by the. Kepe my cõmaundementes and my lawe, euen as the apple of thine eye, and thou shalte liue. Binde them vppon thy fingers, and write them in the table of thine hert. Say vnto wisdome: thou art my sister, and cal vnderstanding thy kinswoman: * that they may kepe thee frõ the straunge woman, & from the harlot which geueth swete wordes. For oute of the windowe of my house I loked through the lattisse, and beheelde the simple people: and amonge other simple folkes, I spied one yong foole going ouer the streetes, by the corner in the way toward the harlots house, in the twilight of the euening, when it began nowe to be night and darke. And beholde, there met him a woman * with open tokens of an harlot, only her hearte was hid. She was full of loud wordes, and redie to daliy: whose feete coulde not abide in the house, nowe is she without, nowe in the stretes, and laieth a baite in euery corner, she caught the yonge man, kissed him, and was not ashamed, sayinge: I had a vowe of peaceofferinges to pay, and this daye I perfourme it. Therefore cam I forth to mete the, that I might seke thy face, and so I haue found the. I haue deckt my bed with coueringes and clothes of Egipte. My bed haue I made to smell of Mirre, Aloes, and Cinamon. Come, let vs lie together, and take our pleasure till it bee daye light: and we will enioy the pleasures of loue. For the good manne is not at home, he is gone far of. He hath taken the bagge of money with him. And he will returne home at the appointed solempne feast? Thus with many swete wordes she ouercame him, and with her flattering lippes she entysed him sodenlye to folowe her: as it were an oxe led to the slaughter, and like as it were a foole that laugheth, when he goeth to the stockes, to be punished, so long till shee had wounded his liuer with her darte: lyke as yf a birde hasted to the snare, not knowinge that the perill of his life lyeth therevpon. Heare me nowe therefore O my children, and marke the woordes of my mouth. Let not thine heart wander in her waies, and be not thou deceiued in her pathes. For many one hath she wounded and cast downe, ye, many a strong man hath ben slaine by the meanes of her. Her houses are the way vnto hell, and bring men downe into the chambers of death.

A poore man leading a godlye life, is better then the riche that goeth in froward wayes.

Who so kepeth the lawe, is a childe Pro.19a B of vnderstanding: but he that is a companion of ryotous men, shameth his father.

He that by vsery and vniust gaines gathereth riches, he shall laye them in store for a manne that will pitie the poore.

• He that turneth awaye his eare Pro.1.b. from hearinge the lawe, his prayer shalbe abhominable.

Who so leadeth the righteous into an euill waye, shall fall into his owne pit, but the iust shall haue the good in possession.

The riche man thinketh him selfe to be wise, but the poore that hath vnderstanding can perceaue him well ynough.

Ecc.10.a When the righteous menne are in Pro.29.a prosperitie, then doth honour flourish: but when the vngodly come vp, the state of men chaungeth.

Job.13.c He that hideth his sinnes, shall not Psa.22.b prosper: but • whoe so knowledgeth 1 Jo.1.b them, and forsaketh them, shall haue C mercy.

Well is him that standeth alway in awe, as for him that hardeneth his heart, he shall fal into mischiefe.

Like as a roaring lion, and an hungry bere, euen so is an vngodly prince ouer the poore people.

Where the prince is without vnderstanding, there is great oppression and wronge: but yf he be suche a one as hateth couetousnes, he shall longe reigne.

Gen.4.b • He that by violence sheddeth anye

He that is of a proud stomacke and

He that trusteth in his owne heart

With true iudgement the king setteth vp the land, but yf he be a manne that oppresseth the people with gathe rings, he turneth it vpside downe.

Who so flattereth his neighboure, layeth a net for his feete.

The sin of the wicked is his owne snare, but the righteous doeth singe and reioice.

The righteous considereth the cause of the poore: but the vngodlye regardeth no vnderstanding.

Wicked people bring a Citie in decay, but wise men set it vp againe.

If a wise man go to lawe with a foole (whether he deale with him frendly or roughly) he getteth no rest.

The bloudthirstie hate the righteous, but the iust seke his soule.

A foole powreth out his spirite altogether, but a wise man kepeth it vn

If a prince delite in lies, all his seruauntes are vngodly.

When the word of God is not preched, the people perish, but wel is him that kepeth the law.

A seruaunte will not be better for woordes, for though he vnderstande: yet will he not regard them.

If thou seest a man that is hasty to speake vnadvisedly, thou mayest trust a foole more then him.

He that delicately bringeth vp his seruant from a childe, shall make him his master at length.

Who so keepeth companye with a thefe, hateth his owne soule: hee heareth blasphemies, and telleth it not forth.

He that feareth man shal haue a fal, but whoe so putteth his trust in the Lorde, is without daunger.

Many ther be that trust in princes fauoure, but euerye mans iudgement commeth from the Lord.

The righteous abhorreth the vngodlye: but as for those that be in the right waye, the wicked hate them.

A child that kepeth the word, shall be without destruction.

I THe woordes of Agur, the sonne of Jakei, and the prophecy that the same man spake vnto Jthiel, euen vnto Jthiel and Uchall.

I am more foolishe then anye man, and haue no mans vnderstandinge. I neuer learned wisedome, nor hadde knowledge of holye thinges, whoe hath climed vppe vnto heauen? whoe hath come downe from thence? whoe hath holden the winde fast in his hande? who hath comprehended the waters in a garment? who hath sette all the endes of the worlde? what is his name, or his sonnes name, canste thou tell?

All the woordes of God are pure and cleane, for he is a shielde vnto all them that put their trust in him. psal.19.c

Put thou nothing vnto his woordes, least hee reproue thee and thou bee found a lier. Deu.13

B Two thinges haue I required of thee, that thou wilt not denye me before I dye. Remoue fro mee vanitie and lyes: geue mee neyther powertye, nor riches, onely graunt me a necessarye liuinge. Least yf I bee to full, I denie the, and say: • who is the Lord? And least I beinge constrained thorough powertie fall vnto stealing, and take the name of my God in vaine. Exo.5.a deu.28.c Job.21.d

Accuse not a seruant vnto his maister, least he speake euill of thee, and thou be hurt.

There is a generation that curseth their father, and doeth not blesse their mother.

There is a generation that thinke them selues cleane, and yet is not clensed from their filthynes.

There is a generation that hath a proude looke, and doth cast vp their eyelidded.

There is a generation whose teeth are swoordes, and with their chawe bones they consume and deuoure the simple of the earth, and the poore from among men.

The horseleache hath two daughters crying: bring hither, bring hither

C There be three thinges that are neuer satisfyed: yea, foure thinges sayth neuer ho. The graue, a womans wombe closed: and the earth that hath neuer water ynough: As for fyre it sayeth neuer ho.

Who so laugheth his father to scorn and setteth his mothers commaundement at naught: the rauens picke out his eyes in the valleye, and deuoured be he of the yonge Aegles. Exo.21.b deu.27.c

There bee three thinges to hye for me

me: as for the fourth, that passeth my knowledge. The waye of an Egle in the ayre: the waye of a serpent ouer a stone, the waye of a shippe in the sea: and the waye of a man with a yonge woman.

Such is the way also of a wife that breaketh wedlocke, whiche wipeth her mouth, like as when she hath eaten, and sayeth: As for me, I haue done no harme.

Throughe three thinges the earth is disquieted, and the fourthe maye it not beare. Through a seruant that beareth rule: Through a foole that hath to much bread. Through a wife worthy hatred, when she is maried, and through an handmaiden that is heire to her maistresse.

These be foure thinges in the earth the which are very little: but in wisedome they exceede the wise. The emmets are but weake people, yet gather they their meat together in the harueste. The conyes are but a feble folke, yet make they their couches amonge the rockes. The Grashoppers haue not a guide, yet go they forth together by heapes. The Spider laboreth with her handes, and is in Kinges palaces.

There be three things that go stately: yea, foure are comely in going. A Lion which is strongest amonge beastes, and geueth place to no manne, A greye hounde stronge in the hinder partes. A Ramme also, and a kinge against whom no man ariseth vp.

If thou haste done foolishlye when thou waste in hie estate, or yf thou haste taken euill counsell: then lay thine hande vpon thy mouth.

Whoe so churneth milke, maketh butter: and hee that rubbeth his nose, maketh it bleede: Euen so hee that causeth wrath, bringeth forth strife.

¶ The wordes of Kinge Lamuell, and the Lesson that his Mother taught him.

My sonne (why do ye so) thou sonne of my bodye: O my dere beloued sonne, geue not ouer thy strength and ways vnto women, which are the destruction euen of Kinges, O Lamuell, it is not for Kinges, it is not (I saye) for Kinges to drinke wine, nor Princes stronge drinke: (for there is no secrete where dronkennesse reigneth) least they being dronken, forget the lawe, and peruerte the iudgemente of all poore mens children. 3

Geue stronge drinke to suche as be condemned to death, and wyne vnto those that mourne: that they maye drinke it, and forget their miserye and aduersitie.

Be thou an aduocate for the dombe, and stande in iudgement thy selfe, to speake for all suche as be succourelesse in this transitorie worlde.

Open thy mouth, defend the thinge that is lawful and right, and the cause of the poore and helpelesse. 15

Who so findeth an honest faithfull woman, she is much more worthy then pearles.

The hert of her husband may safely trust in her, so that he shall fall in no pouertie.

She wil do him good and not euil, all the dayes of her life.

Shee occupieth woolle and flaxe, and laboureth gladlye with her handes.

Shee is like a Marchauntes shippe, that bringeth her vittailes from a farre.

Shee is vp in the night season: to prouide meate for her housholde, and foode for her maidens.

She considereth lande, and byeth it, and with the fruite of her handes she planteth a vineyarde.

Shee girdeth her loines with strengthe, and courageth her armes.

And

And yf she perceiue that her huſ-

She layeth her finger to her ſpin-

She maketh her ſelfe fayre ornaments, her clothing is white ſilke and purple.

Her husbande is much ſet by in the gates, when he ſitteth among the rulers of the lande.

She maketh cloth of ſilke: and ſelleth it, and deliuereth girdels vnto the marchaunt.

Strength and honoure is her clothing, and in the latter day ſhe ſhall reioyce.

She openeth her mouth with wiſdome, and in her tonge is the lawe of grace.

D She looketh well to the wayes of her houſhold: and eateth not her breade with ydlenes.

Her children ſhall aryſe, and call her bleſſed: and her husband ſhall make muche of her.

Many daughters there be that gather riches together, but thou goeſt aboue them all.

As for fauour, it is diſceatefull, and beautie is a vayne thing: but a womã that feareth the Lord, ſhe is worthie to be prayſed.

Geue her of the fruit of her handes, and lette her owne workes prayſe her in the gates.

The Booke of the Preacher: otherwiſe called Eccleſiaſtes.

The firſt Chapter.

THeſe are the wordes of the Preacher, the ſonne of Dauid king of Ieruſalem. A Eccl. 12 B • All is but moſt vayne vanitie (ſayth the preacher) and all is moſt vayne (I ſay) and but playne vanitie. For what els hath a man of all the labour that he taketh vnder the ſunne? One generation paſſeth awaye, another commeth: but the earth abydeth ſtill. The ſunne goeth downe, and retourneth to his place, that he maye there ryſe vp agayne. The wind goeth toward the South, and tourneth vnto the north, fetcheth his compaſſe, whirleth about, and goeth forth and his circuit retourneth agayne to himſelfe: C • All flouddes runne into the ſea, and yet is the ſea it ſelfe not fylled: for loke vnto what place the waters runne, thence they come to flowe againe. All theſe thinges are ſo harde to be knowen that no man can expres them. • The eye is not ſatisfied with ſight: the eare is not filled with hearing. • The thing that hath ben, commeth to paſſe agayne: and the thinge that hath bene done, ſhall be doone agayne: There is no newe thing vnder the ſunne. Is there any thinge whereof it maye be ſayde: lo this is newe? For it is long ago in the times that haue bene before vs. The thinge that is paſt, is out of remembraunce: Euen ſo the thinges that are for to come, ſhall nomore be thought vppon amonge them that come after. I my ſelfe the preacher was king of Iſrael at Ieruſalem, and did apply my mind to ſeke out and ſearch for knowledge of all thinges that are doone vnder heauen. Suche trauayle and labour hath God geuen vnto the children of men, to exerciſe them ſelues therein. C

B Job. 14 b

Pro. 17 e
Ecc. 14 b
• Ecc. 3 b

Thus haue I considred al the things that com to passe vnder the sunne: and lo they are all but vanitie & vexation of mind. The croked can not be made streight, nor the thing that is vnperfect, can not be accompted with things that are perfect. I communed with mine owne heart, saying: Lo I am com to a great estate, and haue gotten more wisedome then all they that haue bene before me in Ierusalem. Yea, my hart had great experience of wisedome and knowlege, for therunto I applied my mind, that I might know what were wisedome and vnderstanding, what were errour and foolishnesse: and I perceiued, that this was also but a vexation of mind: for where much wisedome is, there is also great trauel and vnquietnes: and the more knowledge a man hath, the more is his care.

I THen saide I thus in my heart: Nowe go to, I will take mine ease, and haue good daies. But lo, that is vanitie also: in so muche, that I saide vnto the man geuen to laughter: Thou art mad, and to mirth: What doest thou? So I thought in my hert, to geue my flesshe vnto wine: and agayne, to applye my minde vnto wisedome, and to comprehend foolishnesse vntill the time that (among all the things which ar vnder the sunne) I might see what were best for men to doo, so long as they liue vnder heuen. 3. Re. 3. I made gorgeous layre workes 4. 5. 6. I builded me houses & planted vineyardes. I made me orchards and gardeyns of pleasure, and planted trees in them of all maner of fruites. I made pooles of water to water the greene and fruitfull trees withall. I bought seruauntes and maidens: and had a great housholde. As for cattell and sheepe, I had more substaunce of them, then all they that were before me in Ierusalem. I gathred siluer and gold together: euen as a treasure of kinges and landes. I prouided me singers and women, which could play on instrumentes, to make men mirthe and pastyme. I gatte me psalteries and songes of musike. And I was greater, and in more worship then all my predecessours in Ierusalem. For wisdome remained with me: and loke whatsoeuer mine eyes desyred, I let them haue it: and wherein soeuer my heart delyted or had any pleasure, I withheld it not from it. Thus my heart reioyced in all that I did: and this was my portion of all my trauel. But when I considred al the workes that my handes had wrought, and all the labour that I had taken therin: lo all was but vanitie and vexation of mind, and nothing of any value vnder the sunne. C Then turned I me to consider wisdome, errour, and foolishnes: (for what is he amõg men, that might be compared to me the kinge in suche workes:) And I sawe that wisedome excelleth foolishnesse, as farre as light doth darknesse. For a wise man hath his eyes in his head, but the foole goth in the darkenes, I perceiued also that they both had one end. Then thought I in my mind: If it happen vnto the foole, as it doth vnto me: what nedeth me then to labour any more for wisedome. So I confessed within my heart, that this also was but vanitie. For the wise are euer as little in remembraunce as the foolishe: for the daies shall come, when all shall be forgotten: yea the wise man dyeth eswel as the foole. Thus began I to be wery of my life, insomuch that I coulde away with nothing that is don vnder the sunne, for all was but vanitie and vexation of minde: yea I was wery of all my labours which I had taken vnder the sunne, because I should be faine to leaue them vnto an other man that commeth after me. And who knoweth whether he shalbe a wise man or a foole? And yet shall he be the lord of D all my labours which I with suche wisedom haue taken vnder the sunne, This is also a vayne thinge. So I turned me to refraine my minde from all suche trauell, as I toke vnder the sun: for so much as a man should wery him selfe with wisdome, with vnderstanding and opportunitie, and yet he be faine to leaue his labours vnto an other, that neuer swet for them. This is also a vaine thing and great misery. For what getteth a man of all the labour and trauell of his minde, that he taketh vnder the sunne, but heauinesse, sorowe, and disquietnesse all the dayes of his life? In so muche, that his hert can not rest in the night: this Eccl. 5.d is also a painefull thinge. * Is it not better then for a man to eate & drinke, and his soule to be merye in his labour? Yes, I saw that this also was a gift of God. For who will eate or go more lustely to his worke then I? And why? God geueth to the mā that is good before him, wisedome, vnderstandinge and gladnes. But vnto the sinner he geueth swerynesse (and superfluous care) that he maye gather, and heape together the thing that afterward shalbe geuen vnto him, whō it pleaseth God. This is now a vain thinge: yea, a verye disquietnesse and vexation of minde.

1 EVerye thinge hath a time: yea, all that is vnder the heauen hath his conueniente season.
Ther is a time to be borne, and a time to dye. There is a time to plant, and a time to plucke vp the thinge that is planted. A time to slaye, and a time to make hole. A time to breake down, and a time to builde vp. A time to weepe, and a time to laugh. A time to mourne, and a time to daunce. A time to cast away stones, and a time to gather stones together.
A time to embrace, and a time to refraine from embracinge. A time to winne, and a time to lese. A time to spare, and a time to spende. A time to cut in peces, and a time to sowe toge-B ther. * A time to keepe silence, and a Eccl. 20.a time to speake. A time to loue, and a Iud. 3.2.a time to hate. A tyme of warre, and a time of peace. What hath a man els (that doeth any thing) but swerynesse and labour? For as touching the trauell and carefulnes: which God hath geuen vnto men, I see that hee hath geuen it them, to be exercised in it. All this hath he ordeyned marueylous goodly, to euery thinge his due time.
He hath planted ignorance also in the hertes of men, that they should not cōprehend the ground of his workes which hee doeth from the beginninge to the ende. So I perceaued, that in these thinges, there is nothing better for a man, then to be merye, and to do well as longe as he liueth. For all that a man eateth and drinketh: yea, whatsoeuer a man enioyeth of all his labour, that same is a gift of God. I considered also that whatsoeuer God doeth, it continueth for euer. And that nothing can be put vnto it, nor taken from it, and that God doeth it to the intent, that men should feare him.
Eccl. 1.d * The thing that hath bene, is nowe, C and the thing that is for to come, hath bene afortime: for God restoreth againe the thing that is paste. Moreouer, I sawe vnder the sunne vngodlynesse in the stede of iudgement, and iniquitie in steade of righteousnesse.
Then thought I in my mind: God shall separate the righteous from the vngodlye, and then shall be the time and iudgement of all counceiles and woorkes. I communed with mine owne hert also, concerning the children of men: howe God hath chosen them, and yet letteth them appeare, as though they were beastes: For it happeneth vnto men, as it doth vnto beastes, & as the one dieth, so dieth the other: yea, they haue both one maner of breath: so that (in this) a man hath no preeminence aboue a beaste, but all are subdued vnto vanitye. They go all D vnto one place, for as they be all of Sap. 2.a dust, so shall they all turne vnto duste againe. Who knoweth the spirite of man that goeth vpwarde, and the breath of the beast that goeth downe to the earthe? Wherefore I perceaue that ther is nothing better for a man, then to be ioyfull in his labour: for that is his portion. But who will bringe him to see the thinge that shall come after him?

Eccle. 5.
SO I turned me, and considered al the violent wrong that is done vnder the sunne: and beholde, the teares of such as were oppressed: and there was no man to comforte them, or that wold deliuer and defend them from the violence of their oppressors. Wherefore, I iudged those that are dead, to be more happy then those that be aliue: yea, him that is yet vnborne, to be better at ease then they both: because he seeth not the miserable workes that are done vnder the sunne. A-
B gaine, I sawe that all trauell and diligence of labour that euery man taketh in hande, was done of enuie against his neighbour. This is also a vaine thing, and a vexation of minde. The foole foldeth his handes together, and eateth vp his owne flesh. One handefull (sayeth hee) is better with rest, then bothe the handes full with labour and trauaile of minde. Moreouer, I turned me, and beholde yet another vanitie vnder the sunne.
C There is one man, no mo but him selfe alone, hauinge neither childe nor brother: yet is there no ende of his carefull trauell, his eyes cannot be satisfied with riches, (yet doeth he not remember him selfe, and saye:) For whom do I take suche trauaile? For whose pleasure do I thus consume away my life? This is also a vain and miserable thing. Therefore, two are better then one, for they may wel enioye the profite of their labour. For if one of them fall, his companion helpeth him vp againe. But wo is him that is alone: for yf he fall, he hath not another to helpe him vp. Againe, whē two slepe together, they are warme: but how can a body be warme alone? One may be ouercome, but two may make resistaunce. As for the people that haue bene before him, and that come after him, they are innumerable: And they that come after him shall not reioyce of him. This is also a vaine thing, and a vexation of mind. ¶ The. v. Chapter.

BE not hastye with thy mouth, and let not thine heart speake anye thing rashely before God. For God is in heauen, and thou vpō earth, therfore let thy wordes be few. For where much carefulnes is, there are manye dreames, and where many wordes are, there menne maye heare fooles. • If thou make a vowe vnto C

sure in theim. If thou promise anye thing, pay it: for better is it that thou make no vowe, then that thou shouldest promise and not paye. Suffer not thy mouth to cause thy flesh for to sinne, neyther saye thou before the Aungels, that it is thy ignorance. For then God will be angrye at thy voyce, and destroye all the workes of thyne handes. And whye? where as are many dreames and many wordes, there are also diuers vanities: but F looke that thou feare God. • If thou Eccl. seest the poore to be oppressed, and Iob. 1 wrongfully dealt withal, so that equitie and the right of the lawe is wrested in the lande, maruell not thou at such a thing, for one great man kepeth touche with an other, and the mighty men are in aucthoritie ouer the poore. The encrease of the earth vpholdeth all thing, yea, the kinge him selfe is maintained by husbandrye. He that loueth money, will neuer be satisfied with money: and who so deliteth in riches, shall haue no profite therof.

This

This is also a vayne thing. Where as muche ryches is, there are many also that spend thē away. And what pleasure moze hath he that possesseth them, saving that he may loke vppon them with his eyes? A labouring man sleepeth sweetely whether it be litle oz much that he eateth: but the aboundaunce of the rych, will not suffer him to slepe. Yet is there a sooze plague, which I haue seene vnder the sunne, (namely) riches kept to the hurte of him that hath them in possession. Foz ofte times they perishe with his great miserie and trouble: and yf he haue a childe, it getteth nothing. * Lyke as he came naked out of his mothers wombe, so goeth he thither agayne, and carryeth nothing away with him of all his labour. This is a miserable plague, that he shall go away euen as he came. What helpeth it him then that he hath laboured in the winde? All the dayes of his lyfe also he did eate in the darke, with great carefulnesse, sickenes, and sozowe. * Therfoze me thinke it a better and a fayzer thinge a man to eate and drinke, and to be refreshed of all his labour, that he taketh vnder the sunne all the dayes of his lyfe, which God geueth him, foz this is his poztion. Foz vnto whom soeuer God geueth riches, goods and power, he geueth it him to enioy it, to take it foz his poztion, and to be refreshed of his labour: this is the gifte of God. Foz he thinketh not much how long he shall liue, foz somuche as God fylleth his heart with gladnes.

Job. 1 d
Tim. 6. b

THere is yet a plague vnder the sunne, and it is a generall thing amonge men: when God geueth a man riches, goodes and honour, so that he wanteth nothing of all that his herte can desyze: and yet God geueth him not leaue to enioye the same, but another man spendeth them. This is a vayne thinge and a miserable plague. If a man beget an hundzed chyldzen, and lyue manye yeres, so that his dayes are many in number, and yet can not enioye his good: neyther be buried: as foz him I saye, that an vntimely birthe is better then he. Foz he commeth to noughte, and spendeth his time in darkenesse, and his name is forgotten. Mozeouer he seeth not the sunne, and knoweth not of it: and yet hath he moze reste then the other. Yea, though he lined a thousand yeres, yet hath he no good lyfe. Come not all to one place? All the labour that a man taketh, is foz him selfe, and yet his desyze his neuer fylled after his minde. Foz what hath the wise moze then the foole? What helpeth it the pooze, that he knoweth to walke with fooles before the lyuinge? The cleare sighte of the eyes is better, then that the soule shoulde walke after desyzes of the lust. Howbeit this is also a vayne thing, and a disquietnes of minde. The thing that hath bene is named alreadi, and knowen, that it is euen man him selfe, neyther may he go to lawe with him that is mightier then hee. Manye thinges there be that increase vanitie: and what hath a man els? Foz who knoweth what is good foz man liuing, in the daies of his vaine life, whiche is but a shadowe? Oz who will tell a man what shall happen after him vnder the sunne?

A * Good name is moze worthe then * precious oyntmente: and the day of death is better then the daye of byzth. It is better to go into an house of mourning, then into a banketting house. Foz there is the ende of all men: and he that is liuinge taketh it to hearte. Grauitie is better then to laughe. Foz when the countenaunce is heauie, the hearte is reformed. The hearte of the wyse is in the mourninge house, but the hearte of the foolishe, is in the house of myzthe. * It is better to gene eare to the chastening of a wise man, then to heare the song of fooles: Foz

For the laughing of fooles is lyke the cracking of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a vayne thinge. The wise man hateth wrong dealing: and abhorreth the heart that coueteth rewards. Better it is to consider thend of a thing then the beginning. The patient of spirite is better then the hye mynded. Be not hastely angrie in thy minde, for wrath resteth in the bosome of fooles. Say not thou: What is the cause, that the dayes of the olde time were better then they that be nowe? for that were no wyse question. Wisdome with enheritaunce is good: yet better is it with them that without care may beholde the sunne. For wisedome defendeth as well as money, and the excellent knowledge and wisedome geueth lyfe vnto him that hath it in possession. Cōsider the workes of God, howe that no man can make the thing streight which he maketh croked. Use wel the time of prosperitie, and remember the time of misfortune: for God maketh the one by the other, so that a man can finde nothing els. All thinges haue I considered in the time of my vanitie: that the iust man perisheth for his righteousnes sake, and the vngodly liueth in hys wickednesse. There-Rom.12 fore • bee thou neyther to righteous, nor ouer wise, that thou perishe not: be neither to vnrighteous also, nor to foolyshe, lest thou dye before thy time. man is bitterer then deth: for she hath cast abrode her heart as a net that men sythe with, and her handes are chaynes. Who so pleaseth God shall escape from her: but the synner will be taken with her. Beholde (saieth the Preacher) this haue I diligently searched out and proued. One thing must be considred with another, that a man may come by knowledge: whiche as yet I seeke, and finde it not. Among a thousand men I haue founde one, but not one woman among all. ¶ The.viij. Chapter.

WHo is wyse? who hath I knowledge to make answere? A mans wysedome • maketh Pro.15 his face to shine, but vnshamefastnes Joh.4 putteth it out of fauoure, I must kepe the kinges commaundement, and the othe that I haue made vnto God. Be not hastie to go out of his syght, and see thou continue in no euill thinge, for whatsoeuer it pleaseth him, that doeth he. Lyke as when a kinge geueth a charge, his commaundement is mightie: Euen so • who may saye vnto him, what doest thou? • Who Jak.4 so kepeth the commaundement, shall Ecc.8
fele no harme: but a wise mans heart discerneth the time and iudgement. For euery thing will haue opportunitie and iudgement: and thys is the thing that maketh men ful of carefulnes and sorowe. And why? a man knoweth not what is for to come: for who will tell him? Neither is there any man that hath power ouer the spirite, to keepe styll the spirite, nor to haue any power in the time of death: is it not he also that can make an ende of the battayle, neyther may vngodtymes deliuer them that medle with= all. All these thinges I haue consi= dered, and applied my minde vnto e= uery worke that is vnder the sunne, howe one man hath lordship vpon a= Psa.73.c. 37.c nother to his owne harme. For • I haue sene often the vngodly brought to their graues: and yet they haue re= turned into the citie agayne, and came from the place of holy men, while they the citie were growen out of memo= rye, as wer those also that liued well.

C This is also a vayne thing. Because now that euill workes are not haste= lye punished, the heart of man geueth him selfe ouer vnto wickednes. But though an euill person offend an hun= dred times, and God differre geuing him long life: yet am I sure, that it shall goe well with them, that feare God, because they haue him before their eyes. Agayne, as for the vngodly it shall not be well with him, neyther shall he prolong his dayes: but euen as a shadow so shall he be that feareth not God. Yet is there a vanitie vpon earth. There be iust men, vnto whom it happeneth, as though they had the workes of the vngodly. Againe, ther be vngodly, with whō it goth as though they had the workes of the righteous.
This haue I called also a vayn thing.
Therfore I cōmend gladnes, because a man hath no better thing vnder the sunne, then to eate and drinke, and to be mery: for that shall he haue of his labour all the dayes of his life, which D God geueth him vnder the sunne. And so I applied my mind to learne wise= dome, and to know the trauell that is in the worlde (and that of suche a fa= shion, that I suffered not mine eyes to slepe neyther day nor night.) I vn= derstode of all the workes of God, but it is not possible for a man to attayne vnto the workes that are done vnder the sunne: and though he bestow his labour to seeke them out, yet can he not reache vnto them: yea, though a wise man would vndertake to knowe them, yet shall he not finde them.

The .ix. Chapter.

FOr all these thinges, purposed A I in my mind to seke out. The righteous & wise, yea and their seruauntes also, are in the hande of God, and there is no man that kno= weth eyther loue or hate, but all thin= ges are before them. It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: it goeth with the righteous, as with the vn= godly: • with the good and cleane as Iob.2.d. with the vncleane: with him that of= fereth, as with him that offereth not:
like as it goeth with the vertuous, so goeth it also with the sinner: As it happeneth vnto the periured, so hap= peneth it also vnto him that is afraide to be forsworne. Amonge all thinges that come to passe vnder the Sunne, this is a mysterye, that it happeneth vnto all alyke. This is a cause also that the hertes of men are full of wic= kednesse, and madde foolishnesse is in their heartes as long as they liue, vn= till they dye. And wyse: As longe as B a man liueth, he hath an hope: for a quicke dogge (say they) is better then a deade lyon: for they that be liuing, knowe that they shall dye, but they that be deade, knowe nothing, ney= ther deserue they any more. For their memoriall is forgotten, so that they be neyther loued, hated, nor enuyed: neither haue they anye more parte in the worlde, in all that is done vnder the Sunne. Go thou thy waye then, eate thy breade with ioye, and drinke thy wine with a glad hearte, for thy workes please God. Let thy garmen= tes be alway white, and • let thy head Mat.6.c lacke none ointment. • Use thy selfe to •pro.5.a liue ioyfully with thy wife, whom thou louest, all the dayes of thy lyfe, which is but vayne, that god geueth thee vnder the sunne, all the dayes of thy vanitie: for that is the portion in this life, of all thy laboure and trau= uaile that thou takest vnder the sunne.
Whatsoeuer thou takest in hand to do, that do with all thy power, for in the graue [illegible] at thou goest vnto, there is ney[illegible]worke, counsell, knowledge, C nor [illegible]dome. So I turned me vnto [illegible]er thinges vnder the sunne, and I sawe, that in running, it helpeth not to be swifte: in battayle it helpeth not to be strong: to feeding, it helpeth not to be wise: to ryches, it helpeth not to be suttell: to be had in fauoure, it helpeth not to be conning: but that all lieth in time and fortune.

Luk.21d D For a man knoweth not his time, but lyke as the fyshe are taken with the angle, and as the birdes are caughte with the snare: Euen so are men taken in the perilious time, when it cōmeth sodenly vpon them. This wisedome haue I sene also vnder the sun, and me thoughte it a greate thinge. There was a litle citie, and a fewe men within it: so there came a great king and besieged it, and made greate bulwarkes agaynst it. And in the citye there was founde a poore man, (but he was wyse) whiche with his wisedome deliuered the citie: yet was there no body, that had any respect vnto suche a symple man. Then saide I: Wisdome is better then strength. Neuertheless, a symple mans wisedome is despised, and his woordes are not hearde. The wise mans counsell that is followed in silence, is farre aboue the crying of a captayne amonge fooles.

Sap.6.a • For wisedome is better then harnesse, but one vnthrift alone destroieth muche good.

I A Deade flye doeth corrupte sweete oyntment, and maketh it to stinke. Euen so oftetimes he that is made of for wisedome and honoure, is abhorred because of a litle folysheneſſe. The wise mannes heart is vppon the righte hande, but a fooles heart vpon the left. The foole will shewe him selfe when he goeth by the way, yet thinketh he that euery man goeth as foolishely as him selfe. If a principall spirite be geuen thee to beare

Ro.12.b rule, • be not negligent then in thine office: for he that can take curtesly him selfe, auoydeth great offences. There is another plage is there, which I haue sene vnder the Sunne; namely, a wagnoraunce that is commonly among princes: in that a foole litteth in gret dignytie, and the riche are set downe beneath: I haue sene seruantes ride vpon horses, and princes goyng vpon their fete as it were seruantes. • But he that diggeth vp a pitte, shall fall therein him selfe: and who so breaketh downe the hedge, a serpent shall byte him. Who so remoueth stones, shall haue trauayle withall: and he that heweth wood, shalbe hurte therewith. When an yron is blont, and the poynt not sharpned, it must be whet agayne, and that with might. Euen so doeth wisedome folowe diligence. A babler of his tonge is no better then a serpent that stingeth without hissing. The woordes out of a wise mans mouthe, are gracious, but the lippes of a foole will destroye him selfe. The beginning of his talking is foolishnes: and the last woorde of his mouth is starke madneſſe. A foole is full of woordes, and a man can not tel what shall come to passe: who will then warne him of it that shall folowe after him? The labour of the foolishe is greuous vnto them, whyle they knowe not howe to go into the citie. Wo be vnto thee (O thou land) whose king is but a child, and whose princes are earely at their banketting. But well is thee (O thou land) whose king is come of nobles, and whose princes eate in due season, for necessitie, and not for luste. Thorowe slouthfulneſſe the balkes fall downe, and thorowe ydle handes it rayneth in at the house. Meat maketh men to laughe, and • wyne maketh them merye: but vnto money are all thinges obedient. Wisshe the kinge no euill in thy thought, and speake no hurt of the riche in thy priuie chamber: for a byrde of the ayre shall betray thy voyce, and with her fethers shall she bewray thy woordes.

L Aye thy bread vpon wete faces, and so shalt thou finde them after many dayes. Geue part seuen daies, and also vpon the eight: for thou thou knowest not what misery shall come vpon the earth. Whē the cloudes are full, they powre out rayne vppon the earth, and when the tree falleth, (whether it be toward the South, or North) in what place soeuer it fall, there it lyeth. He that regardeth the winde shal not sow, and he that hath respect vnto ỹ cloudes, shall not reape. Nowe like as thou knowest not the way of the breath howe it entreth into the litle body being yet in the mothers wombe: Euen so thou knowest not the workes of God, which is the worke master of all. Cease not thou therefore with thy handes to sow thy sede, whether it be in the morning or in the euening, for thou knowest not whether this or that shall prosper, and yf they bothe take, it is the better.

C The light is sweete, and a pleasaunt thinge is it for the eyes to looke vpon the Sunne. If a man liue manye yeres, and be glad in them all, let him remember the dayes of darkenesse, whiche shalbe many: and that foloweth, all thinges shalbe but vanitie. Be glad then (O thou younge man) in thy youth, and let thine heart be merye in thy yonge dayes, folowe the ways of thine owne hert, & the lust of thine eyes: but be thou sure, that God shall bringe thee into iudgement for all these thinges.

PUt awaye displeasure oute of thine heart, and remoue euill from thy bodye: for childehoode and youthe is but vanitie. Remember thy maker, the sooner in thy youth, or euer the dayes of aduersitie come, and or the yeares drawe nye, when thou shalte saye: I haue not pleasure in them: before the Sunne, the light, the moone and starres be darkened: and or the cloudes tourne agayne after the rayne, when the kepers of the house shall tremble, and when the stronge men shal bowe them selues: when the millers stande still: because they be so fewe, and when the sighte of the windowes shall were dimme, when the doores in the streetes shall be shut, and when the voyce of the miller shalbe layde downe: when menne shall ryse vp at the voyce of the birde, and when all the daughters of musicke, shall be broughte lowe: when men shall feare in hye places, and be afrayde in the stretes: when the Almonde tree shall floryshe and be laden with the grashopper: and when all lust shall passe (because Manne goeth to his longe home, and the mourners go about the strectes.) Or euer the siluer lace be taken away, and or the golden well be broken. Or the potte be broken at the well, and the wheele vppon the cesterne: Then shall the dust be turned againe vnto earth, from whence it came, and the spirite shall returne vnto GOD, whiche gaue it. B C D

All is but vanitie (sayeth the preacher) all is but playne vanitie. The Preacher was yet more wise, and taught the people knowledge: he gaue good hede, sought out the grounde, and set forth many parables. His diligence was to finde out acceptable wordes, right Scripture, and the wordes of truth.

Heb. 4.c.

For the wordes of the wise are like pryckes and nayles that go throughe, wherewith the stuffe gathered is holden vp: For they are geuen of one shepherde oneiye. Therefore beware (my sonne) of that doctrine that is beside this: for to make many bokes it is an endles worke, and to loud crying weryeth the bodye. Let vs heare the conclusion of all thinges: Feare God and kepe his commaundementes: For that toucheth all men. For God shall iudge all workes and secrete thinges, whether they be good or euill.

My beloued is like a Roe, or a yonge heart: Behold, he standeth behind our wall, he loketh in at the windowe, and peepeth through the grate. My beloued answered and said vnto me: O stande vppe my loue, my bewtyfull, and go to thine owne: for lo, the winter is now past, the raine is away and gone. Beholde, about Salomons bedstede there stande lx. valeaunt men of the most mighty in Israel. They hold swerds euery one, and are expert in warre. Euery man also hath his swerde vpon his thighe, D because of feare in the night: Kinge Salomon had made him selfe a Palace of the wood of Libanus, the pyllers are of siluer, the couering of gold, the seate of purple, the ground is pleasantly paued with loue of the daughters of Jerusalem. O that I might go to the mountaine of Myrre, and to the hill of frankensence: till the day breake, and till the shadowes be past away. Thou art all fayre, O my loue, and no spotte is there in thee. Come to mee from Libanus (O my spouse) com to me from Libanus, loke from the top of Amana, from the top of Sanir and Hermon, from the Lions dennes, and from the mountaines of the Leopardes. Thou haste with loue bewitched my hearte. O my syster, my spouse, thou hast bewitched my heart, with one of thyne eyes, and with one cheine of thy necke. O how fayre are thy brestes my syster, my spouse? Thy brestes are more pleasant then wine, and the smel of thine oyntmentes passeth all spices. Thy lippes, ¶ O my spouse drop as the hony combe, yea milke and hony is vnder thy tongue, and the smell of thy garmentes is lyke the smell of Libanus. A garden well locked is my syster, my spouse, a garden well locked, and a sealed well. The fruites that are planted in thee, are lyke a verye Paradise of Pomgranates with swete fruites: as Camphyre, Nardus, and Saffron, Calamus, and Sinamon, with all swete smelling trees: Myrre, Aloes, and all the beste spices: a well of gardens, a well of liuinge water, whiche ranne downe frō Libanus. Vp thou North winde, come thou South winde, and blowe vpon my garden, that the smell thereof may be caryed on euery syde: yea that my beloued maye come into his garden, and eate of the sweete frutes that growe therein.

I Am come into my garden, O my syster, my spouse: I haue gathered my Myrre with my spyce. I haue eaten honye with my honye combe, I haue dronke my wine with my milke. Eate, O ye frendes, drinke and be merye, O ye beloued. As I am a slepe, and my heart is waking, I heare the voyce of my beloued, when he knocketh. Open to me, O my syster, my loue, my doue, my dearling: for my heade is full of dewe, and the lockes of my heare are ful of the night droppes. I haue put of my cote, howe can I doe it on agayne? I haue washed my feete, howe shall I syle them agayne? My loue put in his hande at the hole, and my hearte was moued within me. I stode vp to open vnto my beloued, and my handes dropped with Myrre, and the Myrre ranne downe by my fingers vpon the locke. I opned vnto my beloued, but he was departed and gone his waye. Nowe when he spake, my hearte was gone: I sought him, but I coulde not finde him: I cried vpon him, neuertheles, hee gaue me no aunswere. So the watchmen that went about the citie founde mee, smote mee, and wounded me: Yea, they that kept the wals tooke awaye my kerchefe fro me. I charge you therefore, O ye daughters of Ierusalem, yf ye fynde my beloued that ye tell him howe that I am sicke for loue. What maner of man is thy loue aboue other louers? O thou fairest amonge women? Or what can thy loue do, more then other louers, that thou chargest vs so strayghtlye? Is for my loue, he is whyte and red coloured, a goodly person among ten thousande: his heade is as the moost fyne golde, the lockes of his heare are bushed, and blacke as a crowe. His eyes are as the eyes of doues by the water brookes, as though they were washed with milke, and are set lyke perles in gold. His chekes are lyke a garden bed, wherein the Apotecaries plant al maner of swete thinges: His lippes are like roses that drop sweete smellyng Myrre. His handes are like golde ringes hauing enclosed the precious stone of Tharsis. His body is as the pure yuorye, deckt ouer with Saphires: His legges are as the pilers of marble, sette vpon sockettes of golde. His face is as Libanus, and as the bewtie of the Cedre trees. The wordes of his mouth are sweete, yea, he is altogether louely. Suche one is my loue, O ye daughters of Ierusalem, suche one is my loue.

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

WHither is thy loue gone then (O thou fayrest amonge women) whither is thy loue departed? we wil seeke him with thee. My loue is gone downe into his garden, vnto the sweete smelling beddes, that he maye refreshe him selfe in the garden, and gather roses. My loue is myne, and I am his, which feedeth among the roses. Thou art bewtifull, O my loue, as is the place of Thirza, thou art fayre as Ierusalem, fearefull as an armye of men with their banners. Turne away thine eyes fro me, for they haue sette me on fyre. Thy heary lockes are like a flocke of goates shorne vpon the mount of Gilead. Thy teeth are like a flocke of shorne shepe, whiche go out of the washing place, where euery one beareth twins and not one vnfruitfull among them. Thy chekes are like a pece of a pomgranat, within thy bowpers. There are three score Queenes, foure score wiues, and damselles without number. One is my doue, one is my dearlinge. She is the onely beloued of her mother, and deare vnto her that bare her. When the daughters sawe her, they said, she was blessed. Yea the Queenes and Wiues praysed her.

What is she this that looketh forth as the morning? faire as the moone, clere as the Sun, and fearefull as an army of men with their banners. I went downe to the nut garden, to see what grewe by the brookes, and to loke yf the vineyard flourished, or yf the pomgranates were shot foorth. I knewe not that my soul had made me the chariote of the people that be vnder tribute. Turne againe, turne agayne, O thou perfect one, turne agayne, turne agayne, and we will looke vpon thee. What will you see in the Sulamite? She is like men of warre, singinge in a company.

I O howe pleasaunt are thy treadinges with thy shoes, thou princes daughter? Thy thyghes are like a fayre Jewell, whiche is wrought by a cunning workemaister. Thy nauell is like a round goblet whiche is neuer without drinke. Thy wombe is like a heape of wheat that is set about with roses. * Thy two breastes are lyke two twinnes Can.7.a. of younge Roes. Thy necke is as it B were a tower of yuory: thine eyes also are like the water pooles that are in Hesebon, beside the porte of Bathrabbim: thy nose is lyke the tower of Libanus, which looketh towarde Damascus. ¶ That heade that standeth vpon thee, is like Carmell, and the heare of thy heade is like purple, and like a kinge goinge forth with his garde about him. O howe fayre and louely art thou my dearlinge in pleasure? Thy stature is like a Palme tree, and thy brests are like grapes. I said: I will clime vp into the Palme tree, & take hold of his hye braunches. C Thy breastes also shalbe as the vyne clusters, the smell of thy nostreis is like the smel of apples, and thy tawes are lyke the beste wine: which goeth streit vnto my beloued, and thrusteth forth by the lippes of the auncient elders. There will I turne me vnto my loue, and he shall turne him vnto me. O come on my loue, we will go D forth into the fielde, and take our lodging in the villages. In the morning will we go see the vineyard: we will see yf the vyne be sprong forth, yf the grapes be growen, and if the pomgranates be shot out. There will I gene thee my breastes, the Mandragoras gene their sweete smel: and beside our doores are all maner of pleasant fruits: both newe and olde: whiche I haue kept for thee, O my beloued.

O That I might find thee without, and kisse thee, whom I A loue as my brother, whiche suckt my mothers breasts, & that thou shalt not be despised. I will lead thee and bring thee into my mothers house that thou mightest teache me, and that I might geue thee drinke of spiced wine, and of the sweete sappe of my pomgranates. * His lefte hand shalbe Cant.2.d vnder my head, and his right hande shall embrace me. I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalē, that ye wake not vp my loue, nor touche her, till she be contente her selfe. What is she this that commeth vp from the wildernes, and leaneth vpon her loue? I waked thee vp among the apple trees, where thy mother conceiued thee, where thy mother (I saye) brought thee into the worlde. O set me as a seale B vpon thine heart, and as a seale vpon thine arme: for loue is mighty as the death, and gelousye as the hell. Her coales are of fyre, and a verye flame of the Lorde: so that manye waters are not able to quenche loue, neyther may the streames drowne it. Yea, yf a man would geue all the good of his house for loue, he shoulde count it nothing. Our sister is but yong, & hath no breastes: what shall we do for our C sister, when she shalbe spoken for? If she be a wall, we shall builde a siluer bulwarke therevpon: yf she be an open doore, we shall fasten her with borders of Cedre tree. I am a wall, and my breastes like towres, thenne was I as one that hath founde fauor in his sight. Salomon hath a vineyard at Baal Hamon, and this vineyarde deliuered he vnto the keepers: that euery one for the fruite therof, shulde geue him a thousande pieces of siluer. My vinyard is in my sight, thou (O Salomon) muste haue a thousand, and the kepers two hundred with the fruite. Thou that dwellest in the gardens, O let me heare thy voyce, that my companions may harken to the same. O get thee away, my loue, and be as a roe or a yong hart vpon the swete smelling mountaines.

The first Chapter.

The vision of Esaye the sonne of Amos, whiche he sawe vpon Juda and Jerusalem: in the dayes of Uzia and Joatham, Ahaz and Jehezekiah kinges of Juda. Heare O heauen, and harken, O earthe: for the Lorde hath spoken: I haue nourished & brought vp children, but they haue done wickedlye againste me. The oxe hath knowen his owner: & the asse his masters cribbe: but Israel hath receiued no knowledge, my people hath no vnderstanding. Alas, for this sinful nation, a people of great iniquitie, a seede of vngracious people, corrupting their wayes. They haue forsaken the lord, they haue prouoked the holye one of Israell vnto anger, and are gone backewarde. Whereby shuld ye be plagued any more, for ye are euer fallinge awaye: The whole head is sicke, and the heart is heauy. From the soale of the foote vnto the head, there is no whole part in al your body, but all are woundes, botches, sores, and stripes, which can neyther be helped, bound vp, mollified, nor eased with any oyntment. Your land lyeth waste, your cities are brēt vp, your enemies deuoure your land, & ye must be faine to stand, and loke vpon it, and it is desolate, as they were subuerted that were alienate from the Lorde. Moreouer, the daughter of Sion is lefte alone like a cotage in a vineyard, like a lodge in a garden of Cucumbers, like a wasted Citie. And excepte the Lorde of hostes had lefte vs a fewe aliue, we shuld haue ben as Sodoma & like vnto Gomorra. Hear the word of the Lord ye lordes of Sodoma: and herken vnto the law of our god, thou people of Gomorra. Whye offer ye so many sacrifices vnto me saith ỹ Lord: I am full of the brent offrings of wethers, and of the fatnesse of fed beastes. I haue no pleasure in the blood of bullocks, lambes, and goates. Whē ye come to appere before me, who requireth this of you to treade within my porches. Therefore offer me no mo oblations, for it is but lost labour. Incense is an abhominable thing vnto me. I may not away wt your newe moones, your Saboths & gathering together at the solemne dayes. I hate your newe holy dayes & solemne feastes, euen fro my very heart. I can not away with such vanitie, & holding in of the people. They lye vpon me as a burthen, & I am wery of bearing thē. Whē ye hold out your hands, I will turne mine eyes frō you. And though ye make many prayers, yet wil I here nothing at all, seing your handes are ful of blud. Wash you therfore, & make you clean, put away your euil intents out of my sight, cease from doing of euil. Learn to do righe, applye your selues to equitie, deliuer the oppressed, helpe the fatherles to his right, let the widowes complaint come before you. Come I praye ye (saieth the Lorde)

let vs reason oure matter together. Though your sinnes be as redde as scarlet, they shalbe as white as snow. And though they were like purple, they shalbe as white as wooll. If ye be louing and obedient, ye shall enioye the best thing that groweth in the lande. But yf ye be obstinate and rebellious, ye shalbe deuoured with the swearde: for thus the Lorde hath promised with his owne mouthe.

How happeneth it then that the righteous Citie (whiche was full of equitye) is become vnfaithfull as an whoore? righteousnesse dwelte in it, but nowe murtherers. Thy siluer is tourned to drosse, and thy wyne mixte F with water. Thy princes are wicked and cõpanions of thieues. They loue gyftes altogether, and gape for rewardes. As for the fatherlesse, they helpe him not, to his righte, neyther will they lette the widowes causes come before them. Therefore saith the Lorde God of hostes, the mightie gouernour of Israell: Out vpon ye, I will ease me of mine enemyes, and I will auenge me of mine aduersaries, I shall laye my hand vpon thee, and burne out thy drosse from the fynest and purest, and put out all thy tinne, and set thy iudges agayne as they wer sometime, and the Senatours as they were from the beginning. Then shalt thou be called the righteous Ci-G tye, the faythfull Citie. Sion shall be redeemed with equitie, and they shall turne agayne vnto her in righteousnesse. For the transgressours and vngodly, and suche as are become vnfaythfull vnto the Lorde, must altogether be vtterlye destroyed. For they shalbe ashamed of the Gods that you longed for. And ye shalbe put to shame, for the Idols groue gardens that ye haue chosen: ye shall be as a tree whose leaues are fallen awaye and as a garden that hath no moysture. And as for the glorye of youre graued Images, it shalbe turned to dry strawe, and he that made them to a sparke. And they shall both burne together, so that no man shalbe able to quenche them.

THis is the worde that was opened vnto Esaye the sonne of Amoz, vpon Iuda, and Jerusalem. It will be also in the last dayes that the hille where the house of the Lorde is builded, shall be the chiefe among hilles, and exalted aboue all litle hilles. And all nations shall praye vnto him, and the multitude of people shal go speaking thus one to an other: Vp, let vs go to the hill of the Lorde, and to the house of the God of Jacob: that he may shewe vs his way, & that we may walke in his pathes. For the lawe shall come out of Sion, and the worde of the Lorde from Jerusalem, & shal geue sentence among the Hethen, and shal reforme the multitude of people. They shall breake their swardes also into mattockes, & their speares to make sythes. And one people shall not lift vp wepon against another, nether shall they learne to fight from thence foorth. Come ye (O house of Jacob) let vs walke in the light of the Lorde. But thou haste forsaken thy people the house of Jacob: because they go farre beyond the east countreys in sorceries (whom they haue as the Philistins had) and in straunge childzen they think thẽ selues to haue ynough. Their lande is also full of siluer and gold, neither is there any ende of their treasure. Their land is also ful of horses, & no end is there of their charets. Their land is also full of vaine gods, and before the worke of their owne handes haue they bowed them selues, yea euen before the thing that their owne fingers haue made. The iher kneleth the man, there falleth the man downe before them: but thou (O lord) wilt not leaue them vnpunished. And therefore get thee into some rock, and hide thee in the ground for feare of the Lorde, & for the glory of his maiestie. Whiche casteth downe the high lookes of presumptuous persons, & bringeth lowe the pryde of man, and the Lorde onely shalbe exalted in that day. For the day of the Lorde of hostes shall goe ouer all pryde and presumption, vppon all them that exalt them selues, and shall bring them all downe: vppon all the high and stoute Cedre trees of Libanus, and vpon all the okes of Basan, vpon al high hils, and vpon all stoute mountaynes, vpon all costlye towres, and vpon all strong walles, vppon all shippes of Tharsis, and vpon euerye thing that is glorious and pleasant to looke vpon. And it shall bring downe the pride of man, & lay mās presumptuousnesse full lowe, and the Lorde shall onelye haue the victorye in that daye. But the Idols shall vtterlye be rooted out. Men shal crepe into holes of stone, and into caues of the earthe, for feare of the Lord, and for the glory of his maiestie: what time as he shall arise vp to condemne the earth. Then shall man cast awaye his gods of siluer, and his gods of golde (whiche he neuertheles had made to honor them) vnto Molles and Backes. And they shall creepe into the caues and rockes, and into the cliftes of harde stones, for feare of God, and for the glorye of his maiestie, when he riseth to condemne the earth. Fear not ye then any man, whose breath is in his nostrels. For what is he of reputation.

FOr lo, the Lord God of Hostes doth take away from Jerusalem and Juda, all possessions and power, all meate and drinke, the captayne and the souldiour, the iudge & the prophet, the wise, and the aged man, the prince of fiftie yere old, & the honorable: the Senators, and men of vnderstanding: the master of craftes, and orators. And I shall geue them children to be their princes, and babes shall haue the rule of you. The people also shalbe pilled and polled, and one shall euer be doing violence & wronge to another. The boye shall presume against the elder, and the vyle person against the honorable. Yea, one shall take a frende of his owne kindred by the bosome, and saye: thou haste clothing, thou shalt be our head, for thou mayest kepe vs from this fall and perill. Then shall he sweare and saye: I can not helpe you. Moreouer, there is neyther meate nor clothing in my house, make me no ruler of the people. For Jerusalem is ouerthrowen, and Juda must fall to the ground, because that both their wordes and councels ar against the Lord, to prouoke the presence of his maiestie vnto anger. The chaunging of their countenaunce bewrayeth them: yea, they declare their owne sinnes them selues, as the Sodomites, and hide them not. Wo be vnto their soules, for they haue retourned euill vnto them selues. Bid the righteous do well, for they shall enioye the fruites of their studies. But wo be to the vngodlye and vnrighteous, for they shalbe rewarded after their woorkes. Children are extorcioners of my people, and wemen haue rule of them, O my people, thole that call thee blessed, deceyue thee, and deprayue the waye of thy foote steppes. The Lorde is risen vppe to commen of the matter, and standeth vp (I saye) to geue iudgemente of the people. The Lorde shall come foorth to reason with the Senatours, and princes of his people. It is ye that haue burnt vp my vineyarde, the extortion done to the poore is in youre houses. Wherefore do ye oppresse my people, and marre the faces of the poore: sayth the Lord God of hostes. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde: Seinge the daughters of Sion are become so proude, and come in with stretched out neckes, and with wayne wanton eyes: seinge they comme in trippinge so nicely with their feete. Therefore shall the Lorde shaue the heades of the daughters of Sion, and shall discouer their shame. In that daye shall the Lorde take awaye the gorgiousnesse of their apparell, and spanges, cheynes, partlettes, and collares, bracclettes, and hoodes, the goodly floured, wide, and drowderd raiment, & brooches, and headbandes, ringes and garelandes, holy day clothes, thes and bayles, kercheis and pinnes, glasses and eyzelles, bonettes, and taches. And in steede of good smell, there shall be stinke among theim. And for their gyrdles, there shall be louse bandes. And for well set heare, there shalbe baldnesse. In steede of a stomacher, a sackclothe, and for their beautie, witherednesse, and sonne burninge. Your husbandes and myghtie men shall perysshe with the sweard in battayle. At that time shall their gates mourne and complayne, and they shall sitte as desolate folke vppon the earth.

¶ THen shall seuen wiues take holde of one man, and say: we will laye all our meate and clothing together in common, onely that we may be called thy wiues, and that this shamefull reprofe maye be taken from vs. After that time shall the braunche of the Lorde be beautyfull and mightie, and the fruit of the earth shalbe sayre and pleasant, for those Israelites that shal spring therof. Then shall the remnaunt in Syon and the remnaunt at Ierusalem be called holy. Namely, all suche as are written among the liuing at Ierusalem: ¶ What time as the Lorde shall washe away the filthines of the daughters of Syon, and purge the bloud out from Ierusalem with the wind of his iudgement, and with fyre. Moreouer vpon all the dwellinges of the hill of Syon, and vpon their whole congregation, shall the Lord prouide a cloude, and smoke by day, and the shining of a flaming fyre by night: for all their glory shalbe preserued. And Ierusalem shal be a tabernacle for a shadowe, because of heate in the day time, a place and refuge where a man maye keepe him from wether and rayne.

¶ NOwe will I singe my beloued frende, a song of my frendes, because of his vineyard. My beloued frende hath a vineyarde in a very fruitfull plenteous ground. And this he hedged, this he walled round about, & plãted it with goodly grapes. In the middest of it builded he a toure and made a wine presse therin. And afterward when he looked that it shold bryng him grapes, it brought forth thornes. Nowe therfore (O ye citisens of Ierusalem, and whole Iuda:) Iudge I praye you, betwixte me and my vineyarde. What more couide haue bene doone for it that I haue not done. Wherefore then hath it geuen thornes, where I loked to haue had grapes of it? Well, nowe I shall tell you howe I will doo with my vineyard: I wil take the hedge from it, that it maye perysshe and breake downe the wall, that it maye be troden vnder foote. I will laye it wast, that it shall neyther bee dygged nor cutte, but beare thornes and bryers. I will also forbidde the cloudes that they shall not rayne vppon it. As for the vineyard of the Lorde of hostes, it is the house of Israel, and whole Iuda his sayre planting. Of these hee loked for equitie, but se there is wrõg: for righteousnesse, lo, it is but miserie. Woe vnto theym that ioyne one house to another, and bryngе one lande so nighe vnto an other, that the poore can gette no more grounde, and that ye may dwell vpon the earthe alone. These thinges are in the eares of the Lorde of hostes: shall not manye greater and more gorgious houses bee soo waste that no man shall dwell in them? And tenne acres of vynes shall geue but a quarte, and thirtie bushels of seede shall geue but an Epha. Woe be vnto theym, that ryse vp early to folowe dronkennesse, and to theim that continue so, vntill nighte, and till they be sette on fyre with wyne. In those companyes are harpes and lutes, tabrets, and pypes, and wine. But they regarde not the worke of the Lorde, and consider not the operation of his hands. Therfore commeth my folke also into captiuitie, because they haue no vnderstandinge. Their glorye is famyshed with with hunger, and their pride is marred for thirste. Therefore gapeth hel, and openeth her mouthe marueylous wide: that their pride, boasting and welthe, with suche as reioyce therein, may discende into it. Thus hath man a fall, and is brought lowe, and the high looke of the proude shalbe layde downe. But the Lord of hostes is exalted in iudgement, and God that is holy, is praised in righteousnes. Then shall the sheepe eate in order, and the ryche mennes landes that were layde waste, shall straungers deuoure. Wo be vnto them, that drawe wickednes vnto them with coards of vanitie and sinne, as it were with a carte rope. Whiche vse to speake on this maner: let him make haste nowe, and go forth with his worke, that we maye see it. Let the counsell of the holy one of Israell come, and drawe nye, that we E may knowe it. Wo be vnto them that call euill good, and good euill, whiche make darknes light, and light darkenesse, that make sower sweete, and sweete sowre. Wo be vnto them that are wyse in their owne syghte, and thinke them selues to haue vnderstanding. Wo be vnto them, that ar strong to suppe out wyne and experte men to set vp dronkennes. These geue sentence with the vngodly for rewardes, but condempne the iuste cause of the righteous. Therfore, like as fyre lycketh vp the strawe, and as the flame consumeth the stubble: Euen so their roote shalbe as corruption: and their blossome shall vanish away like dust: for they haue caste away the lawe of the Lorde of Hostes, and blasphemed the word of the holy maker of Israel.

F Therefore is the wrath of the Lorde kyndled also agaynst his people, and he shaketh his hande at them: yea, he hath smitten, so that the hilles did tremble. And their karcasses did lye in the open stretes, lyke mire. And in all this, the wrath of God hath not ceassed, but his hande is stretched out still. And he shall geue a token vnto a straunge people: and cal vnto them in a farre countrye: and behold, they shall come haistily with spede. There shall not be one faynt nor feble amog them, no not a sluggishe nor slippery person. There shal not one of them put of the gyrdle from his loynes, nor lowse the lachette of his shooe. His arowes are sharpe, and all his bowes bente. His horse hookes are lyke flynte, and his cartwheles lyke a stormy winde. His crye is as it were a Lyon, and he roreth lyke lions whelpes. They shall roare and hanche vp the praye, and no man shall recouer it, or gette it from them, in that day they shalbe so fearse vpon them, as the sea. And yf we loke vnto the lande, beholde, it shalbe all darkenes and sorowe. If we loke towarde heauen: beholde, it shall be darke.

I N the same yeare that kinge Oziah died, I sawe the Lorde sitting vpon an high and glorious seate, & his traine filled the temple. And about him stode the Seraphins, whereof euery one had fyue winges. With twayne eche one couered his face, with twayne his fete, and with twayne did he flye. They cried also eche one to other on this maner: holy, holy, holy, is the Lorde of hostes. The whole worlde is full of his glorye. Yea, the geastes and dorechekes moued at his crying, and the house was full of smoke. Then I sayde: O B wo is me. For I am lost, inasmuch as I am a man of vncleane lippes, and dwell amonge people that hath vncleane lippes also: for mine eyes haue seene the kinge and Lorde of Hoostes. Then flewe one of the Seraphins vnto me, hauynge a hotte cole in his hande, whiche he had taken from the aulter with the tonges. and touched my mouth, and saide: Lo, C this hath touched thy lippes, and thyne vnrighteousnesse is taken awaye, and thy sinne forgeuen. Also I herde the voyce of the Lorde, saying on this maner: whom shal I sende? and who will be our messaunger? Then I sayde: here am I, sende me.

And

And he saide: go, and tell this people: Mat.13.b • Ye shall heare in deede, but ye shall Mar.4.b not vnderstand: ye shall playnelye see, Isa.8.b. and not perceaue. Harden the heart of Act.28.f this people, stop their eares, and shut Joh.12.f their eyes, that they see not with their D eyes, heare not with their eares, and vnderstand not with their hertes, and conuert and be healed. Then spake I Lorde, howe long? he answered: vntill the cities be vtterly wasted without inhabitours, and the houses with out men, till the land be also desolate, and lye vnbuilded. For the Lord shall take the men farre awaye, so that the land shall lye waste a long season, yet in it shall succeede ten kinges, and the lande shal returne and be layde waste.
And as the Terebinte tree and oke in winter cast their leaues, and yet haue their sappe in them, so shall the holye seede continue in their substaunce.

I It happened in the time of Ihaz the sonne of Iotham, which was the sonne of Uziah kinge of Iu-da, that • Razin the king of Siria, 4R.16.a and Pechah the sonne of Romeliah, kinge of Israell, wente vp towarde Ierusalem to besiege it, but Razin was not able to winne it. Nowe when the house of Dauid (that is Ihaz) herd word thereof, that Siria and Ephraim were confederate together: his heart quaked (yea and the hertes also of his people) like as whē a tree in the field is moued with the winde. Then sayde God vnto Esay: go mete Ihaz (thou and thy son Sear Iasub) at the heade of the ouer pole, in the fote path by the Fullers grou̇nd, and saye vnto him: Take heede to thy selfe and be still, but feare not, neyther be faint hearted, for these two tayles, that is: for these two smokinge fyrebrandes, the wrath and furiousnes of Razin, the Sirian and Romelyes sonne, because that the king of Siria Ephraim, and Romelies sonne haue wickedly conspired against thee, saying: We will go vp against Iuda, bexe them, and bring them vnder vs, and set a king there, euen the sonne of B Tabeell. For thus sayeth the Lorde God therto: It shall not so go foorth, neyther come so to passe: for the head Citie of the Sirians, is Damascus, but the head of Damascus is Razin.
And after fiue and threescore yeare shall Ephraim be no more a people.
And the chiefe Citie of Ephraim is Samaria, but the heade of Samaria is Romelies sonne. If ye beleue not, it commeth of this, that ye are vn-faithfull to God. Moreouer G O D spake once againe vnto Ihaz, saying: Require a token of the Lord thy god, whether it be towarde the deapth beneath, or towarde the height aboue.
Then said Ihaz: I wil require none, neyther will I tempt the Lorde. The Lord answered: Then heare to, ye of ỹ house of Dauid: It is not ynough for you that ye be greeuous vnto men, but ye must greeue my God also. And C therfore the Lord shall geue you a token: Beholde, a virgin shall conceaue and beare a sonne, and thou (his mother) shalt call his name Emanuell.
Butter and hony shall he eate, that he may knowe to refuse the euill, and chose the good. For, or euer the childe come to knowledge, to eschewe the euill & chose the good: The lande (that thou so abhorrest) shalbe desolate of both her kinges. The Lorde also shall send a time vpon the, vpon thy people, and vpon thy fathers house (suche as neuer came since the time that Ephraim departed from Iuda) through the kinge of the Assirians. For at the same time shall the Lorde whistle for the flyes that are aboute the waters of Egipte, and for the Bees in the Assirians lande. These shall come, and shall lighte all in the desolate valeys, in the holes of stones, vppon all thornye and bushye places. At the same time shall the Lorde shaue the heare of the head and the fete, and the beard cleane of, with the rasoure that he shall hyer beyonde the water: D namely, with the kinge of the Assi-rians. At the same time shall a manne liue:

lyue with a kowe, and two sheepe. Then, because of the aboundaunce of milke, he shall make butter and eate it. So that euery one which remayneth in the lande, shall eate butter and honye. At the same time all vineyardes (though there be a thousande vynes in one, and were solde for a thousande siluerlinges) shall be turned to bryers and thornes. Like as they shall come into the land with arowes and bowes, so shall all the lande become bryers and thornes. And as for all hilles that are hewen downe, there shall not come vpon them any feare of bryers and thornes. But the cattell shall be driuen thither, and the sheepe shall feede there.

MOreouer, the Lorde sayde vnto me: Take thee a great leafe, and write in it, as men do with a penne, make haste speede to robbe, and haste to the spoyle. And I called vnto me faythfull witnesses to recorde: Uriah the priest, and Zachariah, the sonne of Barachiah. After that wente I vnto the Prophetisse, that had conceiued and borne a sonne. Then sayde the Lorde to me: Geue him this name: a speedye robber, an hastye spoyler. For whye, or euer the childe shall haue knowledge to crye Father and Mother: shall the riches of Damascus, and the substãce of Samaria be taken awaye by the spoyler, before the kinge of the Assirians, The Lord spake also vnto me, saynge: for so muche as this people refuseth the still renninge water of Shilo, and put their delite in Razin and Romelies sonne: Beholde, the Lorde shall bring mightie and great flouds of water vpon them: namelye, the king of the Assirians, with all his power: whiche shall climbe vp vpon all his flouds, and renne ouer all their bankes. And shall breake in vpon Iuda, flowing and encreasing in power, till he get him by the necke. He shall fill also the wydenesse of thy lande with his broade wynges, O Emanuell. Breake downe (O ye people of Assur) and ye shalbe broken downe: Hearken to, all yee of farre countreys. Muster you, and you shall be broken downe, prepare you to battayle: and you shall be torne in pieces: take your counsayle together, yet must your counsaile come to naught: go in hand withall, yet shall it not prosper: for God is with vs. For the Lorde spake thus to me in the power of his hande, and warned me, saying vnto me: that I should not walke in the way of his people. He sayde moreouer: rounde with none of them, whoe so euer say, yonder people are bounde together, feare them not, neyther be afrayde of them, but sanctifie the Lord of Hostes, let him be your feare and dreade. For he shalbe the holye place to flee to, and stone to stumble at: the rocke to fall vpon, a snare, and net to bothe the houses of Israell, and the inhabitours of Ierusalem. And many shall stumble, fall, and be broken vpon him: yea, they shall be snared and taken. Nowe laye the witnesses together, and seale the lawe with my disciples. Thus will I waite vpon the Lorde that hath tourned his face from the house of Iacob, and I will looke for him. But loe, as for me, and the children which the Lord hath geuen me, we are a token and wonder in Israell, for the Lord of hostes sake, which dwelleth vpon the hil of Sion. And if they say vnto you: aske counsell at the sothesayers, witches, charmers, and coniurers, then make theim this answer. Is there a people any where that asketh not counsell at his God? * Should men renne vnto the dead for the liuing? If any man want lighte, let him looke vpon the lawe, and the testimonye, whether they speake not after this meaninge. If he doo not this, he stumbleth and suffereth hunger. And if he suffer hunger he is out of patience, and blaspheneth his king and his god. Then loketh he vpward and downeward to the earth, and beholde, there is trouble and darkenesse, vexation is rounde about him, and the cloude of errour. And out of such aduersitie, shall he not escape. Euen lyke as in time past, it hath bene well seene, that the lande of Zabulon, and the lande of Nepththali (where through the sea way goeth ouer Jordan into the lande of Galile) was at the firste in litle trouble: but afterwarde sore vexed.

and

2 The people that walke in darknes haue seene great light. As for them that dwell in the land of the shadowe of death, vpon them hath the lighte shined. Thou haste multiplyed the people, and not en-Psa.118 creased theyr ioye. They reioyce before thee, euen as men make merye in haruest, and as men that haue gotten the victory when they delt the spoyle.
4 For thou hast broken the yoke of the peoples burthen: the staffe of his shoulder, and the rod of his oppressoure, as 5 in the dayes of Madian. And truelye euery battayle that the warriour accomplisheth, is done with confused noyse, and defyling theyr garmentes with bloud: But this battayle shalbe with burning and consuming of fyre.
6 For vnto vs a chyld is borne, and vnto vs a sonne is geuen. Vppon his shoulder doth the kingdome lye, and he is called with his owne name, Wonderfull. The geuer of counsel, the mightie God, the euerlasting father, the prince of peace, he shall make no ende to encrease the kingedome, and peace, and shall sitte vpon the seate of Dauid, and in his kingdome, to set vp the same, and to stablish it with equi-7 tie and righteousnes, from hence forth for euermore. This shall the gelousie of the Lorde of hostes bring to passe.
8 The Lorde sent a worde into Jacob, the same is come into Israell.
9 And all the people of Ephraim shall know and they that dwell in Samaria, that can say with pride and hye stomackes 10 on this maner: The tile worke is fallen downe, but we wil build it with squared stones, The mulbery timber is broken, but we shal set it vp againe 11 with Cedre. Neuertheles the Lord shal prepare Razin the enemy against them, and so order their aduersaries, 12 that the Syrians shall laye hold vpon them before, and the Philistines behynde, and so deuour Israell with open mouthe. After all this, is not the wrath of the Lord ceassed, but yet his hand stretched out still.
13 For the people turneth not vnto him that chastiseth them, neyther do they seeke the Lorde of Hostes.
14 Therefore hath the Lorde rooted out of Israell both head and taple, braunche and twigge in 15 one day. By the heade, is vnderstande the Senatoure and honorable man, and by the taple, the Prophete that preached lyes.
16 For all they which enfourme the people that they be in a D 17 right case, such be disceuers. Such as men thinke also to be perfecte among these, are but casteawayes.
18 Therefore shal the Lord haue no pleasure in their yonge men, neyther fauoure their fatherlesse and widowes. For they are all together ypocrites and wycked, and all theyr mouthes speake folye.
19 After all this, is not the Lordes wrath ceassed, but yet his hande is stretched out still. For vngodlynes burneth as a fyre in the bryers and thornes. And as it were out of a fyre in a wood, or a reede bushe, so ascendeth the smoke of 20 their pride. For because of the wrath of the Lorde of hostes is the lande full of darknes, and the people be consumed as it were with fyre, no man doth spare his brother, but he robbeth 21 on the right hand, and doth famishe: he eateth on the left hande, and he shal not haue ynouth. Euery man shall eate the flesshe of his owne arme. Manasses shall eate Ephraim, and Ephraim Manasses, and they both shal eate Iuda. After all this, is not the Lordes wrath ceassed, but yet is his hande stretched out still.

1 VAe be vnto them that make B vnrighteous lawes, and de-uise thinges, which be to hard-for

for to keepe: where thorowe the poore are oppressed on euery syde, and the innocentes of my people robbed of iudgemēt: that widowes may be their pray, and that they may robbe the fatherlesse. What will ye doe in time of the visitation, and when destruction shal come from farre? To whom will ye runne for helpe? and to whom will ye geue your honoure, that he maye keepe it? that when I withdraw my hand, ye come not among the prisoners, or lye among the dead? After all this dothe not the wrath of the Lorde ceasse, but yet is his hand stretched out still. Wo be also vnto Assur, whiche is a staffe of my wrathe, in whose hand is the rod of my punishement. I shall sende him among those hipocritishe people, among the people that haue deserued my displeasoures shall I send him, that he may vtterly robbe them, spoyle them, and treade them down like the mire in the strete. Howbeit, his meaning is not so, neyther thinketh his hert on this fashion. But he ymagineth only, how he may roote out and destroy muche people, for he sayth: are not my Princes all Kinges? Is not Calno as easye to winne, as Charcham is? Is it harder to conquere Hamah then Arphad? Or is it lighter to ouercome Damascus, then Samaria? As who saye, I were able to winne the kingdome of the Idolaters and their gods: but not Jerusalem and Samaria. Shall I not doo vnto Jerusalem and theyr images, as I did vnto Samaria, and theyr idols. Wherfore the Lord saith: As soone as I haue perfourmed my whole worke vpon the hill of Sion and Jerusalem, then will I visite the noble and stout heart of the kinge of Assyria with his proude lookes. For he standeth thus in his owne conceite. This dooe I thorowe the power of myne owne hande, and thorowe my wisedome: For I am wise, I am he that remoue the landes of the people: I robbe their treasures: and (like one of the worthies) I dryue them from their hye seates. My hand hath found out the strength of the people, as it were a nest. And like as egges y were layde here and there, are gathered together: So do I gather al countreis. And there is no man that dare bee so bolde, as to touche a feather, that dare open his mouthe, or once whisper. Shal the axe boast it selfe against him that heweth therewith? or dothe the sawe make any bragging agaynst him that ruleth it? That were euen lyke, as if the rodde did exalt it selfe agaynst him that beareth it: or as though the staffe should magnifie it selfe, as who say: it were no wood. Therfore shall the Lorde of hostes sende him among his fatlinges, leanneſſe, and burne vp his glory, as it were with a fyre. But the lyght of Israell shall be that fyre, and his Sanctuary shalbe the flame, and it shall kindle, and burne vp his thornes and briers in one day: yea all the glory of his woodes and fieldes shalbe consumed with body and soule. And they shalbe as an hoste of men, whose standerde bearer fayleth. The trees also of his field which remayne, shalbe of suche a number, that a chield may tell them: After that day, shal the remnaunt of Israell, and suche as are escaped out of the house of Jacob, seeke no more comforte at him that smote them: but with faythfulnes and truth shal they trust vnto the lord, the holy one of Israell. The remnant euē the posteritie of Jacob, shall conuert vnto GOD the mightie one. For though thy people (O Israell) be as the sande of the sea, yet shall the remnant of them conuert in him. Perfect is the iudgement of him y floweth in righteousnes, and therfore the Lord of hostes shall perfectly fulfill the thing that he hath determined in the middest of the whole worlde. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde God of hostes: Thou my people, that dwellest in Syon, be not afrayde for the kinge of the Assirians: He shall smyte thee with a rodde, and shall wagge his staffe at thee, as the Egiptians didde sometime: But soone after, shall my wrathe, and mine indignation, be fulfilled

G filled in the destruction of thē. Moreouer, the Lorde of hostes shall prepare a scourge for him, lyke as was the slaughter of Madian vppon the rocke of Oreb. And he shall lifte vp his rod ouer the sea, as he dyd sometyme ouer the Egiptians. Then shall his burthen be taken from thy shoulders, and his yoke from thy necke: yea, the same yoke shall be corrupt for very fatnesse. He shall come to Iiath, and thorowe towarde Migron: at Michmas shal he lay vp his harnesse, and go ouer the foord. Gibea shall be their resting place, Rhamah shal be afrayd, Gibea Saul shall flee away. The voyce of the noyse of thy horses (O daughter Gallim) shal be heard vnto Lays and to Anathoth, which also shall be in trouble. Madmena shall tremble for feare, but the citizens of Gabim are manly, yet shall he remayne at Nob that daye. After that shall he lyft vp his hande agaynst the mounte of the daughter Sion, the hil of Jerusalem. But se, the Lord God of hostes shal take away the proud from thence, with feare. He shall hewe downe the proude, and fell the hye minded. The bushes also of the wood shall he roote out with yron, and Libanus shal haue a mightie fall.

1 AND there shall come a rodde foorth of the kynred of Jsai, and a blossome shall florysshe out of his rote. The spyrete of the Lord shall lighte vpon him: the spyrete of wisedome, and vnderstanding: the spyrete of counsell, and strength, the spyrete of knowledge, and of the feare of the Lorde: and shall make him feruent in the feare of God. For he shall not geue sentence, after the thing that shall be brought before his eyes, neyther reprone a matter at the fyrst heatyng: but with righteousnes shall he iudge the poore, and with holynesse shall he reproue the symple of the world. He shall smite the world with a rod of his mouth, & with the breath of his mouth shall he slaye the vngodlye. Righteousnesse shal be the gyrdle of his loynes, truth and faythfulnesse, the girdinge vp of his reynes. The wolfe shall dwell with the lambe, and the Leopard shall lye downe by the goate. Bullockes, Lions, and cattell shall keepe company together, so that a lytle chyld shall rule them. The cowe and the beare shall feede together, & their yong ones shall lye together. The Lyon shall eate strawe like the oxe, or the cowe. The chylde while he sucketh, shall haue a desyre to the serpentes nest, and when he is weaned, he shall put his hande into the Cockatrice denne. No man shall do euill to another, no man shall destroy another, in all the hill of my holynes. For the earth shalbe full of the knowledge of the Lorde, euen as the sea floweth ouer with water. And in that daye shall the Gentils enquire after the roote of Jesse, which shalbe set vp for a token vnto the people, and his dwelling shalbe glorious. At the same time shall the Lorde take in hande agayne, to conquere the remnaunte of his people (which shalbe left alyue.) From the Assirians, Egiptians, Arabians, Morians, Elamites, Caldeys, Antiochians, and from the Flandes of the sea. And he shall set vp a token among the Gentiles, and gather together the dispersed of Jsraell, yea and the outcastes of Juda from the foure corners of the worlde. The hatred of Ephraim also and enemies of Juda shalbe cleane roted out. Ephraim shal beare no euill will to Juda, and Juda shall not hate Ephraim: but they both together shal flie vpon the shoulders of the Philistines towarde the weste, and spoyle them together that dwell towarde the Easte. The Idumites and the Moabites shal let their handes fall, and the Ammonites shall be obedient vnto them. The Lord also shall cleane the tonges of the Egiptians sea, and with a mightie winde shall he lift vp his hande ouer Nilus, and shall smyte his seuen streames, and make men go ouer drye shod. And thus shall there be a waye for his people, that remaynyth from the Assirians, like as it happened to the Israelites what time they departed out of the lande of Egipt.

A SO that then thou shalte say: O Lorde, I will thanke thee, for thou wast displeased at me, but refrayne thou from thy wrathe, and comfort me. Beholde, God is my saluation, in whom I will trust, and not be afrayde. For the Lorde God is my strength, and my songe, he also is become my saluation. Therefore with ioye shall ye drawe water out of the welles of the Sauiour, and then shal ye saye: geue thankes vnto the Lord, call vpon his name, declare his councels among the people, keepe them in remembraunce, for his name is excellent. O singe prayses vnto the Lorde, for he hath doone great thinges, as it is knowen in all the worlde. Cry out and singe thou that dwellest in Sion for great is the holy one of Israell in the middes of thee.

A THis is the heauye burthen of Babilon, whiche Esay the son of Amos dyd see. Lyft vp the banner vpon the hye hill, cal vnto thē, holde vp your hand, that the Princes maye goe in at the dooze. I haue sent for my debities and my giantes (sayth the Lorde) which shall execute wrath, I will call for suche, as triumphe in my glorye. There is a noyse of a multitude in the mountaynes, lyke as of a great people, a rushinge, as though the kingdomes of the nations came together. (And the Lorde of Hostes, mustreth his army to battell.) They B come out of a farre countrey, from the ende of heauen: Euen the Lorde him selfe with the ministers of his wrath, to destroye the whole lande. Mourne ye, for the day of the Lorde is at hand, and shall comme as a destroyer from the Almightie. Therefore shall all handes be letten downe, and all mens heartes shall melte awaye, they shall stande in feare, carefulnelle and sorow shall come vpon them, and they shall haue payne, as a woman that trauayleth with childe. One shalbe abashed of another, and theyr faces shall burne lyke the flame of fyre. Beholde, the B daye of the Lorde shall come, terrible, full of indignation, furour and wrath, to make the lande waste, and to roote out the sinners thereof. For the starres and planettes of heauen shall not geue their lyght, the sun shalbe darkened in the ryling, and the moone shal not shyne with his lyghte. And I will punishe the wickednelle of the worlde, and the synnes of the vngodlye, sayeth the Lorde. The hye stomackes of the proude will I take away, and will laye downe the boasting of tyrauntes. I will make a man dearer then fyne golde, and a man to bee C more worthy then a golden wedge of Ophir. Therefore, I will shake the heauen, and the earth shall remoue out of her place: in the wrath of the Lord of hostes, and in the daye of his fearefull indignation. And Babilon shalbe as an hunted or chased doe, and as a shepe that no man taketh vp. Euery man shall turne his owne people, and flye eche one into his owne land. Who so is founde alone shalbe shot through: And who so gather together, shall be destroyed with the swearde. • Their Psa.137 D childzen shalbe slaine before their eyes their houses spoyled, and their wiues rauished. For lo, I shall bring vp the Medes agaynst them, whiche shall not regarde siluer, nor be desyrous of golde. With bowes shall they destroy the yonge childzen, and haue no pitie vpon women with child, and their faces shall not spare the childzen. And Babilon (that glorye of Kingdomes and beautie of the Caldees honour) shall be destroyed, euen as GOD destroyed • Sodome and Gomorra. Gen.19
It shall not endure for euer, neyther shall there be anye moore dwellinge there, from generation to generation. The Arabians shall pytche no tentes

there,

there, nether shal the shepherds make their foldes there any more: but fearefull wilde beastes shall lye there, and the houses shalbe full of great Oules. Estriches shall dwell there, and Apes shall daunse there, wilde cattes shall crye in the palaces, and dragons shalbe in the pleasaunte houses. And as for Babilons time, it is at hande, and her dayes shall not be prolonged.

1 BUt the Lorde will be mercifull vnto Iacob, and will yet chose Israell agayne, and set theim in their owen land. Straungers shall cleaue vnto them, and get them to the house of Iacob. The people shal take them, and carye theim home to their owne lande. And make them to inherite the house of Israell in the lande of the Lord that they may be seruauntes and hande maydens of the Lorde.

2 Thei shal take those prisoners whose captines they hadde beene afore: and rule those that had oppressed theym.

3 when the Lord, nowe shal bring thee to rest, from the trauaile, feare, & harde bondage that thou was laden withall: then shalt thou vse this mockage vpon the king of Babilon, and saye: Howe happeneth it that the oppressoure leaueth off? Is the golden tribute come to an ende? The Lord hath broken the sceptre of the vngodly, and the rod of the Lordly. Whiche when he is wroth smiteth the people with continuall strokes, and tyrannously reigneth ouer the heathen, whom he persecuted without compassion. And

4 therfore the whole world is nowe at reste and quietnes, and men singe for ioy: Yea, euen the Fir trees, and Cedres of Libanus reioice at thy fal, saiinge: Now that thou art laid downe, there come vp no mo to hewe downe vs. Hel also beneath trēbleth to mete thee at thy comming, and for thy sake hath rayled his deade, and all mightye men, and princes of the earth. All kinges of the earth stande vp from their seates, that they may all answer and speake vnto thee. Arte thou become weake also as we? arte thou become like vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pryde is layde downe into the pitte, and so is the melodye of thy instrumentes. Wormes be layde vnder thee, and woormes be thy couering. Howe art thou fallen from heauens (O Lucifer) thou faire morning child? howe haste thou gotten a fall euen to the grounde, and art become weaker then the people? For thou saydest in thine

D heart: I will clime vp into heauen, and exalte my throne aboue beside the starres of God, I will sit also vppon the holye mount towarde the North, I will clime vp aboue the cloudes, and wilbe like the highest of all. Yet thou shalt be broughte downe to the depe of hell. They that see thee, shall narowly looke vpon thee, and thinke in theim selues, sayinge: Is this the man, that brought all landes in feare, and made the kingdomes afrayde? Is this he that made the world in a maner waste, and layde the Cities to the grounde, which let not his prisoners go out? The kings of the nations lye euerye one in his owne house with worshippe, and thou art cast oute of thy graue like a filthye abhominable braunch: like as dead mens rayments that are shot through with the sword and gone downe to the stoones of the deepe, as a dead coarse that is troden vnder feete, and art not buried with theim: Euen because that thou haste wasted thy lande, and destroyed thy people. The generation of the wicked shalbe without honour for euer.

E Let there a way be sought to destroy their children, that be in their fathers wickednes, that they come not vp agayne to possesse the lande and fill the worlde full of enemies. I will stande vp against them (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) and roote oute the name and remnant, sonne, and sonnes sonne of Babilon (sayeth the LORDE) and will geue it to the Otters, and will make water puddelles of it. And I will sweepe them oute with the beesoome of destruction, sayeth

F the Lorde of hostes. The Lorde of Hostes hath sworne an othe, sayinge: It shall come to passe as I haue determined, and shall be fulfilled as I haue deuysed. So that Assiria shall I destroye in my lande, and vppon my mountaynes will I treade him vnder foote. Wherethroughe his yoke shall come from theym, and his burthen shalbe taken from their shoulder. This deuise hath GOD taken throughe the whole worlde, and this is his hand stretched oute ouer all people. For yf the Lorde of hostes determine a thing, who is able to disanull it? And if he stretche foorth his hande, who maye holde it in agayne? The same yeare that king Ahaz dyed, God threatned on this maner: Reioyce not (thou whole Palestina) because the rod of him that beateth thee, is broken: for oute of the Serpentes roote, there shal come an adder, and the fruit shalbe a fiery flying worme. But the first borne of the poore shalbe fed, and the simple shall dwell in saferie. Thy roote also will I destroye with hunger, and it shall slaye thy remnaunt. Mourne thou porte, weepe thou citie, for (O whole lande of Palestina) thou art layde waste, for there shall come from the North, a smoke, that not one alone may abide in this place. Who shall then aunswere the messengers of the Gentiles? For the Lorde hath stablished Sion, and the poore of his people that be therein, do put their trust in him.

The.xv. Chapter.

A THis is the heauye burthen vpon Moab: Ar of Moab was destroyed and ouerthrowen in the nighte season: Kir also in Moab was destroyed, and perished in the night. They wente vp to the ydoles house, euen to Dibon to the hye places, to wepe for Nebo, and Moab did mourne for Medba. All their heades were bolde, and all their beardes shauen. B In their streates are they girded aboute with sackecloth. In all the toppes of their houses and streates shalbe nothinge but mourninge and weping. Hesbon and Eleale shall cry that their voyce shall be hearde vnto Jahaz. The woorthies also of Moab shall bleate out and crye for very sorowe of their mindes. Woe shall my heart be for Moabs sake. They shall C flee vnto the Citie of Zoar, whiche is like a fayre younge bullocke of three yeare olde, for they shall all go vp to Luith weping. Euen so by the waye towarde Horonaim they shall make lamentation for their bitter destruction. For the waters of Nimrim shalbe dryed vp, by reason wherof the grasse is withered, the herbes destroied, and the greene thinges gone. For the residue that he hath done, they are sorye. As for their substaunce, the enemies haue caryed them to the brooke of the willowes. For the crye wente ouer the whole lande of Moab: vnto Eglaim and vnto Beer Elim was there nothing but mourning, because the waters of Dimon were full of bloud: for I the Lorde shall send more bloud vpon Dimon, and lyons vppon the remnant of the land, and on them that are escaped from Moab.

SEnde the Lorde of the worlde a lambe: from the rocke that lyeth towarde the desert, vnto the hill of the daughter Sion. For as for the daughters of Moab, they shalbe as a tremblinge birde, that is put oute of harnest, for they shall carye them vnto Arnon: gather your counsell, come together in iudgement, couer vs with your shadowe in the mid daye, as the nighte doeth hide the chased, and bewraye not them that are fled, lette my persecuted people dwell amonge you. Moab, be thou their refuge agaynste the destroyer: for the aduersarye is brought to naught, the robber is vndoone, the tyraunt is wasted oute of the land. And in mercye shall the seate B be prepared, and he shall sit vpon it in the truth, in the Tabernacle of Dauid iudging and seekinge iudgement, and makinge hast vnto righteousnesse.

we haue heard of the pryde of Moab, he is very proude, presumptuous, arrogante, and full of indignation, and vayne are his lyes. Therefore shall Moab make lamentation because of the Moabites (that shalbe slayne) yea they shall wayle al together. Because of the foundations of the Citie that is made of bricke, shall ye complayne: euen the lame people that are left onelye behynd. For the vynes of Hesebon are cut downe: As for the vine of Sibna, the lordes of the Heathen haue broke downe her principal braunches: they are come euen vnto Jazer, they went on wandring vnto the wildernesse. Her goodly braunches were throwen downe, as they wente ouer the Sea. Therefore will I mourne for Jazer, and for the vine of Sibna. I will poure my teares vppon thee, O Hesbon and Eleal, for the crye of thine enemies is fallen vpon thy sommer fruites, and vpon thyne harueste. The Myrth and chere is taken away out of the plentifull fyelde, and in the vineyardes there shal be no ioye nor gladnes. The treader shall treade out no wine in the presses, the songe of their mery chere haue I layde downe. Wherefore, my bowels shall romble like an harpe for Moabs sake, & myne inward partes for the cities sake that is made of bricke. And it shall come to passe, that when it is sene that Moab shalbe made wery of his hil chappels, he shall come to his temple to pray, but he shall not be able. So then this is the saying that the Lord hath spoken concerning Moab, sence that time. But nowe the Lorde hath spoken, saying: In three yeares which shalbe as the yeares of an hyred seruaunt, shall the glorie of Moab be turned into confusion, throughout all his multitude, whiche is verye great. And that whiche remayneth shall be very small and feble.

THis is the heauye burthen vppon Damascus. Beholde, Damascus is taken away, to be no more a Citie, but shall be an heape of broken stones. The walled citie of Aroer shalbe foldes for cattell, whiche shall lye there, and there shalbe none to fraye theim awaye. Ephraim also shall no more be strong: and Damascus shall no more be a kingdome, and the remnaunt of Syria shalbe as the glorye of the children of Israell, saith the Lorde of hostes. And in that day it shall come to passe that Jacob shall be made very poore, and the fatnes of his flesshe shall waxe leane. And he shalbe as one that gathereth vp corne in harueste, euen like him whose arme reapeth the eares of corne. He shalbe also lyke him that gathereth eares of corne in the valey of Rephaim. Som gathering in dede shall there be left in it, euen as in the shaking of an Olyue tree, there remayne two or three bearies in the toppe of the vttermooste bowe, and foure or fyue in the brode fruitefull braunches thereof, saieth the Lord God of Israell. Then shall man B tourne agayne to his maker, and his eyes shall haue respect to the holy one of Israell. As for the aulters whiche are his owne handie worke, he shall not regarde them: and the things that his fyngers haue made (as groues and ymages) those shall hee not caste his eye vnto. In that day shall their strong cities be as the forsaken shrubbes and braunches, which they left because of the children of Israel, and the lande shalbe desolate. Because thou hast forgotten God thy saluation, and hast not bene mindfull of thy stronge rocke, therefore shalt thou set pleasant plantes, and shalt graffe the braunche of another mannes vyne. In that day shalt thou make thy plante to growe: and earely in the morning shalt thou make thy seede to florish. The harueste shalbe gone in the day of inheritaunce, and ther shalbe sorowe without hope of comfort. Woo shalbe to the multitude of muche people, whiche shall make a sound like the noyse of the Sea. And C the violence of the nations, whiche shall rage like the rushinge in of many waters: Euen like many waters shall the people rage. God shal rebuke him, and he shall flye farre of. He shall be chased away lyke as a drye strawe vpon the mountaines before the wind and lyke a thing that tourneth before the storme. At euen beholde, there is trouble: and or euer it be morning, lo, he is gone. This is the portion of them that oppresse vs, and the lotte of them that robbe vs.

A O That lande that trusteth vnto the shadowe of winges, that lande whiche is beyonde the waters of Ethiopia: Sendinge messangers by the sea, euen in vessels of reedes ouer the water. Go you hence (ye spedie messangers) to a nation that is scattered abroade and robbed of that they had: a fearfull people from their beginning hitherto, a nation troden downe by little and little, whose lande the floudes haue spoyled. And al ye inhabiters of the world, and indwellers of the earth, loke vp when he setteth a token in the mountaynes, and hearken when he bloweth with the trompe. For so the Lord saide vnto me: as for me, I will take my rest and looke vpon the matter in mine habitation, lyke a fayre heate after the rayne, and like a clonde of Dewe in B the heate of harueste. For afore the harueste, when the braunche is growen there shall come ripe fruite out of the floure, and he shall cut downe the increase with sythes, and the braunches shall he take awaye with hookes.
Thus shall they be lefte together vnto the foules of the mountaynes, and to the beastes of the earth: for in sommer the birdes shall remayne vpon it, and euery beast of the land shalbe vpon it in the winter. In ỳ time shall there a present be brought vnto the Lord of hoostes: euen a people that is scattred abroade, and robbed of that they had, that same people which hath ben fearfull from their beginning, hitherto, a nation troden downe by litle and lytle, whose land the floudes haue spoyled: To the place of the name of the Lorde of hoostes, euen to the mounte Sion.

Behold, the Lorde rideth vpon a swifte cloude, and shall come into Egipte, and the ydols of Egipte shall tremble at the presence of him, and the heart of Egipte shall quake in the mids of her. And I wil set the Egiptians one agaynst another, so that one brother shal fight against another, and one neyghboure agaynst another, citie against citie, and realme agaynst Realme. The minde also of Egipte shalbe cleane without counsell within it selfe, and the deuise that they take will I destroye, so that they shall seke counsell at ydoles, and at sorcerers, at workers with spirites, and at soothsayers. And the Egiptians will I geue ouer into the hande of a maruelous cruell Lorde, and a mightie kinge shall haue dominion ouer them, saieth the Lord God of Hoostes. The waters of the sea, shal fayle, and the riuer shal decrease and be dried vppe. The waters shalbe drawen out: the ryuer of Egipte shalbe emptied and dried vp, the reedes and flagges shall be cutte downe. The grasse in the riuer and by B the riuers banke, and all that groweth by the riuer, shall wyther awaye, and be brought all to naught. The fishers also shall mourne, and all they that cast an angle into the water, shall make lamentation, and they that laye forth their net beside the waters, shall bee rooted out. Moreouer, they that worke in flare and make fyne workes shall be confounded, and so shall they that weaue open workes. For their open woorkes shalbe euen destroyed. and all they that make pondes and stewes for fyshe, shall come to naught. But ye foolishe princes of Zoan, ye wyse counceliers of Pharao, whose witte is tourned to foolishenes, howe saye ye vnto Pharao: I am comme of wise men, and of auncient kinges.

Pha-

where are they? Where are (I saye) thy wise men? Let them tell thee (yf they can) what the Lord of hosts hath deuised vpon Egipt. The princes of Zoan are become fooles, the princes of Noph are disceaued, they haue deceaued Egipte, euen they that were taken for the chiefe kinrede thereof. In the middes of it, hath the Lorde powred the spirite of wickednesse, and they haue deceyued Egipte, in euery worke thereof, euen as a dronken man staggereth in his vomite. Neyther shall the head or tayle, the branch or rede be able to doe anye worke in Egipt. In that daye shall Egipte be lyke vnto women: It shalbe afrayde, and stand in feare at the motion of the hande of the Lorde of Hostes, whiche he shaketh ouer it. And Egipt shalbe afrayde of the lande of Juda: so that euery one which maketh mention of it, shall be afrayde thereat, because of the counsell of the Lorde of Hostes, whiche he deuiseth for it. In that daye shall fiue Cities in the lande of Egipte speake the language of Canaan, and sweare by the Lorde of Hostes, the Citie of desolation shalbe called one of them. In that day shall the altare of the Lorde be in the mids of the lande of Egipt, and this title beside it: Vnto the Lorde. And it shall be a token & a witnesse vnto the Lord of hostes in the lande of Egipte. For they shall crye vnto the Lorde because of suche as trouble them, and he shall sende them a Sauior and a great man to deliuer them. And the Lorde shall be knowen in Egipt, and the Egiptians shal know the Lord in that day, and do sacrifice and oblation: yea they shal vowe a vowe vnto the Lord, and performe it. The Lord also shal smite Egipte sore, and heale them agayne, and they shall be conuerted vnto the Lord, and he shalbe entreated of them and shall heale them. In that daye shall there be a common waye oute of Egipte into Assiria, and Assiria shall come into Egipt, and Egipt into Assiria, so ỳ the Egiptians and the Assirians shall serue the Lorde together, In that day shal the nation of Israel be the third with Egipt and Assiria, and they shalbe blessed in the middes of the lande, which lande the Lorde of hostes hath blessed, saying: Blessed is my people of Egipte: Assur also is the worke of mine handes, and Israel is mine inheritaunce.

The.xx. Chapter.

In the yere that Thartan cam vnto Asdod (when Sargon the kinge of Assiria had sente him (and had fought agaynste Asdod, and taken it. At the same time spake the Lorde by the hande of Esay the sonne of Amos, sayinge: Go, and take of the sackecloth from thy loyns, and put off thy shoe from thy foote, And he did so, walkinge naked, and bare foote. And the Lorde sayde: Lyke as my seruant Esay hath walked naked, and barefoot for a signe and wonder three yeares vppon Egipte, and Ethiopia: Euen so shall the kinge of Assiria take awaye out of Egipt and out of Ethiopia, children and olde men, naked and barefoote, with their loynes vncouered, to the great shame of Egipte. They shalbe brought in feare also, & ashamed one of an other: Ethiopia of Egipte, and Egipte of Ethiopia, considering what glorye they were in afore. And they that dwelle in the same Ile, shall saye in that daye: Beholde, thus are we regarded. Whither shall we flee for helpe, that we maye be deliuered from the king of Assiria? And howe shall we escape?

The burthen of the waste Sea: Euen as the stormie weather that passeth throughe at the noone day to com from the wildernes from that horrible lande. A greeuous vision was shewed vnto me: Let one disceitfull offender comme agaynste an other, and one destroyer agaynste an other. Vp Elam, laye syege thou of Media, all their groning haue I layde downe. Therefore are my loynes filled with sorowe, heauynesse hath taken hold vpon me, as the pangs of a woman, that is trauailing. It made me stoupe when I heard it, and it vexed me when I sawe it. My heart panted, fearefulnes came vpon me. The night of my voluptuousnes hath he turned against me into feare. Whyle they garnished the table, the watchman looked: And while I was B eating and drinking (it was sayde:) Vp ye Captaynes, take you to youre shield. For thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me: Go and set a watcheman, to tell what he seeth. And he sawe a charet, whiche two horsemen sat vpon, with the cariage of an Asse, and the cariage of a Camell. So he loked and tooke very diligent hede. And the Lion cryed, Lorde, I stande waiting all the whole daye, and am appointed to kepe my watche euery night. And behold, here commeth a charet of men with two horsemen. And he aunswered and saide: Babilon is fallen, it is fallen, and all the images of her Gods hath he smitte downe vnto the grounde Thou art he, whom I must thresshe, & thou belongest to my corn flour. This that I hearde of the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell, haue I shewed vnto you. The burthen of Duma, he C calleth vnto me out of Seir: Watchman, what hast thou espied by night? watcheman, what hast thou espied by night? The watcheman saide: The morning commeth, and so doeth the night. If ye will aske any question, then aske it, returne and come agayne. The burthen concerning Arabia: In the pleasant grounde of Arabia shall ye tarye all night, euen in the streetes of Dedanin. The inhabiters of the lande of Thema brought foorth water to him that was thirstie, they preuented him with their bread that was fled away. For becausc of the swerds are they become fugitiue, euen for the drawen swearde, and for the bente bowe, and because of the greeuousnes of warre. For this hath the Lorde sayd vnto me: There is yet a yere according to the yeares of an hyred seruaunt, and al the glory of Cedar shall faile. And the number of theym that shall escape from the bowes, shall be minished by the mightye children of Cedar, for so the Lord God of Israell hath spoken.

THe burthen of the valley of vi- A sion: what haste thou to doo here, that thou climest vnto the house tops? Thou that arte full of occupying, thou seditious & proude citie, thy slayne men are neyther put to death with sweard, nor dead in battayle. All thy captaynes are fugitiue together, the archers haue taken them prisoners: All they that are founde in thee, are in captiuitie together, because they fled farre of. Therfore said I: let Luke.19 me alone, and I will make lamenta- Jere.9 tion. Ye shall not be able to comforte me, because of the destruction of the daughter of my people, for this is a day of trouble, of ruine, and of destruction that the Lord will bring to passe in the valley of vision, breking downe the Citie, and crying vnto mountaynes. Elam bare the quiuer with B a charet of foote men and of horsmen, and the Citie of Kir shewed the shield open. Thy chiefe valey also was full of charets, and the horsemen set their faces directly towarde the gate. And in that daye did the ennemye take awaye the beautye of Juda, and then diddest thou loke towarde the armour of the house of the foreste. Ye haue seene also the broken places of the citie of Dauid, howe that they are manye, and ye gathered together the waters of the lower poole. As for the houses of Jerusalem ye haue nũbred theim, and the houses haue ye broken downe to make the walle stronge. A pitte also haue ye made betwene the two walles, for the waters of the olde poole, and haue not regarded the maker thereof, neyther hadde respecte vnto him that tooke it in hande. And in that daye didde the C Lorde GOD of hostes call menne vnto weepinge and mourninge, to baldnesse and gyrdinge about with sacke-

What haste thou to do here? and whom haste thou here, that thou shouldest here hewe thee out a sepulchre, as it were one that heweth him out a sepulchre on hie, or that graueth an habitation for him selfe in a harde rocke? Beholde, O thou manne, the Lord shall cary thee away into captiuitie, and shall surely couer thee with confusion. The Lord shall turne thee ouer like a ball with his handes (and shall sende thee) into a farre countrey: There shalte thou dye, and there (in steede of the charettes of thy pompe) shall the house of the Lorde haue confusion. I will drine thee frome thy place, and out of thy dwelling shall he ouerthrowe thee. And in that day shall I call my seruant Eliakim, the sonne of Helkia. And with thy garmentes will I clothe him, and with thy girdle will I strength him: thy power also will I committe into his hande, and he shall be a father of suche as dwelle in Ierusalem, and in the

In that daye (sayth the Lorde of Hostes) shall the nayle that is fastned in the sure place departe, be broken and fall, and the burthen that was vppon it, shalbe pluckt awaye, for so the lord hath spoken.

THe burthen of * Tire: Mourne A yee shippes of Tharsis, for Eze.26. there commeth suche destruction that ye shall not haue an house to enter into: Oute of the lande of Cittim haue they knowledge of this plage. Be still, ye ỹ dwell in the Ile, the marchants of Zidon, and suche as passe ouer the sea, haue made the plenteous. The corn that groweth by the great waters of Nilus, and the frutes of the riuer were her vitailes, so that it became a common marte of the nations. Be ashamed thou Zidon, for the see (euẽ the strength of ỹ sea) hath spoken, saying: I haue not trauailed nor brought forth children, nor nou- B rished vp yong menne, or brought vp virgins. When tidynges commeth to the Egiptians, they shall be sorye for the rumor that goeth of Tire. Gette you to Tharsis, mourne ye that dwel in the Ile, Is not this that glorious Citie of yours, which hath bene of olde antiquitie? Her owne feete shall carye her forth to bee a soiourner into a farre countrey. Who hathe deuised this against Tyre (that geueth garlandes vnto other Cities) whose marchauntes are princes, and whose captaynes are honorable in the world: Euen the Lorde of hostes hath deuysed this to put downe the pryde of all such as be glorious, and to minishe all theim that bee proude vppon earth. Get thee out of thy land vnto the daughter of Tharsis, seeing thou haste no more strength. Ye that C smote the kingdomes together, holdeth oute his hande ouer the sea, euen the Lord himselfe hath geuen a commaundement against the same common place of marchaundise, that they shall vtterlye destroy the might therof. And he saide: Make no more thy boast, O virgin, thou daughter Zidon) thou shalt be brought downe: Vppe, gette thee ouer vnto Cittim, where neuertheless thou shalte haue no reste. Beholde, this people come not of the Caldees, but Assur made them stronge with greate shippes. They set vp the stronge holdes therof, and destroyed his palaces, and he broughte it in decaye. Mourue ye D shippes of Tharsis, for your strength is brought downe. And in that daye shall Tire be forgotten seuentye yeares (accordinge to the yeares of one king) and after the ende of the seuentye yeare, shall Tyre sing as doeth an harlot. Take an harpe, and go about the Citie (thou harlot thou haste bene forgotten) make sweete melodye, sing mo songes, that thou mayest be had in remembraunce. And after the ende of the seuentye yeares, shall the Lorde visite Tyre, and shee shall conuerte vnto her rewarde, and shall commit fornication with all the kingdomes of the earthe, that are in the worlde. Theyr occupyinge also and theyr rewarde shalbe holye vnto the Lorde. Theyr gaynes shall not be layde vp nor kepte in store, but it shal be theirs that dwell before the Lorde, that they maye eate ynough, and haue clothing sufficient.

A BEholde the Lorde maketh the earth wast and emptye: he turned it vpside downe, and scattereth abrode the inhabitours thereof And the Priest shalbe as the people, and the master as the seruaunt, the maystresse lyke the mayde, the seller lyke the byer: he that lendeth vppon vsury, lyke him that borroweth vpon vsurye: the creditoure as the detter. The worlde shalbe cleane wasted, and vtterly spoyled, for so the Lorde hath spoken. The earth is sorye and consumeth away, the worlde is feble and perisheth, the proud people of the erth are come to naught. The earth also is become vnprofitable vnder the inhabiters therof, which haue transgressed the lawes, chaūged the ordinance. broken the euerlastinge couenaunte.
B Therefore hath the curse consumed the earth, and they that dwell therin, are fallen into trespace. Wherefore, the inhabitours of the earth are perished with drouth, and fewe men are lefte behinde: The wine fayleth: the vyne hath no might, all they that haue bene merye of heart, are come to mourning. The mirthe of tabrettes is layde down, the noyse of such as haue made merye, is ceased, the ioye at the harpe is at an ende. They shall drinke no more wine with mirth, strong drinke shall be bitter to theym that drinke it. The citie of vanitie is broken down, euery house is shut vp, that no man maye come in. In the streetes is there a crying because of wine, all cheere is vanished awaye, the mirthe of the worlde is gone, in the Citie is lefte desolation: and the gate is smitten with C destruction. For in the middes of the worlde, euen amonge the people, it shall come to passe, as at the shakinge of Oliues, and as the grapes are whē the wyne haruest is done. They shall lifte vp their voyce: and make a merye noyse, and in magnifyinge of the Lorde, shall they crye oute of the weste. Wherefore, prayse ye the Lorde in the valleys, euen the name of the Lorde God of Israell in the yles of ỹ sea. From the vttermost parte of the earth haue we heard prayses & mirth because of the righteous. And I said: I know a thing in secret, woo is me, the transgressours haue offended, the transgressours haue greeuously offended. Fearefulnesse, the pitte, and the snare are vppon thee, O thou that dwellest on the earth. It will come to passe, that whoso escapeth that fearfull noyse, shall fall into the pit. And he that commeth vp out of the pitte, D shalbe taken with the snare. For the windowes from an hye are open, and the foundations of the earth are moued. The earthe is vtterlye broken downe, the earth hath a sore ruine, the earth quaketh exceedinglye. The earth shall reele to and fro like a dronkerd, and shalbe remoued like a tente (of one night) and the iniquitie therof shalbe heauy vpon it. It shall fall, and not ryse vp agayne. And in that daye shall the Lorde visite the hoost abone that is on hye: and the kinges of the worlde that are vpon the earth. And they shall be gathered together, as they that be in prison: and they shalbe shut vp in warde, and after many dayes shall they be visited. The moone shall be abashed, and the sunne ashamed, when the Lord of hostes shal reygne in mounte Sion and in Ierusalem with worship, and in the sight of such as shalbe of his counsell. Isa.24c

O Thou art the Lorde my God, I will magnify thee, I will geue thankes vnto thy name. For thou hast brought wonderfull things to passe, according to thine olde counsels truly and faythfully. Thou hast made of a citie an heape of stones, and broughte a strong towne into decaye. The habitation of straungers haste thou made to be no citie, neyther shall it be builded any more. Therfore shall the mightie people geue glorye vnto thee, the citie of the baleaunt Heathen shall feare thee. For thou hast bene a strength vnto the poore, and a succour for the needie in his trouble. A refuge agaynst euill weather, a shadowe agaynst the heate. For the blast of raging men is like a storme that casteth downe a wall. Lyke as thou bryngest heate downe out of a dry place, so shalt thou oppresse the noyse of alaunties. The heate is in the shadowe of the cloude, the braunch of the mightie shal be brought lowe. And in this mountayne shall the Lorde of hostes make vnto all people a feaste of plenteous and delicate thinges, euen of most pleasaunt and dayntie dishes. And in this mountayne shall the Lorde destroye the couerynge, that all people are wrapped in, and the hanging that is spred vpon all nations. As for death, he hath destroyed it for euer. And the Lorde God shal wipe away teares from all faces, and the rebuke of his people shall he take awaye out of all the earth. For so the Lorde hath saide, Esa.14d Esa.13c Apoc.7c

And in that daye it shall be sayde. Lo, this is our God, we haue wayted for him, and he shall saue vs. This is the Lorde, in whom we haue hoped, we will be merye, and reioyce in the saluation that commeth of him. For in this mountayne shall the hande of the Lorde ceasse, and Moab shall be threshed vnder him, euen as strawe is threshed vpon the ground. And he shal stretch out his hande in the middes of them (as he that swymmeth, casteth out his hands to swimme: and with the strength of his handes shall he bringe downe their pryde. The stronge holde also and defence of the walles hath he ouerthrowen, and cast downe & brought them to the ground, euen vnto dust. C Ephe.2a

IN that daye shall this song be songe in the lande of Juda: We haue a strong citie. Saluation shall God appoynt in stede of walles, and bulwarkes. Open ye the gates that the righteous people whiche kepeth the trueth may enter in. Their mind is set vpon thee because thou preseruest theym in peace, yea in peace: because they putte their trust in thee. Put ye your trust alway in the Lorde: for in the Lorde God there is strength for euermore. For he hath brought downe the hye minded citizens. As for the proude citye, he hath brought it lowe: euen vnto the ground shal he cast it downe, and bring it vnto dust. The fote euen the foote of the poore, and the steppes of suche as be in necessitie shall treade it downe: The path of equitie wilte thou graunte vnto the iuste, O thou moste righteous, thou shalte order the pathe of him that is righteous. Yea, in the waye of thy iudgementes, O LORDE, haue we put our truste in thee. Thy name also, and the remembraunce of thee, is the thinge that our soule longeth for. He will be also a spirite of perfecte knowledge to him that sitteth in iudgement, and strength vnto thē that tourne awaye the battayle to the gate of the enemyes. But they are out of the way by reason of wine: yea, far out of the way are they through strōg dzinke. The Priests also and the prophete are gone astraye by the meanes of stronge dzinke, they are dzonken with wine, they go amisse through stronge dzinke, they fayle in prophecyng, and stumble in iudgement. For the tables are so ful of vomit & filthines, that no place is clean. Whom then shall suche one teache knowledge? And whome shall he make to vnderstand the thing that he heareth? For they are as ignozant as yong childzen that are taken from the milke, and are weined. For they that be suche, muste haue after one Lesson, another Lesson: * after one commaundement, another commaundement, after one rule another rule, after one instruction, an other instruction, there a little, and there a little. For he that speaketh vnto this people, is euen as one that vseth rudenesse of speech, and a strange language. If any man say vnto them: Lo, this is the rest, wherwith ye may ease him that is werye, this is the refreshing, they wil not herken. * Therfore the woord of the Lord (lesson vpon lesson, commaundement vpon commaundement, rule vpon rule, instruction vpon instruction, there a litteil, and there a little) shalbe vnto them an occasion of stumblinge, that they may go on, and fall backwarde, be bruised, tangled, and snared. Wherefore, heare the woorde of the Lord, ye mockers ye that haue rule of this people, whiche is at Jerusalem. Because ye haue said: We haue made a couenaunt with deathe, and with hell are we at agreement. And though there go forth a sore plague, it shal not come vnto vs. For we haue made falshoode our refuge, and vnder vanitie are we hid. Therfore thus sayeth the Lord God: Behold, I lay in Sion for a foundation a stone, euen a tryed stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation. Who so believeth, let him not be to hastie. Judgement also will I laye to the rule, and righteousnesse to the balance, so that the haile shall take away your vayne confidence as a broome, and the priuy place of your refuge shal the waters renne ouer. And thus the couenant that ye made with deathe, shalbe disanulled: and your agrement that ye made with hel, shall not stand.

yea, when the lorde plague goeth forth ye shall be troden downe vnder it. Frō the time that it goeth forth, it shall take you away. For early in the morning, euery daye, yea, both daye and night shall it go throughe: and when the noyse thereof is perceaued, it shall gender vexation. For the bed is narrowe, and not large: and the couering so small that a man can not wind him selfe vnder it. • For the Lorde shall Esa.36.f

Nowe F therefore see that ye be no mockers, least your punishment increase: for I haue heard of the Lorde of hostes, that there shall come a shorte ende vpon the whole earth. Heare ye then, and hearken vnto my voyce, consider and ponder my speech. Doeth not the husbandman plowe all the daye, and openeth and breaketh the clottes of his ground, that he may sowe? when he hath made it playne, wil he not spread abrode the fitches, and sow comin, and cast in wheate by measure, and the appointed barley and rye in their place? GOD will instruct him to haue discretion, euen his God will teache him. For fitches shall not be threshed with an harowe: neither shall a carte wheele be brought through the cummin: but that fitches are beaten oute with a staffe, and comin with a rodde. But the sede that bread is made of, is threshed, though it be not alwaye a threshing. And the carte wheele must be brought ouer it, least he grinde it with his teeth. This also commeth of the Lorde of hostes, which worketh with wonderfull wisedome, and bringeth excellent woorkes to passe.

¶ The. xxix. Chapter.

A 2Re.5.b VAo vnto thee, O Ariel, Ariel, thou Citie that • Dauid dwelt in. Go on from yeare to yeare, and let the lambes be slayne. I will lay a siege vnto Ariel, so that ther shal be heauynesse and sorowe in it: and it shall be vnto me, euen as an aultar of slaughter. I will beseige thee rounde about, and fight against thee through a bulwarke, and will reare vp diches against thee. Thou shalt be brought downe, and shalte speake oute of the grounde, and thy speeche shall go low out of the dust. Thy voyce also shall come out of the ground like ♆ voice of a witche: and thy talking shall whisper out of the duste. Moreouer, the noyse of thy straunge enemyes shalbe lyke thinne dust, and the multitude of tyrauntes shalbe as • drye strawe that Psal.11 can not carye: euen sodainelye and in haste shall their blast go. Thou shalte B be visited of the Lorde of hostes with thonder, earthquake, and with a great noyse: with storme, and tempest and with the flame of a consuming fyre. And the multitude of all nations that fighte againste Ariell, shall be as a dreame seene by night: • euen so shall Psa.73 all they be, that make warre againste it, and stronge holdes to ouercome it, and that lay any siege into it. In conclusion, it shalbe euen as whē an hongrye man dreameth that he is eating, and when he awaketh, his soule is emptye. Or as when a thirstye man dreameth that he is drinking, and whē he awaketh, he is yet faint, and his soule hath appetite. Euen so shall the multitude of all nations that fighte against Sion. Ponder these thinges C once in youre mindes, and wonder. • Blinded are they them selues, and mat.15 the blinde guides of other. They are dronken, but not with wine: they are vnstable, but not through stronge drinke. For the Lorde hath couered you with a slomberinge spirite, and hath closed your eyes. And doth the worke saye of him that made it, he made not me? And doeth an earthen vessell saye of him that fashioned it, he had no vnderstanding? Is it not harde at hande, that Libanus shalbe turned into a lowe fielde, and that the lowe fielde shall be taken as the woode? And in that daye shall deafe men heare the wordes of the booke, and the eyes of the blinde shall see, euen out of the cloude, and out of darkenes. The meke spreted also shall be merye in the Lorde, and the poore among them that be lowely, shall reioyce in the holye one of Israell. For he that did violence, is brought to naught, and the scornefull man is consumed: and they rooted out that were hastye so soone to vnrighteousnesse, making a man to sinne in the worde, and that take him in a snare, whiche reproued them in the open place: and they that haue turned the cause of the righteous to naught. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde vnto the house of Jacob, euen thus sayth he that redeemed

But when he seeth his childzen, the worke of my handes in the middes of him, they shall sanctifye my name, and prayse the holye Lorde of Jacob, and feare the God of Israell. They also that haue bene of an erroniouse spzete shall come to vnderstanding, and they that haue bene scornefull, shall learne doctrine.

ALas, for those disobedient childzen (sayeth the Lorde) • that they will take counsell without me. Alas, that they will take a secrete aduise, and not out of my spzete, and therfore adde they sinne vnto sin. Euen they that walke to go downe into Egipte, and haue asked no question at my mouth: but seeke strength in the might of Pharao, and truste in the shadowe of Egipt. Therfore shal the strength of Pharao be your confusion, and the truste in the shadowe of Egipte your shame. For his captaynes were at Zoan: and his ambassadoures came vnto Hanes. • They

For vayne and nothinge worth shall the helpe of the Egiptians be. Therefore haue I cryed vnto Jerusalem. They shall haue strength ynough, yf they will settle their mindes in quietnes. • Nowe therefore, go Esay.1.a thy way and wzite this before them in a table, and note it in a booke, that it maye finallye remayne and be kept still for euer. For this is an obstinate people, and dissemblynge chyl-

Then shall God geue rayne vnto thy seede, that thou shalt sowe the ground with all, and breade of the increase of the earth, which shalbe fat and very plenteous. In that daye also, shall thy catteil be fed in large pastures. The oxe like wise, and the yonge asses, that eate the grounde, shall eate cleane prouender, which is purged with the wind and the fanne. Beholde, the fame of the Lord commeth from farre, and his presence is so hote, that no man is able to abyde. His lippes are full of indignation, and his tongue is a consuminge fyre. His breathe is as a behemente floud of water that reacheth vp to the necke. That he may sift away the heathen in the synne of vanitie. And his

And ye shall haue gladnesse of heart, like as when one commeth with a pype vnto the hill of the Lord, and to the most mightie one of Israell. And the Lord shall cause his glorious voyce to be heard, & shall declare his stretched out arme with a terrible countenance, and with the flame of a consuminge fyre, with noysome lyghtning, with a showre, and with hayle stones. For thorowe the voyce of the Lorde shall * Assur be Esa.10 destroyed, whiche smote other menne with the rodde. And it shall come to passe, that whither so euer he goeth, the rodd shall cleaue vnto him, which the Lorde shall laye vpon him, with tabrets and harpes, and with greate warre swerde shall he fyghte against his hoaste. *For the fire of paine is ordeyned from the beginning: yea, euen for kinges is it prepared. This hath the Lord set in the deepe, and made it wide: the burning whereof is fire and muche wood. The breath of the Lord, which is a riuer of brimstone, doeth kindle it.

WO be vnto them that go down into Egipt for help, and trust in horses, and put their confidence in charets, because they be many, and in horsemen, because they bee iuste and stronge. But they regarde not the holy one of Israell, and they aske no question at the Lord. Whereas he neuertheless (being wisest of all) plageth the wicked, and yet goth not from his worde, when he steppeth forth, and taketh the victorie against the housholde of the frowarde, and against the helpe of euill doers. Nowe the Egiptians are men and not God, and their horses flesche and not spyrete. And assoone as the Lorde stretcheth out his hand, then shall the helper fall, and he that should haue bene helped, and they shall all together be destroied. For thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me: Like as the * lion * or lions whelpe roareth vpon the praye that he hath gotten, and is not afraide, thoughe the multitude of shepherdes crye out vpon him, neyther abashed for al the heape of them. So shall the Lorde of hoostes come downe to fight for mount Sion, and defend his hill. Like as birds flutter about their nestes, * so shall the Lord of hoostes keepe, saue, defend, and deliuer Ieruſalem. Therefore, O ye children of Israell, turne again from that infidelitie, wherin you drowned your selues. * For in that day euery man shall cast out his idoles of syluer, and his idoles of golde, which ye haue made with your owne handes vnto your sinne. Assur also shall be slaine with the swearde, not with a mannes swearde, neither shall the swearde of any man deuoure him. And he shall flee from the slaughter, and his seruauntes shalbe discomfited in their hertes. He shall goo for feare to his strong holdes, and his princes shall flee from his badge. This hath the Lorde spoken, whose light burneth in Sion, and his fyre in Ieruſalem.

BEholde, a kinge shall gouerne after the rule of righteousnes, and the princes shal rule accordyng to the balaunce of equitie. And that man shalbe vnto men as a defence for the wind, and as a refuge for tempeste: lyke as a riuer of water in a thirstye place, and the shadowe of a great rocke in a drye lande. The eyes of the seyng shall not be dimme, and the eares of them that heare, shal take diligente heede. The herte of the vnwise shall attaine to knowledge, and the vnperfite tongue shall speake playnely and distinctlye. Then shall the foolishe nigarde be nomore called gentle, nor the churle liberall. But the nigarde will be nigardly minded, and his herte will worke euill, and playe the ipocryte, and imagine abhominations against God, to make the hungrie leane, and to withholde drinke from the thirstie. These are the perilous weapons of the churlishe, these be his shamefull councels: that he may begile the poore with disceiptfull wordes: yea, euen there as hee shoulde geue sentence with the poore. * But the liberall person imagineth honest thinges, and commeth vp for liberalitie vnto promotion. Vp (ye riche & idle women) harken vnto my voice. Ye careles cities, marke my wordes. After yeres and daies shall ye be brought in feare, O ye careles cities. For harueſt shall be out, and the grape gathering shall not come. O ye riche idle cities, ye that feare no perill. My peoples field shal bring thornes and thistles: and so shall it be euen in euery house of voluptuousnes, and in euery citie that reioyseth. The palaces also shalbe broken downe, and the greatly occupied cities desolate. The toures & bulwarks shal become dennes for euermore, the pleasure of mules shalbe turned to pasture for sheepe:
o vnto the time that the spirite be powred vpon vs from aboue. Then shall the wildernesse be a fruitfull fielde, and the plenteous fielde shalbe reckened for a woode. Then shall equitie dwell in the desert, and righteousnes in a fruitefull land. And the reward of righteousnesse shalbe peace, and her fruite rest and quietnes for euer. And my people shall dwell in the Innes of Peace, and in sure dwellinges, in safe places of comfort. And when the hayle falleth, it shall fall in the wood, and the Citie shalbe set lowe in the valley. O how happy shall ye be, when ye shall safely sowe your sede beside all waters, and driue thither the feete of your oxen & asses.

COme ye Heathen and heare, take hede ye people. Hearken thou earth and al that is therein: thou rounde compasse and all that groweth therevpon: for the Lorde is angrye with all people, and his displeasure is kindled against all the multitude of them, he hath destroyed them, & deliuered them to the slaughter. And the Lordes sword shalbe ful of blud, and be rustie with the fatnesse and blood of lambes and goates, with the fatnes of the kidneis of wethers. For the Lorde shall kill a great offring in Bozra, and a great slaughter in the land of Idumea. There shall the Vnicornes fal with them, and the Bulles with the gieuntes: and their land shalbe throughly soked with blonde, and their ground corrupted with fatnes. Vnto thee also, O Sion, shall comme the daye of the vengeaunce of God, and the yeare when thine owne iudgements shalbe recompensed. And C his floudes shalbe tourned to pitche, and his earth to brimstone: and therewith shall the land be kindled, so that it shall not be quenched day nor night: but smoke euermore, and so foorth to ly wast. And no man shal go through it for euer. But Pellicans, Storkes, great Oules and Rauens shal haue it in possession, and dwell therein. For God shal spreade out the line of desolation vpon it, and way it with the stones of emptines. When kinges are called vpon, there shalbe none, and all princes shalbe awaye. Thornes shall growe in their places, nettles, and thistels in their stronge holdes, that the dragons may haue their pleasure therein, and that they maye be a court for estriges. There shall straunge D bisures and monstrous beastes meete one another, and the wilde kepe company together. There shal the Lamia lye and haue her lodginge. There shal the oule make her nest, build, be there at home, and bring foorth his younge ones. There shall the kytes come together, eche one to his like. Seeke throughout the Scripture of the Lorde and reade it. There shall none of these thinges be lefte oute, there shal not one, nor such like fayle. And Rabsaketh said vnto them: Tell Hezekias that the great kinge of Assiria saith thus vnto him: what presumption is this, that thou trustest vnto? I saide: Surelye thou trustest in vaine wordes, when counsaile and strength are necessarye to battaile, or els wherto trustest thou that thou castest thy selfe of frō me? • lo, thou puttest thy trust in a broken staffe of reed.

speake not to vs in the Jewes tonge, least the folke heare, which lieth vpon the wall. Then answered Rabsakeh: Thinke ye, that the kinge sente me to speake this vnto thy Lorde and thee? hath he not sent me to them also, that lye vpon the wall? that they maye be compelled to eate their owne dunge, & drinke their own stale with you? And Rabsakeh stode stiffe, and cryed with a loude voyce in the Jewes tong, and sayd: Now take heede, how the great king of the Assirians geueth you warning. Thus saithe the king: Let not Hezekias deceyue you, for he shall not be able to deliuer you. Moreouer, let not Hezekias comfort you in the lord, when he saithe: the Lorde without doubt shall defende vs, and shall not geue ouer this Citie into the handes of the kinge of the Assirians, beleeue him not. But thus saith the kinge of Assiria: obteine my fauour, encline to me, so may euery man enioy his vineyardes & fyg trees, and drinke the water of his cesterne, vnto the time that I come my selfe, and bring you into a lande that is like your owne: wherein is wheate and wine, which is bothe sowen with seede, and planted with vineyardes. Let not Hezekias deceiue you, when he saieth vnto you: The Lorde shall deliuer vs? Might the gods of the Gentils kepe euery mans lande, from the power of the kinge of the Assirians? Where is the God of Hemath & Arphad? Where is the god of Sepharaim? And who was able to defende Samaria out of my hande? Or which of all the gods of these landes hath deliuered their countrey out of my power? Is the Lorde in deede able to deliuer Jerusalē fro my hand? Unto this Hezekias messangers held their tongues, and answered not one worde, for the kinge had charged them that they should geue him none answer. So came Eliakim Helkias son, the President, Sobna the scribe, and Joah Alphas sonne, the secretary, vnto Hezekia, with rent clothes, & tolde him the wordes of Rabsakeh.

When Hezekias hearde that, he rent his clothes, and put on sackecloth, and went into the temple of the Lord: but he sent Eliakim the president, Sobna the scribe, with the eldest priestes, clothed in sackecloth vnto the prophete Esay the sonne of Amoz, and they saide vnto him: Thus saith Hezekias: This is the daye of trouble, of plague, and of blasphemye: for the childzen are come to the place of birth: but there is no power to bring them forth. The Lord thy God (no doubt) hath well considered the wordes of Rabsakeh, whom his lord the king of the Assirians hath sent to defye and blaspheme the liuing God, with suche wordes as the Lord thy God hath heard righte well. And therefore, lyfte vp thy prayer for the remnant, that yet are left. So the seruauntes of the kinge Hezekias came to Esay. And Esay gaue them this answere: Say thus vnto your Lord, thus sayth the Lorde: Be not afrayd of the woordes that thou hast hearde, wherewith the king of the Assirians seruaunts haue blasphemed me. Beholde, I will cause a winde to go ouer him, as soone as he heareth the rumoure, he shall go agayne into his countrey, there will I destroye him with the swearde in his owne lande. Nowe when Rabsakeh returned, he founde the kinge of Assiria laying siege to Libnas: for he hadde vnderstand that he was departed from Lachis. For there came a rumour, that Tharakas kynge of Ethiopia was come forth to warre agaynst him. And when the kinge of Assiria heard that, he sent other messangers to king Hezekias, with this Commaundement: Saye thus to Hezekias kinge of Juda: Let not thy God deceiue thee, in whom thou hopest, and sayest: Jerusalem shall not be geuen into the handes of the kinge of Assiria. For lo, thou knowest well howe the kinges of Assiria, haue handeled all the landes that they haue subuerted, and hopest thou to escape? Where the people of the Gentiles (whom my pro-

Deliuer vs then, O Lord our God, frō the handes of Senacherib, that all kingdomes of the earth maye knowe, that thou onely arte the Lorde. Then Esay the sonne of Amoz sent vnto Hezekia, saying: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel. And there will I cut downe the hye Cedre trees, and the fayrest Fyr trees: I will vp into the height of it, and into the chefest of his timbre woodes. If there be no water, I wil graue and drinke. And as for waters of defence, I shall dry them vp with the feete of myne hoste. Yea, hast thou not heard, what I haue taken in hand and brought to passe of olde tyme? That same wil I do nowe also, wast, F destroye, and bring stronge cities vnto heapes of stones. For their inhabitours shalbe like lame men brought in feare and confounded. They shalbe like the grasse and greene hearbes in the fielde, like the hay vpon the house toppes, that withereth afore it be growen vp. I knowe thy wayes, thy going forth, and thy comming home, yea, and thy madnes against me. Therfore thy furiousnes against me, and thy pryde is come before me, I will put my ringe into thy nose, and my bridle bit into the chawes of thee, and turne thee about, euen the same waye thou camest. I wil geue thee also this token (O Hezekia) this yere shalte thou eate suche as groweth of it selfe: and the seconde yeare, that whiche springeth agayne of the same, and in the thirde yeare, yee shall sowe and reape, yea, ye shall plante vyneyardes, and enioye the fruites thereof. And such of the house of Juda as are escaped, shall come together, and the remnant shal take roote beneath, and bring forth fruite aboue. For the escaped shall goe out of Jerusalem, and the remnaunte from the mounte Syon.
G And this shall the gelousy of the Lord of hoostes bring to passe. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde, concerninge the kinge of the Assirians. He shall not come into this Citie, and shall shoote no arowe into it, there shall no shielde hurt it, neyther shall they caste bytches about it. The same waye that he came, he shall retourne, and not come at thys Citye, sayeth the Lord: And I will kepe and saue this Citie, sayeth he, for myne owne, and for my Seruaunte Dauyds sake.

Mine age is folden vp together,

Then chattred I like a swalow, & like a crane, and mourned as a doue.

I lift vp mine eyes into the height:
O Lorde (said I) my sickenes kepeth

What shal I saye? The Lorde hath made a promise to me: Yea, and he him

And Esaye sayde, Take a playster

A 4.re.20.c At the same time Merodach Baladam, Baladamus sonne, king of Babilon, sent letters and presentes to Hezekia. For he vnderstode howe that he had bene sicke, 2pa.33.c and was recouered agayn. And Hezekia was glad thereof, and shewed them the cõmodities of his treasure. of siluer, of gold, of spices and rootes, of precious oyles, all that was in his B cubbordes and treasure houses. Ther was not one thing in Hezekias house & so throughout all his kingdome, but he let them see it. Then came Esaye the Prophet to king Hezekia, and said vnto him: What haue the men sayde, and frõ whence came they vnto thee? Hezekia answered: they came out of a far countrey vnto me out of Babilon. Esay said: What haue they looked vpon in thine house? Hezekia answered: All that is in mine house haue they seene, and there is nothing in my treasure, but I shewed it them. Then C saide Esay vnto Hezekia: Understand the word of the Lord of hostes. Behold, the time will come that euerye thinge which is in thine house, and all that thy progenitours haue layde vp in store vnto this daye, shalbe caried to Babilon, and nothing left behinde. Thus sayth the Lorde: yea, and D part of thy sonnes, that shall come of thee, and whom thou shalt get, shalbe caryed hence, and become gelded chamberlaynes in the king of Babilons courte. Then sayde Hezekia to Esay. Nowe God prosper his owne counsell whiche thou haste tolde me. He sayd moreouer. So that there be peace and faythfulnesse in my tyme.

I Comfort my people (O ye prophetes) comforte my people, sayth your God, comforte Jerusalem at the heart, and tell her, that her trauayle is at an end, that her offence is pardoned, that she hath receaued of the Lordes hand sufficient correction for all her sinnes. A voyce Mat.3.a crieth in wildernes: Prepare the way Mar.1.a for the Lord in the wildernesse, make Luke.3.a streight the path for our God in the Joha.1.a deserte. For the glorye of the Isa.40.b Lorde shall appeare, and al flesthe shall at once see it: for why, the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it. The same voyce spake: Nowe crye. And the Prophete answeerd: what shall I crye? That Psal.90.a all flesthe is grasse, & that all the good- Jam.1.a lynes thereof, is as the floure of the 1.pet.1.a field. The grasse is withered, & floure falleth awaye. Euen so is the people as grasse, when the breath of the Lord bloweth vpon them. He C bringeth home Elmes and Okes, and taking a bolde courage, he seketh out the best timber of the wood. He him selfe hath planted a Pyne tree, whiche the raine hath swelled, which woodde serueth for men to burne. Of this he taketh, and warmeth himselfe withall: he maketh a fyre of it to bake bread. And afterwarde maketh a God therof, to honor it: & an Idol to knele before it. One piece he burneth in the fire, with an other he rosteth flesshe, ẏ he may eat rost his belyful: with the third he warmeth himselfe, and saith: Aha, I am well warmed, I haue ben at the fyre. And of the residue, he maketh him a God, & an Idole for him selfe. As for those that ouerthrew thee, and made thee waste, they shall depart from Gen.14a thee. Lift vp thine eyes, and loke E about thee: all these gather them together and come to thee. As truely as I liue (sayth the Lorde) thou shalt put them all vpon thee, as an apparell, and gyrd them to thee, as a bryde doth her iewels. As for thy lande that lieth desolate, wasted and destroyed: it shalbe to narowe for them that shall dwell in it. And they that would deuoure thee, they shalbe far away. Then the childe whom the baren shall bring forth vnto thee, shal say in thine eare: this place is to narowe, gene place that I maye haue rowme. Then shalt thou thinke by thy selfe: who hath begotten me these? seyng I am baren and alone, a F captiue and an outcast? And who hath norished them vp for me? I am desolate and alone, but from whence come these? And therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Behold, I will stretche out mine hand to the Gentiles, and set vp my token to the people. They shall bring thee thy sons in their lappes, and carye thy daughters vnto thee vpon their shoulders. For kinges shall be thy nursinge fathers, and Queenes shall be thy nursinge mothers. They shall fall before thee with their faces flat vpon the earth, and lycke vp the duste of thy feete: that thou mayest Rom.9 a know how that I am the Lord. And who so putteth his truste in me, shall not be confounded, who spoyled the Gyaunt of his pray? or who taketh the prisoner from the mightie? And therefore, thus sayth the Lorde. The prisoners shalbe taken from the Gyaunt: and the spoyle deliuered from the violente, for I will mayntayne thy cause agaynst thine aduersaries, and saue thy sons. And will fede thine enemies with their owne flesshe, and make them drinke of their owne bloud: as of swete wine. And all flesshe shall know, O Iacob that I am the Lorde thy sauiour, thy noble redemer.

reth you not. For your hands are defiled with bloud, and your fingers with vnrighteousnes: Your lippes speake lealinges, and your tongue setteth out wickednes. No man regardeth righteousnes, and no man iudgeth truely. Euery manne hopeth in vayne thinges, and imagineth disceat, Iob.15.b • conceiueth wearynes, and bringeth Psal.7.b forth euill. They breede Cockatrice egges, and weaue the spiders webbe: who so eateth of their egges, dyeth. But yf one treade vppon them, there commeth vp a serpente. Their webbe maketh no clothe, and they maye not couer them with their labors. Their deedes are the deedes of wickednesse, and the worke of robbery is in their Pro.1.a handes. • Their feete runne to euill, Psal.5.d and they make haste to shedde innocent bloude, their counselles are wic- Ro.3.13 ked counsels, harme • and destruction are in their wayes. But the waye of peace they knowe not. In their goinges is no equitie: their wayes are ℣ so croked, that whosoeuer goeth therin, knoweth of no peace. And this is the cause that equitie is so farre from vs, and that righteousnes commeth Psal.5.a not nye vs. • We looke for light, loe, it Iob.30.c is darkenes: for the morning shine, Gen.28.c see, we walke in the darke. • We grope Iob.19.c like the blinde vppon the wall, wee grope euē as one that hath none eyes, we stumble at the none day, as though it were toward night: In the fatting places, lyke men that are halfe deade. We roze al like beares, and mourne still like doues. We looke for equitie, but there is none, for health, but it is farre from vs. For our offences are many before thee, and our sinnes testifie agaynst vs. Yea, we must confesse that we offende, and knowledge that we do amisse: Namely trangresse and dissemble agaynst the Lorde, and fall away from our God, vsinge presumpteous and trayterous imaginations, and casting false matters in our heartes. And therfore is equitie gone Esa.59.a aside, and righteousnes standeth a far of, • truth is fallen down in the strete, and the thing that is playne and open, may not be shewed. Yea the trueth is taken away, and he that refrayneth him selfe from euill, must be spoyled. When the Lorde sawe this, it displeased him sore, that there was no equitie. He sawe also, that there was no man righteous, and he wondred that ther was no man to helpe him. Wherfore he helde him by his owne power, and he sustayned him by his owne righteousnes. • He put righteousnes Ephe.6.b vpon him for a brest plate, and set the 1 Thes.5.a helmet of health vppon his heade. He put on wrath in stede of clothing, and toke gelousye about him for a cloake: (lyke as when a manne goeth forth wrathfully to recompence hys enemies, and to be auenged of his aduersaries.) Namelye, that he might recompence and rewarde the Ilandes, where through the name of the Lorde might be feared, from the rising of the Sunne: and his maiesty, vnto the going downe of the same. For he shall com as a violent water streme which the winde of the Lorde hath moued. ℭ • But vnto Sion there shall come a Psa.13.a redeemer, and vnto theim in Iacob Ro.11.d that tourne from wickednes, sayeth the Lord. I will make this couenant with theym (sayeth the Lorde:) My spirite that is vpon thee, and the wordes which I haue put in thy mouth, shall neuer go out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy childers childzen, from this time forth for euermore, worlde without ende, sayth the Lorde.

ℭ The.ix. Chapter. ✣

℣ ARise thee vp betimes, and be bright (O Ierusalem) for thy • light commeth and the glorye Act.26.c. of the Lord is risen vp vpon thee. For Eph. 5.b lo, while the darkenes and cloude couereth the earthe and the people, the Lord shall shewe the light, & his glory shalbe seene in thee. • The Gentiles Esa.19.b shall come to thy light, and kinges to the brightnes that springeth forth vpō thee. • Lift vp thine eies, and loke Esa.49.b rounde about thee. All these gather Mar.8.b them selues, and come to thee: thy sons Ge.15.a. shall come vnto thee from farre, and

thy daughters shall gather thē selues to thee on euery side. Then thou shalt see this: & be glorious, thou shalt marueil exceadingly, and thine heart shall be opened: when the aboundaunce of the sea shalbe cōuerted vnto thee (that is) when the riches of the Gentiles shall come vnto thee. The multitude of Camels shall couer thee, the dromadaries of Madian and Epha. • All they of Saba shall come, bringinge gold and incense, and shewinge the prayse of the Lorde. All the catteil of Cedar shalbe gathered vnto thee, the rams of Nabaioth shall serue thee, to be offered acceptably vpon mine aultar, • whiche I haue chosen, and in the house of my glorye which I haue garnished. But what are these, that flee here like the cloudes, and as the doues flyinge to their windowes? The Iles also shal wayte for me, and specially the shippes of Tharsis: that they may bring thy sonnes from farre, and their siluer and their golde with them, vnto the name of the Lorde thy God, vnto the holy one of Israel, that hath glorified thee. • Strangers shall build vp thy walles, and their kinges shal do thee seruice. For when I was angry, I smote thee, and of my mercy I pardoned thee. • Thy gates shall stand open still both day & night, and neuer be shut, that ỹ host of the Gentyles may come, and that their kinges may be brought vnto thee. For euery people and kingdome that serueth not thee, shall perishe, & be destroyed with vtter destruction. The glory of Libanus shal com vnto thee. The fir trees, Boxes & Cedars together to garnishe the place of my sanctuary, for I will glorifie the place of my feete. Moreouer, those shal come kneling vnto thee, that haue vexed thee: and all they that despised thee, shall fall downe at thy foote. Thou shalt be called the citie of the Lord. Sion the Citie of the holye one of Israell. Because thou hast ben forsaken & hated, so that no man went through thee: I will make thee glorious for euer & euer, & ioyfull throughout al ỹ posteritie: • Thou shalt suck the milke of the Gentiles, and kinges breests shall feede thee. And thou shalt know that I the Lord am the Sauiour & redeemer, the mighty one of Iacob. For brasse, will I geue thee gold, and for yron siluer: for wood brasse, & for stones yron. I will turne thine oppression into peace, and thine exactions into righteousnesse. Violence and robbery shall neuer be heard of in thy lande, neyther harme and destruction within thy borders. Thy wals shalbe called health: and thy gates the prayse of God. • The sunne shall neuer be thy daye light: and the light of the Moone shall neuer shine vnto thee: but the Lord himself shalbe thine euerlasting light, and thy God shalbe thy glory. • Thy sunne shall neuer go down, and thy moone shall not be hid, for the Lord him selfe shalbe thine euerlasting lighte, and thy sorowfull dayes shalbe ended. Thy people shall be all righteous, and possesse the lande euer, the floure of my plantinge: the worke of my handes, whereof I will reioyce. The youngest and least shall growe into a thousande, and the simplest into a stronge people. I the Lord shall shortly bringe this thing to passe in his time.

¶ The .lxi. Chapter.

THe spirite of the Lord God is vpon me, for the Lorde hath annoynted me, and sente mee, to preache good tidinges vnto the poore, that I might bind vp the wounded hearts, • that I might preache deliuerance to the captiue, & open the prison to them that are bound: that I might declare the acceptable yere of ỹ Lord, and the day of the vengeaunce of oure God: • that I might comfort all them that are in heauynesse, that I might geue vnto them that mourne in Sion, that I might geue I say, bewtye in steade of asshes, ioyfull oyntmente for sighinge, pleasaunt raymente for an heauy minde: That they might be called trees of righteousnes, a planting of the Lord for him to reioyce in. They shal build the long rough wildernesse, and sette vp the olde deserte.

33.d be named the priestes of the Lord, and men shal cal you the seruauntes of our God. Ye shall enioy the goodes of the Gentiles, and triumphe in their substance. For your greate reproze you shall haue double ioye, and for shame shall they haue ioye of their portion. For they shall haue double possession in their lande, and euerlasting ioye C shall be with them. For I the Lorde which loue ryght, and hate robbery, (though it were offred me) shal make their worke full of faythfulnes, and make an euerlasting couenaunt with them. Their seed also, and their generation shalbe knowen among the Gentiles, and among the people. All they that see them, shall know that they are the hye blessed seede of the Lorde. And 2.b therefore I am ioyfull in the Lorde, and my soule reioyceth in my God.
61.3 For he hath put vpon me the garment of saluation, & couered me with the mantell of righteousnesse. He shall decke me lyke a Bridegroome, and as a bryde that hath her apparell vpon her. For like as the grounde bringeth foorth fruite, and as the garden shooteth forth sede: so shal the lorde God cause righteousnes and prayse to God to flourishe foorth before all the heathen,

The. lxij. Chapter.

1 FOr Sions sake therefore, will I not hold my tong, and for Ierusalems sake, I will not ceasse vntil their righteousnes breake foorth as the shining light, and their saluation as a burning lampe. And ye also that remember the Lorde, ye shall not kepe him close, nor leaue to speake of him, vntill Ierusalem be set vp, and made the prayse of the worlde. The Lorde hath sworne by his righte hande, and by his strong arme, that from hencefoorth, he will not geue thy corne to be meate for thine ennemies, nor thy wine (wherin thou hast labored) to be drinke for the straungers. But they that haue gathered in the corne, shall D eate it, and geue thankes to the Lorde: and they that haue borne in the wine, shal drinke it in the court of my sanctuarie. Go you, go you thrōugh the gates, make clean the way for the people, make plaine, make plaine thy foote pathe, and take away the stones out of it, and set out a token for the people. The. lxiij. Chapter.

V What is he this that commeth from Edom, with redde coloured cloathes of Bosra? (whiche is so costlye cloathe) and commeth in so mightely with all his strengthe. I am he that teacheth righteousnesse, and am of power to helpe. Wherfore then is thy clothing red, and thy raiment like his that treadeth in the winepresse? I haue troden

I loked aboute me, and there was no man to shew me any helpe: I marueyled that no man helde me vp. Then I held me by mine owne arme, and my feruentnesse sustayned me. And thus will I tread downe the people in my wrath, and bath them in my displeasure, and vpō the erth wil I lay their strength.

Therefore will I number you with the sweard, that ye shalbe destroyed all together. For when I called, no man gaue me answere: when I spake, ye harkned not vnto me, but did wickednesse before mine eyes, and choose the thinge that pleased me not. Therfore thus sayeth the Lord God: Behold, my seruaunts shall eate, but ye shall suffer hunger: Behold, my seruaunts shal drink, but ye shall suffer thirst. Beholde, my seruantes shalbe mery, but ye shalbe confounded. Behold, my seruauntes shall reioyce for very quietnesse of hearte. I Thus sayth the Lorde: • Heauen

Acts.7.f. the house stand that ye will build vnto mee? And where shalbe the place that I wil dwel in? As for these thin they are all created, sayeth the Lorde, Psal.50. • which of them shall I then regard?

Esa.57c Euen him that is poore and of a lowly troubled spirit, and standeth in awe of my wordes. For whoso slayeth an oxe for me, doeth me so great dishonoure as hee that killeth a manne.
Hee that killeth a sheepe for me, knet-cheth a dogge. He that bringeth mee meate offeringes, offereth swynes blood: who so maketh a memoriall of B incense, praiseth the thing that is vn-righte. Yet take they suche wayes in hand, and their soule deliteth in these abhominations. • Therfore wil I al- Job.6.d. so haue pleasure in laughing them to scorne, and the thing that they feare will I bring vpon them. • For when Pro.1.b.
I called, no man gaue answere: when Esa.65 I spake, they would not heare. But did wickednesse before mine eyes, and choose the thinges that displeased me. Heare the word of the Lord all ye that feare the thinge whiche he speaketh: Your brethren that hate you, and cast you out for my names sake, saye: The Lorde is grieuous agaynste vs, but you shall see him in ioye whē they C shalbe confounded. • Then shall be Zach.14 hearde a greate noyse from the Citie and the temple, the voyce of the Lorde that wil reward and recompence his enemies: lyke as when a wife bringeth forth a manne childe, or euer she suffer the payne of the birth, and an-guishe of the trauaile. Who euer hard or saw such thinges? doth the ground beare in one daye? or are the people borne all at ones, as Sion trauayled D in childe birth and bare her sonnes? Gen.16.
For thus sayth the Lorde. • Am I he that maketh other to beare, and beare not my selfe? Am not I he that beareth and maketh baren: saith thy god?
Reioyce with Ierusalem, and be glad with her, all ye that loue her.
• Be ioyefull with her, all yee that Mat.5.d mourned for her. For ye shall suck confort out of her breastes: and be satisfyed. Ye shall taste, and haue delyte in the plenteousnes of her power.
For thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I will let peace into her, like a waterfloude, and the mighte of the Hethen lyke a flowinge streame. Then shall ye sucke, ye shalbe borne vpon her sy-des, and be ioyefull vppon her knees.
For like as a child is conforted of his mother, so shall I confort you, and ye shalbe conforted in Ierusalem. And when ye see this, your heart shal re- Apo.17b the Lorde be knowen among his seruauntes, and his indignation among his enemies. For beholde, the Lorde shall come with fyre, and his charette shalbe like a whirlwinde, that he may recõpence his vengeance in his wrath, and his indignation with the flame of f fyre. For the Lord shall iudge all flesh with the fyre, and with his swearde: and there shalbe a great number slaine of the Lord. Such as haue made them selues holy and cleane in the gardens, and those that haue eaten swins flesh, myce, and other abhominations, shall be take away together sayth the Lord.

For I will come to gather all people and tonges with their woorkes and ymaginations: these shal come and see my glory. Vnto them shall I geue a token, and sende certaine of them (that be deliuered) among the Gentiles: into Cilicia, Affrica, and Lidia, where G men can handle bowes, into Italie, & Ga.94.a also Greke lande. • The yles farre of, that haue not heard speake of me, and haue not seene my glory, shall preache my prayse among the Gentiles, and shall bring all your brethren for an offering vnto the Lorde, out of all the people, vpon horses, charets, and horse litters, vpon mules and cartes of Jerusalem, my holy hill (sayth the Lord) like as the children of Israel bring the offering in cleane vessels, to the house Ga.61.a of the Lorde. • And I shall take out Ge.1.b certaine of them for to be priestes and Ga.11.a Leuites, sayth the Lorde: For like as the newe heauen and the newe earth which I will make, shalbe fast stablisshed by me (sayth the Lorde,) so shall your sede and your name continue, and there shall be a newe Moone for the other, and a newe Sabboth for the other, and all flesh shall come to worship before me (sayth the Lorde.) And they shall go foorth, and loke vpon the carions of them that haue transgressed Ge.9.a agaynst me. • For their wormes shall not die, neither shal their fyre be quenched, and all flesh shall abhorre them.

MOreouer, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: go thy way, crye in the eares of Jerusalem, and saye. Thus sayeth the Lorde. I remember thee for the kindnes of thy youth, and because of thy stedfast loue: at the time of thy dispoling, in that thou folowedst me tho rowe the wilderneſſe, in an vntilled land. Israell was an halowed thing vnto the Lorde, and so was his firste frutes. All they that deuour Israell shall offend: misfortune shall fall vpon them sayth the Lorde. Heare therefore the worde of the lord, O thou house of Jacob, and all the generations of the house of Israel. Thus sayth the Lord. What vnfaithfulnesse founde your fathers in me, that they went so farre awaye fro me, fallinge to ighteneſſe, & being so vayne? They thought not in theyr herts: Where haue we left the Lord, that brought vs out of the lande of Egipte, that led vs thorughe the wilderneſſe, thorough a deserte and rough lande, thorough a drye and deadly lande, yea, a lande that no man had gone thorough, and wherein no man hadde dwelte. And when I hadde brought you into a pleasaunte well buylded land, that ye might enioye the fruites and all the commodities of the same: ye went foorth and defiled my lande, and brought mine heritage to abhomination. The priestes them selues saide not: Where is the Lorde? They that had the Lawe in their haddes, knewe me not: The shepeherdes offended agaynst me. The Prophetes did seruice vnto Baall, and folowed suche thinges as shall bring theim no profite. Wherefore I am constrayned (saith the Lorde) to make my cõplaint vpon you, and vpon your childrens childrẽ: Go into the Iles of Cethim and looke well, send vnto Cedar, take diligent heede, and see, whether suche thinges be done there, whether the Gẽtiles them selues deale so falsely, and vntruely with their goddes (whiche yet are no goddes in deede.) But my people haue geuen ouer their hye honour for a thinge that maye not helpe them. Be astonished (O ye heauens) be afrayd and abashed at suche a thing sayth the Lorde. For my people haue done two euils. They haue forsaken me the well of the water of lyfe, and digged them pittes, yea, vile and broken pittes, that can holde no water. Is Israell a bonde seruaunt, or one of the household? Why then is he so spoyled? Why do they roze and crye then vpon him, as a lyon? They haue made his lande waste, his cities are so brent vp, that there is no man dwelling in them. Yea, the children of Noph and Tophnes haue defyled thy necke.

Jer.32.c D • Cōmeth not this vnto thee, because thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God, euer sens he led thee by the way? And what hast thou now to do in the strete of Egipt? to drinke the water of Nilus? Cypther what makest thou in the way of Assiria? To drinke water of Jer.2.b the floud? • Thine owne wickednes shal reproue thee, and thy tourning aways shall condempne thee, that thou mayest knowe and vnderstande, howe euill and hurtefull a thinge it is, that thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God, & not feared him, sayth the Lord God, Ex.45.a of hoostes. • I haue euer broken thy yoke of old, and burst thy bondes: yet Jer.3.b sayest thou: • I will no more offende, but (lyke an harlot) thou runnest about vpon all hye hilles, and among all greene trees, where as I planted thee as a noble vine, and a good roote, Esay.5.a whose seede is all faithfull. • How art thou tourned then into a bitter, vnfruitfull, and strange grape? Yea, and that so sore, that though thou washe thee with Nitrus, and make thy selfe to sauour with that sweete smelling herbe of Bozith: yet in my sight thou arte stayned with thy wickednesse, sayth the Lord thy god. Thou art like a swift Dromedarye, that goeth easelye his waye, and thy wantonnesse is like a wilde Asse, that vseth the wildernes, and that snuffeth and bloweth at his will. Who can tame thee? All they that seeke thee shal not fayle, but finde thee in thyne owne vnciennesse. Kepe thou thy foote from nakednes, and thy throte from thirst, and without shame thou annswerest: No, for I haue loued straungers, and them will I folowe. Lyke as a theefe that is taken with the dede commeth to shame, euen so is the house of Israell come to confusion: the common people, theyr kinges and rulers, their priestes and pro- Ier.2.c phetes. • For they say to a stocke: thou art my father, and to a stone: thou hast begotten me: • yea, they haue turned their backe vpon me, and not their face. Where are nowe thy goddes, that thou hast made thee? let them stand vp, and helpe thee in the time of neede (if they be able.) • For looke howe manye cities thou Jer.11 haste (O Juda) so many goddes haste thou also. Wherefore then will ye go to lawe with me, syng ye all are synners against me, sayth the Lorde? It is but loste labour, that I smite your chyldren, for they receyue not my correction. • Your owne sweard destro- 2.pa.24 yeth your prophetes like a deuouring Lyon. O ye people, looke vpon the word of the Lord. Am I then become a wildernesse vnto the people of Israell? or a lande that hath no lighte? Wherefore sayth my people then: we are lordes, we will come no more vnto thee? Doeth a mayden forgette her raymente, or a bryde her stomacher? But as for my people, they haue forgotten me, dayes innumerable. Why boastest thou thy wayes so hyelye (to obtayne fauoure therethorowe) when thou hast yet stayned them with blas- phemies? and teachest thyne owne G wayes. • Upon thy winges is found De.18.b the blood of poore and innocent people, psa.105b and that not in corners and holes only, but openly in all these places. Yet darrest thou say: I am without sinne and giltlesse. Tushe, his wrathe can not come vppon me. Beholde, I condemne thee in iudgement, because thou darest saye: I haue not offended. And why runnest thou so often to and fro to chaunge thy ways? For thou shalt be confounded, as well of Egipt, as of the Assirians: yea, thou shalt go thy waye from them, and smyte thine handes together vppon thine heade. Because the Lorde doth abhorre that confidence and hope of thine, and thou shalt not prosper withall.

Jer.17.b THese are the wordes that God spake vnto Jeremye, sayinge: • Stande vnder the gate of the Lordes house, and crie out these wordes there, with a loude voyce, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lorde al ye of Juda that go in at the dooze, to woorshyp the Lorde. B the gentils, and in al their kingdoms, ther is none that may be likened vnto thee. They are altogether vnlearned & vnwiſe in this one thing. All their cunning is but vanity: namely wood, ſiluer, siluer, which is brought out of Tharsis, and beaten to plates: and gold frō Ophir, a woorke that is made with the hand of the craftesman, and the caster, clothed with yelowe silke & scarlet: euen so is the woorke of their wise men all together. But the Lorde is a true God, a liuing God, and an euerlasting king. Gen. 1.a • If he be wrothe, the erth shaketh: al the Gentils may not abide his indignation. As for theyr goddes, thus shall you saye to theym: They are gods, that made neither heauen nor earth, therefore shall they perysshe from the earth, and from al thinges vnder heauen. (But as for our God) Gen. 1.a • he made the earth with his power, and with his wisedome dothe he order the whole compasse of the worlde, with his discretion hath he ℭ spredde out the heauens. Neuer the lesse, Jacobs portion is no suche: but it is he that hath made all thinges, and Israel is the rod of his inheritaunce. The Lord of hostes is his name. Gather vppe thy wares out of the lande, thou that art in the stronge place. For thus sayth the Lord: Behold, I will now throw as with a stone slinge, the inhabiters of this land, at this once, & I will bring trouble vpon them, that they shal proue true the woords that I haue spokē by the prophets. Alas, how am I hurt? Alas, how paynful ar my scourges vnto me? For I consider this sorowe by my selfe, and I must suffer it. My tabernacle is destroyed, and al my cordes are broken. My children are gone fro me, and can no wher be founde. Now haue I none to spreade out my tente, or to sette vp my hanginges. For the heardemen haue doone foolishely that they haue not sought the Lord. Therfore, haue they dealt vnwisely with their cattel, and all are scattered abroade. Behold, the noise is hard at hand, and great sedition out of the north: to make the cities of Juda, a wildernes, and a dwelling place for Dragens. Jer.20.d • Now I know (O Lorde) that it is not in mans power to order his owne wayes, or to Psal.6.a and.38.a rule his owne steppes and goynges. Esay.64. Therfore, chasten thou vs, O Lorde, but with fauour, & not in thy wrath: bring vs not vtterly to naught. Powre out thine indignation rather vpon the Gentiles, that know thee not, & vpon the people ẏ call not on thy name. And that because they haue consumed, deuoured and destroyed Jacob, and haue made his habitation wast.

Esa.5.c broke downe my vineyard, and troden vpon my portion. Of my pleasant portion, they haue made a wildernes and desert. They haue layde it waste: and nowe it is waste, it sigheth vnto me. Yea, the whole lande lyeth waste, and no man regardeth it. The destroiers come ouer the heath euery waye: for the sweard of the Lorde doth consume from the one ende of the land to the other, and no flesh hath rest. They haue sowen wheate, and reaped thornes. They haue taken heritage in possession, but it doth them no good. And the Prophetes were ashamed of D your fruites, because of the greate wrathe of the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lord vpon all mine euil neighbours, that lay hand on mine heritage, which I haue possessed, euen my people of Israell. Behold, I will pluck them (namely Israell) out of their lande, and put out the house of Juda, from Jer.46 amonge them. And when I haue roted them out, I will be at one with them agayne, and I will haue mercy vpon them, and bring them agayne, euery man to his owne heritage, and into his lande. And yf they (namely, that trouble my people) wil learne the wayes of them, to sweare by my name: The Lorde liueth (like as they learned my people to swere by Baal) then shall they be reckned among my people. But yf they will not obey, mat.22.b then will I roote out the same folke, and destroye them, saith the Lorde.

Thus sayth the Lorde vnto me: A go thy way, and get me a lynnen breche, and girde it about thy loynes, and lette it not be wette. Then I got me a breeche, accordinge tot he commaundement of the Lorde, and putte it about my loynes. After this, the seconde time, the Lord spake vnto me agayne: Take the breche that thou hast prepared, and putte aboute thee, and get thee vp, and go vnto Euphrates, and hide it in a hole of the rocke. So went I, and hid it at Euphrates, as the Lord commaūded me. And it happened long after this, that the Lorde spake vnto mee: Vppe and get thee to Euphrates, and fette the breche from thence, which I commaūded thee to hide there. Thē went I to Euphrates, and digged vp, and toke the breeche from the place where I had hid it: and behold, the breeche was corrupt, so that it was profitable for nothing. Then sayde the Lorde B vnto me: Thus sayth the Lorde, euen so will I corrupt the pride of Juda, and the hye mind of Jerusalem. This people is a wicked people, they will Jere.7.c

say: Thus saith the Lord God of Israel: Euerye pot shalbe filled with thou, we knowe not, that euerye pot shalbe filled with wine? Then shalte thou say vnto theim. Thus sayth the C Lord: Beholde, I shall fill all the inhabiters of this land with dronkennes, the kinges that sit vpon Dauids stole, the priestes and prophetes, with all that dwell at Ierusalem. And I will set them one against another, yea the fathers against the sonnes, sayeth the Lord. I will not pardon them, I will not spare them, nor haue pitie vp-on them, but destroy them. Be obedient, geue eare, take not disdayne at it, for it is the Lord himselfe that speketh. Honour the Lorde your GOD herein, or he take his light from you, and or euer your fete stumble in darknes at the hill: least when ye looke for the light, he turne it into the shadowe and darkenes of death. But if ye will not heare me, that geue you secrete wouldest saye then in thine heart: Wherefore come these thinges vpon mee? • Euen for the multitude of thy Ier.13 blasphemies, shall thy hinder partes and thy feete bee discouered. For lyke as a man of Inde maye chaunge his skinne, and the cat of the mountayne her spottes: so maye ye that be exercised in euill, do good. Therfore will I scatre them, like as the stubble that is taken away with the Southe winde. This shalbe your portion, and the portion of your measure, wherewith ye shalbe rewarded of me, sayth the Lord: because ye haue forgottē me and put your trust in disceatfull thin-

I haue sene thy abhominations. Wo be vnto thee (O Ierusalem) when wilt thou euer be clensed any more?

THe worde of the Lorde shewed vnto Ieremye, concerninge the dearth of the fruits. Iuda hath mourned, his gates are desolate: (they are desolate) they ar brought to heauynes euen vnto the grounde, and the crye of Ierusalem goeth vp. The lordes sent their seruauntes to fetche water, and when they came to the welles, they did finde no water, but caried their vesselles home emptye.
They be ashamed & confounded, and couer their heades. • For the ground Ier.3 is dried vp, because there commeth no rayne vpon it. The plowemen also be ashamed, and couer their heades. The Hinde also forsooke the ponge fawne that he brought forth in the field, because there was no grasse. The wilde Asses did stand in the hye places, and drewe in their wind like the dragōs, their eies did fayle for want of grasse.
Doutles, our owne wickednes doth reward vs. But Lord do thou, according to thy name, thogh our trāgressions

ons and sinnes be many, and agaynst 14.49.b thee haue we sinned. • For thou arte the comfort and helpe of Israel in the time of trouble. Why wilt thou be as a stranger in the lande, and as one that goeth ouer the fielde, and commeth in onely to remayne for a nighte? Whye wilt thou make thy self a coward, and as it were a gyaunte that yet may not helpe? For thou (O Lord) art in the middest of vs, and thy name is called vpon of vs, forsake vs not. Thus hath the Lord sayd vnto this people: seyng they haue had suche a luste to wander abroade, and haue not refrayned their feete, and therfore displeased the Lord, but he will nowe bring agayne to re-membraunce all their misdeedes, and 15.7.b punishe all their synnes. Yea, euen thus sayde the Lord vnto me. • Thou 14.1.b shalt not pray to do this people good.
• For though they faste, I will not heare their prayers, and though they offer burntofferinges and sacrifices, C yet wil not I accept them. For I wil destroy them with the sweard, hunger and pestilence. Then answered I: O 14.1.d Lorde God, • the prophetes saye vnto 14.13.a them: Tushe, ye shall • nede to feare no sweard, and no honger shal come vppon you, but the Lorde shall geue you continuall rest in this place. And the Lorde sayde vnto me: The prophetes 23.25.d preache lyes in my name, where as I haue not • sente theym, neyther gaue I them anye charge, neyther didde I speake vnto them: yet they preach vnto you false visions, charming, vanitie, disceitefulnesse of their owne hearte.
Therefore thus saith the Lord. As for those Prophetes that preache in my name (whom I neuertheles haue not sent) and that say: Tush there shal no sweard nor honger be in this lande, 14.14.a • with sweard and with honger, shall those prophetes perysshe, and the people to whom they preache shall be 16.4.a cast out of Jerusalem, dye of honger, and be slaine with the sweorde, • (and there shalbe no man to burye them) both they and their wiues, their sons and their daughters. For thus will I poure their wickednes vpon them.
This shalt thou saye also vnto theym.
Myne eyes shall weepe withoute ceassing day and night: For my people shal be destroyed with great harm, and shal perisshe with a great plague.
For yf I go into the field, lo, it lyeth all full of slayne men. If I come into the citie, lo, they be all famished of honger. Yea their Prophetes also and priestes shalbe led into an vnknowen land. Hast thou then vtterly forsaken Juda? Doest thou not abhorre Sion?
Or haste thou so plaged vs, that we can be healed no more. • We looked for Jere. 8. c peace, and there commeth no good: for the time of healthe, and lo, here is nothing but trouble. We knowledge, O Lorde, all our misdeedes, and the sin-nes of our fathers, that we haue offended thee. Be not displeased, (O Lord) for thy names sake, • forget not Esa. 59.d thy louing kyndnes. Remember the throne of thine honour, breake not the couenaunt that thou hast made with vs. • Are there any among the gods of Jere. 5.d the Gentiles: that send rayne, or geue the showres of heauen? Or may the heauens drop rayne without thy commaundement? Doest not thou it, O Lord our God, in whom we truste?
Yea Lorde, thou dost al these thinges.

THen spake the Lorde vnto me: Y • Though Moses and Samu- Jere. 7. b

who shall then haue pitie vpon thee, O Jerusalem? who shall be sorye for thee? or who shall make intercession, to obtayne peace for thee? seeyng thou goest fro me, and turnest backewarde, sayeth the Lorde? therefore, I didde stretch out mine hande agaynst thee, to destroy thee, & I haue ben sory for thee so long, that I am wery. I haue scattered them abroade with the fame on Jere. 7. c euery syde of the lande. * I haue wasted my people, and destroyed theym. Yet they haue had no luste to turne frō their owne waies. I haue made their widdowes moe in number, then the sandes of the sea. Upon the mothers of their children did I bring a destroyer in the noone daye. * Sodenly and vnawares did I send a fear vpō their cities. She that hath borne seuen children hath none, her heart is full of

Jer. 20 d sayth the Lorde. * O mother, alas that euer thou diddest beare me, a brawler & rebuker of the whole land. Though I neuer lente nor receaued vpon vsurye, yet all men speake euill vpon me.

¶ And the Lord answered me: Verely thy remnaunte shall haue welthe. Come not I to thee, when thou art in trouble, and helpe thee, when thine enemie oppresseth thee? Doeth one yron hurt another, or one metall that commeth from the Northe, another?
Jer. 17 a * As for thy riches and treasure, I will geue them out into a pray, not for any money, but because of al thy sins, that thou hast done in all thy coastes.
Deu. 32 c * And I will bring thee with thyne enemies into a lande, that thou knowest not: for the fyre that is kindled in my indignation, shall burne you vp. O Lorde thou knowest, therefore remember me, and visyte me, deliuer me fro my persecutours. Take me not from this lyfe in the time of the longe pacience, thou knowest, that for thy Psa. 109 sake I suffer rebuke. * When I had D found thy wordes, I did eate them vp gredily: they haue made my heart ioyfull and glad. For thy name was called vpon me, O Lorde God of hostes. I dwell not among the scorners, neyther is my delite therin: but I dwell onely in the feare of thy hand, for thou hast fylled me with bitternes. Shall my heauynesse endure for euer? Are my plages then so great, that they may neuer be healed? Wilt thou be as one that is false, and as a water, that faileth, and can not continue? Upon these wordes thus saide the Lord vnto me: If thou wilt turne agayne, I shall sette thee in my seruice: and yf thou wilt take out the thinges that are precious from the vile, thou shalt be euen as myne owne mouth. * They shall Jer. 15 conuert vnto thee, but turne not thou vnto them: and so shall I make thee a stronge brasen wall against this people. * They shall fighte agaynst thee, Jer. 1 but they shall not prenayle. For I my selfe will be with thee, to helpe thee, and deliuer thee, sayth the Lorde. And I will rid thee out of the hands of the wicked, and delyuer thee out of the handes of tiraunte.

THus sayde the Lorde vnto me. I Thou shalt take thee no wyfe, nor beget children in this place. For of the children that are borne in this place, of their mothers that haue borne them, and of their fathers that haue begotten them in this land, thus saith the Lord. They shal dye an horrible death, * no man shall mourne for Jer. 22 them nor burye them, but they shall lye as donge vpon the earth. They shall perysshe thorowe the sweard and honger, * and their bodies shall be Psa. 79 meate for the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the earth. For thus sayeth the Lord: Go not thou in vnto them, nor come to mourne & wepe for them: for I haue taken my peace from this people (sayth the Lorde) yea my fauor and my mercy. And in this lande shall II they dye, old and yonge, and shall not be buried: no man shall bewepe them, no man shall clippe or shaue him selfe for them. There shall not one visyte anoanother, to mourne with theym for theyr deade, or to comfort them. One shall not offer another the cup of consolation, to forget their heavynes for Leu.15b father and mother. • Thou shalte not go into their feast house, to sit downe, to eate or drinke with them. For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Jer.25d Israell: • Beholde, I shall take away out of this place, the voyce of myrth and gladnes, the voyce of the bryde=grome and of the bryde: yea, and that C in your daies, that ye may see it. Now when thou shewest this people all these wordes, and they say vnto thee: wherefore hath the Lorde deuised all this great plague for vs? Or what is the offence and synne, that we haue done against the Lord our God? Thē Deu.4.d make thou them this answere: • Because your fathers haue forsaken mee (sayth the Lorde) and haue walked after straunge gods, whom they haue honoured and worshipped: but mee haue they forsaken, and haue not kept Jer.7.d my lawe. • And ye with your shamefull blaspheming, haue exceaded the wickednes of your fathers, for euery one of you haue folowed the froward and euill ymaginations of his owne heart, and is not obedient vnto me.

Deu.28.c • Therfore wil I cast you out of this land, into a lande that ye and your fathers knowe not: and there shall ye serue straunge gods daye and night, there will I shewe you no fauoure.
Jer.23.b • Beholde therfore (sayth the Lorde) the dayes are come, that it shal nomore be sayde: the Lorde lyueth, whiche broughte the children of Israell out of the lande of Egipt: but it shall be sayd, the Lord liueth, that brought the children of Israell from the North, and from all landes where he had scattered them. For I will bring them againe into the land, that I gaue vnto their fathers. Beholde (sayeth the Jer.4.c Lord) • I will send out many fyshers to take them, and after that will I sende out many hunters to hunt them out, from all mountaynes and hilles, and out of the caues of stone. For mine eyes behold all their wayes, and they can not be hid fro my face, neyther can their wicked deedes be kept close out of my sight. But fyrst will I sufficiently reward their shamefull blasphemies and sinnes, because they haue defyled my lande: Namely with their stinking Idolles, and with the carions of their abhominations, wher with they haue filled mine heritage.
Jer.24 • O Lorde, my strength, my power, and refuge in time of trouble. The Gentiles shall come vnto thee from the endes of the worlde, and say: We=reyue our fathers haue cleaued vnto lyes, theyr Idols are but vayne, and vnprofitable. Howe can a man make those his goddes, whiche are not able to be goddes? And therefore I will once teache them, sayeth the Lorde, I will shewe them my hande and my power, that they may knowe, that my name is the Lorde.

A YOur sinne (O ye of the tribe of Juda) is written in the table of your heartes, and grauen so vppon the edges of your aulters with a penne of yron, and with an adamant clawe: that as the fathers thinke vpon their children, so thinke you also vppon your aulters, woddes, thicke trees, hye hilles, mountaynes, and fieldes. • Wherfore, I will make

Ye shal be caste out also from the heritage, that I gaue you. And I will subdue you vnder the heauy bondage of your enemies in a lande that ye knowe not. For ye haue ministred fyre to my indignation, whiche shall burne euermore. Thus sayth the Lorde.

THis is another communicatiō, that God had with Jeremye, sayinge: Arise, and goo downe into the Potters house, and ther shal I tel thee more of my mind. Nowe when I came to the Potters house, I founde him makinge his woorke vppon a wheele. The vessell that the Potter made of claye, brake amonge his handes. So he began a newe, and made another vessel accordinge to his minde. Then sayde the Lord thus vnto me: • May not I do with you, as this Potter doth, O ye house of Israell, saith the Lord? Beholde, ye house of Israell, ye are in my hande, euen as the clay in the potters hande. • When I take in hande to roote oute, to destroye, or to waste awaye any people or kingdome, • yf that people against whō I haue thus deuised, conuert from their wickednes: I repent of the plage, that I deuised to bring vpon them. • Agayne, when I take in hande, to builde, or to plant a people or a kingdome: yf the same people do euill before me, and heare not my voyce: I repent of the good, that I deuised to doo for them: Speake nowe therefore vnto whole Juda, and to them that dwell at Jerusalem. Thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde, I am deuising a plague for you, and am takinge a thing in hande against you. • Therefore let euery man turne from his euill waye, take vpon you the thing that is good, and do righte. But they sayde: Nomore of this, • we will folowe oure owne imaginations, and do euery man according to the wilfulnes of his owne mind. Therfore thus saith the Lorde: Ake among the Heathen, if any man hath heard such horrible thinges, as ✠ daughter of Sion hath done, Shal not the snowe (that melteth vpon the stonie rockes of Libanus) moiste the fieldes? Or may the springes of waters be so drauen awaye, that they run nomore, geue moistnes, nor make fruitful? But my people hath so forgotten me, that they haue made sacrifice vnto vayne Goddes. And their prophetes make theym fall in their wayes from the auncient pathes, and to go into a foote way not vsed to be troden of iust men. Wherethroughe they haue brought their land into an euerlastinge wildernes and scorne. • So that whosoeuer traueleth therby, shalbe abashed, and wagge their heades. With an East wind will I scater theim before their enemy. And when their destruction commeth, I will turne my backe vppon theym, but not my face. Then sayde they, • come, let vs imagine something against this Jeremy. For the priestes shall not be destitute of the law, neyther shall the wise menne bee destitute of councel, nor the prophets destitute of the woorde of God: Come, and let vs smite him with the tonge, and let vs marke all his woordes. Consider me, O Lord, and heare the voyce of mine ennemyes, • shall they recompence euill for good? for they haue digged a pit for my soule. • Remember, howe that I stoode before thee, to speake good for theim, and to turne awaye thy wrath from theym. • Therfore let their childrē dy of hunger, and let theim be oppressed with the sword. Let the noyse be heard oute of their houses, when the murtherer commeth sodenly vpon them. • For they haue digged a pitte to take me, and layed snares for my fete: Yet Lorde, thou knowest all their councel, that they haue deuysed to slaye me. these with their citizens are vnto me

Beholde, here am I (sayeth the Lorde) against those prophetes, that dar prophecy lying dreames, & disceaue my people with their vanities and miracles, whō I neuer sent nor cōmaunded theim. They shal do this people great harme, saith the Lord. ¶ This people, eyther any prophet or priest aske thee & say: what is the burthen of the Lorde? Thou shalt say vnto them, what burthen? Therfore will I cast you fro me, sayth the Lorde, because ye your selues are (a burthen.) And the prophet, priest, or people that vseth this tearme (the burthen of the Lord) him will I visite, and his house also. But thus shal ye say, euery one to another, and euery man to his brother. What answer hath the Lord geuen? or what is the Lordes commaundemente? And as for the burthen of the Lorde, ye shall speake nomore of it: for euerye mans owne worde is his burthen, because ye haue altered the wordes of the liuing God the Lorde of hoostes, our God. Thus shall euery man saye to the prophetes: what answer hath the Lorde geuen thee? Or, what sayeth the Lorde? And not once to name the burthen of the Lorde. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde. For so muche as ye haue vsed this tearme (the burthen of the Lord) where as I notwithstanding sente vnto you, and forbad you to speake of the Lordes burthen. Beholde therefore, I will repute you as a burthen, and will caste you oute of my presence: yea, and the Citie also, that I gaue you, and your fathers: and will bring you to an euerlasting confusion, and into suche a shame, as shall neuer be forgotten.

THe Lorde shewed me a vision: Beholde, ther stood two maundes of figges before the temple of the LORDE, after that Nabuchodonosor king of Babilon had led awaye captiue Iechonias the son of Iehoakim king of Juda, the mighty men also of Juda, with the workmasters, and cunning men of Jerusalem, vnto Babilō. In the one maunde wer very good figges, euen like as those that be first ripe. In the other maund wer very naughty figs, which might not be eaten, they were so euil. Then said the Lord vnto me: what seest thou Jeremye? I sayde, figges, wherof some be verye good, and some so euil, that no man maye eate theim. Then came the word of the Lord vnto me, after this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde the God of Israell: like as thou knowest the good figges, so shal I knowe the menne led away, whom I haue sente out of this place into the land of the Caldees, for their profite: and I will set mine eyes vppon them for the best, for I will bringe them agayne into this lande: I will build them vp, and not breake theym downe: I will plante theim, and not roote theym oute. And I will geue them an heart to knowe howe that I am the Lord. They shalbe my people, and I wilbe their God, for they shall retourne vnto me with their whole heart. And like as thou knowest the naughtye figges, whiche maye not be eaten, they are so euill: Euen so wil I (sayth the Lorde) let Zedekias the king of Juda) yea and al his princes, and the residue of Jerusalem that remayne ouer in this lande, and them also that dwel in Egipt) to be vexed and plagued in all kingedomes and landes. And will make them to be a reproue, a commō byword, a laughing stocke and shame, in all the places where I shal scater them. I wil send the sweard, hunger and pestilence among them, vntil I haue cleane consumed them out of the lande, that I gaue vnto them and their fathers.

with them also. Therefore saye thou vnto them: This is the commaundement of the Lord of hoostes the God of Israell: Drinke and be dronken, spewe and fall, that ye neuer ryse, and that thorowe the swearde, whiche I will sende among you. But yf they will not receaue the cup of thy hande, and drinke it, then tell them. Thus doeth the Lorde of hoostes threaten you: drinke it ye shall, and that shortlye. For lo, • I beginne to plague the citie, that my name is geuen vnto: thinke ye then that I will leaue you vnpunished? Ye shall not go quite, for whye? I call for a swearde vpon all the inhabitoures of the earth, sayeth the Lorde of Hoostes. Therfore tell them all these wordes, and saye vnto them. • The Lorde shall crye from aboue, and let his voyce be heard from his holye habitation. With a greate noyse shall he crye from his court regall. He shall geue a greate voyce (lyke the grape gatherers) and the sounde thereof shalbe heard vnto the ende of the worlde. For the Lorde hath a iudgemente to geue vppon all people, and will holde his courte of iustice with all flesh, and punishe the vngodly, sayeth the Lorde. For thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: • Behold, a miserable plague shall goe from one people to another, and a greate stormy water shall aryse from all the endes of the earthe. And the same daye shall the Lorde him selfe slaye them, from one ende of the earthe to another.

There shall no mone be made for any of them, none gathered vp, none buried: but shall lye as donge vpon the ground, Mourne (O ye shepherdes) and crye, sprinkle your selues with ashes, O ye Rams of the flocke: for the time of your slaughter is fulfilled, that ye shall slaye one another, and ye shalbe scattered, and ye shal fall like vessels conningly made for pleasure. • The shepherdes shall haue no waye to flee, and the rammes of the flocke shall not escape. Then shall the shepherdes cry horrible, and the rammes of the flocke shall mourne: for the Lorde hath consumed their pasture. And their best fieldes lye dead, because of the horrible wrathe of the Lorde. They haue forsaken their folde like as a Lyon: For their lande is waste because of his furious crueltie, for his fearefull indignation.

IN the beginning of the reigne of Iehoakim the sonne of Iosiah kinge of Juda, came this worde from the Lorde, saying: Thus sayth the Lorde: • Stand in the court of the Lordes house and speake vnto all them which (out of the Cities of Juda) come to do worship in the Lordes house, all the wordes that I commaund thee to say. • Loke that thou keepe not one woorde backe, yf (peraduenture) they will herken, and tourne euerye man from his wicked way: • that I may also repent of the plague, which I haue determined to bringe vppon theym, because of their wicked inuentions. And after this maner shalte thou speake vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde, yf ye will not obey me, to walke in my lawes whiche I haue geuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruaunts the prophetes, whom I sent vnto you, rising vp timely, and still sending. Yf ye will not folowe theym (I saye) then will I do to this house, • as I dyd vnto Siloh, and will make this citie to be abhorred of all the people of the earth. And the Priestes, the Prophetes, and all the people heard Jeremie preache these wordes in the house of the Lorde. Nowe when he had spoken out all the wordes, that the Lord coummaunded him to preache vnto the people, then the priestes, the prophetes, & al the people toke hold vpon him, & said, thou shalt die. How dareste thou be so bolde, as to say in ẏ name of the Lorde, it shal happen to this house as it did vnto Siloh: & this citie shall be so wast, ẏ no man shal dwel therin. BUt in the fourthe yeare of the reigne of Zedekiah, kinge of Juda, in the fifth Moneth, it hapned that Hananiah, the ſoonne of Aſur the prophete of Gibeon ſpake to me in the houſe of the Lorde, in the preſence of the Prieſtes, and of al the people, and ſaid: Thus ſaith the Lord of hoſtes, the God of Iſraell: I haue broken the yoke of the king of Babilon: and after two yeare will I Jer.17.a

The Prophetes that were before vs in time past, which prophecied of war or trouble, or pestilēce, either of peace, vpon many nations and great kingdomes, were proued by this (yf God

And Hananiah the prophet tooke the chaine from the prophete Jeremies necke, and brake it, and with that sayd Hananiah, that all the people might heare: Thus hath the Lord spoken: Euen so will I breake the yoke of Nabuchodonosor king of Babilon, from the necke of all nations: yea, and that within this two yere. And so the Prophete Jeremye went his waye. Nowe after that Hanania the prophet had taken the chayne from the prophet Jeremies necke, and broken it: The word of the Lord came vnto the Prophet Jeremi, saying: Go, and tel Hananiah these wordes: Thus saith the Lord: Thou hast broken the chain of wood: but in stede of wood thou shalt make chaynes of yron. For thus saith D the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell: I will put a yoke of yron vpon the necke of all this people, that they may serue Nabuchodonosor the king of Babilon: yea, and so shall they doo. And I will geue him the beastes in the fielde. Then sayde the Prophete Jeremy vnto the prophet Hananiah: Jer.29.c. heare me Hananiah: The Lord hath not sent thee, but thou bringest this people into a false belefe. And therefore thus sayeth the Lord: beholde: I will send thee out of that lande, and within a yere thou shalt dye, because thou haste falsely spoken against the Lord. So Hananiah the Prophet died the same yere in the seuenth moth.

Zach.1.a • Conuert thou me, and I shalbe conuerted, for thou art my Lorde God: Yea, assone as thou turnest me, I shall repourme my selfe, and when I vnderstande, I shall smyte vppon my thigh. For verely I haue committed shamefull thinges. For I haue borne the reproofe & confusion of my youth.

Gen.43b thus by my selfe: • Is not Ephraim my deare sonne? Is he not the childe, with whom I haue had all my mirth and pastime? For sence the time that I firste communed with him, I haue him euer in remembraunce: there-foze my herte driueth me vnto him, gladye and louingly I will haue mercy vpon him, saith the Lozd. Set thee watchmen, prouide teachers foz thee, set thine heart vpon the right waye, that thou shouldest walke, and turne agayne, O thou daughter of Israell, turne agayne to the cities of thyne. Howe longe wilte thou go astraye, O thou shrinkinge daughter? Foz the Lozde will wozke a newe thinge vpon earth. A woman shall compasse a man. Foz thus sayth the Lozde of Hoostes the God of Israell: It will come therto, that when I haue brought Iuda out of captiuitie, these woozdes shall be heard in the lande, and in his cities. The Lozd Esa.42.a whiche is the fayre • bridegrome of righteousnes, make thee fruitefull, O thou holye hill. And there shall dwell Iuda, and all her cities, the shepeheardes and husbandmen. Foz Mat.5.a I • shall feede the hungrie soule, and and.11.c refreshe all faynte heartes. When I heard this, I came agayne to my selfe, I mused, lyke as I hadde bene waked out of a swete sleepe: Beholde, sayth the Lozd, the daies come that I will sowe the house of Israell, and the house of Iuda, with men and Deu.28.g with cattell. • Yea, it shall come ther- Zach.8.c to, that lyke as I haue gone about in times past to roote them out, to scater them, to breake them downe, to destroy them, and chasten them: Euen so will I also go diligentlye about to build them vp agayne, and to plant them, sayth the Lozde. • Then shall it Eze.18.a no more be saide: the fathers haue eaten a sowre grape, and the childrens teeth are set on edge: foz euery one shall dye foz his owne misdeede, soo that who so eateth a sower grape, his Hebr.8.b teeth shall be set on edge. • Beholde, the dats come, saith the Lozde, that I will make a newe couenaunte with the house of Israell, and with the house of Iuda: not after the couenaũt that I made with their fathers, whẽ I tooke them by the hande and ledde theym oute of the lande of Egipte: whiche couenaunte they brake: yea, euen when I as an husband had rule ouer them sayth the Lozde: • But this Heb.13 shall be the couenaunte that I will make with the house of Israell after those dayes sayth the Lozde, • I will Esa.51 plante my lawe in the inward partes of them, and write it in their hertes, • and will be theyr God, and they Ier.24 shall be my people. And from thence F foozth, shall no man teache his neighboure oz his brother, and saye: knowe the Lozde. But they shall all knowe mee from the lowest vnto the hyest, sayth the Lozde. Foz I will forgeue their misdeedes, and will neuer remember their sinnes any moze. Thus sayeth the Lozde, whiche gaue • the Gen.1 sunne to be a lighte foz the daye, and the moone and starres to shine in the night: which moueth the sea, so that the floudes thereof waxe fearce: his name is the Lozde of hoostes. Like as this ordinaunce shall neuer be taken out of my sight, saieth the Lozde: So shall the seede of Israell neuer ceasse, but alwaye be a people before mee. Moreouer thus sayth the Lozde: like G as the heauen aboue can not be measured, and as the foundations of the earth beneath may not be sought out: • Soo will I also not caste oute the Ba.11 whole seede of Israell, foz that they haue committed, sayth the Lozde. Beholde, the daies come, saith the Lozde, that the citie of the Lozd shalbe enlarged from the • tower of Hananeell, Ze.14 vnto the gate of the corner wall. From thence shall the ryght measure be taken beefore her, vnto the hill toppe of • Gareb, and shall come a- Ier.31 boute Gaath, and the whole valley of the deade carkasses, and of the ashes, and all the fyeldes vnto the brooke of Cedron: and vnto the corner of the horsegate towarde the easte, where as the sanctuarie of the Lozde also shalbe set. And when it is nowe buylded, and set vp of this fashion, it shall neuer be broken noz cast downe any moze.

¶ The .xxxj. Chapter

THese wordes spake the Lorde vnto Jeremy, in the tenth yere of Zedechiah kinge of Juda: which was the .xviij. yere of Nabuchodonosor, what time as the kinge of Babilons hoste layde siege vnto Jerusalem: But Jeremy the prophet lay bounde in the courte of the prison, which was in the kinge of Judaes house: where Zedekiah the kinge of Juda caused him to be layde, because he hadde prophecied of this maner: Thus sayth the Lorde: • Beholde, I Jer.34.a will deliuer this Citie into the hands of the kinge of Babilon, which shall take it. As for Zedekiah the king of Juda, he shal not be able to escape the Caldes, but surely he shall come into the handes of the king of Babilon, which shall speake with him mouth to mouth: and one of them shall looke another in the face. And Zedechiah shalbe caryed vnto Babilon, and ther shall he be, vntill the time that I visite him, sayth the Lorde. But if thou takest in hande to fight agaynste the B Caldees, thou shalt not prosper. And Jeremy said: thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me: Beholde, Hananeell the sonne of Sellum thyne vncles sonne shall come vnto thee, and require thee to redeeme the land that lieth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe: • for by reason of Le.25.d kinred it is thy right to redeme it, and Ru.4.a to bye it out. And Hananeel mine vncles sonne came to me in the courte of the prison, according to the woorde of the Lord, and sayd vnto me: Bye my land, I praye thee, that lyeth in Anathoth in the countrie of Beniamin: for by heritage thou hast right to lose it out for thy selfe, therefore redeeme it. Then I perceiued that this was the commaundement of the Lorde, and so I bought the land from Hananeel of Anathoth, mine vncles sonne, and weyed him there the money: euen seuen sicles and ten siluer pence. C I caused him also to make me a writinge and to seale it: and called record thereby, and weyed him there the money vppon the weightes. So I tooke the euidence with the copy when it was orderly sealed & redde ouer, and I gaue the euidence vnto Baruch the son of Neriah, the sonne of Maasiah in the sight of Hananeel my cosin, and in the presence of the witnesses, that be named in the euidence: and before all the Jewes that wer therby in the court of the prison. I charged Baruch also before them, sayinge: The Lorde of hostes the god of Israel cōmaundeth thee, to take this sealed euidence with the coppe, and to laye it in an earthen vessel, that it may long continue. For the Lord of hostes the GOD of Israell, hath determined that houses, fieldes, and vineyardes shall be possessed agayne in this lande. Nowe when I had delinered the euidence vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah, I besought the Lorde saying: O Lorde God, • it is thou that haste made heauen and earth with thy great power and hye arme, and ther is nothing hid from thee. • Thou shewest mercy vppon thousandes, thou recompencest the wickednes of the fathers, into the bosome of the children that come after theym. Thou arte the greate and mighty God, whose name is the lord of Hostes: great in counsel, and excellent in worke. Thine eyes loke vppon all the wayes of mens children, • to reward euery one after his waye: and according to the fruites of his inuentions. • Thou haste done great tokens and wonders in the lande of Egipt, as we see this daye, vppon the people of Israell, and vppon those men to make thy name great, as it is come to passe this day. Thou hast brought thy people of Israel out of the lande of Egipte with tokens, with wonders, with a mightye hande, with a stretched out arme, & with gret terriblenes: and hast geuen them this land like as thou haddest promised vnto their fathers. Namelye, that thou wouldest geue them a lande that floweth with milke and hony. • Nowe Jud.2.3 when they came therin, and possessed 4.6.8. it, they followed not thy voyce, and walked not in thy lawe, • but all Deut.5.b that thou commaundest them to doo, that haue they not done, and therfore come al these plages vpon them. Behold, there are bulwerkes made nowe againste the Citie, to take it, and it shalbe won of the Caldees that besiege it, with swerd, with hunger and death, and looke what thou halte spoken that same shall come vpon them. For loe, all these thinges are present vnto thee: Yet (sayest thou vnto me O Lord God) and commaundest me that I shall loose a peece of lande vnto my selfe, and take witnesses ther to: and yet in the meane season the citie is deliuered into the power of the Caldees. Then came the woorde of the Lorde vnto me saying: Behold I am the Lord God of all flesh, is there any thing then to hard for me? Ther-Jer.25.b fore thus sayth the Lorde: ¶ Beholde, I shall deliuer this Citie into the power of the Caldees, and into the power of Nabuchodonosor the king of Babilon, they shall take it. For the Caldees shall come, and winne this citie, and set fire vpon it, and burne it: with the gorgious houses in whose parlers they haue made sacrifice vnto Baal, and powred drinkeofferinges vnto straunge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath. For seeing the children of Israell, and the children of Juda haue wrought wickednes before me euer from their youthe vp, what haue they els done, but prouoked me with the workes of their owne handes? sayth the Lorde. Or what hath this Citie bene elles but a prouokinge of my wrath, euer since the day that they builded it, vnto this houre, wherein I caste it out of my sighte, because of the great blasphemies of the children of Israel and Juda, which they haue to prouoke me? yea, they, their kinges, their princes, their priestes, their prophetes, the men of Juda, and the Ci-

They haue builded hye places for Baal in the valley of the children of Hennom, to bow their sonnes and daughters vnto Moloch, whiche I neuer cōmaunded theim, neither came it euer in my thoughte, to make Juda sinne with such abhomination. And nowe therefore, thus hath the Lorde God of Israell spoken concerninge this Citie, which (as ye your selues cōfesse) shalbe deliuered into the hand of the kinge of Babilon, when it is wonne with the swearde, with hunger and with pestilence. ¶ Beholde, I Jer.32 will gather them together from all landes, wherein I haue scatred them in my wrath, in my feareful and great displesure: and will bring them again vnto this place, where they shal dwel safely. And they shalbe my people, and Psa.119 I will be their God. ¶ And I will G geue them one hearte and one waye, that they may feare me all the dayes of their life, that they and their chil-Ezr.36 dren after them may prosper. ¶ And I will set vp an euerlasting couenaunt with them. Namely, that I will neuer cease to do them good, and that I will put my feare in their heartes, so that they shall not runne awaye from me. ¶ Yea, I wil haue a lust and plea- Jer.32 sure to do them good, and faythfully Jer.32 to plante them in this lande with my whole heart, and with all my soule. For thus sayeth the Lorde: like as I haue brought al this gret plague vpon this people, euen so will I also bring vpon them all the good, that I haue promised them. And men shall haue their possessions in this lande. wherof ye say nowe, that it shall neither be inhabited of people, nor of cattell: but be deliuered into the handes of the Chaldees. Yea, the lande shalbe bought for mony, and euidences made therevpon, and sealed before witnesses in the countrey of Ben Jamin, & rounde about Jerusalem, in the cities of Juda, in the Cities that are vppon the mountaines, and in them that lye beneth: yea, and in the cities that are in the South. For I wil bring their prisoners hither againe saith the lord.

A MOze ouer, the wozde of the Lozd came vnto Jeremy on this maner, • when he was Jer.20.a yet bound in the court of the pryson. Thus sayth the Lozde, whiche fulfilleth the thinge that he speaketh: the Lozd whiche perfourmeth the thing that he taketh in hand, euen he whose name is the Lozd: • crye vnto me, and Exo.14.d I will answere, and shewe thee great Jer.7.d and hye thinges, which were vnknowen vnto thee. Thus (I saye) spake the Lozde God of Israell, concerning the houses of this citie, and the houses of the kinges of Juda, that they are broken thorowe the ordinaunce and the sweard. Because the inhabitours of this citie haue com to fight against the Caldees: and they are filled with the dead carkasses of men, whom I haue slayne in my wrath and displeasure: when I tourned my face from this citie, because of all her wickednes. Beholde, saith the Lozde, I will repaire and heale their woundes, and make them whole: I will open them the large treasures of peace & trueth. And I will returne the captiuitie of Juda and Israell, and will set them Jer.44.d vp agayne, as they wer afore. • From all misdedes, wherin they haue offended agaynst me, I will clense them. And all their blasphemies whiche they haue done against me, when they regarded me not, I will forgeue them. B And this shall get me a name, a prayse and honoure amonge all the people of the earth, whiche shall heare all the good, that I will shewe vnto them: yea, they shalbe afrayde, and astonyed at all the good deedes and benefites that I will do for them. Moreouer, Jer.7.d thus sayth the Lozde: • In this place whereof ye say, that it shalbe a wildernesse: wherin neyther people nor cattell shall dwell: in like maner in the cities of Juda, and without Jerusalem (whiche also shalbe so voyde, that neyther people nor catteli shall dwell there) shall the voyce of gladnes be heard agayne, the voyce of the bridegrome and of the bryde, the voyce of them that shall singe: • Prayse the Psa.118 Lozde of hoostes, for he is louing, and his mercye endureth for euer, and the voyce of them that shall offer vp giftes in the house of the Lozde. For I wyll restore the captiuitie of thys land, as it was afore, sayth the Lozde. Thus saith the Lozde of hoostes: It shal come yet thereto, that in this land which is voyde from men and cattell, and in all the cities of the lande, there shalbe set vp shepheardes cotages, in the cities vpon the mountaynes, and in the cities that lie vpon the playne, and in the cities of the Southe. In C the lande of Beniamin, in the fieldes of Jerusalem, and in the cities of Juda, shall the sheepe be numbred againe, vnder the hand of him that telleth theim, sayeth the Lozde. • Be- Jer.23.a holde, the time commeth, sayeth the Lozde: that I will perfourme that good thing, whiche I haue promised vnto the house of Israell, and to the house of Juda. In those dayes, and at the same time, I will bringe forthe vnto Dauid, the braunche of righteousnesse, and he shall doo equitie and righteousnesse in the lande. In those dayes shall Juda be holped, • and Je- Esa.32.c rusalem shall dwell safe, and he that shall call her, is euen God our righteousnesse. For thus the Lozde promyseth: • Dauid shall neuer wante 2.Re.2.c one to sit vpon the throne of the house of Israell, • neither shall the priestes 1.Re.2.g and Leuites want one to offer alway before me burntofferinges, to kyndle the meateofferinges, and to prepare the sacrifyce. And the wozde of the D Lozde came vnto Jeremie after thys maner. Thus sayth the Lozde: Maye the couenaunt • whiche I haue made Gen.8.d with daye and night be broken, that there should not be daye and night in due season: Then may my couenaunt also be broken, whiche I made with Dauid my seruaunt, and so he not to haue a sonne to reigne in his throne, • so shall also the priestes and Leuites 1.pet.2.a neuer saye, but serue me. • For lyke • Ge.15.a as the starres of heauen maye not be numbred, neyther the sande of the sea measured: so will I multiply the seede of Dauid my seruaunt, and the Leuites my ministers. Moreouer, ℣ word of the Lorde came to Jeremy, saying: Considerest thou not what this people speaketh? Two kynredes (saye they) had the Lorde chosen, and those same two hath he caste awaye. For so they haue despised my people, and thei reputed them as though they were no people. Therfore thus saith the Lord: If I haue made no couenaunt with daye and nighte, and geuen no statute vnto heauen and earth: then will I also cast awaye the seede of Jacob and Dauid my seruaunte, so that I will take no prince out of his seede to rule the posteritie of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. But yet I will turne agayne their captiuitie, and be mercifull vnto them.

A Jer.39.a

THese are the wordes which the Lorde spake vnto Jeremye, • what time as Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon, and all his hostes (out of all the kingdomes that were vnder his power) and all his people foughte agaynst Jerusalem, and all the cities therof. Thus sayth the Lord God of Israell: Go, speake to Zedekiah the king of Juda, and tel him: The Lorde sendeth thee this 4.Re.24 worde. Behold, • I will deliuer this Jer.32.a citie into the hands of the king of Babilon, he shal burne it, ℣ thou shalt not escape his hands, but shalt be led awai prisoner, ℣ deliuered into his power. Thou shalt loke the king of Babilon in the face, and he shal speke with thee mouth to mouth, and then shalte thou go to Babilon. Yet heare the worde of the Lord, O Zedekiah thou kinge of Juda: Thus saith the Lord vnto thee. Thou shalte not be slayne with the 1.re.31.e swearde, but shalt dye in peace. • Lyke as thy forefathers the kinges, thy progenitours were brent, so shalt thou be brent also, and in thy mourning they shall say: Oh Lord. For thus haue I determined, sayeth the Lorde. Then spake Jeremie the prophete all these wordes vnto Zedekiah kinge of Juda in Jerusalem, what time as the king of Babilons hoost besieged Jerusalem, and the remnaunt of the Cities. Namely, Lachis and Azecah, whiche yet remayned of the • stronge 2.pa.11 defenced cities of Juda. These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy the prophet, when Zedekiah was agreed with all his people at Jerusalem, that there should be proclaymed • a liberty: so that euery man shold Exo.21 let his seruaunte and handmayde goe deu.15 free: Hebrue and Hebruesse, and no Jewe to holde his brother as a bondman. Nowe as they had consented, all the princes and all the people whiche had gathered vnto this agrement, that euery man shoulde set at libertie his bondseruant and bondwomen, and no longer to holde them bounde: euen so they were obedient and let theym goe free. But afterwarde they repented and tooke agayne the seruauntes and handmaydens, whom they hadde let go free, and so made them bond again. For the which cause the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremye from the Lorde him selfe, saying: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: • I made a deu.15 couenant with your fathers, when I Exo.21 brought theym out of Egipte, (that they should no more be bondmen) saying: When seuen yeres are out, euerye man shall let his bought seruaunt and Hebrue go free, yf he haue serued him syxe yeres. But your fathers obeyed me not, and herkened not vnto me. Ye for you, ye were nowe turned and did right before me, in that ye proclaymed, euery man to let his neighboure goo free, and in that ye made a couenant before me in the temple that bereth my name. But yet ye haue turned your selues agayne, and blasphemed my name. In this that euerye man hath required his seruaunte and handemayden agayne, whom ye had lette go quite and free, and compelled theym to serue you agayne, and to be your bondemen, and bondewomen. And therefore thus sayeth the Lorde:

ye

ye haue not obeyed me, euerye manne to proclaime freedome vnto his brother and neighbour: wherfore, I will call you vnto a freedome, sayeth the Lorde: euen vnto the swearde, to the pestilence, and to hunger, and will make you to be plaged in al the kingdomes of the earth. Yea, those mē that haue broken my couenaunt, and not kepte the wordes of the appointment Ge.15.b which they made before mee: when they hewed the calfe in two, and whē there went through the twoe halues therof: The princes of Juda, the princes of Jerusalem, the gelded men, the priestes and al the people of the land, which went through the two sydes of the calfe. Those menne wil I geue into the power of their enemyes, and into the handes of them that soloswe vppon their liues. • And their deade Ge.73.a Jer.7.d bodyes shalbe meate for the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the fielde. As for Zedekiah the kinge of Juda, and his princes, I will deliuer them into the power of their ennemyes, and of them that desyre to slaye them, and into the hand of the king of Babilons Jer.37.c host, which nowe is departed from you: But throughe my commaundement (sayth the Lord) they shal come agayne before this Citie, they shall fight against it, winne it, and burne it. Moreouer, I will laye the Cities of Juda so waste, that no manne shall dwel therin.

The .xxxv. Chapter.

THe wordes which the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy, in the reygne of Jehoakim the soonne of Josiah king of Juda are these: Goe Le.10 vnto the house of the • Rechabits and call them out, and bringe them to the house of the Lorde into some commodious place, and geue theym wyne to drynke. Then tooke I Jazaniah the sonne of Jeremye the sonne of Habazinia, and his brethren, and all his sonnes, and the whole houshold of the Rechabites, and brought theym into the house of the Lord into the closette of the children of Hanan the sonne of Jededaliah the man of God, whiche was by the closet of the princes, that is aboue the closette of Maasiah the sonne of Sellum, whiche is the treasurer. And before the sons of the kinred of the Rechabites, I sette pottes full of wine, and cuppes, and said vnto theym: Drinke wyne. But they sayde: wee will drinke no wine, for Jonadab the soonne of Rechab oure father commaūded vs, saying: ye and your sonnes shal neuer drinke wyne, • build no houses, sowe no sede, plant Jer.29.b no vynes: yea, ye shall haue no vyneyardes: but for all your time, ye shall dwel in tentes, that ye may liue longe in the lande wherein ye be strangers. Thus haue we obeied the commaundement of Jonadab the sonne of Rechab oure father, in all that hee hath charged vs, and so we drinke no wine all our life longe: we, nor our wiues our sonnes, and our daughters. Neither builde wee anye house to dwell therein, we haue also among vs, neyther vyneyardes, nor corne lande to sow: but we dwell in tentes, we obey and do according vnto all that Jonadab our father commaunded vs. But C nowe that Nabuchodonosor the king of Babilon came vp into the lande, we said: come, let vs go to Jerusalem that we maye escape the hoaste of the Chaldees and the Assirians: and so we dwel nowe at Jerusalem. Then came the worde of the Lord vnto Jeremy, sayinge: Thus saith the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Go and tell the men of Juda and the inhabitours of Jerusalem. Will ye not be reformed, to obey my wordes, sayeth the Lorde? The woordes which Jonadab the sonne of Rechab commaūded his sonnes that they should drink no wine, are fast and surely kepte: for vnto this day they drinke no wine, but obeye their fathers commaundement. But as for me, • I haue stande Jer.18.a vp early, I haue spokē vnto you, and geuen you earnest warninge: and yet haue ye not ben obedient vnto me. Yea I haue sente my seruauntes, all the Prophetes vnto you, I rose vp early, and sent you word, saying: O tourne you, now euery man from his wicked waye, amende your lyues, and go not after straunge gods to worship them: that ye may continue in the land, whiche I haue geuen vnto you, and your fathers, but ye would neyther heare me, nor folowe me. The children of Ionadab Rechabs son haue stedfastly kept their fathers commaundement. that he gaue them, but this people is not obediente vnto me. And therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes, the God of Israell: Behold, I wil bring vpon Iuda, and vpon euery one that dwelleth in Ierusalem, all the trouble that I haue deuised against them.

Pro.1.c. Esa.65b Jer.7.b. * For I haue spoken vnto them, but they would not folowe: I haue called vnto them, neuertheless they would geue me no aunswere. Jeremye also spake vnto the housholde of the Rechabites: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell. For so much as ye haue obeyed the commaundement of Ionadab your father, and kept al his preceptes, and done accordyng vnto al that he hath bidden you: Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of Jer.33.c hoostes, the God of Israell: * Ionadab the sonne of Rechab shall not fayle, but haue one out of his stock, to stand alway before me.

¶ The .xxxvi. Chapter.

A IN the fourth yeare of Iehoakim the sonne of Iosiah, the kinge of Iuda, came the woord of the Lorde vnto Jeremye, saying: * Take a boke

Jer.30.a and write therein all the wordes that I haue spoken to thee against Israel, against Iuda, & against all the people from ỹ time that I began for to speke vnto thee (in the reigne of Iosiah) vnto this day. That when the house of Iuda heareth of the plague, which I haue deuised for theym, they maye peraduenture * turne euery man from

Jer.18a his wicked way: that I may forgeue their offences and sinnes. Then did Jeremie cal Baruch the son of Ne-

Jer.45a riah, * and Baruch wrote in the boke at the mouth of Jeremie, all the wordes of the Lorde, which he had spoken vnto him. And Jeremie commaunded Baruch, saying: I am in prison, so that I may not come into the house of the Lorde: therefore go thou thither, B and rede the boke that thou hast written at my mouth: Namely, the woordes of the Lorde: and reade them in the Lordes house vpon the fastinge daye, that the people, whole Iuda, and all they that come out of the Cities may heare. Peraduenture, they will praye meekely before the face of the Lorde, and turne euery one from his wicked way. For great is the wrath and displeasure, that the Lorde hath taken against this people. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah did accordyng vnto all that Jeremie the Prophete commaunded him, reading the woordes of the Lorde out of the booke in the Lordes house. And this was done in the fifte yeare of Iehoakim, the sonne of Iosiah king of Iuda, in the .ix. Mo- Jer.25.d neth, * when it was commaunded, that al the people of Ierusalem shuld faste before the Lorde, and they also that were come from the cities of Iuda vnto Ierusalem. Then read Baruch the woordes of Jeremie oute of the boke within the house of the Lord out of the treasurie of Gamariah, the sonne of Saphan the scribe, which is Iosa.38 beside the hyer loft of the * newe doze C of the Lordes house, that al the people might heare. Nowe when Micheah the sonne of Gamariah, the sonne of Saphan had heard all the wordes of the Lorde oute of the booke, he went downe to the kinges palace into the Scribes chaumbers, for there all the Princes were set. Elisama the scribe Daiaiah, the sonne of Semei, Elnathan the sonne of Achbor, Gamariah the sonne of Saphan, Zedechiah, the sonne of Hananiah, with all the princes. And Micheah tolde them all the D woordes, that he heard Baruch reade out of the boke before the people. Thē all the Princes sent Iehudi, the son of Nathaniah, the sonne of Selamiah, the sonne of Thusi vnto Baruch, saying: Take in thine hande the booke, whereout thou hast red before all

all the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah toke the boke in his hand, and came vnto theim. And they sayd vnto him: Sit downe, and reade the boke, that we may heare also. So Baruch read that they might heare. Nowe when they had hearde all the wordes, they were abashed one vpon another, and said vnto Baruch: we will certifie the king of all these wordes. And they examined Baruch, saying: Tell vs, howe diddest thou write all these woordes oute of his mouthe. Then Baruch aunswered them: He spake all these wordes vnto me with his mouthe, and I wrote them in the boke. Then said the princes vnto Baruch: Go thy way, & hide thee with Jeremy, so that no manne know where ye be, and they went in to the kinge to the courte: But they kept the boke in the chamber of Elisama the Scribe, and told the king all the wordes, that he might heare. So the kinge sent Jehudi to fet him the booke whiche he brought out of Elisama the scribes chaumber: And Jehudi read in it that the king and al the princes which wer about him might heare. Now, the king sat in the winter house, for it was in the .ix. moneth and ther was a fire before him. And whē Jehudi had red thre or foure leaues therof, he cut the boke in peces w a penknife, and * caste it into the fire vpon the harth, vntill the booke was all brent in the fire vppon the harthe. Yet no man was abashed thereof, or rent his cloathes: neyther the kinge him selfe, nor his seruauntes, though they heard all these wordes. Neuertheless Elnathan, Delaiah, and Gamariah besought the kinge, that he would not burne the boke, notwithstanding the king woulde not heare them, but cōmaunded Jerahmeel, the sonne of Amelech: Saraiah the sonne of Eziel, and Selamiah the sonne of Abdiel, to laye handes vpon Baruch the scribe, and vpon Jeremie the prophete: but the Lord kept them out of sight. After nowe that the king had brent the boke, and the sermons whiche Baruch wrote at the mouthe of Jeremie. The woorde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremy, saying: Take an other boke, and write in it al the foresayde sermons, that were written in the first booke, which Iehoakim the king of Juda hath brent. And tel Iehoakim the king of Juda: thus sayth the Lorde: thou hast brent the booke, and thoughtest within thy selfe: why hast thou writtē therin, that the king of Babilon shall come, and make this lande waste: so that he shal make both people and cattel to be out of it? Therfore thus the Lorde sayth of Iehoakim the king of Juda. * There shall none of his generation sitte vpon the throne of Dauid. His dead coarse shall be caste out, that the heate of the day, and the frost of the night maye come vppon him. And I will visite the wickednes of him, of his seede, and of his seruauntes. Moreouer, all the euill that I haue promised theim, (though they heard me not) will I bring vpon them, vpō the inhabiters of Jerusalem, and vppon all Juda. Then toke Jeremy another boke, and gaue it Baruch the Scribe, the sonne of Neriah, whiche wrote therein out of the mouthe of Jeremie, all the sermons that wer in the first boke, whiche Iehoakim the king of Juda did burne. And there were added vnto thē many mo sermons then before.

The .xxxvij. Chapter.

Zedechiah, the son of Josiah, which was made king thorough Nabuchodonosor king of Babilon, reigned in the land of Juda, in the steade of Coniah, the son of Iehoakim. But neyther he, nor his seruants, nor the people in the land, wold obey the wordes of the Lorde, whiche he spake by the prophete Jeremye. * Neuertheless, Jer.37b Zedekiah the king sent Iehucail, the sonne of Semeliah, and Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah the Priest, to the prophete Jeremy, saying: O pray thou vnto the Lorde our God for vs. Nowe Jeremy walked free amonge the people of that time, and was not Ezr.17.d putte in prison as yet. • Pharaos B hoste also was come out of Egipte: whiche when the Caldees that besieged Jerusalem perceiued, they departed from thence. Then camme the worde of the Lorde vnto the Prophet Jeremy, saying: Thus sayth the lord God of Israell, this aunswere shall Jer.46.a ye gene to the king of Juda, that sent you vnto me for counsayle: • Behold, Pharaos host which is come forth to helpe you, shall returne to Egipt into his owne lande: but the Chaldees shall come agayne, and fight agaynste this Citie, winne it, and set fyre vppon it. For thus sayth the Lord: De-ceaue not your owne myndes, thinking on this maner. Euen, the Chaldees go now their way from vs. No thei shal not go their way. For thogh ye had slayne the whole hooste of the Chaldees, that besiege you, and euery one of the slayne lay in his tente, yet should they stande vp, and set fire vppon this Citie. Now when the hoste of the Chaldees was broken vp from Jerusalem, for feare of the Egiptiās army: Jeremye went out of Jerusalem, toward the land of Ben Jamin, to get him from amonge the people.

And when he came vnder Ben Ja-mins porte, there was a porter called C Jerias, the soonne of Selamiah, the Jer.18.b sonne of • Hananiah, which fell vpon him, and toke him, saying: thy minde is to run to the Caldees. Then sayde Jeremye: It is not so, I go not to the Chaldees. Neuertheles Jerias wold not beleue him, but brought Jeremye boūd before the Princes. Wherfore ỹ princes were angry with Jeremye ⁊ smote him, and layd him in prison, in the house of Jonathas the scribe. For he was the ruler of the prison. Thus was Jeremy put into a dongeon and D prison, and so laye there a longe time.
Jer.28.c • Then Sedechiah the king sent for him and called him, and asked him qui etly in his own house, saying: Chinkest thou this business (that is in hand) commeth of the Lorde? Jeremy aunswered: Yea that it doth: and thou (sayd he) shalt be deliuered into the king of Babilons power. Moze-ouer, Jeremy sayde vnto king Sede-kiah. What haue I offended agaynst thee, agaynst thy seruantes, or against this people, that ye haue put me in pri son? Where are your prophetes which haue prophecied vnto you, and sayde: that the king of Babilon should not come against you and this lande? And therefore heare nowe, O Lorde the king, let my prayer be accepted before thee, and sende me no more into the house of Jonethas the scribe, that I dye not there. Then Sedekiah the king commaunded to put Jeremy in the fore entry of the prison, and dayly to be geuen him a cake of bread out of the bakers strete, vntil all the bread in the Citie was eaten vp. Thus Jeremye remained in the fore entrie of the prison.

¶ The .xxxviij. Chapter.

Saphatiah, the sonne of Mathan, Godoliah, the sonne of Phashur Jucall, the sonne of Semelieh and Phashur, the sonne of Melchiah perceyued the wordes, that Jeremy had spoken vnto all the people, namely on this maner: Thus saith the lord Jer.21.d and.27.d • who so remaineth in this Citie, shall perishe, eyther with the sweard, with hunger, or with the pestilence.
But who so falleth vnto the Chaldees, shall escape winning his soule Jer.22.a for a praye, and shall liue. • For thus sayth the Lord: This citie (no doubt) muste be deliuered into the power of the kinge of Babilon, and hee also shall winne it. Then saide the princes vnto the kinge: Sir, we beseeche you, lette this man be put to deathe.
For thus he discourageth the handes of the Souldiors that be in this Ci-B tie, and the handes of all the people, when he speaketh such wordes, vnto theym. This man verily laboureth not for peace of the people, but mis-chiefe. Sedekiah the king aunswered and sayde: Lo, he is in youre handes for the king may denye you nothing.
Then tooke they Jeremye, and caste him into the dongeō of Melchiah the sonne

sonne of Hamelech, ỹ dwelt in the for entry of the prison. And they let down Jeremy with cordes into a dongeon, where there was no water, but myre. So Jeremy stacke faste in the myre. Now when Abedmelech ỹ Mozian, beyng a chamberlayne in the kinges courte, vnderstode that they had caste Jeremye into the dongeon: he went out of the kinges house, and spake to the king, (whiche then sate vnder the port of Beniamin) these wordes: my lord the king, wheras these men meddle with Jeremy the prophet, they do him wrõg: Namely, in that they haue put him in prison, there to dye of hunger, for ther is no more bread in the citie. Then the king commaunded Abedmelech the Mozian, & sayd: Take from hence .xxx. men whõ thou wilte, and draw vp Jeremy the prophet out of the dongeon before he dye. So Abedmelech toke the men with him, and went to the house of the king, & there vnder the treasurie he gate olde rags and worne cloutes, and let thẽ downe by a corde, into the dongeon to Jeremye. And Abedmelech the Mozian sayd vnto the prophet Jeremy: O put these rags & cloutes vnder thine arme holes, betwexte thee and the coardes: and Jeremy did so. So they drew vp Jeremy with cordes, & toke him out of the dongeon, and he remayned in Jer.37.e the fore entry of the prison. Then * zedekiah the king sent, and caused Jeremie the prophete to be called vnto him into the third entry that is in ỹ house of the Lorde. And the kinge saide vnto Jeremy: I will aske thee somewhat, but hide nothing fro me. Then Jeremy answered zedekiah: Yf I be plain vnto thee, thou wilt cause me, to suffer death. Yf I geue thee counceil, thou wilt not folow me. So ỹ king swore an othe secretly vnto Jeremy, saying: As truly as the Lord liueth that made vs these soules, I will not slay thee, nor geue thee into the handes of them that seke after thy life. Then said Jeremy vnto zedekiah. Thus saieth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Yf case be, that thou wilte go forth vnto the kinge of Babilons princes, thou shalt saue thy lyfe, and this citie shall not be brente: yea, both thou and thy household shal escape with your liues. But yf thou wilte not go forth to the king of Babilons princes, then shall this citie be deliuered into the handes of the Chaldees, whiche shall set fyre vpon it, and thou shalte not be able to escape them. And zedekiah saide vnto Jeremy. I am afrayd for the Jewes, that are fled vnto the Chaldees, leaste I come in their handes, and so they to haue me in derision. But Jeremy answered: No, they shal not betray thee: O herken vnto the voyce of the Lord (I beseech thee) which I speake vnto thee, so shalt thou be wel, and saue thy life. But yf thou wilt not go forth, the Lord hath tolde me this playnely: Behold, all the women that are left in the kinge of Judas house, shal be led forth to the kinge of Babilons princes. And they shal say, that thou art disceiued, and that the men in whõ thou diddest put thy trust, haue gotten thee vnder, and set thy face fast in the myre, and gone their way from thee. Therfore all thy wiues with their children shall they leade forth vnto the Chaldees, and thou shalte not escape theyr handes, but shalt be the king of Babilons prisoner, and this citie shalt thou cause to be brent. Then sayde zedekiah vnto Jeremy: loke that no body knowe of these wordes, and thou shalt not dye. But yf the princes perceyue, that I haue talked with thee, & com vnto thee, saying: O speke, what said the king to thee? hide it not from vs (we pray thee) what said the king to thee? See thou geue them this answere: I haue humbly besought the kinge, that he will let me lye nomore in Jehonathans house, that I die not there. Then came all the princes vnto Jeremy, and asked him. And he tolde them after the maner as the kinge bad him. Then they helde their peace, and let him alone, for they perceyued nothing. * So Jeremy abode still in the Jer.37.f fore entry of the prison, vntill the day that Jerusalem was won.

¶ The.xxxix.Chapter

A NOwe when the citie of Ie-Ier.42.a rusalem was taken (for in the 4.Re.25 ix.yere of Zedekiah kinge of Juda, in the tenth moneth, came Nabuchodonosor the king of Babilō, and all his hoofte, and befieged Ierusalem and fought agaynst it. And in the.xi. yere of Zedekiah in the fourthe moneth, the.ix.day of the month he brake into the citie.) Then all the Princes of the king of Babilon, came in, and sat them downe vnder the port: Neregel, Sarezer, Samgarnebo, Sarsachim, Rabsaris, Neregel, Sarezer, Rabmage, with all the other princes Ier.34.a of the king of Babilon. And when Zedekiah the king of Juda, with his souldiours sawe theym, they fled, and departed out of the citie by night thorough the kings garden, and through the porte that is betweene the two walles, and so they went towarde the wildernesse: But the Chaldees
B hoofte followed faste after theym, and tooke Zedekiah in the fielde of Jericho, and broughte him prysoner to Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilon, vnto Reblath, that lieth in the land of Hemath, where he gaue iudgemente vnto him. So the kinge of Babilon caused the children of Zedekiah, and al the nobles of Juda to be slaine, before his face at Reblath. And made Zedekias eyes to be putte out, and bound him with two chaynes, and sent him C to Babylon. And moreouer, the Chal-

As for the remnaunt of the people that were in the Citie, and suche as were come to helpe theym (whatsoeuer was left to the common sort, Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne caried them to Babilon. But Nabuzaradā the chiefe captayne let the rascall people (and those that had nothing) dwell still in the land of Juda, and gaue them vineyardes, and corne fieldes at the same time. Nabuchodonosor also the king of Babilon gaue Nabuzaradan the chyefe captayne a charge, concerning Ieremy, saying: take and cherysshe him, and make much of him, see thou doo him no harme, but intreate him after his owne desyre. So Nabuzaradan the chiefe captaine, Nabusazban, Rabsares, Nergall, Sarezer, Rabmage, and all the kinge of Ba- D

Nowe while Ieremy laye yet bound in the fore entrie of the prison, the worde of the Lorde came vnto him, saying: Goe and tell Abimelech the Mozian: Thus sayth the Lorde of hoftes the God of Israell: behold, the cruell and sharpe plage that I haue deuised for this Citie, will I bring vppon them, that thou shalte see it: but I will deliuer thee (sayth the Lorde) and thou shalte not come in the handes of those men whō thou feareft. For doubtlesse, I will saue thee, so that thou shalte not perysshe with the swearde: but thy lyfe shalbe saued, & that because thou haste put thy truft in me, sayth the Lord.

whither he had led him bound among all the prysoners that were caryed from Ierusalem and Juda vnto Babilon. The chiefe captayne called for Ieremye, and sayde vnto him: The Lorde thy God spake mightelye before, of the miserye vpon this place. Nowe the Lorde hath sente it, and performed it as he hath promised. For ye haue sinned agaynst the Lord, and haue not bene obedient vnto his voyce, therefore commeth this plague vppon you. the remnaunt in Juda perishe? And Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam sayde to Johanan the son of Careah. Thou shalt not dooe it, for they are but lyes, that thou sayest of Ismael.

¶ The. xli. Chapter.

B At in the seuenth moneth it happened ✠ that Ismael the son of Nathaniah the sonne of E-lisama (one of the kinges blud) came with them that were greatest aboute the king, and tenne menne that were sworne with him: vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam to Mizpa, and they did eate together. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah with those tenne men that were sworne to him start vp, & smote Godoliah the son of Ahicam the son of Saphan, with the swerd: slew him, whom the kinge of Babilon had made gouernour of the lande. Ismael also slew al the Jewes that were with Godoliah at Mizpa, and all the Caldees, and he found ther wayting vppon him, that those that were able to fight he slew with him.
The next day after that he had slayne Godoliah (the matter was yet vnfrom Sichem, from Silo, and Samaria,

maria, to the number of .lxxx. whiche had shauen their beardes, rente their clothes, and were all heauye, bringing meateofferinges and incense in their handes, to offer it in the house of the Lorde. And Ismael the sonne of Na-

And when they came in the middest of the citie, Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah (with them that were sworne vnto him) slewe them, euen at the middest of the pitte. Amonge these foure score men, there were ten, that sayde vnto Ismael: Oh slaye vs not, for we haue yet a greate treasure in the fielde of wheate, barly, oyle and honye. So he spared them, and slew them not with 3.Re.25 their brethren. Nowe the • pit wherein Ismael did cast the dead bodyes of the men (whom hee slewe because of Godoliah) had king Asa caused to be made for feare of Baasa the kinge of Israell, and the same pit did Ismael fill with slayne men. As for the remnaunt of the people, the kings daughters, and all the people that were yet

So al the people that Ismael had caried away from Mizpa, wer brought again. And when they returned, they came to Johanan the son of Careah. But Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah fled from Johanan with eyghte of his sworne companions, and went D to the Ammonites. Then Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the captaynes of the hoste that were with him, toke al the remnant of the people, whom Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had led away. (When he had slayn Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam) whom they also had rescued from him: fightinge men, women, and children, and gelded men, whome they brought againe from Gibeon, and went from thence, and sat them down at Geruth Canaan, whiche lyeth beside Bethlehem: • that they might go Jer.13.d into Egipt for feare of the Caldees: of whom they were afraide, because that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had slaine Godoliah Ahicams sonne, Jer.40a • whom the kinge of Babilon hadde made gouernour in the lande.

They caried away alſo the prophet Jeremie, Baruch the ſon of Neriah, and ſo came into Egipt:

for they were not obedient vnto the commaundement of God. Thus came they to Taphnis. And in Taphnis the worde of the Lorde happened vnto Jeremy, saying: take greate stones in thyne hande, and hide them in the bricke wall, vnder the doore of Pharaos house in Taphnis, that all the men of Juda may see, and saye vnto them. Thus sayth the Lord of hostes Jer.39.c the God of Israell: Behold, I will sende and call for Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon my seruaunte, and will sette his seate vppon these stones that I haue hidde, and he shall D spread his tent ouer them. And when he commeth, he shall smite the land of Egipte, some with slaughter, some with prisonment, and some with the swearde. He shall sette fyre vpon the temples of the Egiptians gods, and burne them vp, and take them selues prisoners. Moreouer, he shall araye him selfe with the land of Egipt, like as a shepeheard putteth on his coate, and shall depart his way from thence in peace. The pillers also of the temple of the Sunne, that is in Egipte, shal he breake in peeces, and burne the temples of the Egiptians gods.

The.xliij. Chapter.

THis is the woorde that was shewed to Jeremy, concerning all the Jewes, which dwelt in Egypte, at Migdall, at Taphnis, at Noph, and in the lande of Patures. Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes, the God of Israell: Ye haue seene all the miserie, that I haue broughte vppon Jerusalem, and vppon the cities of Juda, so that this daye they are desolate, and no manne dwelling therein: and that because of the greate blasphemies whiche they committed, to prouoke me vnto anger. In that they went backe to do sacrifice, and worshippe vnto straunge goddes: whom neyther ye nor your fathers haue knowen. Howebeit, I sent vnto them my seruauntes all the Jer.25.a prophetes. I rose vp early, I sente vnto them, and gaue them warning. O do not suche abhominable thinges, and thinges that I hate. But they woulde not folowe nor hearken, to turne from their wickednes, and to doo no more sacrifices vnto straunge gods. Wherefore mine indignation, & B wrath was kindled, and it brente vp the cities of Juda, the fields with the streetes of Jerusalem, so that they were made waste and desolate, as it is come to passe this daye. Nowe therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes, the God of Israel: Howe happeth it, that ye doo so greate euill vnto your owne soules, thus to destroy the men and women, childzen & babes of Juda: so that none of you is left, because ye prouoke me vnto wrathe with the workes of your owne handes, when ye offer vnto straunge goddes in the lande of Egipte, where as ye be gone to dwell. That ye might vtterly perysh, and that ye mighte be reuiled, and shamefully intreated of all nations. Or haue ye nowe forgotten the wickednesse of your forefathers, the wickednesse of the kinges of Juda, and theyr wyues, the wickednes that ye your selues and your wiues haue done in the land of Juda, in the citie, and in the stretes of Jerusalem. Yet are ye not sory vnto this day, C ye feare not, neyther walke ye in my law, & in my commandements that I haue geue vnto you & your forfathers. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell: I am stedfastlye aduised and determined to punyshe you, and to roote out all Juda. As for the remnant of Juda, that pur posely went into Egipt, ther to dwel, I will take them, and they shall all Jer.11. and.44 be destroyed. In the lande of Egipte shall they perysh, beeyng consumed with the swearde, and with hunger. For from the least vnto the most, they shall perysh with the sweard & with hunger. Moreouer, they shall be reuiled, abhorred, shamed, and confounded For I will visite them that dwell in Egipte, as I haue visited Jerusa- Jer.39 lem, with the sweard, with hunger, and with pestilence. So that none of the remnaunt of Iuda, whiche are gone to dwell in Egipt, shall be left to come agayne into the lande of Iu-da, although they thinke to come thy-ther agayne, and to dwell there. For none shal come againe, but such as are D fled awaye. Then all the men which knewe that theyr wiues had offred vnto straunge gods, and a greate sorte of wiues that stode there, yea, and all the people that dwelte there in Egipt in the citie of Patures, answered Jeremie, and saide: As for the wordes that thou hast spoken vnto vs, in the name of the Lorde, we will in no wise heare them: but what soeuer goth out of our owne mouth, that we will doe. We will doo sacrifice and offer oblations Jer.7.b vnto the quene of heauen, like as we and our forefathers, our kinges, and our heades haue done in the Cities of Iuda, and in the stretes and feldes of Jerusalem. For then had we plenteousnes of vittayles, then were we in E prosperitie, and no misfortune came Exo.16 vpon vs. But sens we left to burne incense, and to do sacrifice vnto the queene of heauen, we haue had scarse-nes of all thinges, and perysshe with the swearde and hunger. Last of all, when we wemen did sacrifice & offered vnto the queene of heauen, did we make her cakes and poure vnto her drinkofferinges, euen to that ymage did we sacrifice and seruice, without our husbandes willes? Then sayde Jeremy vnto all the people, to the mē, to the women, and to all the folcke which had geuen him that aunswere: Did not the Lorde remember the sacrifices that ye, your forefathers, your kinges and rulers, with all the people, haue offred in the cities of Iuda, in the stretes and land of Jerusalem? and hath he not considered this in his minde? In somuche that the Lorde might no longer suffer the wickednes of your inuentions, and the abhomi-your land desolate and voyde: yea abhorred and accursed, so that no man F dwelleth therein anye more, as it is Ps.11.b come to passe this daye? Did not all this happē vnto you, because ye made such sacrifices to ydoles, and sinned a-gaynst the Lorde? Ye haue not folo- War. 3.a wed his voyce, to walke in his lawe, in his ordinaunces and statutes. Yea, this is the cause, that all misfortune happened vnto you, as it is come to passe this daye. Moreouer, Jeremie spake vnto all the people, and to all the wemen. Heare the worde of the Lord all Iuda, ye that be in the lande of Egipt. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: Ye and your wiues haue spoken with your owne mouth, that thing that ye haue fulfilled in deede. Yea, thus haue ye saide: Jer.44.c We will not fayle, but performe the vowes that we haue vowed, we will do sacrifice, and powre out drinkofferinges to the queene of heauen. Purposely will ye set vp your owne mea-ninges and performe your vowes.

And therefore heare the wordes of the Lorde, all Iuda, ye that dwell in the G lande of Egipte. Beholde, I haue Ge. 22.a sworne by my great name, sayeth the Lorde, that my name shall not be rehearsed through any mans mouth of Iuda, in all the land of Egipt, to say, The Lorde God liueth: for I will watche to plague them, and not for their wealth. And al the men of Iu- Jer.42.c da that be in the lande of Egypt shall perysshe with the swearde, and with hunger, vntil they be vtterly destroid.
Neuertheless, those that fled awaye for the swearde, shall come agayne into the lande of Iuda, but there shalbe verye fewe of them. And all the remnaunt of Iuda, that are gone into Egipt, there to dwell, shal know whose wordes shalbe founde true, theirs or mine. Take this for a token that I will visite you in this place sayth the Lord: and that ye may knowe that I (without doubt) will performe my purpose vpon you to punish you. Be-holde, sayth the Lorde, I will deliuer Pharao Hophra king of Egipt into the handes of his ennemies that seeke after his life: euen as I gaue 4.re.25.a Zedekiah the kinge of Iuda, into the handes of Nabuchodonosor, kinge of Babilon his enemy which sought after his lyfe.

¶ The.xlv. Chapter.

A THese are the wordes that Jeremye the prophete spake vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah: Jer.33.a • After that he hadde written these sermons in a booke at the mouthe of Jeremy. In the fourthe yere of Jehoakim the sonne of Josias kinge of Juda, saying: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel vnto thee, O Baruch: In so muche as thou thoughtest thus when thou wast writing: Wo is me, the Lord hath geuen me sorowe vpon sorowe. I haue wearied my selfe with B sighing, and haue found no rest. Therfore tell him (O Jeremye) that the Lorde sayeth thus: beholde, the thing that I haue buylded, will I breake downe agayne, and rote out the thing that I haue planted. Yea, this whole land. And seekest thou yet promotion? Loke not for it, and despyse it not. For I will bring a miserable plague vpon Jer.21.b all flesshe, sayeth the Lorde. • But thy life will I geue thee for a pray in all places, whersoeuer thou goest.

Esa.29.a preached he to • the Egiptians con-Eze.29.a cerning the hoost of Pharao Necho • 4.Re.24 kinge of Egipte: • when he was in Charcamis, beside the water of Euphrates: what time as Nabuchodonosor the king of Babilon slewe him, in the fourth yere of Jehoakim the Jer.36.d son of Josias king of Juda: • Make ready buckler and shield, and go forth to fyght, harnes your horses, and sette your selues vpon them, sette your sa-lettes fast on, bryngе foorth speares, scoure your swordes, and put on your brest plates. But alas, howe happeneth it, that I see you so afrayd? Why shrinke ye backe? Your worthies are slayne, Yea, they runne so faste away, that none of them loketh behind him. Fearefulnes is fallen vpon euerichone of them, sayth the Lorde. The lyghtest of foote shall not flee awaye, and the worthies shal not escape. To-B ward the North by the water of Euphrates, they did stumble and fall. But what is he this that swelleth vp, as it were a flood, roaring and ra-ging lyke the streames of water? It is Egipte that ryseth vppe lyke the floudde, and casteth oute the waters with so greate noyse. And he sayd: I wil go vp, and will couer the earth, I will destroye the Citie with theym that are therein. Get ye vp ye hor-ses, roll forth ye charets, come forth ye worthies: ye Morians, ye Libeans with your bucklers, ye Lideons with your bowes. This daye of the Lorde God of hoostes, is a day of vengeance that he maye auenge him of his ene-mies. The swearde shall deuoure, it C shall be satisfied, and bathed in theyr blud. For the Lord God of hostes shal haue a slayne offeringe towarde the North, by the water of Euphrates. Go vp, O Gilead, and bryngе trea-cle vnto the daughter of Egipte, But in vayne shalt thou go to surgery: for thy wounde shall not be stopped. The Heathen haue heard of thy shame, and the lande is full of thy confusion, for one stronge man did stumble vppon a-nother, and they are fallen both toge-ther. These are the wordes that the D Lorde spake to the prophete Jeremy, concerning the comming of Nabu-chodonosor the kinge of Babylon, whiche was sent to destroy the lande of Egipte. Preache out through the lande of Egipte, and cause it to be proclaymed at Migdal, Noph, and Caphnis, and saye: stande stil, make thee ready, for the swearde shall con-sume thee rounde aboute. Howe hap-peneth it, that thy mightie worthyes are fallen? why stoode they not fast? Euen because the Lorde thrust theym downe. The slaughter was greate, for one fell euer still vpon another. One cried vpon another: Vp, let vs go agayne to our owne people, and to our owne naturall countrey from the cruel swerd. They did crie euen there

O Pharao king of Egipt, thou troubious king, the time will bring sedition. As truely as I liue, sayeth the Esa.48.a king, whose name is the Lorde of hostes, it shal come as the mount of Thabor, and as Libanus, if it stoode in the sea, O thou daughter of Egipt make readye thy geare to flitte. For Noph shalbe voyde & desolate, so that no man shall dwell therin. The land of Egipt is like a goodly fayre calfe, but destruction shall come out of the North, I say it commeth. Her waged souldiours that be with her, are like fat calues. They also shall flee away together, and not abide: for the day of their slaughter, and the time of their visitation shal come vpon them.
F The crye of them, shall make a noyse as the blast of a trompette. For they shall enter in with their hostes, and come with axes, as it were hewers downe of wood. And they shall cut downe her wodde, sayeth the Lorde. They shall be innumerable: for they shalbe mo in number then the grashoppers, so that no man shalbe able to tell them. The daughter of Egipt is confounded, and deliuered into the hands of the people of the North. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel: Beholde, I will visite that restlesse people of Alexandria, Pharao, and Egipte: yea, both theyr goddes and their kinges: euen Pharao, and all theym that put their truste in him. Yea, I will deliuer theim into the handes of those that seeke after their liues. Namely into the power of Nabuchodonosor the king of Babilon, and into the power of his seruauntes. And after all these things it G shalbe inhabited, as afore time sayth the Lorde. But be not thou afrayde (O my seruant Jacob) fear not thou O Israell. For lo, I will helpe thee from farre, and thy sede from the land of their captiuitie. Jacob also shall come agayne, and be in reste: he shall prospere, and no man shall doo him harme. Feare thou not (O Jacob, my seruant) sayeth the Lorde, for I am with thee: and will destroye all nations amonge whom I haue scattered thee. Neuertheles I will not consume thee, but chasten and correct thee yea and that with discretion: neither will I spare thee, as one that were faultles.

A THese are the woordes, that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy the Prophet agaynst the Philistines, before that Pharao smote the citie of Azah. Thus saith the Lorde: Beholde, there shall waters arise oute of the north, and shall growe to a great floude, running ouer, and coueringe the land, the cities, & them that dwell
B in the land, shall mourne at the noyse and stamping of their stronge barbed horses, at the shaking of their charettes, and at the rombling of the wheeles. The fathers shal not loke to their children, so feble and weary shal their handes be: at the same time when he shalbe there, to destroy the whole land of the Philistins: He shal make waste bothe Tyrus, Sidon, and all other C that are sworne vnto theym. For the Lorde will destroy the Philistins, the remnãt of the yle of Chaptor. Baldnes is come vpon Azah, Ascalon with her other valleys shall kepe her peace. Howe longe wilt thou slape, O thou sword of the Lorde: When wilt thou ceasse? Turne agayne into thy sweete reste, and leaue it off. But howe can it ceasse: when the Lorde hym selfe hath geuen him a charge agaynst Ascalon, and rayled it by agaynst the Cities of the sea coast.

Therfore shall there mourning be made for Moab, and euery man shall crye for Moabs sake: A lamentation shalbe made to the men that stande vppon the wall. So shal I mourne for thee also, O Jazer, and for thee, O thou vineyarde of Sabaniah. Thy wyne braunches shall come ouer the sea, and the braunches of Jazer, but vnto the sea,

Ther ſhalbe no ſwete wyne in the preſſe, the treader ſhall haue no ſtomacke to crye, yea, there ſhalbe none to crye vnto him: which afore time were hearde from Heſebon to Eleale and Jahaz, whiche lyfted vppe theyr voyce from Zoar vnto Horonaim, that bullocke of three yere olde ſhall goe mourninge. O howe doeth Moab hange downe her heade, and ſhe aſhamed? Thus ſhall Moab bee a laughinge ſtocke, and hadde in deriſion of all Jer.48.a them that be rounde aboute her. For Jer.49 d thus ſayth the Lorde: Beholde, the ennemie ſhall come fleyng as an Eagle, and ſpreade his wynges vpon G Moab. They ſhall clymbe ouer the walles, and win ſtrong holdes. Then the mightie mens heartes in Moab ſhalbe like the heart of a woman trauayling with childe. And Moab ſhall be made ſo deſolate, that ſhe ſhall no more be a people, becauſe ſhe hath ſet Ba.24.a vp her ſelfe agaynſt the Lorde. Feare, pytte and ſnare ſhall come vpon thee, O Moab, ſayeth the Lorde. Who ſo eſcapeth the feare, ſhall fall in the pyt: and whoſo getteth out of the pit, ſhal be taken in the ſnare. For I will bring a yere of viſitation vpon Moab, ſayth the Lorde. They that are able to flee, ſhall ſtande vnder the ſhadowe of Heſebon. For there ſhall go a fyre out of Heſebon, and a flame from Sion, and ſhall burne vp that proud people of Moab, and the toppe of thoſe ſeditious children. Woe be vnto thee, O Moab, for thou people of Chamos ſhall perych. Yea, thy ſons and daughters ſhalbe ledde awaye captiue. Yet at the laſte will I bring Moab out of captiuitie agayne, ſayth the Lorde. Thus farre is of the plage of Moab.

Lorde of hostes. I will kindle a fyre in the wailes of Damascus, which shal consume the palace of Benhadad.
✱ As for Cedar and the kingdome of Psa.120 Hazor, whom Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon smote downe, the Lorde hath spoken thus vpon them: Arise, and get you vp vnto Cedar, & destroy the people towarde the East.

Theis

Their tentes and their flockes shall they take away: Yea, their hanginges and their vessels. Their camels also shall they cary away with thē. They shall crye to them. Feare is on everye syde. Flee, get you soone away, creepe into caues, that ye may dwel there, O ye inhabiters of Hazor, sayth the lord: for Nabuchodonosor the king of Babilon hath holden a councell concerning you, and concluded his deuise against you. Arise & get you vp against yonder rich and careiesse people (saith the Lorde) which haue neyther gates nor doore bars, but dwell alone. Their camels shalbe stollen, and the droues of their cattell driuen away. Moreouer, those will I scatter toward al the windes, and bring them to destructiō: yea, and that through their own famiiyars, sayth the Lord. Hazor also shal be a dwelling for dragons, & an euerlasting wildernes, so that no bodye shall dwell there, and no man shall G haue there his habitation. These are the wordes that the Lord spake to the Ez.32.d Dan.8.a prophete Jeremy, concerning Elam in the beginning of the reigne of Zedekiah king of Juda. Thus saith the Lord of hostes: Behold. I will breake the bowe of Elam, and take awaye their strength: and vpon Elam I will bring the foure windes from the four quarters of heuen, and will scatter thē against the same foure windes. And there shalbe no people, but some of Elam shall flee vnto them. For I will cause Elam to be afrayde of their enemyes, and of thē that seke their liues, and will bring vpon them the indignation of my wrath, sayth the Lorde. And I will persecute them with the sweard, so longe till I haue brought them to naught: I will set my throne in Elam. I will destroye bothe the kinge and the princes from thence, sayth the Lord. But in proces of time I will bring Elam out of captiuitie agayne, sayth the Lorde.

The. 1. Chapter.

THe wordes that the Lorde spake I vnto the prophete Jeremy, concerning Babilon, and the lande of the Caldees: • Preach amonge the Esa.15.a Gentyles, let your voyce be hearde, Jer.25.b make a token, crye out, kepe no silence but saye: Babilon is wonne. • Bel is • Esa.46 confounded, and Merodach is ouercome. • Yea, their gods be brought to Dan.4.a shame, and their images burst in peeces. For out of the North there doth come a people agaynste her, whiche make her land so waste, that no bodye dwell therin, neyther man nor beaste: for they flee and departe from thence.
• In those dayes and at that tyme, 1 Esa.18 sayth the Lord, the children of Israel shall come, they & the children of Juda, weping and making hast, and shal seeke the Lorde their God. They shal aske the way to Syon, thyther shall they turne theyr faces, sayinge: Come and we will cleaue to the Lorde, in a couenaunt that neuer shalbe broken. Jer.23.a My people hath bene a lost flocke, my Eze.36.k shepeherdes haue disceaued them, and B haue made them go astraye vppon the hilles. They haue gone frome the mountaynes to the litle hill, and forgotten their folde. All they that came vpon them, haue deuoured them, and theyr enemyes sayde: We haue made no defaulte agaynste theym, for they haue displeased the Lorde: yea, euen the Lorde, whiche is the bewtye of their righteousnesse, and that defended their fathers. Yet shall ye flee from Babilon, and departe oute of the lande of the Chaldees, and be ye as the rammes that goo before the flocke, • For loo, I will wake vp an Jer.50.a hooste of people frome the Northren lande, and bringe theym vppon Babilon: these shall laye siege to it, and winne it. Their arowes shall not misse, lyke as a cunninge archer shooteth not wronge. And the Chaldees shall bee spoyled, and all they that spoyle theym, shall bee satisfyed, sayeth the LORDE, • although ye were so cheerefull and Esa.47.a gladde, to treade downe myne heritage, and fulfilled youre pleasures, as the calues in the grasse, and triumphed ouer them like the bulles, when he had gotten the victorye. Your mothers shalbe sore confounded, and they that bare you, shall come to shame. ℭ She shalbe the leaste set by amonge the nations, voyde, walked, and dryed vp. No man shalbe able to dwell ther, for the feare of the Lorde, but she shall Jer.11 b be whole desolate. • All they that go by Babilon, shall stande still, and be abashed, and shall wonder at all her plagues. Go forthe in your araye agaynst Babilon rounde about, all ye that can handle bowes: shoote at her, spare no arowes, for she hath sinned agaynst the Lorde. Crye out vppon her, vppon her, agaynst her rounde about: she shall yeld her selfe, her foundations shall fall, and her walles shal come downe: for it shall be the ven-Exo.21 b geaunce of the Lord. • Yea, vengeance Leu.24 d shall be taken of her, and as she hath done, so deale ye with her. Roote out the sower from Babilon, and him that handleth the sickle in Haruest. For feare of the sweard of the enemy, euery man shall get him to his owne • people: and euery man shall flee to his owne lande. Israell is a scattered flocke, the lions haue dispersed them.

Esa.10.a uoured them, • laste of all this Nabuchodonosor king of Babilon hath brosed all their boones. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: Beholde, I will visite the kinge of Babilon and hys

Esa.14.a kinge of the Assirians, and wil bring Israell agayne to his pleasaunt pasture, that he may feede vpon Charmell and Basan, and be satisfyed vppon the mount of Ephraim and Galaad. In those dayes and at the same Jer.51.c time, sayeth the Lorde, ye the offence of Israell be soughte for, there shall none be founde. If men enquyre for the sinne of Juda, there shalbe none: for I will be mercyfull vnto theim, whom I suffer to remayne ouer. Go down, O thou auenger, into the enemyes lande, and visit them that dwell therin: downe with them, and smite them vpon the backes, sayth the Lord, do accordyng to all that I haue commaunded thee. There is gone aboute the lande a crye of a slaughter, and greate murther, namelye on this maner. Howe happeneth it, that the hammer of the whole worlde is thus broken and brosed in sunder? Howe chanceth it that Babilon is become a wildernesse among the Heathen on this maner? I my selfe haue layed wayt for thee, and thou art taken, vnwares arte thou trapped and snared: for whye? thou haste prouoked the Lord vnto anger. The Lord hath opened his house of ordinance, & brought forth the weapons of his wrath. For the thing that is done in the lande of the Chaldees, it is the Lord of hoostes worke. Come against her, for this is ℭ her ende, breake vp her chestes, thresh her as ye thresshe corne, destroye her, that nothinge shalbe lefte. Slaye all their mightye souldiers, and putte theym to deathe. Wo be vnto theym, for the daye and time of their visitation is at hande. Me thinke I heare already a cry, of them that be fled and escaped out of the lande of Babilon, which shew in Sion the vengeaunce of the Lord our God, the vengeaunce of his temple: yea, a voyce of theym, that crye agaynst Babilon. Call vp all the archers agaynste Babilon, pitche your tentes round aboute her, that none escape. • Recompence her Jer.50 as she hath deserued, and accordinge Apo.18 as she hath doone, so deale with her agayne, for she hath • set vp her selfe 2 thes.2 agaynst the Lorde, agaynste the holye one of Israell. Therefore shall her ponge men fall downe in the streetes, and all her men of warre shalbe roted out in that daye, sayth the Lorde. Beholde, I speake vnto thee, O thou proud, sayth the Lord God of hostes, for thy day shall come, euen the time of thy visitation. And the proud shall stumble and fall, and no man shal help him vp. I will burne vp his Cities with fire, and it shal consume all that is rounde about him. Thus sayth the

Lorde

Lorde of hostes: the children of Israell and Juda suffer violence together. All they that haue them in captiuitie, kepe them faste, and will not let theym goo, but their auenger and redeemer is mightye, whose name is the Lord of hostes, he shal mayntaine their cause, he shall make theyr lande shake, and iudge them that dwell therin, one with another. The swearde shall come vpon the Caldees, sayeth the Lorde, vpon theym that dwell in Babilon, vpon their princes, and vpon their wise men. The sweard vpō their southsayers, as for those they shall become fooles. The sweard vpon their worthyes, so that they shall stand in feare. The sweard vpon their horsemen and charettes, and vpon all the commen people that dwell vnder them, so that they shal all become like women. The swearde vpon theyr treasure, so that it shalbe stollen away. A drought vpon their waters, so that they shalbe dryed vp. For the lande worshippeth ymages, and delyteth in straunge wonderfull thinges. Therfore shall wild beasts, Lamia, and cat of mountaynes, and estriches dwell therin, for there shal neuer man dwell there, neyther shall any man haue his habitation there for euermore. Like as God destroyed Sodome and Gomorre, with the cities that laye there about, sayeth the Lorde: So shall no man dwel there also, neyther shal any man haue there his habitation. • Beholde, there shall come a people from the north with a great bonde of men, and many kinges shall stand vp from the endes of the earthe. They beare bowes and bucklers. cruell are they and vnmercifull. Their voyce roareth like the raging sea, they ryde vpon horses, and come weaponed to fight agaynst thee, O Babilon. Assone as the king of Babilon heareth tell of them, his handes shall waxe feeble. Sorowe and heauynes shall come vpon him, as a woman trauailing with childe. Beholde, • like as the Lion commeth vp from the pleasaunt medowes of Jordan vnto the grene pastures of Ethan, so will I driue them forth, and make them run agaynst her. But whom shall I chose oute: and ordeyne to suche a thinge? • For who is like vnto me, or who will strine with me? or what shepheard maye stande againste me? Therefore, heare the councell that the Lorde hath geuen vpon Babilon, and the deuise that he hath taken vpon the lande of the Chaldees. The least amonge the people shall teare them in peeces, and loke what pleasaunt thing they haue they shall laye it waste. The noyse at the winning of Babilon shall moue the earth, and the crye shalbe heard among the Gentiles.

¶ The. li. Chapter.

THus hath the Lorde sayde: • beholde, I will raise vp a perilous winde agaynst Babilon and her citezens, that beare euill will agaynst me. I will send also into Babilon fanners, to fanne her out, and to destroye her lande: for in the day of her trouble they shalbe about her on euery side. Moreouer, the Lorde hath sayd vnto the bowe men, and to them that clime ouer the walles in brasse plates. Ye shall not spare her younge men, kill downe all her hoste. Thus the slayne shall fal downe in the lande of the Caldees, and the wounded in the streetes. • As for Israell and Juda they shall not be forsaken of theyr god, of the Lord of hostes, for the holy one of Israels sake: no, though they haue filled all their land full of sinne. • Flee awaye from Babilon, euerye man saue his life, that ye be not rooted out with her wickednes, for the time of the Lordes vengeaunce is come: yea, he will reward her agayne. Babilon hath beene in the Lordes hande, • a golden cuppe that maketh all landes dronken. Of her wyne haue all people dronken: therefore, are they out of their wittes. • But sodenly is Babilon fallen, & destroyed. Mourne for her, bringe plasters for her woundes, if she maye peraduenture be healed agayne. We would haue made Babilon whole, say they:

But thee is not recouered. Therefore will we let her alone, and go euery mā into his own countrey. For her iudge ment is come into heauen, and is gone vp to the cloudes. The Lorde hath brought forth our righteousnes. And therfore come on, we wil shew Sion the worke of ỹ Lord our God. Make sharpe the arowes, and multiply your Iud.2.c. shieldes: for the Lorde shall rayse vp Ier.51c the spirit of the king of the Meedes, which hath alredy a desyre to destroy Babilon. This shalbe the vengeance of the Lorde, and the vengeaunce of his temple. Set vp tokens vpon the walles of Babilon, make your watch strong, set your watchmē in aray: yea, holde prime watches, and yet for all that shall the Lorde go forth with the deuice, which he hath takē vpon them that dwell in Babilon. O thou that dwellest by the great waters. O thou that hast so great treasure and riches, thine ende is come, and the reckeninge of thy winninges. The Amos.6c Lorde of hostes hath sworne by him Ier.22a selfe, that he wil ouerwhelme the with men, like grasshoppers in number, whiche with a corage shall crye, ala-Ier.35b rum, alarum agaynst thee. Yea, euen the Lorde of hoostes, that with his power made the earth, with his wis-dome prepared the rounde worlde, and with his discretion spred out the hea-uens, assone as he letteth his voyce Psa.135 be heard, the waters in the ayre waxe fearce. He drawyth vp the cloudes from the ende of the earth. He tour-neth the lightninges to raine, he brygeth the windes out of their secrete places, if they be esteemed by their wis Esa.44c dome, al men are become fooles. Cō-Bar.6,a founded be all the casters of ymages: for the thinge that they make, is but disceate, and hath no breth. Vayne is it and an erronious worke, and in the time of visitation it shall perish. Ne-uertheles, the portion of Iacob is none such, but he that made all things whose name is the Lorde of hostes, he is the rod of his inheritaunce. Thou hast beene myne hammer and weapons for warre, for with thee haue I broken the people in peeces, and with thee haue I destroyed kingedomes.
Through thee I haue beaten to pou-der horse and horseman: yea, the cha-rettes and suche as sat vppon theym.
Through thee I haue broken manne and woman, olde and yonge, bachelor and mayden. Through thee, I haue destroyed the sheepehearde and his flocke, the husbandman and his cat-tel, the princes and their rulers. Ther fore will I reward the Citie of Ba-bilon and all her citizens, the Chaldees, with all the euill whiche they haue done vnto Sion, yea, that ye your selues shall see it, sayth the Lord: Behold, I come vpon thee, thou noysome hill, sayth the Lord: thou that destroiest all landes, I will stretche oute my hande ouer thee, and rolle thee downe from the stony rockes, and will make thee a brent hill, so that nether corner stones nor pinacles, nor foundations of stones shalbe taken anye more out of thee, but waste and desolate shalte thou lye for euermore, sayth the Lord.
Set vp a token in the lande, blowe the trompettes amonge the Heathen, prouoke the nations against her, call the kingdoms of Ararat, Menni, and Iscanes against her. Set the Prince against her, bring as great a sorte of terrible horses agaynst her, as yf they were grasshoppers. Prepare agaynst them the people of the Meedes with their kinges, princes, and all their chefe rulers: yea, and the whole lande that is vnder him. The land also shall shake and be afrayde when the deuice of the Lorde shall come forth agaynste Babilon, to make the land of Babilō so waste, that no man shall dwell any more therein. The worthies of Ba-bilon shal leaue the battayle, and kepe theym selues in stronge holdes, their strength hath fayled them, they shalbe like women. Their dwelling places shalbe brent vp, their barres shalbe broken. One pursenaunt shall meete another, yea one poste shall come by another, to bringe the kinge of Ba-bilon tydinges, that his citie is taken on euery syde, the foordes occupyed,

the kennes bzente by, and the ſouldi-D ers ſore afrayde. For thus ſayeth the Lorde of hoſtes the God of Iſrael: the daughter of Babilon hath beene in her time, lyke as a threſhing floore, but shortely ſhall her harueſt come.
Nabuchodonoſor the king of Babylon hath deuoured and deſtroyed me, he hath made me an emptie veſſel. He ſwalowed me vp lyke a dragon, and filled his belye with my delicates, he hath caſte me out, he hath taken my ſubſtaunce away, and the thinge that was left me hath he caried vnto Ba-bilon, ſayth the daughter that dwelleth in Sion: yea, and my bloud alſo vnto the Chaldees, ſayth Jeruſalem.
Therefore thus ſayth the Lorde: Be-holde, I will defende thy cauſe, and auenge thee: I will drinke vp her E ſea, and drye vp her water ſpringes.
Eſa.13.c • Babilon ſhall become an heape of ſtones, a dwelling place for dragons, a fearefulnes and wondering, becauſe no manne dwelleth there. They ſhall roare together lyke Lyons, and as the yonge Lyons when they be angrye, ſo ſhall they bend them ſelues. In their heate I ſhall geue them a dinner, and Jer.2.b they ſhall be dronken for ioye. • Then ſhall they ſleepe an euerlaſting ſleepe and neuer wake, ſayth the Lorde. I ſhall carrye theym downe to be ſlayne lyke ſheepe, lyke wethers and goates.
O howe was Sheſach won? O how was the glorye of the whole land taken? howe happeneth it, that Babylon is ſo wondred at among the Heathen? The ſea is riſen ouer Babilon, and hath couered her with his greate wawes. Her Cities are layde waſte, the lande lyeth vnbuylded and voyde, it is a lande where no man dwelleth, and wher no man trauelleth through.
Jer.1.a Moreouer, • I will viſit Bel at Ba-Ba.14.d bilon, and the thing that he hath ſwalowed vppe, that ſame ſhall I plucke out of his mouth. The Gentiles alſo ſhal renne no more vnto him, yea, and the walles of Babilon ſhall fall. O Eſa.52.b my people, • come out of Babilon, that euery man may ſaue his life, from the fearefull wrath of the Lorde. Be not faynt hearted, and feare not at euery rumoure that ſhalbe heard in the land, for euery yeare bringeth newe tydin-ges, and in the yeare folowing newe tydinges, and robbing in the lande, and Lorde vppon Lorde. And loe, the tyme commeth, that I will viſite the ymages of Babylon, and the whole lande ſhalbe confounded: yea, and her ſlayne ſhall lye in the middeſt of her.
Heauen and earthe with all that is therein, ſhall reioyce ouer Babilon, when the deſtroyers ſhall come vpon her from the North, ſayth the Lorde.
Jer.50.a • Like as Babilon hath beaten down F and ſlayne manye out of Iſrael, ſo ſhall there fall many, and be ſlayne in all her kingdome. Ye that haue eſcaped the ſweard, haſt thou, & ſtand not ſtil, remember the Lord a farre of, and thinke vpon Jeruſalem, for we were aſhamed to heare the blaſphemies: our faces were couered with ſhame, becauſe the ſtrange aleantes came into the Sanctuary of the Lord. Wherfore beholde (ſayth the Lord) the time commeth that I will viſite the ymages of Babilon, and throughe the whole land they ſhall mourne and fal.
Jer.49.b • Thoughe Babilon clymed vp into heauen, and kepte her power an hye, yet ſhall I ſende her deſtroyers ſayth the Lord. A piteous crye ſhalbe heard from Babilon, and a great miſery frō the lande of the Chaldees, when the Lorde deſtroyeth theym, and when he driueth out the proud ſtomacke and proude boaſtinge, wherewith they haue beene as furious as the wawes of greate water ſtoudes, and made greate crakes with their woordes.
For the deſtroyers ſhall come vppon her (euen vppon Babylon) whiche ſhall take their worthies, and breake their bowes: for GOD is diſpoſed to auenge him ſelfe vpon them, and ſufficientlye, to recompence theym.
Yea (ſayeth the LORDE,) I will make their princes, their wyſe men, their chiefe rulers, and all their worthies, dronken: ſoo that they ſhall ſleepe an euerlaſting ſleepe, and ne-G uer walke. Thus ſayeth the kinge, whoſe

whose name is the Lorde of hooſtes. Moreouer, thus ſayeth the Lorde of hooſtes. The thicke wall of Babilon ſhall be broken, and her hye gates ſhall be brent vp. And the thinge that the Gentiles, and the people haue wroughte with greate trauayle and laboure ſhall comme to naughte, and be conſumed in the fyre. This is the charge that Jeremie gaue vnto Saraiah the ſonne of Neriah, the ſonne of Maaſiah, when he went towarde Babilon with Zedekiah the kinge of Juda, in the fourth yere of his reygne. Now this Saraiah was a peaceable prince: Jeremie wrote in a boke all the miſery that ſhould come vpon Babilon, yea, and al theſe Sermons that be written agaynſt Babilon, and gaue Saraiah his charge. When thou commeſt vnto Babilon, ſee that thou reade all theſe wordes, and ſay: O Lorde thou arte determined to roote out this place, ſo that neither people nor catteil ſhal dwel there anye more, but to lye waſte for euer, and when thou haſte reade oute the booke, bynde a ſtone to it, and caſt it in the middeſt of Euphrates, and ſay: Euen thus ſhall Babilon ſincke, and be thruſt downe with the burthen of trouble that I wil bring vpon her, ſo þ ſhe ſhal neuer come vp again. Thus farre are the preachinges of Jeremy.

¶ The .lij. Chapter.

A 4.Re.24 2.par.36 ZEdekiah was • one & twentie yeare olde, when he was made king, and he reygned eleuen yeare in Jeruſalem. His mothers name was Hamutail, Jeremies daughter of Libna. He lyued wickedly before the Lorde, euen as Jehoakim did. For the Lord was angrye at Jeruſalem and Juda, ſo longe till he had caſte them out of his preſence. And Zedekiah fell from the Jer.39.a kinge of Babilon. • But in the ninth 4.Re.25 yeare of his reygne, in the tenth moneth, in the tenth day of the moneth it happened, that Nabuchodonoſor the kinge of Babilon with all his hoſte came before Jeruſalem, and beſieged it, and made them bulwarkes rounde aboute it. And this beſieging of the Citie endured vnto the eleuenth yere B of king Zedekiah. • And in the fourth 4.Re.25 moneth, the ninth daye of the moneth, Jer.38 there was ſo great hunger in the Citie, that there were no more vyttayles for the people of the lande. So all the ſouldiers brake away, and fled out of the citie by night through the way of the porte betweene the two walles by the kinges garden. Nowe the Chaldees had compaſſed the citie round aboute, yet went theſe men their way towarde the wildernes. And ſo the Chaldees folowed vpon them, and toke Zedekiah the kinge in the fielde of Jericho, when his hooſt was run from him: So they caried the kinge awaye priſoner to Reblath, vnto the kinge of Babilon in the lande of Hemath, • where he gaue iudgement vp- Jer.39 on him. The kinge of Babilon alſo C cauſed Zedekias ſonnes to be ſlayne before his face, yea, and put al the princes of Juda to deathe at Reblath. Moreouer, he put out the eyes of Zedekia, & cauſed him to be bound with two cheynes, to be caried vnto Babilon, and let him lye in priſon, till he dyed. Now the tenth day of the fifth moneth in the .xix. yere of Nabuchodonoſor the kinge of Babilon, Nabuſaradan the chiefe captayne and the kinge of Babilons ſeruauntes came vnto Jeruſalem, and brente vppe the houſe of the Lord. He brent vp alſo the kinges palace, all the houſes, and all the gorgeous buyldinges in Jeruſalem. And the whole hoſt of the Chaldees that wer with the chiefe captain brake downe all the walles of Jeruſalem rounde about. As for the poore people and ſuch folke as yet was lefte in the citie, which alſo were fallen to D the kinge of Babilon: yea, and what people as yet remayned, Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne caried theym awaye priſoners. But the poore people of the countrey did Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne leaue in the lande, to occupy the vineyardes and fieldes. The Caldees alſo brake þ braſen pilers that wer in the houſe of the Lord, yea yes, the seat and the brasen lauer that was in the house of the Lorde, and caried all the metall of them vnto Babilon. They toke away also the cauldrons, shouels, flesshehookes, sprinkiers, spones, and all the brasen vessell that was occupyed in the seruice: with the basens, colepane, sprinkiers, pots, candlestickes, spones, and cups: wherof some were of golde, and some E of siluer. The chiefe captaine toke also the two pilers, the lauer, the .xij. brasen bullockes that stode vnder the 3 Re.7.b seate, which king Salomon made in the house of the Lorde: and all the vessell conteyned so much metall, that it might not be weyed. For euery piler was eyghtene cubites hye: and the rope that went about it, was twelue cubites, and foure fingers thicke and rounde. Nowe vpon the rope were brasen knoppes, and euery knop was F fiue cubites hye: and vpon the knoppes were whopes, and pomgranates rounde about of cleane brasse. After this maner were bothe the pilers fashioned with the pomgranates, whereof there were an hundred and xcvi. which hanged vpon the whopes round about. The chiefe captayn also toke Sariah the hye priest, and Sophoniah that was chefe next him, and the three keepers of the treasurie. He toke out of the Citie a chamberlayne which was a captayne of the souldiers, and seuen men that were the kinges seruauntes, which were founde in the Citie, and Sopher a captayne, that vsed to muster the men of war, with threescore men of the countrey that wer take in the citie. These Nabuzaradan the chiefe captaine toke, and caried them to the king of Babilon vnto Reblath: and the king of Babilon caused them to be put to death at Reblath in the land of Hemath. And thus Juda was ledde away captiue, out of his owne lande. This is the summe of the people, whom Nabu-G chodonosor led away captiue. In the seuenth yere of his reigne, he caried away of the Jewes, three thousande and three and twentye. In the .xviij. yere Nabuchodonosor caryed awaye from Jerusalem eyght hundred thirtye and two personnes. In the .xxiij. yere of Nabuchodonosor, Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne, tooke awaye seuen hundred, foure and fiue Jewes prisoners. The whole summe of all the prisoners, is foure thousande and sixe hundreth. In the .xxxvij. yere after that Jehoakim the king of Juda was caried away in the .xxv. daye of the .xij. moneth, Euilmerodach kinge of Babilon (the same yeare that he reygned) gaue Jehoakim the king of Juda his pardon, and let him oute of prison, & spake louingly to him. And set his trone aboue the trones of the other kinges that were with him in Babilon. He chaunged also the clothes of his prison, yea, and he did eate with him al his life long. And he had a continuall liuing geuen him of the kinge of Babilon, euery daye a certayne thing alowed him all the dayes of his life, vntill he dyed.

The end of the boke of the Prophet Jeremy.

The lamentations of Jeremy.

The first Chapter.

A Las, howe sitteth the Citie so desolate, that sometyme was full of people? Howe is shee become like a widowe, *which was the lady of all nations? Howe is she brought vnder tribute, that ruled all landes. She weepeth sore in the nighte, so that the teares runne downe her cheekes: for among all her louers, there is none that geueth her any comforte: yea her nexte frendes transgresse agaynst her, and are become her enemyes. Juda is taken prisoner, because she was defiled: and for seruinge so manye straunge gods, she dwelleth nowe amonge the Heathen. Shee findeth no reste, all

ALas, • how hath the Lorde darkened the daughter of Sion so sore in his wrathe? Is for the honour of Israell, he hath cast it downe from heauen vnto the earth. Howe happeneth it, that he remembred not his owne • foote stole when he was angrye? The Lorde hath cast downe all the habitations of Jacob without any fauoure, all the stronge places of the daughter of Juda hath he broken in his wrath, and throwen them downe to the ground: her kingdome & her princes hath he suspended. In the wrath of his indignation he hath broken all the horne of Israel, he hath withdrawen his right hand frō the enemy: yea, a flame of fyre is kindled in Jacob, and hath consumed vp al round about. He hath bent his bowe lyke an enemie, he hath fastened his righte hande, as an aduersarie: and euery thing that was pleasant to se, he hath smitten it downe. He hath poured out his wrath lyke a fire into the tabernacle of the daughter of Sion. The Lorde is become lyke as it were an enemie, he hath deuoured Israell and all his palaces: yea, all his strong holdes hath he destroyed, and fylled the daughters of Juda with muche sorowe and heauynes. • Her tabernacle (whiche was lyke a garden of pleasure) hath he destroied: her hie solemne feastes hath he put down. The Lorde hath brought it so to passe, that the solemne feastes and Sabothes in Sion, are cleane forgotten. In his heauy displeasure hath he made the king and priestes to be despised. The Lord hath forsaken his owne aulter, and hath abhorred his owne sanctuary, and hath geuen the walles of their tounes into the hands of the enemie. ¶ Their enemies made a noyse in the house of the Lorde, as it had bene in a solemne feast day. The Lord thought to breake downe the walles of the daughter of Syon, he spred out his line, and drewe not in his hand, till he had destroyed them: Therfore mourn the turrettes and the broken walles together. Her gates are sonke downe to the grounde, her barres are broken and smitten in sunder. • Her kinges and princes are caried away to the Gentils. They haue neither lawe nor Prophetes, nor yet anye vision from the Lorde. The Senatoures of the daughter Sion sit vpō the ground in silence: they haue strawed ashes vpon their heades, and girded them selues with sackecloth. The maydens of Jerusalem hange downe theyr heades to the ground. Mine eyes begin to fayle me thorowe weping, • my body is disquieted, my lyuer is powred vppon the earthe, for the greate hurte of my people, seeyng the childrenne and babes didde swowne in the streetes of the citie. Euen when they spake to their mothers: where is meate and drinke? for whyle they soo sayde, they fell downe in the streetes of the Citie, lyke as they hadde beene wounded, and some dyed in their mothers bosome. What shall I saye of thee, O thou daughter Jerusalem, to whome shall I lycken thee? To whome shall I compare thee, O thou daughter of Syon, to comforte thee withall? Thy hurte is lyke a mayne sea, who maye heale thee? • Thy prophetes haue looked out vayne and foolishe thinges for thee, they haue not shewed thee of thy wickednesse, to kepe thee from captiuitie: but haue ouerladen thee, and thorowe falshod scattered thee abrode. All they that gooe by thee, clappe their handes at thee, hyssinge and waggynge theyr heades vppon the daughter of Jerusalem, and saye: Is this the citie that men call so fayre: where in the whole lande reioyseth? All thine enemies gape vppon thee, whisperinge and bytyng theyr teeth, saying: let vs deuour, for the time that we loked for is come, we haue founde and seene it. The Lorde hath fulfilled the thing that he was purposed to do:

IT chaced in the .xxx. yeare, the fifth daye of the fourth month that I was amonge the prisoners by the river of Cobar, wher the heauens opened and I sawe a vision of God. Nowe the fifth day of the moneth made out the fifth yere of king Jehoakims captiuitie. At the same time came the worde of the Lord vnto Ezechiel the son of Buzi the priest, in the lande of the Chaldees by the water of Cobar, ✠ where the hande of the Lorde came Ez.10.a vpon him. And I looked, and behold, a stormy winde came out of the north with a great cloude full of fyre, whiche with his glister lightened all rounde aboute. And in the middest of the fire, it was all cleere like the face of an angell, and as it were the likenesse of the four beasts, and this was their likenes. They were fashioned like a man, sauinge, that euerye one had foure faces, and foure winges. Their legges were straight, but their feete were like bullockes feete, and they glistered, as it hadde beene fayre fonged mettall. Vnder theyr winges vppon all the foure corners, they hadde mennes handes. Their faces and their winges were toward the foure corners, yet were the winges so that one ouer touched an other. When they went, they turned theim not about, but echeone went streight forward. Furthermore, this was the C similitude of their faces. ✠ Vpon the Eze.10.b right side of these foure, their faces were like the face of a manne, and the face of a Lion. But vpon the left syde they hadde the face of an Oxe, and the face of an Egle. Their faces also and their winges were spred out aboue, so that twoo winges of one touched euer twoo winges of an other, and with the other they couered their body. Euery one when it went, it went streight forwarde. Where as the spirite ledde theym, thither they went, ✠ and tourned not aboute in their go- Eze.10.c inge. The fashion and countenaunce D of the beastes, was like hotte coales of fyre, euen as thoughe burninge cressettes had beene amonge the beastes: (this was the vision) and the fyre gaue a glister, and out of the fyre there wente lightninge. When the beastes went forward and backward, one would haue thoughte it hadde lightened. Nowe when I hadde well considered the beastes, I sawe a worke of wheeles vppon the earth with foure faces also nighe vnto the beastes. The fashion and woorke of the wheeles was like the Sea. The foure wheeles were ioyned and made (to looke vpon) as it had beene one wheele in another. When one went forwarde, they wente all foure, and tourned them not aboute in their goinges. They were large, great, and horrible to looke vppon. Theyr backes were full of eyes rounde aboute theym all foure. When the beastes wente, the wheeles wente also with theym. And when the beastes lifte E them selues vppe from the earth, the wheeles were lifte vp also. Whither soeuer the spirite went, thither went they also, and the wheeles were lyfte vp, and folowed them: for the spirite of life was in the wheeles. When the beastes wente foorthe, stoode still, or lifte them selues from the earth, then the wheeles also went, stode still, and were lift vppe, for the breathe of life was in the wheles. Above, ouer the heades of the beastes there was a firmament, whiche was fashioned as it had bene of the moste pure Christall and that was spread out aboue vppon their heades: vnder the same firmament wer their winges layde abrode one towarde another, and two winges couered the bodye of euery beast. F And when they went forth, I hearde the noyse of their winges like the noyse of great waters, as it had bene the voyce of the great GOD, and a rushinge together, as it were of an hooste of men. And when they stoode still, they let downe their winges. Nowe when they stoode still, and had letten downe theyr winges, it thondred in the firmamente that was aboue their heades. Aboue the firmamente that was ouer their heades, there was the fashion of a seate, as it Eze. 8. d. had bene made of Saphir. Vpon the G seate there sat one like a manne. • I beheilde him, and he was like an aungell, as it had bene all of fyre within from his loines vpward. And beneth when I looked vpon him vnder the loynes, me thought he was like a shining fyre, that geueth light on euery side. Yea, the shine and glister that lightned rounde aboute, was like a raynebowe, which in a raynie daye appereth in the cloudes. Euen so was the similitude, wherein the glorye of the Lorde appered. When I sawe it, I fel vpon my face, and herkened vnto the voyce of him that spake.

AND then sayde he vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete (O Eze. 3. d thou son of man) and I will talke with thee. • And as hee was commoning with me, the spirit came into me and set me vp vpon my feete: so that I marked the thinge that hee sayde vnto me. And he sayde: Beholde thou sonne of man, I will sende thee to the children of Israel, to those runnagates, and obstinate people, for they haue taken parte agaynst me, and are runne away from me, • both they and Exo. 22. their forefathers vnto this daye. Yea, I will sende thee vnto a people that haue rough visages and stiffe stomackes, vnto whome thou shalte saye on this maner: This the Lord God him selfe hath spoken, that whether they be obedient or no (for it is a frowarde housholde) they may knowe yet that there hath beene a prophete amonge them. • Therfore thou sonne of man) Jer. 1. feare them not, neyther be afrayde of C their wordes, for prouokers and thornes ar with thee. Yea, thou dost dwell amonge scorpions, but feare not their wordes, be not abashed at their lokes for it is a froward housholde. Speake thou speake my woordes vnto them, whether they be obedient or not, for they are obstinate. Therfore thou son of man, obey thou all thinges that I saye vnto thee, and be not thou stiffenecked, lyke as they are a stiffenecked D housholde. Open thy mouth, and eate that I geue thee. So as I was looking vp, behold, there was sente vnto me an hande, wherein was closed • a Apo. 5. d booke, and the hande opened it before mee, and it was writte within and without full of carefull mournynges, alas, and wo.

AFter this, sayde he vnto me: I Thou sonne of man, eat that, whatsoeuer it be: yea, • eat y Jer. 15. booke, and go thy way, and speake vnto the children of Israell. So I opened my mouthe, and hee gaue mee the booke for to eate, and sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thy bealye shall eat, and thy bowels shalbe filled with the booke that I geue thee. Then did I eate the booke, and it was in my Pla. 19. mouth sweeter thē hony. And he sayd Apo. 10. vnto me, thou son of manne, • get thee • Jer. 1. soone vnto the house of Israell, and B shewe them the wordes, that I commaūded the, for I send thee not to the people that hath a straunge bablinge speeche, or hard speeche, but vnto the house of Israell, Not to manye nations, which haue diuers speeches and hard languages, whose woordes thou vnderstandest not. Jer. 3.a • Neuertheles, yf I sent thee to those people, they woulde folowe thee. But the house of Israell will not folowe thee, for they will not folow me: yea, al the house of Israell haue stiffe foreheades and harde herts. C He sayde moreouer vnto me: thou son of man, take diligent heede with thyne eares, to the woords that I speake vnto thee, fasten them in thine hearte, and go to the prisoners of thy people, speake vnto them, and say on this maner: Thus the Lorde God hath spoken, whether ye heare or heare not. With that the spirite toke me vp. And I hearde the noyse of a greate rushinge and remouing of the moost blessed glorye of the Lorde out of his place. I hearde also the noyse of the wynges of the beastes, that rushed one agaynst another, yea, and the ratlyng of the wheles that were by them, which rushing Ezec. 8.a and noyse was very greate. D • Nowe when the spirite tooke me vp, and carryed me away, I went with an heauye and a sorowefull mynde, but the hand of the Lorde comforted me right soone. And so in the beginning of the moneth Abib, Anno. 1378 I came to the prisoners • that dwelte by the water of Cobar, and remayned in that place, where they were. And so continued I among them seuen dayes, beeyng very sory. And when the seuen dayes were expired, the Lord sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of manne, I haue made thee a watchman vnto the house of Israell: therefore take good hede to the woords of my mouth, and geue them warning at my commaundemente. E If I saye vnto thee, concerninge the vngodye man, (that without doubte) he muste dye, and thou geuest him not warninge, nor speakest vnto him, that he may turne from his euill way, and so to liue: Then shall the same vngodye man die in his owne vnrighteousnes, but his bloud wil I require of thine hand. Neuertheles, yf thou geue warninge vnto the wicked, and he yet forsake not his vngodynesse: then shal he dye in his owne wickednesse, but thou hast discharged thy soule. F Nowe yf a righteous manne goo from • hys Eze. 18.a righteousnes, and do the thinge that is euill: I will laye a stumblynge blocke before him, and he shal dye because thou haste not geuen him warninge: yea, dye shall he in his owne sinne, so that the vertue, which he did before shall not be thought vpon: but his bloude will I require of thyne hande. Neuertheless, yf thou exhortest the righteous that he synne not, and so the righteous doo not synne: then shall he liue, because he hath receaued thy warninge, and thou haste discharged thy soule. And there came the hande of the Lorde vpon me, and he sayd vnto me: Stand vp, and go into the fielde, that I maye there talke with thee. So when I had risen vp, and gone forth into the field: Behold, the glory of the Lord stode there, • like Ezec. 1.a as I sawe it afore, by the water of Cobar. • Then fel I downe vpon my Ezec. 2.a face, & the spirite came into me, which G set me vp vpon my feete, and sayd thus vnto me: Go thy way, and shutte thy selfe in thine house. Beholde (O thou sonne of man) there shall chaynes be brought for the, to bind thee withal, so that thou shalt not escape out of them. And I will make thy tong cleue so to the rose of thy mouth, that thou shalt be dõme, and not be as a chyder with them, for it is an obstinate housholde. But when I speake vnto thee, then open thy mouth, and say: Thus sayth the Lord god: who so heareth, let him heare: who so will not, let him leaue, for it is an obstinate housholde.

A THou sonne of man: take a litle stone, and laye it before thee, and describe vppon it the citie

of Ierusalem, howe it is besyeged, howe bulwarkes and stronge dyches are grauen on euery side of it: describe also tentes, and an host of men rounde about it, with engines of war. Moreouer, take an yron panne, and set it betwixt thee and the Citie, in steede of an yron wall. Then sette thy face towarde it, besyege it, and laye ordinaunce agaynst it, to win it. This shalbe a token vnto the house of Israel. But thou shalt slepe vpon thy lefte syde, and laye the sinne of the house of Israell vpon thee. Certaine daies appoynted, thou shalt sleepe vppon that syde, and beare theyr sinnes. • Neuertheless, I wil appoynt thee a time (to putte of their sinnes) and the number of the daies. Three hundred & ninetye daies must thou beare the wickednes of the house of Israel. Whē thou hast fulfilled these daies, lie downe againe and sleepe vpon thy righte syde fortie daies, and bear the sinnes of the house of Iuda. • A daye for a yere, a daye (I saye) for a yere, will I euer laye vpon thee. Therefore set nowe thy face agaynst that besieged Ierusalem, and discouer thine arme, that thou mayest prophecie agaynst it. Behold, I will lay chaynes vpon thee, that thou shalt not turne thee from one syde to another, till thou haste ended the dayes of this besieging. Wherefore, take vnto thee wheate, barlye, beanes, groswell seede, Milium and fitches, and putte them together in a vessell, and make thee loaues of bread therof, according to the number of the dayes that thou muste lye vppon thy syde, that thou mayest haue bread to eate, for .cccxc. hundred and ninetie daies. And the meate that thou eatest, shall haue a certayne weight appointed: namely, twentye sicles euery daye. This appoynted meate shalte thou eate dayly from the beginning to the ende. Thou shalte drinke also a certayne measure of water: Namely the sixte part of an Hyn shalt thou drinke dayly from the beginning vnto the ende. Barlye cakes shalte thou eate, yet shalt thou fyrst bake them at a fyre made with mans donge, that they may see it. And with that sayde the Lord. Euen thus shall the children of Israel eate their defyled bread in the middest of the Gentyles, amonge whom I will scatter them. Then sayde I: O Lorde God, Behold my soule was yet neuer stayned, for fro my youth vppe vnto this houre, I did neuer eate of a dead carkase, or of that whiche was slayne of wilde beastes, nether came there euer any vncleane flesh in my mouth. Wher vnto he answered me, and saide: Well then, I will graunte thee to take cowes donge for the donge of a manne, and to bake the bread withall before them. And he saide vnto me: Behold thou son of man, • I will minishe all the prouision of bread in Ierusalem, so that they shall wey their bread, and eate it with scarsitie. But as for water, they shall haue a verye little measure therof to drinke. And when they haue no more bread nor water, one shal be destroyed with another, and famish away, for their wickednes.

Thou sonne of man, take thee then a sharpe knyfe, namely, a rasour. Take that, and shaue the heare of thy head and beard: Then take the scales and the weyghte, and deuide the heare a sunder. And after thou haste accomplished the dayes of the siege, burne the thirde parte therof in the fyre, in the middest of the citie, and cut the other third part in peeces, with a knyfe. • As for the third part that remayneth, caste it in the winde, and I will drawe out the sweard after them. Yet afterwarde, take a little of the same, and bind it in thy cote lap. Then take a cortelie of it, & cast it in the middest of the fyre, and burne it in the fyre. Out of the same fyre shall there go a flame, vpon the whol house of Israell. selues, and broken my commaundementes more then the nations, that lye rounde about her: For they haue caste out mine ordinaunces, and not walked in my lawes. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God. • For so muche Lm.18d as ye haue beene more augmented in number of people then the Heathen, that dwel rounde about you, and ye haue not walked in my lawes, neyther haue yee kept mine ordinaunces, and ye haue not liued so righteously as the Heathen that are rounde about C you: Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God, I will also come vppon thee, I my selfe, I say, for in the midst of thee will I sit in iudgement, in the sighte of the heathen, and wil handle thee of such a fashion as I neuer did before, and as I neuer wil do from that time forthe, and that because of all thine abhominations. For the fathers. Lm.:8.c. • shalbe sayne to eate their owne sonnes, Ge.16 f and the soonnes theyr owne fathers. Such a courte will I keepe in thee, and the whole remnaunt of thee will I scatter into all the windes. Wherefore, as truely as I liue (sayth the Lord God) seeing thou hast defyled my sanctuarye, with all maner of abhominations, and with all thy shamefull offences: For this cause will I also destroye thee. Myne eye shall not oversee thee, neyther will Ie.:5 a I spare thee. • One third part within thee, shall dye of the Pestilence, and of hunger. Another thirde parte shalbe slaine downe rounde about thee with the sweard: The other thirde D parte that remaineth, will I scatter abrode towarde all the windes, and drawe oute the sweard after them. Thus I wil perfourme my indignation, and set my wrath agaynst them and ease my selfe. So that when I haue fulfilled mine anger agaynste them, they shall knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche with a feruent gelousye haue spoken it. Moreouer I will make thee waste and abhorred, before all the heathen that dwell about thee, and in the sight of all them that go by ther: so that when I punishe thee in my wrath, in mine anger, and with the plague of my whole displeasure: thou shalt bee a derye abhomination, shame, a gasing and wondring storke, among the Hethen, that ly about thee. Euen I the Lord haue spoken it, and it shall come to passe, when I shote among them the perilious darts of hunger, which shalbe but death. Yea, therfore shall I shote them, because I wil destroye you: • I will encrease hunger, and minishe all the prouision of bread among you. Plages and misery will I send you, yea and wilde beasts also to destroye you. Pestilence and blud sheding shal come vpon you, and the sweard will I bring vpon you. Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it. Ezec.14.

The. vi. Chapter.

AND the woorde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, tourne thy face B to the • mountaynes of Israell, that Ezec.36. thou mayest prophecy vnto them, and saye: Heare the word of the Lord God O ye mountaynes of Israell: Thus hath the Lord God spoken to the mountayns, hilles, valleys, and dales. Behold, I, I my selfe I say, will bringe a sweard ouer you, and destroye your Aultares, and breake downe youre hye places: I will caste downe youre images. Your slayne men will I laye before your gods, and the dead carkases of the childzen of Israell will I caste before their Idoles, youre bones will I destroye rounde aboute your aultares, and dwelling places. B The Cities shalbe desolate, the hill chappelles layde waste, youre aultars destroyed and broken, youre Goddes caste downe and taken awaye, youre temples layde euen with the ground, youre owne woorkes cleane rooted oute. Youre slayne menne shall lye amonge you, that ye maye learne to knowe, howe that I am the Lorde. Those that be amonge you, and haue escaped the sweard, will I leaue amonge the Gentiles, for I will scatter you amonge the Nations. And they that escape of you, shal thinke vpon me amonge the Heathen, where they shalbe in captiuitie. As for that whooryshe and vnfaithefull heart of theirs, wherwith they runne awaye from mee, I will breake it: yea, and put out those eyes of theirs, that committe fornication with theyr ydols. Then shall they be ashamed and displeased with their selues, for the wickednesses and abhominations, which they haue done: and shall lerne to knowe, that I am the Lorde, howe that it is not in vayn, that I the Lord spake, to bring suche misery vppon them. The Lord sayd moreouer vnto mee: Smite thine handes together, and stampe with thy feete, & say: Woe worthe all the abhominations and wickednesses of the house of Israel, for because of them, they shall perishe with the swearde, with hunger, and with pestilence: who so is farre off, shall dye of the pestilence, hee that is nye at hande, shall perishe with the swearde, and the other that remayne and that are besieged, shal dye of hunger. Thus will I satisfy my wrothfull displeasure vppon them. And so shall ye learne to knowe, that I am the Lord, when your slaine men lye amonge your ydols, and about your altars, vppon all hye hilles and toppes of mountaynes among al grene trees, among al thicke okes, euen in the places, where they did sacrifice vnto all their ydols. I will stretch mine hand oute vppon theym, and will make the lande waste. So that it shall lye desolate and voyde, from the wildernesse of Deblothah forth, throughe all their habitations: to learne theym for to knowe that I am the Lorde.

The.vj. Chapter.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner. Thee I call, O thou sonne of manne. Thus sayth the Lorde God vnto the land of Israell: The end commeth vpon the land of Israell: yea verily the ende commeth vpon all the foure corners of the lande. But nowe shall the ende come vpon thee, for I will sende my wrath vpon thee, and will punish thee according to thy wayes, and reward thee after all thine abhominatiõs. • Mine eye shall not oversee thee, Ezr.7.b neither will I spare thee, but reward thee, according to thy ways, & declare thine abhominations. Then shall yee knowe that I am the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, one misery and plage shall come after an other: the ene is here, the ende I saye is come, it watcheth for thee: beholde, it is come alreadye, the destruction is earlye come agaynst thee, that dwellest in the lande. The time is at hand, B the day of sedition is harde by, and the crye shall not be as the soundinge agayne of the mountaynes. Therefore I will shortly poure out my sore displesure ouer thee, and fulfil my wrath vpon thee, I will iudge thee after thy ways, & recompence thee al thy abhominations. • Mine eye shal not ouer- Ezr.7.d C see thee, neyther wil I spare thee, but reward thee after thy wayes, and thine abhominations shall bee punished in the middes of thee, to learne you for to know, howe that I am the Lorde that smiteth. Beholde, the daye is here, the day is come, the houre is runne out, the rodde florisheth, pryde waxeth greene, malicious violence is growen vp, and the vngodlye waxen to a staffe. None of them shal remaine ouer, none of their riches, not one of their seede, and no lamentation shalbe made for them. The time commeth, 1 Cor.7 the day draweth nye: • who so byeth, let him not reioyce, he that selleth, let him not be sorye: for whyle • Trouble Jer.15.d shall come in the middest of them all: 1 Tess.5 so that the seller shal not come againe D to the thing he solde, although their lyfe be yet with the liuing. The trompettes shall ye blowe, and make you all readye, but no man shal go to the battel, for I am wroth with all the whole multitude. The swearde shalbe without, pestilence & hunger within: so that who so is

My face will I turne frō them, my treasurye shalbe defyled, for the theues shal go into it, and suspend it. Make a chein, for the land is whol

Wherefore, I will bringe the most cruell tiraunte from amonge the Heathen, to take their houses in possession. I will make the pompe of the proud to ceasse and their sanctuary shall be defyled. When this trouble commeth, they shall seeke peace, but they shall haue none. One mischiefe and sorowe shall folowe another, and one rumour shall

I will do vnto theym after their owne wayes, according to their owne iudgementes will I iudge them, to learne them for to knowe that I am the Lord.

IT happened, that in the sixt yeare the fifth day of the sixt moneth, I sat in my house, and the Lordes of the councel of Juda with me, and the hande of the Lord God fell euen there vpon me. And as I looked vppe, • I sawe as it were a likenes of fyre from his loines downeward, and from his loines vpward, it shined maruelous cleere and like an angell to loke vpon. • This similitude stretched oute an hande, and toke me by the heary lockes of my head, and the spirite lift me vp betwixte heauen and earthe, and brought me in a vision to Jerusalem into the entrye of the inner porte that lyeth towarde the North, there stode an ymage, with whom he that hath all thinges in his power, was verye wroth. And beholde, the glory of the God of Israel was in the same place: euen • as I hadde sene it afore in the fielde. And he sayde vnto mee: Thou sonne of man, O lifte vp thine eyes, and looke towarde the North. Then lifte I vppe myne eyes towarde the North, and beholde: beside the port northward, there was an aultar made vnto the ymage of prouocation in the very entring in. And he sayde further more vnto me: Thou son of man seest thou what these do? Seest thou the great abhominatiōs that ỳ house of Israell committeth in this place? to driue me from my sanctuary? But turne thee about, and thou shalt se yet greater abhominations. And with that brought he me to the court gate, and when I loked, behold, there was an hole in the wall. Then sayd he vnto mee: Thou sonne of manne, digge through the wall. And when I digged through the wall, beholde, there was a dore. And he saide vnto me: Go thy way in, & looke what wicked abhominations they do here. So I wēt in, and sawe: and behold, there wer all maner ymages of wormes & beastes, all Idoles and abhominations of the house of Israell paynted euerye one round about the wall. Eyther stode also before the ymages. • lxx. Lordes of Exo. 18d the counsell of the house of Israell: and in the midst of them stode Jaazniah the sonne of Saphan. And euery one of thē had a censoure in his hand, and oute of the cense, there wente a smoke, as it had bene a cloude. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, hast thou seene what the Senatoures of the house of Israel do secretly, euery one in his chamber? • For they say: Job. 22b Esa. 22. c Tushe, the Lorde seeth vs not, the Lord regardeth not the world. And he sayd vnto me: Turne thee yet againe, and thou shalt see yet greater abhominations that they do. And with that he brought me to the dore of the porte of the Lords house, toward the north. And behold, there sat women mourning for Tamus. Then sayd he vnto me: haste thou sene this, thou sonne of man? Turne thee about, & thou shalt see yet greater abhominations then these are. And so he brought me into the inward court of the Lords house: and beholde at the porte of the Lords house, betwixt the fore entrye and the aultar, there were fiue and twentye men, that turned their backes vpon the temple of the Lord, and their faces towarde the easte, and these worshipped the sunne. And he sayde vnto me: hast thou seene this, thou son of man? Thinketh the house of Juda, that it is but a tryfle, to do these abhominations here? Should they fill the land full of wickednes, and vndertake to prouoke me vnto anger? Yea, and purposely to cast vp their noses vpō me. Therefore will I also do some thing in my wrathfull displeasure, so that myne eye shall not ouersee them, neyther will I spare them. • Yea, and Prou. 1 c Jer. 11 b Mich. 3 a though they cry in mine eares with a loud voyce, yet wil I not heare them.

HE cried also with a loud voyce A in mine eares, sayinge: Come, heare ye rulers of the Citie, euery man with his weaponed hand to the slaughter. Then came there sixe men out of the strete of the vpper port towarde the North, and euery man a weapon in his hand to the slaughter. There was one amongest them, that had on him a linnen raymente, and a B writers pynkhorn by his syde. These went in, and stoode besyde the brasen aultar, for the glorye of the Lord was gone away from the • Cherub which Exo. 9a was vpon him, and was come downe to the threlholde of the house, and hee called the man that had the linnen rayment vpon him, and the writers pynkhorne by his side, and the Lorde sayde vnto him: Go thy waye through the Citie of Jerusalem, and set a marke vppon the foreheades of theym that mourn and are sory for al the abhominations, that be done therein. And to the other, he saide that I might heare. Judi. 21 • Go ye after him through the Citie, C slay, euerse none, spare none, kill and destroy both men and yong maydens, childrē, and wiues. But as for those that haue the marke vppon them, see that ye touche them not, • and begin at Jer. 25 my Sanctuary. Then they began at 1 Pet. 4 the elders, which were in the temple, for he had sayde vnto them. When ye haue defyled the temple, and filled the court with the slayne, then go youre waye forth. So they wente oute, and slewe downe through the citie. Now whē they had done the slaughter, & I yet escaped, I fel down vpon my face, and cryed, saying: O Lord God, wilt D thou then destroy al the residue of Israel, in thy sore displeasure, that thou hast poured vpon Jerusalem? Then sayd he vnto me: The wickednesse of the house of Israel and Juda is very great, so that the land is full of blood, and the citie full of vnfaythfulnesse: for they saye: • Tushe, the Lorde re- Job. 22 gardeth not the earth, he seeth vs not. pence their wickednesse vppon their heades, And behold, the man that had the linnen rayment vppon him, and the writers ynkehorne by his syde, tolde al the maner howe it happened, and sayde: Lorde as thou hast commaunded me, so haue I done.

A AND as I loked, beholde, in the firmamente that was aboute the Cherubines there appeared the similitude of a stole of Saphir vppon them: Ezec.9.8 * Then sayde he that sat therin, to him that had the linnen rayment vppon him: Creepe in betwene the wheeles that are vnder the Cherubines, and take thyne handefull of hoate coles oute from betwene the Cherubines, and caste them ouer the citie. And he crept in that I mighte see. Now the Cherubines stode vpon the righte syde of the house, when the men went in, and the cloude filled the 2.par.7.8 inner courte. * But the glory of the Lord remoued from the Cherubines, and came vppon the threshold of the house: so that the temple was full of cloudes, and the court was full of the shine of the Lordes glorye. Yea, and the sound of the Cherubines winges was heard into the fore court, lyke as it had bene the voyce of the almightie God, when he speaketh. Nowe when he had bydden the man that was clothed in linnen, to go and take the hote coles from the middest of the wheles which were vnder the Cherubines: he went and stode beside the wheles. Then the one Cherub reached foorth his hand from vnder the Cherubines, vnto the fyre that was betwene the Cherubins, and toke therof, and gaue it vnto him that hadde on the linnen raymente in his hande: whiche tooke B it, and went out. And vnder the winges of the Cherubines, there appeared the likenes of a mans hand: I sawe also foure wheeles beside the Cherubins, so that by euery Cherub there stode a whele. And the wheeles were (to loke vpon) after the fashion of the precious stone of Tharsis: yea (vnto the sighte) they were all foure of one fashion, as yf one whele hadde bene in another. When they went C forth, they went al foure together, not turning about in their goynge. But where the fyrste went, thyther went they after also, so that they turned not aboute in their goynge. Their whole bodies, their backes, their hands, and winges, yea, and the wheeles also, wer all full of eyes round about them all foure. And I heard him call the wheeles. * Euery one of them hadde Ezec.1.1 foure faces, so that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the seconde of a man, the third of a lyon, the fourth of an Eagle, and they were lyfted vp aboue. This is the beaste, that I sawe at the water of Cobar. Nowe when the Cherubines went, the wheeles went with them, and when the Cherubins shoke their winges to lyfte them selues vpward, the wheeles remayned not behinde, but were with them also. Shortly, when they stode, these stode also. And when they were lyft vp, the wheeles were lyft vp also with them, for the spyrete of lyfe was D in the wheeles. * Then the glorye of Ezc.11.b the Lorde was lyft vp from the threshold of the temple, and remayned vpon the Cherubines: And the Cherubines flackered with their winges, and lyfte them selues vppe from the earth: so that I sawe when they went, and the wheles with them. And they stode at the easte syde of the porte that is in the house of the Lorde. So the glorye of the Lorde was vppon them. This is the beast that I sawe vnder the God of Israell, by the water of Cobar. And I perceaued, that it was the Cherubins. Euery one had foure faces, and euery one foure wynges, and vnder their winges, as it were mens handes. Nowe the fygure of their faces was, euen as I had seene them by the water of Cobar, and so was the countenaunce of theim. Euery one in his goyng went streight forwarde.

A ¶ The.xi.Chapter.

MOreouer, the spyrete of the Lorde lyfte me vp, & brought me vnto the East port of the Lordes house. And behold there were xxv.men vnder the dore, among whō I sawe Jaazniah the sonne of Azur, and Pheltiah the sonne of Bananiah the rulers of the people. Then sayd the Lorde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these men ymagine mischiefe, and a wicked councel take they in this citie, saying: tush, there is no destruction at hande, let vs buylde houses: this Jerusalem is the cauldron, and we be the fleshe. Therfore shalt thou prophecie vnto them, yea, prophecye shalte thou vnto theym, O sonne of man. And with that fell the spyrete of the Lorde vppon me, and sayde vnto me: Speake, thus sayth the Lord. On this maner haue ye spoken (O ye B house of Israell) and I knowe the ymaginations of your hearts. Many one haue ye murthered in this Citie, and filled the stretes full of the slayne. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: the slayne men that ye haue layde on the grounde in this citie, are the fleshe, and this citie is the cauldron: Eze.14.a *But I will bring you out of it, *ye *mat.26 haue feared the swearde, and I will bringe a swearde ouer you, sayth the Lorde God. I will drive you out of this citie, and deliuer you into your ennemyes hande, and will condemne you. Ye shalbe slayne in all the costes of Israell, I will be auenged of you, to learne you for to knowe, that I am the Lord. This citie shall not be your cauldron, neyther shall ye be the fleshe therin: but in the costes of Israel will I punish you, that ye may knowe, that I am the Lorde: in whose commaundements ye haue not walked, nor kept Leu.28.a his lawes, *but haue done after the De.11.d customes of the Heathen, that lye rounde aboute you. Nowe when I preached, Pheltiah the sonne of Ba-C nanias dyed. Then fell I downe vppon my face, and cryed with a loude voyce, saying: O Lord god, wilt thou then vtterly destroy all the remnaunt of Israell? And so the worde of the lord cam vnto me on this maner, thou sonne of man, thy brethren, thy kinfolke, and the whole house of Juda, which dwell in Jerusalem, say: with drawe ye farre from the Lorde, for the land is geuen vs in possession. Therfore tell them, thus sayeth the Lorde God: I will send you farre of among the Gentyles, and scatter you among the nations, and I will halowe you but a lytle, in the landes where ye shal come. Tell them also, thus sayeth the Lord God: I will gather you agayne out of the nations, and bringe you from the countries where ye be scattred, and wil geue you the land of Israell agayne. And they shall come hyther. And they shall take awaye all their Idoles and all their abhominations from thence. *And I will geue D Jer.31.d you one heart, and I wil plant a new Eze.36 spyret within your bowels. That stonie hert will I take out of your body, and geue you a fleshely hearte, that ye may walke in my commaundements, and keepe myne ordinaunces, and doo them, that ye maye be my people, and I your God. But loke whose hearts are disposed to folowe their abhominations and wicked liuinges: those mens dedes will I bring vpon their owne heades, sayeth the Lorde God. After this dyd the Cherubines lyfte vp their wynges, & the wheles went with them, and the glory of the Lord was vppon theym: *So the glorye of Eze.10.b the Lorde went vp from the middest of the citie, and stode vpon the mount of the citie towarde the East. *But Eze.3.b the winde toke me vp, and in a vision (whiche came by the spirite of God) it brought me agayne into Caldea among the prisoners. Then the vision that I had seene vanyshed awaye fro me. So I spake vnto the prisoners, al the wordes of the Lord, which he had shewed me.

THe woorde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of manne, thou dwellest in the midthe middell of a frowarde housholde, Esay.6.b • whiche haue eyes to see, and yet see mat.14.b not: eares haue they to heare, and yet mar.4.a. they heare not, for they are an obsti-Luc.8.b nate housholde. Therefore (O thou Ie.28.d sonne of man) make thy geare redy to Ro.11.b flee, and go forthe by fayre daye light, that they may see. Yea, euen in theyr sighte shalt thou go from thy place to another place, yf peraduenture they will consider, that they bee a disobedient housholde: Thy geare that thou hast made ready to flyt withall, shalte thou beare out by fayre day lyght that they may see, and thou thy selfe shalte go forth also at euen in their sight, as a man doeth when he flitteth. Digge through the wall, that they may see, E beare through it the same thing, that F thou tokest vp in their sight: In their sight shalt thou beare vpon thy shoulders, and carye it forth in the darke.

Hyde thy face that thou see not the earth, for I haue made thee a shew token vnto the house of Israell. Now as the Lorde commaunded me, so I did: the geare that I had made readye brought I oute by daye. At euen I brake downe an hole throughe the wall, with my hand: and whē it was darke, I toke the gere vpon my shoul ders, and bare them out in their sight.
G And in the morning, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, if Israell that froward housholde aske thee, and saye: what doest thou there? Then tell theym.
Thus sayth the Lorde God: Thys punishment toucheth the chiefe rulers at Ierusalem, and all the house of Israell, that dwell amonge them.
Tell them: I am your shewe token, lyke as I haue done, so shall it happen vnto you: Flee shall ye also, and Ie.21.b go into captiuitie. • The chiefest that H is amonge you, shall lade his shoulders in the darke, and get him awaye.
He shall breake downe the wall, to carye stuffe therthrough: He shall couer his face, that he se not the ground Ez.12.a with his eyes. • My line will I spread out vpon him, and catch him in my net, and carye him to Babilon, in the land of the Caldes, which he shall not see, and yet shall he dye there. As for all his helpers, and all his hostes, that be about him, I will scatter them toward all the windes, and draw out a sweard after them. • So when I Eze.15.b haue scattered them amonge the Hea- and.22.b then and strawed them in the landes, they shall know, that I am the Lord.
But I will leaue a little number of them from the sweard, hunger, and pestilence, to tell all their abhominations among the heathen, where they come, that they may know, howe that I am the Lord. Moreouer, the worde I of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man with a fearefull trembling shalt thou eate thy breade, K with carefulnesse and sorowe shalte thou drinke thy water. And vnto the people of the land, speake thou on this maner: Thus sayth the Lord God, to them that dwell in Ierusalem, and in the land of Israell: Ye shall eate your bread with sorowe, and drinke youre water with heauynes: Yea, the lande with the fulnes thereof shalbe layde waste, for the wickednes of them that dwell therein. And the Cities that nowe be well occupyed, shalbe voyde, and the lande desolate, that ye maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.
Yet came the worde of the Lord vnto me agayne, saying: Thou sonne of man, what maner of by worde is that which ye vse in the lande of Israell, saying: Tush, • seeing that the dayes 2 Pet.3 b are so slacke in comming, all the visions are of none effect: Tell them therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: I will make that by worde to ceasse, so that it shall no more be commonly vsed in Israell. But saye this vnto L them, the dayes are at hand, that euery thing which hath bene prophecyed, shalbe fulfilled. There shall no vision be in vayne, neyther any prophecie fayle among the children of Israell: For it is I the Lorde, that speake it: and whatsoeuer I the LORDE speake, it shalbe performed. And not be slacke in comminge. Yea, euen in your dayes (O ye froward housholde) I will

will I devise some thing, and bringe it to passe, sayeth the Lorde GOD. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Beholde, thou sonne of man: The house of Israell sayth on this maner: Euyll, as for the vision that he hath seene, it will be manye a daye or it come to passe: It is farre off yet, the thinge that he prophecieth. Therefore saye vnto theym. Thus sayth the Lorde God: All my wordes shall no more be slacke: Loke what I speake, that same shall come to passe, sayth the Lorde.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man: Speke, prophecy against those prophetes, that preache in Israel, and say thou vnto them that prophecy out of their owne herts. Heare the worde of the Lorde, thus sayth the Lorde God: * Wo be vnto those foolishe prophetes, that folowe their owne spirite, and speake where they see nothing. O Israell, thy prophetes are lyke the foxes vppon the drye fielde: For they stand not in the gappes, neither make they an hedge for the house of Israell, that men might abyde the battell in the day of the Lorde. Vayne thinges they see, and tell lyes, to * maintaine their preachings withal. The Lorde (saye they) hath spoken it, when in verye deede the Lorde hath not sente them. Vayne visions haue ye seene, and spoken false prophecies, when ye saye: the Lorde hath spoken it, whereas I neuer sayde it. Therefore, thus sayth the Lorde God: Because your wordes be vayne, and ye seeke out lyes: Beholde, I will vppon you, sayeth the Lorde. Mine handes shall come vpon the prophetes that looke oute vayne thinges, and preach lyes: they shall not be in the counceil of my people, nor written in the boke of the house of Israell, neyther shall they come in the lande of Israel, that ye may knowe, how that I am the Lorde God. And that for because they haue disceyued my people, * and told them of peace, where no peace was, One setteth vp a wal, and they daube it with loose claye. Therfore tell theym whiche daube it with vntempered morter, that it shall fall. * For there shall come a great shower of rayne, great hayle stones shall fall vppon it, and a sore storme of winde shall breake it, so shall the wall come downe. Shal it not then be said vnto you: where is nowe the morter, that ye daubed it withall? Therefore thus saith the Lord God: I wil breake out in my wrathfull displeasure, with a stormy winde, so that in mine anger there shall come a mighty shower of rayne, and hayle stones in my wrath to destroye withall. As for the wall that ye haue daubed with vntempred morter, I will breake it down, make it euen with the grounde, so that at the foundation thereof shall remoue, and it shall fall: yea, and ye youre selues shall perishe in the middes thereof, to learne you for to know, that I am the Lorde. Thus will I perfourme my wrath vpon this wal, and vpon them that haue daubed it with vntempered morter, and then will I say vnto you: The wall is gone, and the daubers are away. These are the prophetes of Israell, which prophecye vnto the citie of Jerusalem, and looke out visions of peace for them, wher as no peace is, sayth the Lord God. Wherfore (O thou sonne of man) set thy face against the daughters of thy people, which prophecy out of their owne heartes, and speake thou, prophecye against theym, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Wo be vnto you that sowe pilowes vnder all arme holes, and bolsters vnder the heades bothe of younge and olde, to catche soules withall. For when ye haue gotten the soules of my people in youre captiuitie, ye promise theim life, and dishonoure me to my people, for an handefull of barley, and for a peece of bread: when ye kill the soules of them that dye not, and promise life to them, that liue not. Thus ye dissemble with my my people that beleueth your lyes. wherfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, I will also vpon the pillowes wherwith ye catch the soules in flying: them will I take from your armes, and let the soules go, that yee catche in flying. Your bouilsters also will I teare in peeces, and deliuer my people oute of your handes, so that they shall come nomore in your handes to be spoyled, and ye shall knowe, that I am the Lord. The.xiiij. Chapter.

1 Ezr.20.a THere resorted vnto mee certayne of the elders of Israell, and satte downe by me. Then came the worde of the Lord vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of manne, these menne beare their vncleannesse in their heartes, and go purposely vpon the stumblynge blocke of theyr owne wickednes: should I then answere at their requeste? Therefore speake vnto them, and saye, thus sayth the Lorde God: Euerye man of the house of Israell that beareth his vncleane Idols in his heart, purposinge to stumble in his owne wickednesse, and commeth to a prophete, to enquire any thinge at me by him, vnto that man will I the Lorde my selfe geue aunswere, according to the multitude of the ydols: that the house of Israell may be snared in their owne heartes, because they be cleane gone fro me, for
tell the house of Israel: thus sayth the Lorde God. Be conuerted, forsake your ydols, and tourne your wiues from your sylthines, and turne your faces from all your abhominations. For euery manne (whether he be of the house of Israel, or a stranger, that sogeorneth in Israell) whiche departeth fro me, and carieth Idoles in his heart, purposing to go still stumblyng in his owne wickednesse, and commeth to a prophet, for to aske counceil at me thrugh him: vnto that manne will I the Lorde gene aunswere, by myne owne selfe. I will set my face agaynst that man, and will make him C to be an example for other, yea, and a common byword: and will roote him out of my people, that he may knowe howe that I am the Lorde, and yf 3.re.22.d that Prophete be disceaued, when he Iob.23.c telleth him a worde, then I the Lord my selfe haue disceaued that prophete, and will stretch forth mine hande vpon him, and roote him out of my people of Israell: and they bothe shalbe punished for their wickednes. Accordinge to the sinne of him that asketh, shall the sinne of the prophete be: that the house of Israel be led no more fro me thrughe erroure, and be no more defyled in their wickednes: but that they maye be my people, and I theyr God, sayth the Lorde God. And the D worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, when the lande synneth agaynst me, and goeth forth in wickednes, I will stretche out mine hande vpon it, and destroy Ezec.3.d all the prouision of their breade, and sende dearth vpon theym, to destroye manne and beaste in the lande. And Ier.15.a though Noe, Daniell, and Iob, these three men were among them, yet shall they in theyr righteousnesse deliuer but their owne soules, sayth the Lord God. If I bring noysome beastes into the lande to waste it vp, and it be so desolat that no man may go therin for beastes: if these three men also were in the land, as truely as I liue (saith the Lord God) they shal saue neither sonnes nor daughters, but be only deliuered themselues: and as for the land, it shalbe waste. Or yf I bring a sweard E into the lande, and charge it to go thorough the land, so that I slaye downe man & beast in it, and if these three men were therein: As truely as I liue (sayth the Lorde God) they shal deliuer neither sonnes nor daughters, but onely be saued them selues. If I send a pestilence into the lande, and powre oute my sore indignation vppon it in bloude, so that I roote out of it both man and beast: And if Noe, Daniell, and Job were therein: as truly as I liue (sayth the Lorde God) they shall deliuer neither sonnes nor daughters, but saue theyr owne soules in their righteousnesse. Moreouer, thus sayth the Lord God: Muche more when I Jer.27 b sende my • foure troublous plagues vpon Ierusalem: the sweard, hunger perilious beastes, and pestilence, to destroy man and beaste out of it. Behold, there shalbe a remnaunt saued therein, whiche shall bring forth their sonnes and daughters. Behold, they shall come forth vnto you, and ye shall see their waye, and what they take in hand, and ye shalbe comforted, as touchinge all the plagues that I haue brought vpon Ierusalem. They shal comforte you, when ye see their waye and workes: and ye shal knowe how that it is not without a cause that I haue done so agaynst Ierusalem, as I did, sayth the Lorde God.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of manne, what commeth of the vyne among all other trees, and of the wilde vine trees amonge all other tymber of the groue? Do men take wodde of it to make any worke with all? Or may there a nayle be made of it, to hang any thing vpon. Behold, it is caste in the fyre to be brente, the fyre consumeth bothe the endes of it, the middest is brente to asshes. Is it G mete then for any worke? No. Seing then that it was meete for no worke, beyng whole, muche lesse maye there any thing be made of it, when the fyre hath consumed and brent it. And therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Like as I cast the vine into the fyre for to be brente, as other trees of the wodde: Euen so will I doo with them that dwell in Ierusalem, and set my face against them, they shal go out from the fyre, and yet the fyre shal consume the. • Then shal ye knowe, that I am the Eze.12 Lorde, when I sette my face agaynst and, 22 them, and make the land wast, because they haue so sore offended, sayeth the Lorde God.

Agayne, the worde of the Lorde I spake vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, shewe the Citie of Ierusalem, theyr abhominations, and say: Thus sayth the Lorde God vnto Ierusalem: Thy progenie and kinred came out of the land of Canaã, • thy father was an Ammonite, thy mother a Cethite, thus was the maner of thy byrthe. In the day of thy byrth whē thou wast borne, the string of thy nauell was not cutte of, thou wast not bathed in water to make the cleane. Thou waste neither rubbed with salte, nor swadeled in cloutes. No man regarded thee so muche as to do any of these thinges for thee, or to shew thee such fauour: but thou wast vtterly cast out vpon the field, yea despised wast thou in ỹ day of thy birth. Then came I by thee, and sawe thee troden downe in thine owne bloude, and sayde vnto thee: Liue, although thou be defiled in thine owne bloude: yea, euen I (I tell thee) sayde vnto thee: liue, although thou be defiled in thyne owne bloude. • So I planted Esay.5 thee, as the blossome of the fielde: thou Jer.11 art growen vp, and waxen great, thou haste gotten a marueylous pleasaunt beautie, thy breastes are come vppe, thy heare is goodly growen, where as thou waste naked and bare afore.

Nowe when I went by thee, and lo- I ked vpon thee: Behold, tyme was come, yea, euen the time to wowe thee. Then spread I my clothes ouer thee, to couer thy dishonestie: yea, I made an othe vnto thee, • and maryed my Jer.3 selfe with thee (sayth the Lord God) Ose.2 and so thou becammest mine owne. Then washed I thee with water, & purged thy bloode from thee. I annointed thee with oyle: I gaue thee chaunge of raymentes: I made thee shoes of Taxus leather: I gyrded thee about with white sylke: I clothed thee wyth kercheses, I decked thee with costly apparell, I put rynges vpon thy fingers: a chayne about thy necke, spanges vpon thy forehead, eererynges vpon thyn eares, and set a beautyfull crowne vpon thyne heade. Thus was thou decked with syluer and gold, and thy raiment was of fine whyte silke, of nedle worke, and of diuers colours. Thou dydst eat nothing but symnels, hony, and oyle: meruailous goodly was thou and beautiful: yea, euen a very Queene waste thou. In somuch, that thy beautie was spoken of amonge the Heathen: for thou wast excellent in my beautie, whiche I put vpon thee, saith the Lord God. But thou hast put confidence in thyn owne beautie, and played the harlot, when thou hadst gotten thee a name. Thou haste commytted whoredome with all that went by thee, and haste fulfylled their desyres: yea thou hast taken thy garmentes of dyuers colours, and deckt thyne aulters therwith, wherupon thou myghtest fulfyll thyne whoredom, • and of such a fashyon, as neuer was done, nor shall be. • The goodlye ornamentes and Iewels, whiche I gaue thee of myne owne gold and syluer, hast thou taken and made thee mens images therof, & committed whoredome withal. Thy garmentes of dyuers coloures haste thou taken, and deckt them therwith: myne oyle and incense haste thou sette before them. My meat which I gaue thee, as symnels, oyle, and hony: (to fede thee withall) that haste thou set before them, for a swete sauour. And this came also to passe, saith the Lord God. • Thou hast taken thyn owne sonnes and daughters, whome thou hadest begotten vnto me: and these hast thou offred vp vnto them, to be their meat. Is this but a smal whoredome of thyne (thynkest thou) that thou hast slayne my children, and geuen them ouer, to be brent vnto them? And yet in all thy abhominations & whoredome, thou haste not remembred the dayes of thy youthe, howe naked and bare thou wast at that time, & troden downe in thyne owne bloode. After all these thy wyckednesses (woe woe vnto thee, saith the Lord) (thou hast buylded thy stewes and bordell houses in euery place.) Thou hast buylt hye places, yea, at the head of euery strete hast thou buylded thee an aulter. • Thou hast made thy beautie to be abhorred, thou hast layd oute thy legges to euery one that came by, and multiplied thyne whoredom. • Thou hast committed fornication wyth the Egyptians thy neyghboures, whiche hadde muche flesshe: and thus hast thou encreased thyne whoredome, to anger me. Behold, I dyd stretche out myne hande ouer thee, and dydde • mynyshe thy store of foode, and deliuered thee ouer into the wylles of the Philistines thyn enemies, whiche are ashamed of thy abhominable way. • Thou hast played the whoore also with the Assyrians, because thou waste insatiable: Yea, thou hast (I say) with theym played the harlote, and yet haddest thou not ynough. Thus hast thou furthermore commytted thy fornication from the lande of Canaan vnto the Chaldees, and yet thy luste not satisfied. Howe obstinate is thyne hert (saith the lord God) seyng thou doost all these worckes of an errant whoore: buyldinge thy stewes at the head of euery strete, and thy bordell houses in all places? Thou hast not bē as an other whore, that holdeth scorne of a small reward, but a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke, and taketh other in steede of her husbande. Gyftes are geuen to all other whoores, but thou geuest rewardes vnto al thy louers: and offrest thē gifts, to com vnto thee out of al places, & to cōmyt fornication with thee. It is come to passe ẅ thee in thy whordom contrary to ẏ vse of other women yea, there hath no such fornication bē committed after thee, seyng that thou

¶ The .xvii. Chapter.

1 THe word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man: put foorth a darke speak-Ier.24.c ing and a parable, vnto the house of Israel and say: Thus saith the Lorde Ier.48 GOD: There came a great Gagle with great winges, yea, with a migh tye longe bodye, and full of fethers of diuers coloures, vpon the mounte of Libanus, & toke the hiest branche frō a Cedar tree, and brake of the top of hys twyg, and caried it into the lande of Canaan, and set it in a citie of marchaūdise. He toke also of the sede of the land, and planted it in a fruitful ground by the riuer vnto great waters, and set it as a willow tree. And it did & grewe, and was a greate tyne tree, but low vpon the ground, whose branches turned vnto him, and the roote of it were fastened vnder it, thus there camme of it a tyne, and it brought forth blossomes, and spreade out braunches. But there was another Eagle, a great one, which hadde B great wynges and many fethers, and beholde, the rootes of thys tyne had an hunger after hym, and spread oute hys braunches towarde him, that hee myght water her with the ozchyard that he had planted. Neuertheiesse it was planted vpon a good ground besyde great waters: so that (by reason) it should haue brought oute branches and fruit, and haue ben a goodly vine.
Speake thou therfore, thus saith the Lorde God: Shal this vine prosper? C shal not his rootes be plucke out, his frute be broken of, his grene branches wyther and fade away? yea without either stronge arme or manye people, that it be plucked vp by the rotes. Be holde, it was planted: shal it prospere therfore? Shal it not be dryed vp and withered, yea euen in the shoting out of his blossomes, as sone as the East wind bloweth? Moreouer, the word of the Lorde camme vnto me, saying: D Speake to that frowarde housholde: knowe ye not, what these thynges do signifie? Tel them: Behold, the king of Babylon came to Jerusalē & toke 4 Re.24c the king & his princes, and led the to Babylon. He toke of the kinges sede, and made a couenaunt with him, and toke an othe of him: The princes of lande toke he with him also, that the land might be holden in subiection, & not to rebel, but kepe the couenāt, and fulfil it. But he fel from him, & sēt his Embassadours into Egipt, that hee might haue horses and much people.
Should that prosper? Should he be kept safe, that doth such thinges. Or should he escape, that breaketh his couenant? As truely as I liue saith the E Lorde God: He shal die at Babylon, in the place where the kynge dwelleth that made hym king: whose oth he hath despised, and whose couenant he hath broken. Neither shal Pharao with his great host, and mightie of people, auayle hym in the warre when they cast vp diches, and set vp bulwarkes to destroy muche people: For seyng he hath despised the othe, and broken the couenaunt (where as he yet gaue his hande therupon) and done all these thynges, he shall not escape. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: As truely as I lyue, I wyll bringe myne othe that he hath despysed, and my couenant that he hath broken, vpon his owne heade. • I wyll Eze. 12 b and. 32. a cast my net about hym, and catch hym in my arme. To Babylon will I carry hym, there will I punyshe him, because of the great offece that he made me. As for those that flee frome hym out of the hoolte, they shall be slayne with the sweard. The residue shalbe scattered toward all the wyndes: and G ye shall knowe, that I the Lorde haue spoken it. Thus sayth the Lorde god: I wyll also take a braunche from an hye Cedre tree, and wyll set it, & take the vppermost twyg, that yet is but tender, and plant it vpon an hye hyll: Namely, vpon the hye hyll of Syon wyll I plant it: that it maye bringe foorth twygges, and geue fruite, and be a great Cedre tree, so that all maner of foules maye buylde in it, and make theyr nestes vnder the shadowe of his branches. And all the trees of the field shall knowe, that I the Lorde haue brought downe the hye tree, and set the low tree vp: that I haue dried vp the greene tree, and made the dye tree to flouryshe: Euen I the Lorde that spake it, haue also broughte it to passe.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, on thys manner: what meane ye by this common prouerbe, that ye vse in the lande of Israel, saying: • The fathers haue eaten sowre grapes, and the childrens teeth are set on edge. As truely as I lyue, sayth the Lorde God, ye shall vse thys

Ps. 23. a • all soules are myne. Lyke as the father is myne, so is the sonne myne also. The soule that synneth, shall dye.
Le. 17. a • If a man be godly, and do the thing that is equall and right, he eateth not vpon the hilles: he lifteth not his eies vp to the foule Idols of Israell: he defileth not his neighbors wife: he medleth wyth no menstruous woman: he greueth no body: he geueth his detter his pledge agayne: he taketh none other mans good by violence: • he parteth his meate wyth the hungrye: he clotheth the naked: • he lendeth nothyng vpon vsury, he taketh nothyng ouer, he withdraweth his hand frome doyng wrongе: he dealeth faithfully betwixte man and man: and walketh in my commandementes, and kepeth my lawes, and performeth them faithfully: • This is a righteous man, he shal surely liue sayth the lord God. If he now get a sonne that is a murtherer a sheder of bloode: if he do one of these thynges, though he doo not all)
Exo. 2 eateth vpon the hylles: he defileth his neighbours wife, he greueth the poore and nedy, he robbeth and spoyleth: he geueth not the detter hys pledge again, he lyfteth vp his eyes vnto Idols, and medleth with abhominable thynges: he lendeth vpon vsurye, and taketh more ouer. Shall this manne lyue? he shall not lyue, seyng he hath done all these abhominations, he shal C dye, his bloud shalbe vpon him. Now if this man get a sonne also, that seeth all his fathers synnes, which he hath done, and feareth, neyther doeth lyke lyke: Namely, he eateth not vpon the mountains, he lifteth not his eies vp to the Idols of Israel, he defileth not his neighbors wife, he hurteth no man he kepeth no mans pledge: he neyther spoileth nor robbeth any man: he dealeth his meate wyth the hungrye: he clotheth the naked, he oppresseth not the poore: he receiueth no vsury, nor any thyng ouer: he kepeth my lawes and walketh in my commandements. This manne shall not dye in his fathers synne, but shall lyue without faile. As for his father, because he oppressed and spoyled his brother, and did wickedly among his people: lo, he is deade in hys owne synne. And yet saye ye: Wherfore then should not this sonne beare hys fathers synne? Therfore, because the sonne hath don equitie and ryghte, hath kepte all my commaundementes, and done theym: therfore shall hee lyue in dede. The same soule that sinneth, shall dye.

Deu.24.c 20. The soonne shall not beare the fa-Ier.18. But yf the vngodlye wil tourne a-Ezec.33.c way from all hys sinnes that he hath done, and kepe al my commaundemẽtes, and do the thing that is equal and right: doutles he shal liue, and not dy. As for all hys sinnes that hee dyd before, they shal not be thought vppon: but in his ryghteousnes that he hath done, he shall lyue. For haue I anye 2Pe.3.b pleasure in the death of a sinner, saith the Lorde God, but rather that he conuert and lyue? Agayn: if the righteous turne away from hys ryghteousnes, and do iniquitie, accordyng to all the abhominations that the wycked man doeth: shall he lyue? All the ryghteousnes that he hath done, shall not bee thoughte vppon: but in the faulte that he hath offended wythall, and in the synne that he hath done, he shal die. And yet ye saye: Tushe, the Ezec.33.d waye of the Lord is not indifferente. Heare therefore yee house of Israell: Is not my waye ryghte? Or are not

G he shal saue his soule alyue. For in so much that he remembreth hym selfe, and turneth him from al hys vngodlynes that he hath vsed, hee shall lyue and not dye. And yet sayth the house of Israell, Tushe, the waye of the Lord is not equall. Are my ways vnryghte? O ye house of Israel: Are not youre wayes rather vnequall. As for me, I wil iudge euery man accordyng to hys wayes, O ye house of Israel, sayth the Lord God. Wherefore, bee

The xix. Chapter. A

BAt thou sonne of man mourne thou for the princes of Israel, and saye. Wherfore lay thy mother the lioneſſe among the lyons, and norysshed her yonge ones amonge the lyons whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vppe, and it became a lyon, it learned to spoyle, and to deuoure folke. The heathen hearde of hym, and tooke him in their nettes, and brought hym in chaynes vnto the lande of Egipt. Nowe when the B damme saw that al her hope and confort was awaye, shee tooke another of her whelpes, and made a Lyon of hym: which went among the Lyons, and became a fearce Lyon: learned to spoyle and to deuour folke, he destroied their palaces, and made their cities waste. In so muche that the whole land and euery thyng therin, was vterly desolate, through the very voice of his roaring. Then came the heathē together on euery side out of al countreys againste him, laied their nettes for hym, and toke him in their pytte.
4Re.25.a • So they bound hym wyth chaynes Ier.39.a and brought him to the kyng of Babilon: whiche put him in pryson, that hys voyce should nomore be heard vpon the mountaynes of Israell. As for thy mother, thee is lyke a vyne in thy bloud, planted by the water syde: her fruites and braunches are growē out of many waters, her stalkes wer so strong, that men mighte haue made staues therof for officers: she grew so hye in her stalkes: so when men saw that she exceaded the heygth & multitude of her braunches, she was rooted out in displeasure, and cast downe to the grounde. The East wynde dryed vp her fruite, her stronge stalkes were broken of, wythered and brente in the fyre. But nowe she is planted in the wildernes, in a dry and thyrsty grouñd And there is a fyre gone oute of her stalkes, whiche hath brente vppe the braunches and her fruite, so that shee hath no mo stronge stalkes, to be staues for officers. This is a piteous and miserable thing.

IN the vii. yeare the tenth daye of the fifth month • it happened, that certayne of the elders of Israell came vnto me, for to aske councell at the Lorde, and sat them downe by me. Then came the woorde of the Lorde vnto me on this maner: Thou sonne of man: speake vnto the elders of Israell, and say vnto theym. Thus sayth the Lorde God: are ye come hyther to aske any thing at me? As truly as I lyue (saith the Lorde) I wyll geue you no aunswer. Wilt thou not reproue them (thou sonne of manne) wilt thou not reproue them? Shewe them the abhominations of their forefathers, and tel them: Thus saith the

Lorde God: • In the daye when I chose Israel, and lyft vp mine hande vppon the seede of the house of Jacob and shewed my selfe vnto them in the lande of Egypt: Yea, when I lyft vp myne hand ouer them, and sayd: I am the Lorde your God, euen in the daye that I lyft vp myne hande ouer them to bringe theym oute of the lande of Egypt, into a land that I had prouided for theym, whiche flowe th wyth mylke and honye, and is a pleasaunte

Deu.7.a lande amonge all other. Then sayde I vnto them: • Cast awaye euery mā the abhominations that hee hath before him, and defyle not youre selues wyth the Idols of Egypte, for I am the Lorde your God. But they rebelled agaynst me, and would not folow me: to cast away euery man the abhominations of hys eyes, and to forsake the ydols of Egypte. Then I made mee to poure myne indygnation ouer them, and to satisfie my wrath vppon theym: yea euen in the middest of the lande of Egypte. But I would not do it, for my names sake: that it should not be vnhalowed before the heathen, among whom they dwelt, and among whom I shewed my selfe vnto them, that I would bryng theim out of the lande of Egypt. Nowe when I had caryed them out of the land of Egipt and brought them into the wildernes I gaue them my commaundementes, Deu.4 and shewed them my lawes, • which Gala.3 whoso keepeth shall lyue in theym: I Leu.18 gaue them also my holy dayes, to be a Exo.31 token betwyxt me and them, and ther by to knowe, that I am the Lorde, which halowe thē. And yet the house of Israell rebelled agaynste me in the wildernes, they would not walke in my commaundements, they haue cast awaye my lawes (whiche whoso keepeth shal lyue in them) and my Sabboth dayes haue they greatelye vnhalowed. • Then I made mee to poure Nu.14 Exo.1 out myne indignation vpon thē, and Psa.97b C to consume them in the wyldernesse. Yet I would not do it, for my names sake: least it should be dyshonored before the heathen, from the whyche I had caryed them awaye. But I swore vnto theym in the wildernes, that I would not bryng them into the land which I gaue them: a lande that flowe th wyth mylke and hony, and is a pleasure of all landes: and that because they refused my lawes, and walked not in my commaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabbothes, for their hert was gone after their idols. Neuertheless, myne eye spared them so that I wold not vtterly slay them, and consume them in the wyldernes. Moreouer I sayd vnto theyr sons in the wildernes • walke not in the sta- Exo.15 tutes of youre forefathers, keepe not their ordinances, & defile not your selues with their ydols, for I am ỹ lord your god, But walk in my statutes, keepe out of the nations and landes, wherin ye are scattered, and gather you toge= sayth the Lorde God. I wyll bryngе you vnder my iurisdiction, and vnder the bond of the couenant. The forsa= tions, and gather you together out of the lands, wherein ye be scatted, that I maye bee halowed in you before the Heathen, and that ye may knowe, that I am the Lorde, whiche haue brought you into the land of Israell: yea, into the same land, that I swore to geue vnto your forefathers. There shall ye call to remembraunce youre owne wayes, and all your ymaginations, wherin ye haue bene defyled: and ye shall iudge your selues worthy to be destroyed, for all your wyckednes, that ye haue done. And ye shal knowe, that I am the Lorde: when I entreate you after my name, not after your wicked wayes, no, according to your corrupt workes: O ye house of Israell, sayth the Lorde. Moreouer, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, sette thy face toward the south, and speake to the south wynd, and saye to the wood toward the south: Heare the word of the Lord, thus sayth the Lorde God: Behold, I will kyndle a fire in thee, that shall consume the greene trees with the drye. No man shalbe able to quenche his flame, but all that loketh from the South to the Northe, shall be brente therein: and all flesh shall see, that I the Lorde haue kyndled it, so that no man may quench it. Then sayde I: O Lorde, they wyll saye of me: Tushe, they are but fables, that he telleth.

THe worde of the Lorde came to me saying: Thou sonne of man, set thy face toward Jerusalem, speake agaynst the Sanctuarye, and prophesye agaynst the land of Israel, say to the land of Israell, Thus saith the Lorde: Behold, I will vpon the, and will drawe my sweard out of the sheath, and rote oute of thee both the ryghteous and the wicked. Seynge then that I will rote out of thee both the righteous & wicked, therfore shall my sword go out of his sheath against all flesh from the north to the south: that all flesh maye knowe how that I the Lord haue drawen my sweard oute of the sheathe: and it shall not be put in agayne. Mourne therfore (O thou sonne of man) that thy loynes cracke withal, ye mourne bytterly for them in their presence. And yf they saye, wherfore mourneſt thou? Then tell them: for the tydynges that commeth, at the which all herts shal melt, all handes shalbe letten down, all stomackes shal faynt, and all knees shall waxe feble. Beholde, it commeth and shalbe fulfilled, sayth the Lord God. Agayne, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, prophesy, and speake. Thus sayth the Lorde God: speake. The sweard, the sweard is sharpened, and well scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, and scoured that it may be bright. Shall we then make mirth? Agaynst the tribe of my sonne it is gone forth destroying all trees. He hath put his sweard to the dyghtyng, that good holde may be taken of it. This sword is sharpened and dyght, that it maye be geuen vnto the hande of the manslayer. Crye (O thou sonne of man, and howle, for this sword shall smyte my people, and all the rulers in Israell:) my people shalbe feared thorowe this sweard. Smyte therfore thou vpon the thyghe, for it is gone forthe to make a tryall. And what a tryall shall thys bee, when euen my scepter shalbe reproued? it shal not be sayth the Lord God. Prophesye thou sonne of man, and smyte thine handes together, make the sword two edged, yea, make it thre edged, that manslayers sweard, that sweard of the greate slaughter, which shall smyte them, euen in their preuy chambres: to make them abashed and faynt at the hertes, and in all gates to make some of them fall. I haue geuen ỹ fearefull sweard, O how bright and sharpe is it, howe well dight and mete for the slaughter? Get the some place alone, eyther vpō the right hand or on the left, whither so euer thy face turneth: I wyll smite my hands together also, and satisfye my wrathfull indignacion: Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it. The word of the Lord came yet vnto me agayn, saying: Thou son of man, make

I to me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, there were two wemen, that had one mother: these (whē they were yong) began to play the harlets Eze.20a • in Egipt. There were their breastes brosed, and the pappes of their mayden heod dyd the Egiptians destroy. The eldest of them was called Oholah and her yongest syster Oholibah. These two wer my wyues, and bare sonnes and daughters. Theyr names were Samaria, and that was Oholah: and Jerusalem, that was Oholibah. As for Oholah, she began to go a whoryng, when I had taken her to me. • She was set on fire vpon her euen the princes and lordes that wer deckt in costly aray, sayre yong men, lusty ryders of horses. Thus thorow her whordome, she cleued vnto all the ponge men of Assiria. Yea, shee was mad vpon them, and defyled her selfe with all their Idols. Neither ceassed she from the fornication, that she vsed with the Egiptians, for in her youth they lay with her, they brosed the brestes of her maydenhead, and pourged their whordome vpon her. Wherfore, 1.Re.18 • I deliuered her into the hãds of her louers, euen the Assirians, whõ she so loued. These discouered her shame, toke her sons & daughters, and slewe her with the swerd. An euil name gat she of all people, & they punished her.

Jer.1.b • Her sister Oholibah sawe this, and destroyed her selfe with inordinate loue more then she, and exceded her sister in whordome, • she loued the Assirias (which also lay with her) namely, the princes and greate lordes, that wer clothed with all maner of gorgious apparel, all lusty horsmen & faire younge persons. Then I sawe that C they both were defiled alike. But she increased still in whordome, for whẽ she sawe men painted vpon the wall, the ymages of the Chaldees set forth with fresh colours, & fayre girdles about them, and goodly bonettes vpon their heades, lokyng all lyke princes (after the maner of the Babilonians and Chaldees in their owne lande, wher they be borne (immediately, as sone as she sawe thẽ, she brent in loue vpon them, and sente messengers for them into the lande of the Chaldees. Now when the Babilonians cam to her, they lay with her, and defiled her with their whordom, and so was she polluted with theym. And when her

2.17.b whordome and shame was discouered and sene: then my hert forsoke her lyke as my herte was gone from her sister also. Neuertheles, she vsed her whordome euer the longer the more, and remembred the daies of her youth wherin she had played the harlot in Ezec.16.b the lande of Egypt: • she brent in lust vpon them, whose flesh was lyke the flesshe of Asses, and their sede lyke the sede of horses. Thus thou hast renued the fylthynes of thy youthe, when thy louers brosed thy paps, and marred thy brestes in Egypt. Therfore, D (O Oholibah) thus sayth the Lord God: I wyll rayse vppe thy louers (with whom thou haste satisfyed thy luste agaynst thee, and gather theym togither round about thee: namely the Babilonians, & all the Chaldees, rulers, mightye men and tirantes, with all the Assirians: all younge and fayre louers: princes and lordes, knightes, and gentilmen, whiche be all good horsmen. These shall come vpon thee with horses, charettes, and a greate multitude of people: whiche shall be harnessed aboute thee on euerye syde, with brest plates, shyldes and helmettes, I wyll punishe thee before them, yea, they theym selues shall punyshe thee, accordyng to their owne iudgemente. I will put my gelousye vpon thee, so ỳ they shall deale cruelly with thee. They shall cutte of thy nose and thine eares, and the remnaunte shall fall thorowe the sweard. They shall cary awaye thy sons and daughters, and the residue shalbe brẽt in the fire. They shal strippe thee out of thy clothes, and carye thy costlye Jewelles awaye with theym. Thus wyll I make an end of thy filthynes & whordome, whiche thou haste brought out of the lande of Egypte: so that thou shalte turne thyne eyes nomore after them, and cast thy mind nomore vpon E Egipt. For thus sayth the Lorde: behold, I will deliuer the into the handes of them, whome thou hatest: yea, euen into the handes of theym with whome thou haste fulfylled thy luste which shall deale cruelye with thee. All thy labourr shall they take with them, and leaue thee naked and bare, & thus the shame of thy fylthy whordome shall come to lyghte. All these things shall happen vnto the, because of thy whordome whiche thou haste vsed among ỳ Gentiles, with whose Idoles thou haste defyled thy selfe.

Thou.

Thou hast walked in the way of thy syster, therefore wyl I geue thee her cuppe in thy handes. Thus sayth the Lord God: Thou shalt drynke of thy systers cuppe, how depe and farre so euer it be to the bottome. Thou shalt be laughed to scorne, and had as gretie in derision, as it is possible. Thou shalt be ful of dronkennes and sorow for the cuppe of thy syster. Samaria is a cup of destruction and wastinge, the same shalt thou drynke, and suppe it oute euen to the dregges, yea, thou shalt eate vp the broken pyeces of it, and so teare thyne owne brestes. For euen I haue spoken it sayth the Lord F God. Therefore thus saith the Lord God: For so much as thou haste forgotten me, and caste me a side behynd thee, so beare nowe thyne owne fylthynes and whoredome. The Lorde sayde moreouer vnto me: Thou sonne lah and Oholibah, shewe them theyr abhominatiõs, namely that they haue broken their wedlocke, and stayned their handes with bloudde: yea, euen tuary in that same daye, and haue vn-halowed my Sabboth. For whē they had slaine their childzen for their Idols, they came the same day into my they done in my house: Beside al this

G Then was there greate cheare with her to obtayn peace, and though with those men many men came, yet were there also brought men of Saba from the wyldernes: whiche gaue theym bracelets vpon their handes, and sette glorious crownes vpon their heads, and I sayde vnto her: that seinge she was strikē inage in her whordoms: now shal her fornications come to an ende with her. And they wente into her as vnto a cōmen harlot. Euen so wente they (I saye) to Oholah, and Oholibah those fylthy wemen. O al ye that loue vertue and ryghteousnes iudge them, punyth them, as aduou- Len. 20 iudged and punyshed. For they are breakers of wedlocke, and the bloude is in their handes. Wherefore thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyl bryng a great multitude of people vpon them and make them be scattered and spoy-led: these shall stone theym, and gore theym with their swoordes. They shal slay their sonnes and daughters, and burne vp their houses with fyre.

Thus wil I destroye al such fylthynes oute of the land: that all wemen maye learne, not to do after your vn-clennes. And so they shall laye their filthines vpon your owne selues, and ye shalbe punished for the sinnes that ye haue committed with your ydols: and ye shal know that I am the Lord God.

3 IN the nynthe yeare, in the tenth and is not yet scoured awaye. Take out the peces that are in it, one after another: there nede not lots to be cast therfore, for the blood is yet in it. Upon a playne dyre stone hath she poured it, and not vpon the grounde, that it might be couered with duste. And therfore haue I letten her powre her blood vpon a playne dry stonye rocke, because it shold not be hid, and that I might bring my wrothfull indignacion and vengeaunce vpon her. Wher C fore thus sayth the Lord God: O wo be vnto that bloodethyrstye citye, for whom, euen I my selfe will make a greate fyre and set muche woode, and kindell the fyre, and seethe the flesshe, and spyce the potte, so that the berye bones shalbe brent: Moreouer, I will set the pot emptye vpon the coles, so that his metal shal be brent and molten also for heate, and the filthynes of it shalbe molten in it, and the drosse of it shalbe consumed. Thou tokest gret

D payne thus to defile thy selfe. And it will not be purged frō the exceadyng drosse in it: but thorow fyre shall the drosse of it be purified. In thy filthynes, euen in thy myscheuous dedes, thou doest continue, and because thy filthynes is abhominable, for I haue clensed thee, but thou art not clensed: Thou shalt not be pourged frō thyne vnclennesse, tyll I haue powred my wrathfull indignacion vpon thee. E=
E uen I the Lord haue so deuised. Yea, it is come therto already, that I wyll do it, I will not go backe, I wyll not spare, I will not be intreated: but accordyng to thy wayes and ymaginations shall thou be punyshed, sayth the Lorde God. And the worde of the Lord came vnto me saying: Thou son of man behold, I will take away the pleasure of thyne eies with a plague: yet shalte thou neyther mourne, nor wepe: nor water thy chekes: therfore thou mayest mourne by thy self alone but ble no deadly lamentacion. Holde on thy bonet, and put on thy shoes vp F pon thy fete, couer not thy face, & eate no mourners bread. So I spake vnto the people betymes in the morning and at euen my wyfe dyed: then vpon the next morowe, I did as I was cōmaunded. And the people sayde vnto me, Wilte thou not tell vs what thys signifyeth towarde vs, for this thou doest for our sake? I answered them, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Tell the house of Israel, thus sayth the Lord God: beholde, I wyll suspend my sanctuary, euen the glory of your power, the pleasure of youre eyes, and the thing that ye loue, youre sonnes and daughters whom ye haue lefte, shall fall thorowe the swearde. Like as I haue don, so shal ye do also: Ye shal not hide your faces, ye shal eate no mourners breade: your bonnets shall ye haue vpon your heades, G and shoes vpon your fete. Ye shal nether mourne nor wepe, but in youre synnes ye shalbe sorowfull, and one repēt with an other. Thus Ezechiell is your shewe token. For lyke as ye haue done, so (when this commeth) ye shall do also: that ye maye learne to know that I am the Lord God. But beholde O thou sonne of man: In the daye when I take from theym theyr power, their ioye and honour, the lust of their eyes, the burthen of their lyues: namely, their sonnes and daughters, shall not this be knowen? Then shall there one escape, and come vnto the, for to shewe the. In that day shal thy mouth be opened to him, whiche is escaped, that thou mayest speake, and be nomore domme. Yea, and thou shalt be their shewe token that they may know how that I am the Lord.

IT happened, that in the eleuenth yere, the firste daye of the moneth the worde of the Lorde came vnto me saying: Thou sonne of man, • be- Ezec.25a Jer.27b Ezec.27b cause that Tyre hath spoke vpon Jerusalem: A ha, now I trow the portes of the people be broken, and shee turned vnto me, for nowe that shee is destroyed, I shall be fylled. Yea, therfore sayth the Lorde God: Behold O Tyre, I wil vpon thee, I will bring a great multitude of people agaynste the, like as when the sea ariseth with hys waues: These shall breake the walles of Tyre, and caste downe her towres: I wyll scrape the grounde from her, and make her a bare stone: yea, as the drying place, where the fyshers hang vp their nettes by the sea side. Euen I haue spoken it, saith the Lorde GOD. The Gentyles shall spoyle her: her daughters vppon the fielde shall perysh with the sweard, that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde. For thus sayeth the B Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll bryng hyther Nabuchodonosor (whiche is the kyng of Babylon, and a kynge of kynges) from the northe vpon Tyre: with horses, charettes, horsemen, and with a greate multitude of people. THe worde of the LORDE
A came vnto me, saying: O thou sonne of man, make a lamentable complaynte vpon * Tyre, and saye vpon Tyre, thou whiche art a port of the sea, that occupieth with muche people, and many Iles: Thus speaketh the Lorde GOD: O Tyre, thou haste sayde: what, I am a noble Citie, thy borders are in the myddest of the sea, and thy builders haue made thee meruailous goodlye. All thy tables haue they made of Cypres trees of the mounte Sanyr. From Libanus haue they taken Cedre trees, to make thee Maistes: and the Okes of Basan to make thee rowers. The boordes haue they made of yuory, and al costly wodde out of the yle of Cethim. Thy sayle was of dyuers colours, small nedell woorke out of the lande of Egypte, to hang vppon thy maste: and the hangynges of pealowe silke, purple out of the yles of Elisah
B They of Sydon and Arnad were thy maryners, & the wisest in Tyre were thy shyppemaysters. The eldest and wyselest at Gebal, were they, that mended and stopped thy shippes. All shippes of the sea wyth theyr shyppmenne occupyed theyr marchayndise in thee. of wares, in siluer, yron, tinne, & lead, and made thy market greate: Iauan, Tubal, and Meschech were thy marchantes, which brought the men, and oriamentes of metal for thy occupying. They of the house of Thogarma broughte vnto thee at the tyme of thy marte, horse, horsemenne, and mules.

Ezr.25.c They of Dedan were thy marchantes: and manye Iles that occupyed wyth thee, broughte the wethers, Elephant bones and Peacockes for a present. The Syrians occupied wyth thee because of thy dyuers woorkes, and encreased thy marchandise, with Smaragdes, wyth scarlet, wyth nedle worke, wyth whyte lynnen cloth, wyth silke & with cristall. Iuda & the

D lande of Israel occupyed wyth thee, and broughte vnto thy marketes, wheat of Minith and panneg, balme hony oyle and triacle. Damascus also vsed marchaundyse wyth thee, in the beste wyne of Helbon, and wyth wool: because thy occuppynge was so greate, and thy wares so many: Dan, Iauan, and Mensal haue brought vnto thy marketes, yron readye made, wyth Cassia, and Calamus, accordyng to thyne occupying. Dedan occupyed wyth thee in fayre tapestrye woorke and cushines. Arabia and all the princes of Cedar haue occupyed wyth thee, in shepe, wethers and goates. The marchauntes of Sheba, and Rema haue occupyed also wyth thee, in all costly spices, in all precious stones and golde, whych they broughte vnto thy marketes. Haram, Chene, and Eden, the marchauntes of Saba Assiria and Chelmad, were all doers wyth thee, and occupied with the. In costly rayment of yelowe silke and of nedle woorke (very precious, and ther fore pacte and bounde together wyth roapes.) Yea, and in Cedar wood, at the tyme of thy marketes, The shipE pes of Tharsis were the chiefe of thy occupying: Thus thou art full and in great worshyp, euen in the middest of the sea. Thy robbers shal bringe the into great waters, the east wind shall ouer beare thee into the middst of the sea: so that thy wares, thy marchaundyse, thy riches, thy mariners, thy shyppmaisters, thy builders of thy broke places, thy occupiers (that brought thee thinges necessarye) the menne of F warre that are in thee: yea, and all thy comens shal perysh in the myddest of the sea: in the day of thy fall. The suburbs shal shake at the loud cry of the shyppmen. All whyrrie menne, and all mariners vpon the sea, shall leape out of their boates, and set them selues vpon the lande. They shal lift vp their voyce because of thee, and make a lamentable crye. They shal cast dust vpon their heades, and lye downe in the ashes. They shal shaue theym selues, and put sackecloth vpon them for thy sake. They shall mourne for thee wyth heartful sorowe, and heuye lamentation, yea, they also shall weepe for thee. Alas, what citie hath so bene G destroyed in the sea, as Tyre is? whē thy wares and marchaundyse came from the seas: Thou gauest al people ynough. The kinges of the earth hast thou made rych, throughe the multytude of thy wares and occuppynge. But thou art nowe caste downe into the depe of the sea, al thy resort of people is perysshed wyth thee. All they that dwell in the yles are abasshed at thee, and all their kynges are afraide, yea, their faces haue changed colour. The marchantes of the nations won der at thee: In that thou art so cleane broughte to naught, and commest no more vp.

Thou haste bene in the pleasant gardeyn of God: thou art deckt with all maner of precious stones, with Rubie, Topas, Chrystall, Jacinct, Onix, Jaspis, Saphir, Smaragde, Carbuncle, and golde. Thy beautie and the holes that be in thee, were set foorth in the day of thy creation. Thou art a fayre Cherub, exalted by the anoynting, stretched wide out for to couer. The .xxix. Chapter.

IN the tenth yere, vpon ỹ twelfth day of the tenth moneth, the word of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge:

Esai.19. and.20.a Jer.46.a Eze. 30. 31.&32. O thou sonne of man (set nowe thy face agaynst Pharao the kyng of Egypt: Prophecye againste him, and against ỹ whole lād of Egypt. Speke & tell him, thus saith ỹ Lord God: behold, O Pharao, thou kyng of Egypt I will vpon thee thou great dragon, that liest in ỹ waters: thou that sayst: the water is myne, I haue made it my selfe. I will put an hooke in thy chawes, and hange all the fishe in thy waters vppon thy skales: After that I will draw thee out of thy waters, B yea, & all the fyshe of thy waters that hang vpon thy skales. I wil cast thee out vpon the dry lande with the fyshe of thy waters, so that thou shalte lye vpon the field. Thou shalt not be gathered nor taken vp: but shalt be meat for the beastes of the field, and for the foules of the ayre: that all they which dwell in Egypt, may knowe, that I am the Lord: because thou hast bene a 4.re.18. Esai.30. 31.&36. staffe of reed to the house of Israel. whē they toke hold of the with their hand, thou brokest and prickedst them on euery side: and if they leaned vpon the, thou brakest & hurtedst the rayns of their backes. Therfore, thus saithe the Lord God: Behold I will bryng a sweard vpon thee, and roote oute of thee both man and beast: Yea, the land of Egypt shalbe desolate and waste, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lord. Because he said: The water is myne, I my selfe haue made it. Be- C hold therfore, I wil vpon the, and vpon thy waters: I wil make the land of Egypt waste and desolate, and in a bashement, for the tower of Syenes vnto the borders of the Mozians lād: so that in fortye yeares there shall no foote of man walke there, neither fote of cattell go there, neither shall it bee inhabited. I wyll make the lande of Egypte to bee desolate, among other wast countreys, and her cities to lye voyde forty yeares, among other void cities. And I will scatter the Egyptians among the heathen and nations and strawe them in the landes about. Agayn, thus sayth the Lord GOD: Jer.46.c. whē the .xl. yeres ar expyred, I wil gather the Egyptiās togither againe out of the natiōs, among whom they were scattered, and wyll bryng the prisoners of Egypte agayne into the lande of Pathures their owne native cuntrey, that they may be there a lowly small kyngdome: yea, they shall be the smallest among other kyngdomes least they exalt themselues aboue the Heathen: for I wyll so mynysh them that they shall no more rule the Heathen. They shall no more be an hope vnto the house of Israell, neyther prouoke theym any more to wickednes, to cause them turne backe, and to D folowe theym, and they shall knowe that I am the Lorde God. In the xxvii. yeare, the fyrst day of the fyfte moneth, came the wordes of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Thou son of man, Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon hath made his hoste with greate trauayle and laboure to comme before Tyre: that euerye heade may bee balde, and euerye shoulder bare. Yet hath Tyre geuen neither him, nor his hoste any reward for the greate trauayle that he hath taken there. Therfore thus saieth the Lorde God: Behold, I wyll geue the land of Egypt vnto Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, that he may take awaye all her substaunce, robbe her robberies, and spoile her spoiles, to pay his hoste theyr wages wythall. I wille geue hym the lande of Egypte for hys labour that he toke for me before Tyre. At the same tyme wylle I cause the horne of the house of Israell to grow forth, and open thy mouth againe among theym: that they maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

THe woorde of the Lorde came moreouer vnto mee, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, prophecye and speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde GOD: Mourne, woe worth this daye: For the daye is here, the daye of the LORD is come, the darke day of the Heathen, the hower is at hand the sweard commeth vpon Egypte, when the wounded men fall downe in Egypt, when her people are taken away, and when her foundacions are destroyed, the Mozians lande shall be afraied, yea, the Mozians land, Libia, and Lidia, all their commen people, and Chub, and all that be confederat vnto them, shall fall with them thorowe the swearde. Thus sayeth the Lozd: The maintainers of the land of Egypt shall fall, the pryde of her power shall come downe euen vnto the tower of Sienes shall they be slayne down with the swerd, saith the lozd God: among other desolate countreis they shalbe made desolate, and among other wast citycs they shalbe wasted. And they shall knowe, that I am the Lozde, when I kyndle a fire in Egypt, and when al her helpers are destroyed. At that time shall their messengers go forth from me in shippes, to make the careles Mozians afrayd, and sozowe shall come vpon them accozding to the day of Egipt, foz doutles it shal come. Thus sayth the Lozd God: I wyll make an end of the people of Egypte thozowe the hande of Nabuchodonoso2 the kyng of Babilon, he and hys people with him: yea and the cruell tyzauntes of the Heathen shall be bzoughte to destroye the lande. They shall dzawe oute theyz sweardes vpon Egypte, and fyll the land full of slayne men. I will dzy vp their floudes of water, and sell the lond into the handes of wicked people. The land and all that is therein, will I destroy thozow the enemyes. Euen I the LORD haue sayde it. thus sayth the Lozde God. I wyll destroy the ydoles, and bzyng the Images of Noph to an end. Ether shal nomoze be a pzynce of Egypt, and a fearfulnesse will I sende into the Egiptians lande. As foz Pathures, I will make it desolate, & kyndle a fire in Zoan the city. No, I will punysh and poure my wzathfull indignation vpon Sin, which is the strength of Egypt. All the substaunce of Alexandria will I destroy, & kyndle a fire in Egypt. Sin shalbe in greate heauynes, Alexandzia shalbe roted out, and Noph shall haue dayly sozowe. The best men of Helyopolis and Bubasto shalbe slayne with the swearde, and caryed away captiue. At Taphnis the day shalbe darke, when I bzeake ther the septer of the lande of Egypt, and when the pompe of her power shall haue an ende. A cloude shal couer her, and her daughters shall be led awaye into captiuitie. Thus will I punish Egypt, that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lozde. It happened in the eleuenth yeare, vppon the seuenth day of the first moneth, that the lozdes wozd came vnto me, saying: Behold, thou sonne of man, I wyll bzeake the arme of Pharao kyng of Egypt: and lo, it shall not be bounde vp to be healed, neyther shall any playster be laied vpon it, foz to ease it, oz to make it so strong as to hold a sweard. Therfoze thus sayth the Lozde God: Beholde, I will vpon Pharao the kyng of Egypt, and bzuse his stronge arme (yet is it but a bzoken one) and will smite the swearde oute of hys handes. As foz the Egyptians, I wyll scatter them among the Heathen, and strawe them in the landes about. Agayne I wyll strength the arme of the kyng of Babylon, and geue hym a swearde in hys hande, but I wyll bzeake Pharaos arme, so that he shall holde it befoze hym pyteously, lyke a wounded man. Yea, I wyll stablyshe the kyng of Babylons arme, and the armes of Pharao shall fall downe: that it may be knowen, that I am the Lozd whiche gaue the kynge of Babylon my sweard in his hand, that he may dzawe it oute vpon the lande of Egypte, and that when I scater the Egiptians among the Gentiles, and strawe them in the landes about, they may knowe, that I am the Lozd.

MOzeouer, it happened in the xi. yere, the firste daye of the third moneth, that the wozd of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: thou sonne of man, speake vnto Pharao the kyng of Egypt, and to all his people. Whom arte thou lyke in thy greatnes? Behold, Assur was lyke a Cedar tree vpon the mount of Libanus with fayre braunches: so thicke, that he gaue shadowes and shotte out very hye. His toppe reached vnto the clouds. The waters made him gret, and the depe set him vp an hye. Rounde aboute the rotes of hym ranne there floudes of water, he sente out his lytle ryuers vnto all the trees of the B field. Therfore was he hyer then all the trees of the fielde, and thorow the multitude of waters that he sent frō him, he obtayned many longe braunches. All fowles of the ayre made their nestes in hys braunches: vnder hys bowes gendred all the beastes of the field, and vnder his shadowe dwelt all people. Fayre and bewtifull was he in hys greatnes, and in the length of his braūches, for his rote stode beside great waters, no Cedar tree myght hyde him. In the pleasaunt garden of God, there was no fyre tree like his braunches, the playne trees were not

C lyke the bowes of him. All the trees in the garden of God might not be cōpared vnto him in his bewty, so fayre and goodly had I made him with the multitude of hys braunches. In so muche that all the trees in the pleasaunt gardē of God had enuy at him.
D Therfor thus saith the lorde God: for so much as he hath lift vp him self to hye, and stretched his top to the cloudes, and seyng his herte is proude in his hyghnes, I will delyuer him into the handes of the mightiest among the Hethen, which shal rote him out. Accordyng to his wickednes wyll I cast hym awaye, the enemye shall destroy him, and the myghty men of the Heathen shall so scater him, that hys braunches shall lye vppon all mountaynes and in all valleys: his bowes shalbe broken downe to the grounde thorowout the lande. Then all the E people of the lande, shall go from hys shadowe, and forsake him, when he is fallen, all the foules of the ayre shall syt vpon him, and all wylde beastes of the fielde shall go about among his braunches: so that from hence forthe, no tree in the water shall attayne to his hyghnes, nor reach his toppe vnto the cloudes, neyther shall any tree of the water stand so hye, as he hathe done. For vnto death shall they all be delyuered vnder the earthe, and go downe to the graue lyke other men.
Moreouer, thus sayth the Lord God:
F In the day when he goeth downe to the graue, I wil cause a lamentation to be made, I will couer the depe vppon him, I will staunch his floudes, and the great waters shalbe restrayned. I shall cause Libanus to be sorowfull for his sake, and all the trees of the fyelde shalbe smytten. I wyll make the Heathen shake at the sound of his fall, when I caste him downe to hell with them that descende into Eze.31.
the pyt. All the trees of Eden, with Ezt.32.
all the chosen and best trees of Libanus, yea, and all they that are planted vpon the waters, shall mourne with him also in the lower habitations: for they shal go downe to hell with him, vnto theym that be slayne with the sweard, which dwelt afore vnder the shadowe of his arme among the Heathen. To whom shalt thou be lykened, that art so glorious and great, among the trees of Eden? Yet art thou G cast downe vnder the earth (amonge the trees of Eden) where thou must lye among vncircumcised, with them that be slaine with the sweard. Euen thus is it with Pharao and all hys people, sayth the Lord God.

¶ The .xxxiii. Chapter.

AGayne, the word of the Lord
I came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man: Speake to the childzen of thy people and tell theym: When I send a swearde vpon a land, yf the people of the lande take a man of their countrye, and sette him to bee D their + watchmanne, the same manne (when he seeth the swerd come vpon the land) shal blowe the trompet and warne the people. If a manne nowe heare the noyse of the trompette and wyl not be warned, and the swearde come, and take him away: hys bloude shalbe vppon hys owne heade, for he heard the sounde of the trompet, and would not take heede, therefore hys bloud be vpon him. But yf he wil receaue warning, he shal saue hys lyfe. B Agayne yf the watche manne see the sweard come, and blowe it not wyth the trompet, so that the people is not warned, if the sweard come then, and take any man from amonge them, the same shalbe taken away in hys owne synne, but his bloud wyll I requyre Exe.3.i of the watchmans hande. And nowe (O thou sonne of man) I haue made thee a watchmanne vnto the house of Israel, that where as thou hearest any thyng out of my mouth, thou maiest warne theym on my behalfe. Yf I saye vnto the wicked, thou wicked, thou shalt surely die, and thou geuest hym not warning that he mai beware of his vngodlye waye: then shall the wycked dye in hys owne synne, but hys bloud wil I requyre of thy hand. Neuertheles: yf thou warne the wycked of hys waye, to tourne from it, where as he yet wyll not be turned from it, then shal he dye because of his synne, but thou haste deliuered thy soule. Therfore (O thou son of man) C speake vnto the house of Israel. Yea, say thus: Our offences and sinnes lie vpon vs, and we be corrupt in theym, howe shoulde we then be restored vnto lyfe? Tell them: + As truelye as I Eze.18i lyue sayeth the Lord God, I haue no pleasure in the death of the wycked, but muche rather, that the wycked turne from hys way and liue. Turne you, tourne you from your vngodlye wayes, O yee of the house of Israel. Oh wherefore wyll yee dye? Thou sonne of manne, tell the chylderne of thy people: + The ryghteousnesse of Eze.18i the righteous shal not saue hym whē soeuer he turneth away vnfaythfully Again, ꝑ wickednes of ꝑ wicked shal not hurt him, whēsoeuer he cōuerteth frō his vngodlines, & the righteousnes of the righteous shal not saue hys lyfe, whan soeuer he synneth. wrong. Then shall he surely liue, and not die. Yea, the sinnes ỳ he hath don, shal neuer be thought vpon. For in so much as he doth now the thyng that is lawful & right, he shal liue. And yet the childrẽ of thy people say: Tush, ỳ way of the lord is not right: but they lie, wher as their own way is rather vnright. When the righteous turneth from his righteousnes, and dothe the thing that is wicked, he shal die therfore. But if the wicked turne frõ his wyckednes, doynge the thyng that is lawfull & right, he shall lyue therfore.
Ezec.18.f Yet ye saye: • The way of ỳ Lorde is Ma.2.a not equal: O ye house of Israell, • I will iudge euery one of you after his e wais. In the .xii. yere, the .v. day of ỳ tenth month of our captiuitie, it hapned, ỳ one which was fled out of Je-rusalẽ, cam vnto me, & saide: The citie is destroied. Now ỳ hand of the Lord had bẽ vpon me the euening afore this man (which was escaped) came vnto me, & had opened my mouth, vntil the morning ỳ he cam vnto me: yea, he ope ned my mouthe, so ỳ I was no more dombe. Thẽ came ỳ word of the Lord vnto me, & said: Thou son of mã these that dwel in ỳ wasted land of Israel, say: Abrahã was but one man, and he had the land in possession: now ar we many, and the land is geuẽ vs to pos-f sesse also. And therfore tel thẽ. Thus Ezec.17.d saith the Lorde God: • In the bloud Lev.3.a haue ye eaten, your eyes haue ye lifte vp to Idoles, • and haue shed bloud: shall ye then haue the land in possession? Ye leane vpon your swordes, ye worke abhominations, euery one defileth hys neighbors wyfe: and shall ye then possesse the lande? Saye thou these wordes vnto them. Thus sayth the Lorde God. As truely as I liue, all ye that dwell in this wyldernesse shalbe slain with the sweard: what so euer is vppon the fielde, I wyll geue vnto the beastes to be deuoured: those that be in strong holdes and dennes, shall dye of the pestilence. For I wil make the lande so desolate and waste, and the pompe of her strengthe shall come to an ende. The mountaines of Israel shalbe so wast that no mã shall G trauaile thereby. • Then shall they Eze.5.a learne to know, that I am the Lord, when I make the land waste and desolate, because of all theyr abhominations, that they haue wrought. And thou sonne of man, the children of thy people that talke of thee, by the wal-les and in the doores of theyr houses, saying one to an other: Come, let vs heare, what word is gone forth from the Lord. These shal come vnto thee after the maner of a great people: yea, as who sayth, they were my people, they syt downe before thee, and here thy wordes, but they doo not thereafter: • for in theyr mouthes they Esa.31.e make a feast of them, and theyr hert Mat.15. goeth after their owne couetous lucre. And as a ballet that hath a swete tune, and is pleasaunte to synge, so shalt thou be vnto them: thy wordes shall they heare, but they wylle not doo therafter. When thys commeth to passe: (for lo, it commeth in dede) thenne shall they knowe, that there hath ben a prophet among theim.

¶ The .xxxiiii. Chapter.

AND the woorde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou soonne of man, prophecye a-gaynste the shepheardes of Israell, Prophecie and speake vnto theym.
Thus sayeth the LORDE God: Eze.13.a • woe bee vnto the shepeheardes of Israel, that fede them selues. Shold not the shepeherdes fede the flockes?
Ye haue eaten vp the fatte, yee haue clothed you wyth the wol: The best fed haue ye slayne, but the flock haue ye not norysshed. The weake haue ye Luke.4b not holden vp, • the sicke haue ye not healed, the broken haue ye not bounde together, the oute castes haue ye not brought agayne, the loste haue ye not 1Pet.5a sought, but • churlishlye and cruellye haue ye ruled theym. Thus are they scatred here and ther without a shepherd, yea, al the beastes of the field de-B uoure them, and they go astraye. My sheepe go wandringe vpon all moun-taynes and vpon euery hye hyll: Yea, they be scatred abrode in all y^e^ feldes, & ther is no man that careth for them, or seketh after theym. Therefore, O ye shepeherdes, heare the woorde of the Lord. Thus sayth the Lord God: As truelye as I lyue, for so muche as my shepe are robbed, and deuoured of all the wylde beastes of the field, hauing no shepherd: and seyng that my shepherdes take no regarde of my sheepe, but fede them selues only, and not my C shepe. Therfore, heare the woord of the Lord (O ye shepherdes) Thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, I my selfe will vpon the shepherdes: and require my shepe from their hands, and make them ceasse from kepyng of my shepe: yea, the shepherdes shall fede theym selues nomore. For I will deliuer my shepe out of their mouthes, so that D they shal not deuoure them after this:

Joh.10a For thus sayth the Lord God: • Be-Heb.13d holde, I will loke to my sheepe my 1Pet.2c selfe, and seke them. Lyke as the shepherd among the flock seketh after the shepe that are scatered abrode, euen so will I seke after my shepe, and gather them together out of all places, wher they haue bene scatered in the cloudy and darke day. I will bryng them out from al people, and gather them together out of all landes. I will bryuge them into their owne lande, and fede them vpon the mountaynes of Israell, by the riuers and in all the places of the countrey. I will fede them in right good pastures and vppon the hye mountaynes of Israel shall their foldes be. Ther shal they lie in a good fold, and in a fat pasture shal they fede euen vpon the mountaines of Israel.

I will fede my sheepe my selfe, and bryngе theym to their reste, sayth the Lord God. • Such as be lost, will I Luke.4 seke: such as go astray will I bringe Joh.10 agayne, suche as be wounded, will I bynde vp, suche as be weake, will I make strong, such as be fat and strog, those will I roote out, and fede them with the thing that is lawful. And as for you (O my shepe) sayth the Lord E God, • I will put a difference among Mat.25 the shepe, among the wethers, and the geates. Was it not ynough for you, to eate vp the good pasture, but ye muste treade downe the residue of your pasture with your fete also? Was it not ynough for you to drynke cleare water, but ye muste trouble the residue also with your fete? Thus my shepe must be fayne to eate the thinge, that ye haue troden down with your fete, and to drink it, that ye with your fete haue defiled. Therfore thus sayth the Lord God vnto them: Behold I will seuer the fat shepe from the leane: for so muche as ye haue shot the weake shepe vpon the sydes and shoulders, and runne vppon theym with youre hornes, so longe tyll ye haue vtterlye scattred them abrode. I wil helpe my sheepe, so that they shall nomore be spoyled: yea, I wil discerne one shepe from another. I will rayse vp vnto them one only shepherd, euen my seruant • Dauid, he shall • fede them, and Jer.30b he shall be their shepherd. I the Lord • Jez.37 will be their God, and my seruaunte • Dauid shalbe their prince. Euen I Mich.5 the Lorde haue spoken it. Moreouer, F I wyll make a couenaunte of peace with them, and dryue all euill beastes out of the land: so that they may dwel safelye in the wildernes, and slepe in the woods. Good fortune and prosperytye will I geue the, and vnto all that Gen.12d be round about my hyll. • I prosperous shower and rayne will I sende them in due season, that the trees in the wod may bryng forth their frutes and the grounde her increase. They shalbe safe in their land, & shall know that I am the Lord, which haue broken their yocke and delyuered theym out

out of the handes of thole, that helde them in subiection. They shall nomore be spoyled of the Heathen, nor devoured with the beastes of the land but safely shal they dwel, and no man shall fraye them. I will set vp an excellente plante for theym, so that they shal suffer nomore hunger in the land, neyther beare the reproche of the Heathen any more. Thus shall they vnderstand, that I the Lorde their God am with them, and that they (euen the house of Israell) are my people sayth the Lord God. Ye men are my flocke, Psa.95.f ye are the shepe of my pasture: and I am your God, saith the Lord God.

3 MOreouer, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, turne Ezec.34.a Ier.49.b Ezec.35.b thy face towarde the mounte Seir, prophesye vppon it, and saye vnto it. Thus sayth the Lord God: Beholde, (O thou mount Seir) I will vpon thee, I will reach out myne hande ouer the, yea, waste and desolate will I make thee. Thy cities will I breake downe, and thou shalt lye voyde, that thou mayest know, howe that I am Psa.10.c Ier.2.a the Lord. For so much as thou beareste an olde enemitie against the children of Israell, and hast drawen the children of Israell vpon the sweard, what tyme as they were troubled and punyshed for their sinne: Therfore, as truely as I liue, saith the Lord God, 5 I will prepare thee vnto bloode, yea, Ezec.35.c blood shall folowe vpon thee: seyng thou layest wayte for bloode, therfore shall blood persecute thee. Thus will I make the mount Seir desolate and waste, and bring to passe that ther shal no man goo thyther, nor come frome thence. His mountaynes will I fyll with his slayne men: thy hilles, valleys, and riuers, shal lye full of them, that are slayne with the sweard. I will make thee a perpetuall wildernes, so that thy cities shal not returne to their former estate, that ye maye ¶ knowe, how that I am the Lord. And because thou halte sayde: what, bothe these nations and bothe these landes must be myne, and I will haue them in possession, wher as the Lord was there. Therfore, thus sayth the Lorde Exo.25.f God: As truly as I liue, I will handle the accordynge to thy wrath and gelowsye, lyke as thou hast dealt cruelly with them, that I may be knowē among them, howe I haue punyshed thee. Yea, and that thou also mayest be sure, that I the Lord haue herd all thy despitefull wordes, whiche thou hast spoken agaynst the mountaynes of Israell, sayinge: Lo, they are made waste, and geuen vs to deuour. Thus D with youre mouthes ye haue made your boast agaynst me, yea, and multiplyed your proude wordes agaynste me, whiche haue hearde altogether. Whervnto thus sayth the Lord God: to the ioye of all the worlde wyll I make the waste. And like as thou (O mount Seir) waste glad, because the heritage of ỹ house of Israel was destroied: euē so wil I do vnto the also, that thou and whol Edom shalbe destroyed, & know, that I am the Lord.

¶ The .xxxbi. Chapter.

THou sonne of man, prophesye A vpon the mountaynes of Israell, and speake: Heare the Ezec.6.a worde of the Lord, O ye mountaynes of Israell. Thus saith the lord God. Because your enemy hath sayd vpon you: A, ha, the hye euerlastyng places are now become ours: prophesie therfore, and speake: thus sayth the Lorde God. Seyng ye be wasted and trodē downe on euerye syde, and become a possessiō vnto the residue of the Gentiles: whiche haue brought you into mennes mouthes, and vnto an euyll name amonge the people. Therfore, heare the woorde of the Lorde God, O ye mountaynes of Israell. Thus, sayth the Lord God vnto the mountaynes and hylles, valleys and dales, to the voyde wyldernesse and desolate cityes, whiche are spoyled, and had in derisyon on euery syde, among the residue of the Heathen. Yea, euen thus:

W sayth the lord God. In the fire of my gelousy haue I take a deuyce against the residue of the Gentiles, & agaynst Eze,35a all Edom: which haue taken in my land vnto them selues for a possession: which also reioysed from their whole hearte with a disceitfull stomake, to waste it, and to spoyle it. Prophesye therfore vpō the land of Jsrael, speak vnto the mountaynes and hilles, to valleys and dales, thus sayth the lord God: Behold, this haue I deuised in my gelousy and terrible wrath. For so muche as ye haue suffred reproke of the Heathen, therfore thus saieth the Lorde God. I haue sworne that the Gentiles whiche lye about you, shall beare their confusion them selues. And for you (O mountaynes of Jsraell) ye shal shote out your braunches, and bryng forth your fruite to my people of Jsrael, for it is hard by that it will come. Behold, I come vnto you, and vnto you will I turne me, that ye C may be tilled and sowen. I will send you much people, which shalbe of all the house of Jsraell, the cityes shalbe inhabited, and the decayed places shal be repayred agayne. I will prouyde you with muche people and cattelle, which shall increase and bring fruite, I will restore you also to your olde estate, and shewe you more kyndnes then euer ye hadde before: wherby ye shall know that I am the Lord. Yea, people will I sende vnto you (O my folke of Jsraell) which shal haue the in possession, and thou shalt be their enheryteaunce, so that thou shalte noo more be without them. Agayne thus sayth the Lord God. For so muche as they saye vnto you, thou arte an eater vp of men, and a waster of thy people: therfore thou shalt eate no mo men, neyther destroy thy people anye more sayth the Lord God. And I will not suffer thee: for to heare thyne owne confusion amonge the Gentiles from hence forth. Thou shalt not beare the reproke of the nations, nor caste oute thyne owne peopleany more, saith the D Lorde God. Moreouer the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: O thou sonne of man, when the house of Jsrael dwelt vpō their own ground, they defyled theym selues with their owne wayes and ymaginations: so that in my sight their way was lyke the vnclennesse of menstruous women. Wherfore, I poured my wrothfull displeasure vpon thee, because of the bloode that they had shedde in the land, and because of their ydols, wher with they had defiled them selues. I scatred them also among the Hethen, so that they were strowed aboute in the landes. According to their wayes and after their owne inuentions, so E dyd I punyshe them. And when Eze.36b they were gone vnto the Hethen, and Ro.15c come in among them, they dishonored my holy name: so that it was sayd of them: Are these the people of God, and must go out of their owne lande?
Then spared I my holy name, which the house of Jsraell hadde dyshonnoured amonge the Gentyles, to whome they camme. Therfore telle the house of Jsraell: Thus sayth the Lorde God: I do not this for your sakes (O house of Jsrael) but for my holy names sake, which ye dishonou-red among the Hethen, when ye came to them. Therfore, I will halow my great name agayne which among the Gentiles is euyll spoken of: for ye your selues haue dyshonoured it among them. And the Gentiles shall knowe that I am the Lord, when I am honored in you before their eyes, sayth the Lorde God. As for you, I will take you from amonge the Heathen, and gather you together out of Eze.11d all countreys, and bryng you agayne Jer.17d into youre owne lande. Then will I poure cleane water vpon you, and ye shall be cleane: yea, frome all your vnclennesse and from al your Idols shall I clense you. A newe herte also will I geue you, and a newe spyrte will I put into you. As for that stonye herte, I will take it out of youre bodye, and geue you a fleshely herte, Deu.30 I will geue my spyrete amonge you.
And cause you to walke in my commaundementes, to keepe my lawes,

and to fulfyll theym. And so ye shall dwelll in the lande, that I gaue to your forefathers, and ye shall be my people, and I wyll be your God. I will helpe you out of al your vnclennes. I will call for the corne, and wil encrease it, and let you haue no honger. I will multiply the frutes of the trees and the increase of the fielde for you, so that ye shall heare nomore reproche of honger among the Heathen. Then shall ye remember your owne wicked wayes, and your ymaginacions, which were not good: so that ye G shall thinke that ye were worthye to be destroyed, for your sinnes and abhominacions. But I wyll not doo thys for your sakes (sayeth the Lorde God) be ye sure of it. Therfore, O ye house of Israell, be ashamed of youre synnes. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde God: What tyme as I shall clense you from al your offences, then will I make the cityes to be occupied agayne, and wyll repayre the places that be decayed. The desolate lande shall be buylded agayne, which afore tyme laye waste in the syghte of all them that wente by. Then shall it be sayde: this wast lande is become like a garden of pleasure, and the boyde, desolate and broken downe cityes are nowe stronge, and defenced agayne. Then the residue of the Heathen that lye round about you, shall knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche repayre that that was broken downe, and plante agayne, that that was made waste. Euen I the Lord haue spoken it, and will doo it in dede. Thus sayeth the H Lord God: I will yet once be founde agayne of the house of Israell, and do this for them: I shall increase them as a flocke of men. Lyke as the holye flocke and the flocke of Ierusalem are in the hye solempne feastes: so shal also the wylde wasted cityes be filled with flockes of men: and they shall knowe that I am the Lord.

I The hand of the Lord came bypō me, and caried me out in the spyete of the Lorde, and let me downe in a playne fielde that laye full of bones, and he led me rounde about by them: and beholde, the bones that laye vpon the fielde, were very many, and marueious drye also. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man: thinkest thou these bones may liue again. I answered, O Lord God, thou knowest. And he sayd vnto me: Prophecie thou vpon these bones: and speake vnto them. Ye drye bones, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lord God vnto these bones: Behold, I will put breath vnto you, that ye may lyue: I will geue you sinowes, and make fleshe to growe vpon you, & couer you ouer with skynne: and so Gene.2b
B geue you • breath, that ye may lyue, and knowe that I am the Lord. So I prophecied, as he had cōmanded me And as I was prophecying, ther cam a noyse and a gret motion, so that the bones ranne euerye one to another. Now whē I had loked, behold they had sinowes, and fleshe grewe vpon theym: and aboue they were couered with skynne, but there was no breath in theym. Then sayde hee vnto mee. Thou sonne of man, prophesye thus towarde the wynde: prophesye, and speake to the wynde. Thus saith the C Lord God. Come (O thou ayre) frō the foure wyndes, and blowe vppon these slayne that they may be restored to lyfe. So I prophecied as he hadde commaunded me: then came the breth into theym, and they receaued lyfe, and stode vp vpon their fete, a marueious greate sorte. Moreouer, he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. Behold, they say: Our bones ar dried vppe, our hope is gone, we are cleane cut of. Therfore prophesye thou, and speake vnto theym: thus sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, I wyll open D your graues (O my people) and take you oute of youre Sepulchres, and bring you into the lande of Israell agayne. So shall ye knowe that I am the Lord, when I open your graues and bring you out of them. My spyete also will I put in you, & ye shal lyue:

I will set you agayne in your owne lande, and yee shall knowe that I am the Lord which haue sayd it, and fulfilled it in deede. The woorde of the Lorde came vnto mee, sayinge: thou sonne of man, take a sticke, and wryte vpon it. Vnto Juda and to the chyldren of Israel hys companions. The take another sticke and wryte vppon it: Vnto Joseph the stocke of Ephraim, and to al the housholde of Israell hys companions. And then, take both these together in thyne hand, so shall there be one sticke therof. Now if the childzen of the people saye vnto thee, wylte thou not shewe vs, what thou meanest by these? Then geue theym thys aunswere: thus saith the Lorde God: Behold. • I will take the stocke Osee. 1 b of Joseph, whiche is in the hande of Ephraim and of the trybes of Israell hys felowes, and will put them to the stocke of Juda, and make theym one stocke, and they shalbe one in my hand And the two stickes wherupon thou writest, shalt thou haue in thine hand that they may see, and shalte say vnto them. Thus saith the Lorde God: behold, I wyll take awaye the chyldren of Israell from among the heathen, vnto whom they be gone, and will gather them together on euery side, and bryng theim agayne into their owne lande: yea, I will make one people of theym in the lande, vppon the mountaines of Israel, and they al shal haue but one kinge. They shal nomore bee two peoples from hence forth, nether be deuyded into two kingdomes: they shall also defyle theym selues nomore wyth theyr abhominations, theyr Idols, and al their wycked doinges. I will helpe them out of all their dwellynge places, wherein they haue synned: and wyl so clense them, that they shalbe my people, and I their God. G Dauid my seruant shalbe theyr king, and they all shal haue one shepeheard only. They shal walke in my lawes, and my commaundementes shal they both kepe and fulfyl. They shal dwell in the lande, that I gaue vnto Jacob my seruaunte, wher as youre fathers also haue dwelt: ye, euen in the same lande shall they, their childzen: and their childers childzen dwel for euermore, and my seruaunt Dauid shalbe their euerlastinge prince. Moreouer, I will make a bonde of peace wyth them, which shalbe vnto theym an euerlasting couenant. I wil settle thē also, and multiplye them, my sanctuarye wyl I set among theym for euermore. • My dwellynge shalbe wyth Leu. 26 theym: yea, I wyll bee their God, and they shalbe my people. Thus the hethen also shall know that I the Lord am the holye maker of Israell, when my sanctuary shalbe among them for euermore. ¶ The .xxxviii. Chapter. I

AND the woorde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, tourne thy face towarde Gog the lande of Magog, which is the chiefe prince at Meseech and Tubal: prophecie agaynste hym, and saye. Thus saith the Lorde God: Ezr. 38 Apo. 20 • O Gog thou chief prynce of Meseech and Tubal: behold, I wil vppon thee, and wil turne thee about and put a byt in thy chawes: I wyll bringe thee forth and all thy hoste, both horse and horsemen, which be al weaponed of the best fashion: a great people that handle altogether speares, shyldes, and swoordes: the Perses, Moziens and with them the Libians, which al beare shildes and helmettes: Gomer and all hys hostes: the house of Thogorma out of the north quarters, and all hys hoostes, yea, and much people wyth thee. Therfore prepare thee, set thy selfe in araye wyth all thy people, that are come vnto thee by heapes, and be thou their defence. After many dayes thou shalt be visited, and in the latter yeares thou shalt come into the lande that hath beene destroyed wyth the swoorde, and nowe is replenished agayne wyth diuers people vpon the mountaynes of Israell, which haue long lien waste. Ye they bee brought out of the nations, and dwell all safe Thou shalt come vppe lyke a stormye wether to couer the lande, and as it wer a darke cloude, thou with al thyn hoste hostes, and a great multitude of peo-C ple wyth thee. Moreouer thus sayth the Lord God: at the same time shall many thynges come into thy mynde, so that thou shalt ymagin myschyefe, and saye: I will vp to yonder playne lande, seyng they sit at ease, and dwel so safely (for they dwell all without any walles, they haue neither barres nor dores) to spoyle them, to rob them to laye hand vpon their so well inha-D bited wildernesses: agaynst that people that is gathered together from amonge the hethen, wyych haue gotte catteil & good, and dwell in the midst of the lande. Then shall Saba, and Dedan, and the marchantes of Thar sis wyth all their worthyes say vnto thee. Art thou come to rob? hast thou gathered thy people together because thou wilte spoyle: to take siluer and golde: to carye away catteil and good, E and to haue a great praye? Therefore, O thou sonne of man, thou shalt prophecie and saye vnto Gog. Thus saieth the Lorde God. In that day thou shalt knowe that my people of Israel dwelleth safe: and shalte come from thy place oute of the Northe partes: thou & much people with thee which ryde vpon horses, whereof there is a great multitude and an innumerable sorte. Yea, thou shalt come vppon my people of Israel, as a cloude to couer F the lande. This shall come to passe in the latter dayes: I wil bryng thee vp into my lande, that the heathen maye knowe me, when I get me honoure vpon thee (O Gog) before their eies.

Thus saieth the Lorde God: Thou art he, of whom I haue spoken afore tyme by my seruauntes the prophetes of Israel, whiche prophecied in those dayes and yeres, that I should bring thee vppon theym. At the same tyme, when Gog commeth vp into the land of Israel (saieth the Lorde) shall my indignation go foorthe in my wrath.
Ezech.38.a For in my gelousie and hote displea-Ezech.38.e sure I haue deuysed, that there shal-be a great trouble in the land of Isra el at that time. The very fishes in the sea, the fowles in the ayre, the beastes of the field, and al the men that are vp-on the earth, shal tremble for fear of me. The hilles also shalbe turned vp syde downe, the stayres of stone shall G fal, and al the walles shal sinke to the ground. I will cal for a sweard vpon them in all my mountaynes, saith the Lord God: so that euery mans sword shalbe vpon another. Wyth pestilence and blud wyl I punysh him, stormie raine and haile stones, fyre and brenstone wyl I cause to rayne vpon hym and all hys heape, yea, and vppon all that greate people that is wyth hym.
Thus wyl I be magnifyed, honored, and knowen among the heathen: that they may be sure, howe that I am the Lord.

The. xxxix. Chapter.

THerfore, O thou son of man, prophecie agaynst Gog, & speake. A Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Behold, O Gog thou chiefe prynce Ezech.38.e at Mesech and Tubal, I wyll vpon the, and punysh thee with sixe plages and leade thee from the north parte, and bryng thee vp to the mountaines of Israel. As for thy bowe, I wyll smyte it out of thy left hande, and cast thyne arowes out of thy ryght hand.
Thou wyth all thyne heape, & al the people ẏ is with thee, must fall vpon the mountaines of Israel. Then wil I geue thee vnto fowles and wylde beastes of the fielde, to bee deuoured: there must thou lye vppon the fielde: for euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, B sayeth the Lorde God. Into Magog and amonge those that syt so careles in the Iles: wil I sende a fyre, and they shal knowe, that I am the Lord, I wyll make also the name of my ho-linesse to be knowen among my people of Israel: and I wyl not lette my holy name be euil spoken of any more: but the very heathen also shal knowe that I am the Lorde, the holye one of Israel: Behold, it commeth, and shal be fulfylled in deede, sayeth the Lorde God. Eyhs is the daye whereof I haue spoken. They that dwell in the cityes of Israell, shal go forth and set fyre

fyre vppon the weapons, and burne them, sheldes and speares, bowes and arowes, billes and clubbes: seuen yeres shal they bee burnynge thereof, so that they shall els bringe no stickes from the fielde, neyther haue neede to hewe downe any out of the woodde. For they shal haue weapons inough to burne. They shal robbe those that robbed theym, and spoyle those that C spoyled them, saith the Lord God. At the same tyme will I geue vnto Gog a place to be buryed in Israell, euen the valley wherthrough men go from the easte to the seawarde. Those that trauayle thereby shal stop their noses for the stenche. There shal Gog & all hys people be buried: and it shalbe called, the valley of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes long shal the house of Israell be burienge of theym, that they may clense the lande. Yea, all the people of the land shal bury theym. D It shalbe a glorious daye, when I get me that honour, saith the Lord God.
D They shal ordeyn men also to be dead buriers, euer going through the land, and appoynt them certayne places to bury those in, which remayne vppon the field, that the land may be clensed. From ende to ende shal they seke and that seuen monethes longe. Nowe those that go through the land, where they see a mans bone, they shal set vp a token by it, till the deade buryers haue buryed it also, in the valley of the people of Gog. And the name of the citie shalbe called Hamonah (that is a multitude) Thus shal they make the lande cleane. And thou soonne of manne: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Speake vnto al the foules and euery byrde, yea, and to al the wyld beastes of the fielde, heape you together, and come, gather you round about vppon my slaughter, that I haue slayne for Apo. 19 d you: euen a great slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israel, eate flesh and drynke bloud. Ye shal • eat the flesh of the worthies, and drynke bloude of the princes of the land: of the wethers of the lambes, of the gotes, and of the oxen that be all slayne at Basan. Eat the fat youre bealye full, and drynke bloud, til ye be dronken of the slaughter, whiche I haue slayne vnto you. Fyl you at my table wyth horses and strong horsemen, wyth captaynes and men of warre, sayth the Lord God. I F wyl bring my glory also amonge the Gentyles, that all the heathen may se my iudgement that I haue kepte, and my hand which I haue layed vppon theym: that the house of Israell maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde God from that day forth. And the hethen shall knowe, that wher as the house of Israel were ledde into captiuitie: it was for theyr wyckednesse sake, because they offended me. For the which cause I hid my face from them and deliuered theym into the handes of theyr enemies, that they myghte be all slayn wyth the sword. Accordyng to their vnclennes and vnfaithful delynges, so haue I entreated them, and G hyd my face from theym. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: Now wil I bring agayne the captaynes of Iacob, and haue mercy vppon the whole house of Israel, and be gelous for my holye names sake. All their confusion and offence that they haue don against me shalbe taken away: and so safely shall they dwel in their lande, that no manne shal make theym afrayde. And when I haue brought theym agayne from amonge the people, whē I haue gathered them together oute of their ennemyes landes, and am praysed in them before many hethen: Then shal they know, that I am the Lord their God which suffred them to be led into captiuitie amonge the heathen, but nowe haue I brought theym agayne into their owne land, and not left one of theym yonder. After that wyll I hide my face nomore from them, • but Ezr. 36 wyll poure out my spiryte vppon the house of Israel, saith the Lorde God.

IN the fiftenth yere of ourecaptiuitye, in the begynnynge of the I yeare, the tenth daye of the month: that is the fourtenth yeare after that the Citie was smytten downe: the same same daye came the hand of the Lorde vpon me, and caried me forth: euen into the land of Israel, broughte he mee in the visions of God: and sette mee downe vpon a maruelous hye mountayne, wherevpon there was a buyldyng (as it had ben of a city) toward the North. Thyther he caried me, and behold, there was a man, whose similitude was lyke brasse, which hadde a threde of flaxe in his hand and a mette rodde also. He stode in the doore, and sayde vnto me: thou sonne of manne marke well wyth thyne eyes, herken to wyth thyne eares, and fasten it in thyne heart whatsoeuer I shal shewe the, for to that intent that they myght bee shewed thee, therefore arte thou broughte hyther. And whatsoeuer thou seest, thou shalt certify the house of Israel therof. Behold, there was B a wall on the outsyde rounde aboute the house: the metrodde that he had in his hande, was syxe cubites long and a spanne. So he measured the bredth of the buyldynge, whiche was a metrodde, and the heyghte also a metrod. Then came he vnto the east doore, and wente vp the staires, and measured the postes of the doore, whereof euery one was a metterod thycke. Euerye chamber was a metterodde longe and brode: betweene the chaumbers were fyue cubytes. The pooste of the doore wythin the porch, was one mettrod. He mesured also the porche of the innermer doore whych contayned a mete rod. Then measured he the entrye of the doore, that contayned eyght cubites: and hys pyllers twoo Cubytes: and this entry stode inward. The C chambers of the doore eastward, were three on euerye syde, a like broade and longe. The pyllers also that stoode of bothe the sydes were of one measure After thys, he measured the wydenes of the doore, which was tenne cubites, and the heyght of the doore xiii. cubites. The edge before the chambers was one cubyte broade vppon bothe the sides, and the chambers syxe cubites wyde on eyther syde. Hee measured the doore from the rydge of one chamber to another, whose wydenes was xxv. cubytes, and one doore stode agaynst another. He made pyllers also lx. cubytes hye, rounde aboute the court doore. Before the inwarde parte vnto the fore entrye of the innermer doore were fyftye cubites. The chambers and theyr pyllers within, round aboute vnto the doore hadde side windowes. So had the fore entrye also, whose wyndowes wente rounde about wythin. And vppon the pyllers there stode date trees. Then brought he me into the fore court wheras wer chambers and paued worckes, made in the fore courte rounde aboute thirtye chambers vppon one paued woorke. Now the paued worke was a longe beside the doores, and that was the lower paued woorke. After thys hee measured the bredth from the lower doore, vnto the innermer courte of the outsyde, which had an C. cubites vppon the Easte and the Northe parte. And the doore in the vttermost court toward the North, measured he after the length and bredth: his three chambers on eyther syde wyth hys pillers, and fore entryes: which had euen the measure of the fyrst doore. His heyghte was fifty cubites, in bredth .xxv. cubites, hys wyndowes, and porches wyth hys date trees, hadde euen lyke measure as the doore toward the East: there were seuen steppes to go vpon, and their porche before theim. Now the doore of the innermer courte stode streyght ouer against the doore, that was toward the northeast. From one D doore to another he measured. C. cubites. After that, he broughte me to the southsyde, where there stoode a doore toward the south, whose pillers and porches he measured, these had ỹ first mesure, & with ther porches they had windowes round about, like the first windowes. The heigth was fyftye cubites, the bredth .xxv. with steppes to go vp vpon: his porch stode before with his pillers & date trees on ether side. And ỹ doore of the innermer court stode toward the south, & he mesured frō one doore to another an C. cubites.

So he brought me into thinnermost court, thorow the doore of the south syde, which he measured, and it hadde the measure aforesayd. In like maner his chambres, pillers, and forentries, hadde euen the foresayd measure also. And he had with his porches rounde aboute wyndowes of fyftye cubites heigth, and .xxv. cubites broade. The porches round about were .xxv. cubites longe, and .v. cubites broade: and his porch reached vnto the vttermost courte, vppon his pyllers, there were E date trees, and eyght steppes to go vp vpon. He brought me also into the inmost court vpon the east side, and measured the doore, according to the measure aforesayd, his chambers, pillers, and porches, had euen the same measure, as the fyrst had: and with his porches, he had windowes round about. The heighte was fyftie Cubites, the breadth .xxv. cubites, his porche reached vnto the vttermost court: his pillers also had date trees on either syde, and. viii. steppes to go vp vpon. And he brought me to the northy dooze, and measured it, whyche also hadde the foresayd measure. His chambres, pillers, & porches, had wyndowes roūd about: whose height was. l. cubites, and the breadth .xxv. His pillers stode toward the vtmoste courte, and vpon them bothe were date trees, and. viii. steppes to go vp vpon. There stode a chambre also, whose entrance was at F the dooze pillers, and there the burnt offerings were washed. In the dooze porch, there stode on eyther syde two tables for the slaughtynge: to slea the brent offrynges, synoffrings, and trespalle offrynges therupon. And on the outsyde as men go foorth to the north dooze, there stode two tables. Foure tables stode on eyther side of the doze that is. viii. tables, whereuppon they slaughted. Foure tables were of hewen stone for the burnt offrynges, of a cubite and a half long and broade, and one cubite hye, whervpon were laied the vessellles and ornamentes, whiche were vsed to the burnt and slaine offrynges, when they were slaughted. And within, there wer hookes foure fyngers broade, fastened round about to hang flesshe vpon, and vpon the tables was layd the offering flesshe. On the outside of the innermore dooze wer the syngers chambers in the inward court beside the northe dooze ouer agaynst the south. There stode one also beside the east dooze northeward. G And he sayd vnto me: This chamber on the Southe syde, belongeth to the prieستes, that kepe the habitation: and this towarde the north, * is the prie- 1.pa.23 stes that wayt vpon the aulter: whiche bee the soonnes of * Sadoch, that 3.reg.2 doo seruice before the Lorde, in steede of the childzen of Leui. So he measured the fore court, whiche hadde in length an. C. cubites, and almuche in breadthe by the foure corners. Nowe the aulter stode before the house. And he brought me to the fore entric of the house, and mesured the walles by the entry dooze, whiche were. v. cubites long on either side. The thicknes also of the doze on either syde was thre Cubites. The lengthe of the porche was .xx. cubites, the breadth .xl. cubites, and vpon steppes wente men vp to it: by the walles also were pillers on eyther syde one.

The. xli. Chapter.

AFter thys, he brought me to the temple, and measured the postes, whiche were of bothe sydes sixe cubites thicke, accordynge to the widenes of the tabernacle. The breadthe of the dooze was ten cubites and the walles of the dooze on eyther syde. v. cubites. He mesured ỹ length therof, whiche conteyned. xl. cubites, and the breadth .xx. Then went he in, and measured the dooze postes, which were two cubites thicke: but the doze it self was sixe cubites, & the bredth of ỹ doze was. viii. cubits. He measured the length and breadth therof, whiche were euery one. xx. cubites before the temple. And he sayde vnto me: This is the holyest of all. He measured also the wall of the house, which was. vi. cubites. The chābers that stode rounde about

aboute the howse, were euerye one fower cubytes wyde: and one stoode harde vppon another, whereof there were three and thirtie, there stoode postes beneth by the walles rounde about the house, to beare them vp, but in the wall of the house, they wer not fastened. The syde chambers wer the hyer and wyder, and had steppes thorough them rounde aboute the house. Thus was it wyder aboue, that frō the lowest, men might go to the hiest by the mydde chambers. I sawe also that the house was verye hye rounde aboute. The foundation of the syde chambers was a metrod, that is syxe cubytes broade. The thyckenes of the syde wall wythout, conteyned fiue cubites, and so didde the out wall of the chambers in the house. Betwene the chambers was the wydenes twentie cubites rounde about the house. The chamber dozes stode ouer against the outwal, the one doze was toward the nozth, the other towarde the South: and the thyckenes of the oute wall was. v. cubites round about. Nowe the buylding that was separated toward the west, was. lxx. cubits wide: the wal of the building was fiue cubites thicke rounde aboute, and the length four scoze cubites and ten. So he measured the house, whyche was an hundzed cubites longe, and the seperated buylding wyth the wal was an hundzed cubites longe also. The wydenes befoze the house, and of it that was seperated toward the East, was an hundzed cubyts. And he measured the length of the buyldinge befoze and behynd wyth the chambers vpon both the sydes: and it conteyned an hundzed cubytes. The innermer temple, the pozch of the foze court, the syde postes, these three had syde wyndowes and pyllers round about ouer againſt the postes, from the grounde vp to the windowes. The windowes theym selues were sieled ouer wyth boozdes: and thus was it aboue the doze vnto the inmost house: and with out also. Yea the whole wal on euery syde both wythin and wythout was sieled ouer with great boozdes. There were cherubins and date trees made also, so that one date tree stoode ouer betwyxte twoe cherubins. One cherub had two faces, the face of a manne lokynge asyde towarde the date tree, and a lyons face on the other syde. D

Thus was it made round about in al the house. Yea the cherubins and date trees wer made from the grounde vp aboue the doze, and so stoode they also vpon the wal of the temple. The hye postes of the temple were foure squared, and the fashion of the sanctuarye was • euen as it appeared vnto me a- Eze. 1. c. foze in the vision. • The table was of • Exo. 23 wood. iii. cubites hye, and. ii. cubytes long: his cozners, the length and the walles were of wood. And hee sayde vnto me: This is the table that shall stande befoze the Lozde. The temple and the holiest of all, hadde eyther of them two dozes: and euery dooze had two lytle wyckettes which wer folden in one vppon another, on euerye syde two. And vppon the dozes of the temple, there were made cherubyns and date trees, lyke as vpon the walles: and a great thycke balke of wood was befoze on the outside of the pozch Vpon both the sydes of the walles of the pozche, there wer made depe windowes and date trees, hauing beames and balkes, lyke as the house had.

Then caried hee me oute into the foze courte towarde the nozth, and brought me into the chamber that stode ouer againſt the backe buylding nozthward, whiche had the length of an hundzed cubytes, whose doze turned toward the Nozth. The wydenes contayned fyftye cubytes: ouer againſte the twentye cubites of the innermer courte, and againſte the paued wozke that was in the courte, beſyde al these three, there stoode pyllers, one ouer against another. And befoze thys chamber ther was a walkinge place of ten cubites wyde, and within was a way of one cubit wide and their dozes toward the Nozthe. Thus the hiest chambers wer alway narrower then the lowest and mydmoost of the buyldinge, for they bare chamber vpon chaumber, & stode three together one vpon another, not hauinge pyllers lyke the fore courte: therfore were they smaller then those benethe and in the middest, to recken B from the ground vpward. The wall wythout that stode by the chambers toward the vtmoost courte vpon the fore syde of the chambers, was fiftye cubytes long: for the length of the vtmost chambers in the fore court was fyftie cubytes also: but the lengthe therof before the temple was an hundred cubytes. These chambers hadde vnder them an intraunce of the East syde, whereby a man myght goe into them out of the forecourt through the thicke wal of the fore court towarde the east, ryght ouer agaynst the separated building. Before the same building vpon this syde, there wer chambers also which had a way vnto them lyke as the chamber of the northside, C of the same length and wydenesse.

Their intraunce, fashion, and doores wer also of the same maner. Yea, euen lyke as the other chamber dores wer: so were those also of the southsyde.
And before the way toward the syngers steppes on the eastе syde, there stode a dore to go in at. Then sayd he vnto me: The chambers towarde the north and the south which stande before the backe building: those be holy habitations, wherin the prieستes that do seruice before the Lord, muste eate the moost holye offerynges: and there must they laye the most holye offeringes, meatoffringes, synne offerynges, and trespasse offringes: for it is an holy place. Whē the prestes come therin, they shal not go out into the forecourt: but seyng they be holy, they shal leaue the clothes of their ministration, and put on other garmentes, when they haue anye thinge to do wyth the people. Nowe when he had measured all D the innermer house, he broughte mee forth through the east part, and measured the same round about. He measured the east syde wyth the metrod, wheych round aboute conteyned fyue hundred metrodes: And the Northsyde measured hee whiche conteyned round about euen so much. The other two sydes also toward the south and the west, which he measured, conteyned eyther of them fyue hundred metrodes. So he measured all the foure sydes, where there went a wal round about. v. C. metrodes longe, and as brode also wheych separated the holye from the vnholy.

¶ The .xliii. Chapter.

SO he broughte mee to the doore E that tourneth towarde the east.
Behold, then came the glorye of the God of Israel from out of the east whose voyce was lyke a great noyse of waters, and the earth was lyghtened with his glory. His syght to loke vpon, was lyke the first, that I sawe Ezr.10 when I wente in, what tyme as the citie should haue ben destroyed: and Ezr.1.1
lyke the vision that I sawe by the water of Cobar. Then fell I vppon my face: but the glory of the Lord cam into the house, through the east dore. So a wynd toke me vp, and brought me into the innermer courte, and behold, the house was full of the glorye of the Lorde. I heard one speakynge vnto me oute of the house: and there F stoode one by me, that sayd vnto mee: Esay.6.1 O thou sonne of man, this rowme Apo.1.13 is my seate, and the place of my foote steppes where as I wil dwel among the childzen of Israel for euermore: so that the house of Israel shal nomore defyle my holy name, neither they nor their kinges through their whoredom through their hie places, and through the dead bodies of their kings: wheych haue builded their thresholds in maner harde vppon my thresholdes, and their postes almost at my postes, and a wall betwyxte me and them. Thus haue they defyled my holy name with their abhominations, that they haue committed. Wherfore I haue destroyed them in my wrath. But nowe they shal put away their whoredome and the dead bodies of their kynges out of my syght, that I may dwell among

AFter this he broughte me a- A row it, els shall it be shutte still. The prince him selfe shall come thorow it, that hee maye eate breadde before the Lord. At the porche shalt he come in, and there shall he go out again. Then brought he me to the dooze vppon the north syde of the house. And as I loked aboute me, beholde, • the glory of Exo.24d the Lorde fylled the house: and I fell and.60.c

Thus with al your abhominacions ye haue broken my couenaunte, and not kept the holy ordinances of my sanctuary: but set kepers of my sanctuarye, euen after your owne mynd. Therfore thus ℭ saith the Lord God: of all the straungers that dwel among the childzen of Israell, no strangers whose hert and flesshe is not circumcised, shall come within my sanctuary: No, nor the Leuites that be gone backe fro me: and haue disceaued the people of Israell with all errours, going after theyr ydoles: therfore shall they beare their owne wickednes. Shold they be set and ordeyned to minister vnder the dores of the house of my sanctuarye? And to do seruice in the house: to slay burntoffringes and sacrifices for the people: to stand before them, & to serue them, seynge the seruice that they do them, is before theyr ydoles, and cause the house of Israell to stōble thorow

A THus sayth the Lorde God: the dore of the innermer court toward the easte shalbe shut the syxe worcking dayes: but in the Sabboth, and in the day of the new mone, it shalbe opened. Then shal the prince come vnder the dore porch, and stande still without by the doore cheke. So the priestes shall offer vp his burnte and healthoffrynges. And he shall worshyp at the dore poste, and go hys waye forth agayne: but the dore shall B nomore be shut tyll the euenyng. On the same maner shall the people of the land also do their worshyp before the Lorde without this doore vpon the Sabbothes and newe mones. Thys is nowe the burntoffrynge, that the prince shall brynge vnto the Lord vpon the sabboth, sixe lambes without blemysh, and a ram without blemysh, and an ephah for a meatoffering, with the ramme. As for the lambes, he may geue as many meatoffryngs to them as he will: and an hyn of oyle to an ephah. In the day of the newe moneth it shalbe a yong bullock without blemishe, sixe lambes & a ram also without blemyshe: with the bullocke he shal geue an ephah, and with the ram an ephah also for ỹ meateoffering, but to the lambes, what he may come by. And euer an hyn of oyle to an ephah. C When the prince commeth, he shal go vnder the dore porch, and euen there depart forth agayne. But when the people of the lande come before the lord in the hie solemne feast, as many as come in by ỹ north dore to do worshyp, shall go out agayne at the south doore. And they that come in at the south dore shall go forth againe at the north dore. There shal none go out at the dore, where he came in, but shall go right forthe ouer on the other side, and the prince shall goo in and out among them. Upon the solemne & hye D feast days this shalbe ỹ meatoffring An ephah to a bullocke & an ephah to a ram, & to the lambs, as many as he wyl: but euer an hyn of oyle to an ephah. Now when ỹ prince bringeth a burntoffringe or an helthoffring or a free wyl vnto the Lord, the east dore shalbe opened vnto him, that he maye do with his burnt and healthofferinges, as he doth vpon the sabboth: and when he goth forth, the doze shall be shut after him agayne. He shall dayly bryng vnto the Lord a lambe of a yere olde without blemishe for a burntofferynge: this shall he do euerye morning. And for a meatoffering he shall E geue the sixt part of an ephah, and the third part of an hin of oyle, to myngle with the cakes, euery morning. Yea, this shalbe dayely meatofferinge vnto the Lord: for an euerlastyng ordenaunce: and thus shall the lambe the meatoffering and oyle be geuen euery morning, for a dayly burntofferyng. Moreouer, thus sayth the Lord God: Yf the prince geue a gyft vnto any of his sonnes, then shall it be his sonnes herytage perpetuall, that he may possesse it. But if he will geue one of his seruauntes, some of hys herytage, it shalbe his to the free yeare, and then Leu.25 to returne agayne vnto the prince: for Num.36.c his heritage shalbe his sonnes onely. F Ezec.46 The prince also shall take none of the peoples enherytaunce, nor put the from their possession: but to his owne sonnes shall he geue hys possession, that my people be not scatered abrode, but that euerye man maye haue hys owne. And he brought me thorow the entraunce at the side of the dore to the habitacion of the Sanctuary, that belongeth to the priestes and stode to-warde the northe, and beholde, there was a place vpon the west syde, then G sayde he vnto me: This is the place where the priestes shall digh the tres pace and sinofferynges, and bake the meateofferynges, that they neede not beare them into the outwarde courte: and so to vnhalow the people. So he broughte me vnto the vtmoste courte round about al the foure corners. Behold, in euery corner of the court, ther was yet a lytle courte. Yea, in all the foure corners of the court, there was made a litle court of.xl. cubites longe, and.xxx. cubites brode: these foure lytle courtes were of one lyke measure: and there went a rydge wal round about them all foure, vnder the which there were harthes made rounde about. Then sayd he vnto me: This is the kechyn wher the ministers of the house shall digh the slayne offeringes of the people.

AFter thys, he broughte me agayne before the doore of the house: and behold, ther gushed
I out water frome vnder the postes of the house east ward, for the house stode toward the east, that ran downe vpon the ryght syde of the house, which lyeth to the aulter southward. Then caried he me out to the north doore, and brought me forth there round aboute by the vtmost doze that turneth eastward. Behold, there came forth the water vppon the ryght syde. Nowe K.13.a when the man that had the metrod in his hand went vnto the easte doze, he measured a. M. cubites, and then he brought me thorowe the water, euen to the ancles: so he measured yet a M. & brought me thorow ỹ water again vnto ỹ knees: yet measured he a thousande, and brought me thorowe the water vnto the loynes. After this he measured a thousande agayne, then was it such a ryuer, that I might not B wade thorowe it. The water was so deepe, that it was needefull to haue swymmed, for it might not be waded ouer. And he sayde vnto me: hast thou sene this, O thou sonne of man? and with that, he brought me to the riuer bancke agayne. Nowe when I came there, there stode manye trees vppon eyther syde of the ryuer banke. Then sayde he vnto me: This water that floweth out toward the east, and runneth downe into the playne field, commeth into the sea: and from the sea, it runneth out, and maketh the waters whole. Yea, all that lyue and moue, wher vnto this ryuer commeth, shall recouer. And wher this water commeth, there shalbe much fyshe. For all that commeth to this water shall be lusty and whole. By thys ryuer shall the fyshers stand from Engaddi vnto En Eglaim, and ther spread out their nettes: for there shalbe great heapes of fyshe, lyke as in the mayne sea. But for hys clay and pittes, they shall not be whole, for why? it shalbe occupyed for salte. By thys ryuer vppon bothe the sydes of the shoze, ther shall growe all maner of fruitefull trees, whose leaues shall not fall of, neyther shall their frute perysshe: but euer be rype at their monethes: for their water runneth out of the sanctuarye. His fruite ¶ is good to eate, and hys leafe profytable for medicine. Thus sayeth the Lorde God. Lette thys bee the bozder, wherin ye shall deuyde the lande vnto the twelue trybes of Israell, wyth the lyne. Parte it indifferently vnto one as vnto another: of the Gen.22.c

Thus the bozders from the sea forth, shall be Hazar Euan: the bozder of Damascus, the north and the bozders of Hemath, that is ỹ north part. The D east side shall ye measure from Hauran and Damascus, from Galead and the land of Israell by Jozdan, and so forth, from the sea coaste, that lyeth eastwarde: and this is the easte parte.

IN the third yeare of the raygne of Iehoakim kyng of Juda, came Nabuchodonoſor kyng of Babilon vnto Jeruſalem, and beſieged it: and the 4Re. 24a Lord deliuered Jehoakin the kynge of Juda into his hand, with certayne ornamentes of the houſe of GOD, which he caryed away vnto the lande of Semner, to the houſe of his God, and there he broughte them into hys gods treaſurye. And the kynge ſpake vnto Aſphanaz the chefe chamberlayne, that he ſhould bringe him certayne of the chyldren of Iſrael, that were come of the kynges ſeede and of princes yonge ſpringaldes without any blemyſhe, but fayre and well fauoured, inſtructe in all wiſdome, connyng and vnderſtanding: which were able to ſtande in the kinges palace, to reade and to learne for to ſpeake Caldeyſhe. Vnto theſe the kyng appoynted a certayne porcion of hys owne meate and of the wyne, whiche he dranke hym ſelfe, ſo to noryſhe them thre yere: that afterward they might ſtande before the kynge. Among theſe now were certayne of the childrē of Juda: namely Daniell, Ananias, Miſaell and Azarias. Vnto theſe, the chefe chamberlayn gaue other names, and called Daniell, Balthaſar: Ananias, Sidrach: Miſaell, Miſach: and Aſarias, Abednago. But Daniell

So God gaue Daniel fauour and grace before the chefe chamberlaine, that he sayd vnto him: I am afrayde of my Lord the Kyng, which hath appointed you your meat and drynke: least he spye your faces to be worse lyking then the other sprygalds of your age, and so ye shal make me lose my head vnto the king. Then Daniel answered Melassar, whome the chiefe chamberlayne had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael and Asarias, and sayde: O proue but ten dayes wyth thy seruauntes, and let vs haue potage to eate, and water to drynke then loke vppon our faces, and theyrs that eate of the kynges meat. And as thou seest, so deale wyth thy seruauntes. So he consented to them in thys matter, and proued them. x. dais. And after the ten dayes, their faces were better lykynge and fatter, then al the young sprygaldes, whych dyd eat of God gaue nowe these four sprygaldes cunning and learnyng in al scripture and wisdome: but vnto Daniel specially, hee gaue vnderstanding of al visions and dreames. ¶ The. ii. Chapter.

IN the seconde yeare of the reygne of Nabuchodonosor, had Nabuchodonosor a dreme, wherthrogh his spirite was vexed, and hys sleepe brake from him. Then the king commaunded to call together all the sothsayers, charmers, witches, and Chaldees, for to shewe the king his dreme. So they came, and stoode before the king. And the kyng sayd vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my spirit was so troubled therwith, that I haue cleane forgotten what I dreamed. Vppon this the Chaldees answered the king in the Syrias spech: O kinge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Shewe thy seruauntes thy dreame, and we shal shewe thee, what it meaneth. The kinge gaue the Chaldees their answere and sayde: It is gone fro me. Yf ye wil not make me vnderstande the dreame wyth the interpretation therof, yee shall dye, and your houses shalbe prysed. But yf yee tell me the dreame and the meanyng ther- B of, ye shall haue of me gyftes, rewardes and great honour: onely shew me the dreame. and ỹ signification of it; They answered agayne, and sayde: the king must shewe hys seruauntes the dreame, and so shall wee declare what it meaneth. Then the Kynge answered, sayinge: I perceaue of a trueth, that ye dooe but prolonge the tyme, for so muche as yee see that the thynge is gone fro mee. Therefore yf ye wyll not tell mee the dreame, yee shall haue all one iudgemente. But yee sayne and dyssemble wyth vayne woordes, whyche ye speake before mee, to putte of the tyme. Therefore tell mee the dreame, and so shall I know, yf ye canne shew mee what it meaneth. Vppon thys, the Chaldees gaue answere before the kynge, and sayd: there is no man vpon earth, that can tel the thinge, whiche the Kynge speaketh of: yea, there is neyther kyng prince ne lorde, that euer asketh suche thynges at a soothsayer, charmer or Chaldey: for it is a verye hard matter that the Kynge requyreth. Neyther is there anye, that canne certifye the Kyng therof, except the gods, whose dwelling is not amōg the creatures. For the whyche cause the kinge was C wroth

wroth with great indignation, and cõmaunded to destroye all the wise men at Babylon: and the proclamation went forth, and the wyse men were slayne. They sought also to slea Daniell with his companions. Thenne Daniell enquired of Arioche the kinges steward, of the iudgement & sentence, that was gone forthe alredy to kyll such as were wise at Babylon. He answered and sayde vnto Arioch, beyng then the kynges deputie: Why hath the kyng proclaymed so cruell a sentence? Tho Arioch told Daniel the matter. Upon this, went Daniel vp, and desired the kinge, that he myght haue leysure, to shew the kyng the interpretation, and then came hee home agayn, and shewed the thyng to Ananias, Misael, and Azarias, his companyons: that they shoulde beseeche the GOD of heuen for grace in this secrete, that Daniel and his felowes with other such as were wise in Babylon, perished not. Thenne was the mystery shewed vnto Daniell in a vision by nyght. And Daniell praysed the God of heuen. Daniell also cried loude, and said: O ỳ the name of God might be praised for euer and euer, for wisedom & strẽgth are his owne: • He chãgeth ỳ times & ages. • He putteth down kings: he setteth vp kings: • he geueth wisedome vnto the wyse, and vnderstandynge to those that vnderstand, he openeth the depe secretes: he knoweth the thyng that lyeth in darknes, • for the light dwelleth with him I thanke thee, and prayse thee (O thou God of my fathers, ỳ thou haste lent me wysedome and strength, and hast shewed me the thing, that we desyred of thee, for thou hast opened the kynges matter vnto me. Upon thys went Daniel vnto Arioch, whom the king had ordeyned to destroy the wise at Babylon, he went vnto hym, and sayd: Destroy not suche as be wyse in Babylon, but bryng me in vnto the kyng, and I shall shew the kyng the interpretation. Then Arioch brought Daniell into the kyng in all the hast, & sayd vnto hym: I haue found a man amonge the prysoners of Juda, that shall shewe the kynge the interpretation. Then answered the kyng & said vnto Daniel, whose name was Balthasar. Art thou he, that canst shewe me the dreame, which I haue sene, & the interpretation therof? Daniel answered the kyng to his face, and said: As for this secrete, for the which the king maketh inquisition, it is neither the wise, the sorcerer, the charmer, nor the deuill coniurer that can certify the kynge of it. • Onely God in heauen can open secretes, and he it is, that sheweth ỳ kyng Nabuchodonosor what is for to come in the latter days. Thy dreame, and that which thou hast sene in thyne head, vpon thy bed, is thys: O kynge, thou dyddeste caste in thy mynde, what should come hereafter. So he that is the opener of mysteries telleth thee, what is for to comme. As for mee, thys secrete is not shewed me, for anye wysedome that I haue, more then any other liuing, but onely that I myght shewe the kynge the interpretation, and that he might knowe the thoughtes of hys owne hearte. Thou kynge sawest, and beholde, there stoode before thee a great Image, whose fygure was meruaylous greate, and his visage grymme. The Images head was of fyne gold, hys breaste and armes of syluer, hys body and loynes were of copper, hys legges were of yron, hys feete were part of yron, & part of earth. • Thys thou sawest till ỳ tyme, that without any hands, there was hewen a stone, which smote the image vpon the feet, that were both of yron and earth, and brake them to pouldre: then was the yron, the earth, the copper, the siluer, & gold broke altogether in pieces: & became like ỳ chaffe of corne, ỳ the wind bloweth away from the sommer flowres, ỳ they can no more be found. But the stone ỳ smote the image, became a great mountain, which fulfylleth the whole earthe: This is the dreame. And nowe wyll we shewe before the kynge what it meaneth. • O kynge thou art the kyng of kynges. For the GOD of heauen hath geuen thee a kyngdome, ryches, strength and mastesty: and hath delyuered thee al thinges, that are among the childrē of mē: the beastes of the feld, and the fowles vnder the heauen, and geuen the dominion ouer them al. Thou arte that golden heade. After that there shall aryse another kingdome, which shalbe lesse then thine. The third kingdome shalbe lyke copper and haue domination in all landes. The fourth kyngdome, shalbe as stronge as yron. For lyke as yron bruseth and breaketh all thinges: Yea, euen as yron beateth euerye thinge downe, so shal it beate downe and destroye. Where as thou sawest the fete and toes, part of earth and parte of yron: that is a deuyded kingdome, whych neuertheles shall haue some of the yron grounde myxte wyth it, for so much as thou hast sene the yron myxte wyth the claye. The toes of the fete that were part of yron and parte of claye, sygnifyeth: that it shalbe a kingdome partly strong, and partlye weake. And where as thou sawest yron myxte wyth claye, they shall myngle theym selues wyth the sede of simple people, and yet not continue one wyth another, lyke as yron wil not be souldered with a potsherd:

Act.14.b true dreame and the interpretation of it is sure. Then the kinge Nabuchodonosor fel downe vpon his face, and bowed him selfe vnto Daniell, and commaunded that they shoulde offre meatoffringes and swete odoures vnto him. The kyng answered Daniel, and sayde: yea, of a truth your God is a God aboue all goddes, a Lorde aboue al kynges, and an opener of Secretes: seyng thou canst dyscouer thys mistery. So the kinge made Daniell a great man, and gaue him many and great gyftes. Hee made him ruler of all the countries of Babilon, & Lorde of al the nobles that wer at Babilon. Now Daniel intreated the kinge for Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago: so that he made them rulers ouer all the officers in the land of Babilon: But Daniell him selfe remayned still in the court by the king.

NAbuchodonosor the king caused a goldē ymage to be made, which was xl cubits hie, and vi cubites thicke. This he made to be set vp in the field of Dura in the land of Babilon, and sent out to gather together the dukes, lordes and nobles, the iudges and officers, the debityes, and shreues: with all the rulers of the land: that they myghte come to the dedication of the ymage, which Nabuchodonosor the king hadde set vp. So the dukes, lordes and nobles, the iudges and officers, debities and shreues with al the rulers of the land gathered them together, and came vnto the dedicating of the ymage, that Nabuchodonosor the king had set vp. Now when they stoode before the Image, whyche Nabuchodonosor set vp, the herde cryed out wyth all hys myghte: O ye people, kynredds and tongues to you be it sayd: that when ye heare the noyse of the trompetter, whiche shalbe blowē, with the harpes shawmes, Psalteries, Simphonies, and al maner of Musike: ye fall downe and woorshyppe that golden ymage that Nabuchodonosor the kyng hath sette vp. Who so then falleth not downe and boweth him selfe, shall euen the same hour be cast into an hote burning ouē Therfore whē al the folke herd thys noise of the trompets that wer blowē with the harpes, shawmes, Psalteryes, Symphonies and all kynde of melodye, then all the people kinreds, and nations fell downe, and bowed theym selues vnto the golden image, C that Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp. Now were there certain men of the Chaldees, that went euen then and accused the Jewes, and said vnto the kyng Nabuchodonosor: O kyng, god saue thy life for euer. Thou being kyng haste geuen a commaundement, that all men, when they here the noise of the trompets, shaulmes, psalteries, symphonies, & all the other melodies, shall fall down and bow them selues, toward the goldē image: who so then fell not downe and worshipped not, ỹ he should be cast into an hote burning ouen. Now are ther certain Jewes, Dan.2.g • whom thou haste set ouer the officers of the land of Babylon: namely, Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago. These men (O kyng) regarde not thy commaundement, yea they will not serue thy goddes, nor bowe them selues to the golden Image, that thou haste set vp. Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell wrath and displeasure, commaunded, that Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago should be brought vnto him. So these menne were brought before the kyng. Thenne Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them, and said: What? O Sydrach, Misach, & Abednago, will not you serue my goddes? nor bowe your selues to the golden Image that I haue set vp? Well, be ready hereafter. Whenne ye heare the noise of the trompets blow with the harpe, shaumes, psalteries, symphonies, and all the other melodies: that ye fal downe, and worshyp the Image whyche I D haue made. But if ye worshyp it not, ye shal be cast immediatly into an hot burnyng Ouen. Lette se, what God is there, that may delyuer you out of my hands. Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago answered the kyng, & sayde: O Nabuchodonosor, we oughte not to consent vnto the in this matter, for 1.Reg why? our God, whom we serue, • is able to kepe vs from the hot burnyng ouen (O kinge) and can right well delyuer vs oute of thy handes. And though he wille not, yet shalte thou knowe (O kynge) that we wyll not serue thy goddes, nor do reuerence to that Image, whiche thou haste set vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor full of indignation, so that the countenaunce of his face chaunged vpon Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago. Therfore he charged and commaunded, that the ouen should be made. vii. tymes hotter than it was wont to be: and spake vnto the strongest woorthies that were in his hoste, for to bynd Misach, and Sydrach, and Abednago, and to caste them into the hote burnyng Ouen. So these men were bounde in theyr cotes, hosen, shoes, wyth their other garmentes, and cast into an hote burnyng ouen: for the kynges commaun- E dement was so straite, and the Ouen was excedynge hotte. As for the men that put in Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago, ỹ flame of the fyre destroyed them. And these thre men Sydrach, and Misach and Abednago fel downe in the hote burnyng ouen, beyng faste bounde. Then Nabuchodonosor the kyng merualled, and stoode vp in all haste: he spake vnto his councell and sayd: Did not you cast these thre men bound into the fire? They answered and said vnto the king: Yea, O kyng. He answered and said: Lo, for all that yet doo I see fower men goyng loose in the myddt of the fyre, and nothinge corrupte, and the fourthe is lyke the F sonne of God to looke vppon. Vpon this, went Nabuchodonosor vnto the mouthe of the hotte burnyng Ouen, he spake also, and sayd: O Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago, ye seruantes of the hie God, go forth, and come hyther. And so Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago went oute of the fire. Then the dukes, lordes, and nobles, and the kynges councell came together to se Esa.44.a these men, • vpon whom the fire had no maner of power in theyr bodyes. In soo muche that the very heare of theyr head was not burnt, and theyr cloathes vnchaunged, yea there was no smel of fyre felt vpon them? Then spake Nabuchodonosor, and sayde: Blessed bee the GOD of Sydrach,

A • Nabuchodonosor king vnto Dani.6.c all people: kinredes and tongues that dwell vpon the whole earth: peace be multiplied among you. I thought it good to shewe the tokens and marueilous workes, ẏ the hye God hath wrought vpon me. O, howe greate are his tokens, and how myghty are his won-Esa.45.b ders? • Hys kyngdome is an euerla-Dan.7.d stynge kyngdome, and his power la-Luke.1.c steth for euer and euer. I Nabuchodonosor beyng at reste in myne house, and florysshynge in my palace, sawe a dreame, whiche made me afrayed: and the thoughtes that I hadde vpon my bed, with the visions of myne heade, Dani.2.a troubled me. • Then sente I oute a commission, that all they which were of wisdome at Babylon shoulde bee brought before me, to tell me the inter pretacion of the dreame. So there came the sothsayers, charmers, Chal dees & conturers of deuils: to whō I told ẏ dreame, but what it betokened they coulde not shewe me: tyll at the laste there came one Daniell (otherwyse called Balthazar, accordyng to the name of my God) which hath the spyrete of the holye goddes in hym, to B whom I tolde the dreame saying: O Balthazar, thou prynce of Southsayers: For so much as I know that thou haste the spyrete of the holye gods and no secrete is hydde from thee: tell me therefore, what the vision of my dreame (that I haue sene) maye sygnifye. I sawe a vision in my head vp-on my bed: and beholde, there stode a tree vpon the grounde, which was very hie, great and mighty: the heigth reached vnto the heuē, and the bredth extended to all the endes of the earth: hys leaues were fayre, he had verye much frute, so that euery man had ynough to eate therin. The beastes of the fielde had shadowes vnder it, and the fowles of the ayre dwelt in the bowes therof. Shortly, al creatures fed of it. I sawe in my head a vision vpon my bed: and beholde, a watcher and a holy one cam downe from heauen, and cryed mightely, saying: Hewe downe the tree, breake of hys braunches, shake of hys leaues, and scatter hys fruite abrode: that all the beastes may get them away from vnder him, and the fowles from his braunches. Neu-ertheles, leaue the grounde of hys rote styll in the earth, and bynde hym vpon the playne fielde, with cheynes of yron and steele. With the dewe of heuen shall he be wette, and shal haue hys parte in the herbes of the ground with other wild beastes. That mans C herte of his shall be taken from hym, and a beastes herte shall be geuen him till seuen yeres be come and gone vp-on him. This errand of the watcher, is a commaundemente grounded and sought out in the counsel of him, that is most holy, to learne men for to vnderstande, that the hyest hath power ouer the kyngdomes of men, and geueth them, to whome it lyketh hym, and bryngeth the verye outcastes of men ouer them. Thys is the dreame, that I kynge Nabuchodonosor haue sene. Therfore O Balthazar, tel thou me what it signifyeth: for so much as all the wise men of my kingdome are not able to shewe mee, what it mea-neth. But thou canst do it, for ẏ spyrit of the holy gods is in the. Then Daniell (whose name was Balthazar) helde hys peace by the space of one houre, & his thoughtes troubled him.

So the king spake, and said: O Balthasar, let neither the dreame nor the interpretation therof feare thee. Balthasar answered, saying: O my lorde, D this dreame happen to thyne enemies and the interpretation to thyn aduer-saries. As for ỳ tree that thou sawest which was so great & mighty, whose heighte reached vnto the heauen, and his breadth into all the world: whose leaues wer fayre, and the frute much. vnder the whyche the beastes of the fielde had their habitation, and vpon whose branches the fowles of the aire dyd syt. Euen thou (O kyng) art the tree, great and strong. Thy greatnes increaseth, and reacheth vnto the heauen, so dothe thy power to the endes of the earthe. But where as the king sawe a watcher euen an holye angell, that came downe from heauen, & saide: Hewe downe the tree, and destroy it, yet leaue the grounde of the roote of the earth: & bynd hym vpon the plaine E field with chaines of yron and steele. he shalbe wet with the dewe of heauen, and his part shalbe with the beastes of the field tyll .vii. yeres become and gone vpon hym. This (O king) is the interpretation, yea, it is the very deuice of hym, that is hyest of all, and it toucheth my Lorde the kynge.
Thou shalt be cast out from men, and thy dwelling shalbe with the beastes of the field, with grasse shalt thou be fed like an oxe. Thou muste be wette with the dewe of heauen: yea seuen yeares shall come and go vppon thee, 11.a till thou know, • that the hiest hathe 17.c power vpon the kyngdomes of men, and geueth theim to whome he liste.
Moreouer, where as it was said, that the roote of the tree should be left still in the ground, it betokeneth, that thy kyngdome shall remayne whole vnto thee, after thou hast learned to know, that the power cometh from heauen.
Wherfore, O kyng, be content with 31 my counsell, that thou mayst redeeme thy synnes with almesse, • and thyne offences with mercy to poore people, for this shalbe an healyng of thyn er-rour. All these thynges touch ỳ kynge Nabuchodonosor. The after xii. mo- F nethes, the kyng walked vp & downe in the palace of ỳ kingdom of Babylon, and said: This is the great citie of Babylon, which I my self (with my power and strength) haue made a kinges court, for the honor of my mai-stie. While these wordes were yet in the kynges mouthe, there fell a voice from heauen, saying: O kyng Nabu-chodonosor, to thee be it spoken: Thy kyngdome shal depart from the, thou shalt be cast out of mennes company, thy dwellyng shalbe with the beastes of the fielde, soo that thou shalte eate grasse lyke an Oxe, till seuen yeares be come and gone ouer thee: euen vntill thou knowest, that the hyest hath power ouer the kyngdomes of men, and that he may geue them vnto whō it pleaseth him. The very same houre was this matter fulfilled vpon Na-buchodonosor: so that he was cast out of mens company, and did eate grasse lyke an oxe. His body was wet with the dewe of heauen, tyll his heares were as great as Egles fethers, and his nayles lyke byrdes clawes. When G this tyme was past: I Nabuchodo-nosor lift vp myne eies vnto heauen, and myne vnderstandyng was restored vnto me agayne. Thenne gaue I thankes vnto the highest. I magnified and prayed hym that liueth for euermore, • whose power endureth al Dan. 3.f way, and his kingdom from one generation to an other: in comparyson of whome all they that dwell vpon the handled according to his wil, among the powers of heauen, and among the inhabiters of the earthe: and there is none that may resist his hande, or say: Iob. 42.b What doest thou? • At the same tyme was myne vnderstandyng geuen me agayn, and I was restored to the honour of my kingdom, to my dignity, & to myne own shape agayn. Myne great estates and princes sought vnto me, & I was sette in my kyngdom agayne, so that I had yet greater worshyppe.

Then dyd I Nabuchodonosor lowe, magnifie and prayse the king of heuuen

for all hys woorkes are true, and hys wayes ryght. Is for those that go on proudelye, he is able to bryng theym downe.

A KYng Balthazar made a gret banket to hys thousand lordes: with al these thousande hee made greate cheere, and when hee was dronken wyth wyne, he commaunded to bryng him the gol 1 Pa. 36 c den and siluer vessels • which his father Nabuchodonosor had taken out of the temple at Jerusalem: that the kyng and hys lordes with hys quene and concubines myght drynke thereout. So they brought the golden vessel that was taken oute of the temple of the Lordes house at Jerusalem.

Then the kinge and his lordes wyth his quene and concubines dronke out of them. They dronk wyne, and praysed their ydols of gold, syluer, copper, B yron, woodde and stone. In the verye same houre there appered fyngers, as it had bene of a mans hande writyng, right ouer against the candelstick vpō the playne wall in the kynges palace, and the kynge sawe the palme of the

The kyng spake also to the wise men of Babilon, and sayd: Who so canne rede thys wryting, and shewe me the plaine meaning therof: shalbe clothed wyth purple, haue a cheyne of golde aboute hys necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kyngedome. Upon thys came al the kinges wise men: but thei could neyther read the wrytynge, nor shewe the kynge what it signifyed. Then was the kinge sore afrayde, in so much that his colour changed, and his lordes were sore vexed. So by reason of thys matter, that had happened
C to the kyng and hys lordes, the quene went vp her selfe into the banckette house, and spake vnto the kinges, saynge: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Lette not the thoughtes trouble thee, and let not thy countenaunce be changed. For why? there is a man in thy kingdome, that hath the spirite of the holye goddes wythin him, • as it Dan. 2 was seene in thy fathers dayes. Hee hath vnderstandinge and wisedome lyke the goddes. Ye the king Nabuchodonosor thy father made this man chyefe of the southsayers, charmers, Chaldees, and readers of destenies because that such an abundant spyrite knowledge and wisdome to expound dreames, to open secrettes, and to declare harde doowtes was in him: yea, euen in Daniel, whom the kyng named Balthasar. Let thys same Daniel be sent for, and he shall tell what it meneth. Thē was Daniel brought before the king. So the kynge spake vnto Daniel, and sayd. Art thou that Daniel one of the pryſoners of Juda, whom my father the kinge brought out of Jewrye? I haue heard speake of the, that thou hast the spyrite of the holye goddes, experience, and vnderstandinge, and that there hath beene greate wysedome founde in thee.

D Nowe haue there bene brought me wyse and cunning charmers to reade this wrytynge, and to shewe me the meanyng therof: But they could not telle me what thys matter signified. Then heard I say, that thou canst expound darke things, and declare hard doubtes. Well then, if thou canst rede this writing, and shewe me the meanyng thereof, thou shalte be cloathed with purple, haue a cheyn of golde about thy neck, and rule the third part of my kyngdome. Daniell answered E and sayd before the kyng: As for thy 4. Reg. rewardes, keepe theym to thy selfe, or geue thy ryche gyftes to an other: yet not the lesse, I wyll rede the writing vnto the kyng, and shew hym the interpretation therof. • O kyng heare: Dan.
GOD the hyest gaue vnto Nabuchodonosor thy father, the dignitie of a kyng, with worshyp and honour, so that that al people kinredes and tonges stode in awe and feare of him, by reason of the hye estate, that he had iente him. For whye, he slewe whome hee would: he smote whom it pleased him a gayne, whom he would, he sette vp: and whom he list he put downe. But Dan. 4.d • because his heart was so proud, and his stomacke set so faste vnto wilfulnes: he was deposed from his kingly throne, and hys Maiestie was taken from him. He was shutte out from among men, his heart was lyke a beastes hearte, and his dwelynge was F wyth the wild asses: he was fayne to eate grasse lyke an ore, and his bodye was wet wyth the dewe of the heauē till he knew, that the hiest hath power vpon the kingedomes of men, and setteth ouer them whom he lyst. And thou hys sonne (O Balthazar) for al this, thou hast not submitted thin hert thoughe thou knewest al these thynges: but hast magnified thy self aboue the Lorde of heauen, so that the vessels of hys house were brought before thee, that thou, and thy Lordes, with thy quene and concubins might drynke wyne therout. And hast prayse Act. 17.d d the ydols of syluer and golde copper and yron, and woodde and stoane, whiche neither see, heare nor vnderstande. As for the G O D • in whose hand consysteth thy breath and all thy waies, thou hast not loued him. Ther G fore is the palme of thys hand sent hither from him, to token vp thys writing. And this is the scripture, that is written vp: Mane, Thetel, Phares. Now the interpretation of the thing is this: Mane, G O D hath numbred the kingedome, and brought it to an end: Thetel, thou art weyed in the balaunce, and art found to lyght: Phares, thy kyngdome is dealt in partes, and giuen to the Medes and Perses. Then commaunded Balthazar, to Dan. 5.b cloth Daniel wyth purple, to hange a cheyne of golde about hys necke, and to make a proclamation concernynge hym: that he should be the ruler of the thirde parte of hys kyngdoume. • The bery same nyght was Balthazar the king of the Chaldees slaine, and Darius out of Medes toke in the kingdome, beyng. lxii. yeare of age.

IT pleased Darius to set ouer his kingdome an hundred and twēty I lordes which should be in all hys kyngdome aboute. Aboue these he set three prynces (of whom Daniel was one) that the lordes might geue accomptes vnto them, and the kinge to be vndiscased. But Daniell exceaded all these princes and Lordes, for the spirit of God was plenteous in him: so that the king was mynded to sette him ouer the whole realme. Wherefore the princes and Lordes soughte to pycke out in Daniell some quarell agaynst the kingdome: yet could they fynde none occasion nor faulte vppon him. For whye he was so faythfull, that there was no blame nor dyshonestie founde in him. Then said these B men: we canne get no quarel againste this Daniel, excepte it be in the lawe of hys God. Vppon this, wente the princes and Lordes together vnto the kyng, and sayd thus vnto him: kynge Darius, God saue thy lyfe for euer. All the great estates of the realme: as the Prynces, Dukes, Senatoures, and iudges, ar determined to put out a commaundemente of the kynge, and to make a sure statute: namelye, that whoso desyreth any petition, either of any God or man (wythin this thirty dayes) excepte it be onelye of thee, O kyng: the same person may be cast into the Lyons den. Wherfore, O kyng confirme thou this statute, & make a wrytyng: that the thing whyche the Medes and Perses haue ordeined, be C not altered nor broken. So Darius made the wrytyng: and confyrmed it. Now when Daniel vnderstode that the wrytinge was made, he went into his house: and the wyndowes of hys wall towarde Jerusalem stoode open. There kneild he downe vppon hys knees, three tymes a daye: there he made his petition, and praysed hys God, lyke as hys maner was to do afore time. Then these men made serch and found Daniel makinge his petition, and prayinge vnto his God. So they came to the kinge, and spake before him concerninge his commaundement, sayinge: O kinge, haste thou not subscrybed the statute, that within xxx. dayes, whoso requireth his petition of any God or man but onelye of thy selfe, O king: he shalbe caste into the den of the Lions? The kynge answered, and sayde: yea, it is true. It must be as a lawe of the Medes and D Perses, that may not be broken. Then answered they, and sayde vnto the kyng: Daniel one of the prisoners of Juda, O kyng, regardeth nether the, nor thy statute, that thou haste made: but maketh his petition three times a daye. When the kinge hearde these wordes, he was sore greued, & wolde haue excused Daniel, to deliuer him, and put of the matter, vntil the Sun went downe, to the intente that hee myght saue him. Then these men perceauinge the kinges mynde, sayde vnto him: knowe this (O kinge) that the lawe of the Medes and Perses is, that the commaundement and statute which the king maketh, maye not bee Bel. 1. altered. • Then the kyng badde them bryng Daniel, and they cast him into the Lyons den. The kinge also spake vnto Daniel, and sayd: thy God, whō thou alway seruest, euen hee shall defende thee. And there was broughte a stone, and layed vpon the hole of the denne, thys the kyng sealed with his owne ringe, and with the sygnet of hys princes: that the Kynges commaundemente concernynge Daniell, shuld not be brokē. So the king wēt into hys palace, & eate no meate that nyght, neyther was there anye mynstrelsye brought in before him, nether could he take any slepe. But betymes in the morninge, at the breake of the day, the kynge arose, and wente in all haste vnto the denne of the Lions.

Nowe as hee came nye vnto the den, hee cryed with a piteous voyce vnto Daniel: yea, the kyng spake, and saide vnto Daniel: O Daniel, thou seruaunte of the liuinge God, is not thy god (whom thou alwaye seruest) able to deliuer the from the lions? Daniel sayd vnto the king: O kynge, God saue thy life for euer. • My God hath f Dan. 3. Ieu. 14. Heb. 11.
sent hys aungel, which hath shut the lyons mouthes, so that they myghte not hurte me. For why? myne vnguiltines is founde out before hym. And as for thee, O king, I neuer offended thee. Then was the kyng exceadinge glad, and commaunded to take Daniel oute of the denne. So Daniel was brought out of the denne, and no maner of hurte was founde vppon hym. For he put hys trust in his G O D. And as for those men, which had accused Daniel, the kyng commaunded to bring them, and to cast them in the Lions denne: them, their children, and theyr wyues. • So the Lyons hadde Da. 145.

The. vii. Chapter.

IN the fyrst yeare of Balthazar kynge of Babilon, sawe Daniell a dreame, and a vision was in hys heade vppon hys bed. Whyche dreame hee wrote, and the summe of the matter is thys: Daniel spake and sayde: I sawe in my vision by nyght, and beholde the four wyndes of the heauen stroue vppon the Sea, and foure greate beastes came vp from the Sea, one vnlike another.

The first was as a lion, and yet had he • Eagles wynges. I sawe that his wynges were pluckt from him, and he taken away from the earth: that he stode vpon hys fete as a man, and that there was geuen him a mans hearte.
Behold, the seconde beast was like a • beare, and stode vppon the one syde.
Amonge hys teeth in hys mouth, he had three great long teeth, and it was sayde vnto him: Aryse, eate vp muche flesh. Then I loked, and behold there was another like vnto a leopard, this had wynges as a foule, • euen four vpon the backe. This beaste had foure heades, and there was power geuen him. After thys I sawe in a vision by nyghte, and beholde, the fourth beaste was grimme and horrible, and mar-uelous strong. It had great yron teeth it deuoured and destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder hys feete. It was farre vnlyke the other beastes, that wer before it: for it had • ten hor-nes, wherof I tooke good heede. And beholde, there came vp among theym another lytle horne, before whō there was three of the fyrst hornes pluckte awaye. Beholde thys horne had eyes lyke a man, and a mouth speaking pre sumptuous thynges. • I looked tyll the seates were prepared, and tyll the old aged sat him downe. His clothing was as whyte as snow, and the hea-res of his heade lyke the pure wool.
His throne was lyke the fyrye flame, and hys wheles as the burnyng fyre.
There drewe foorth a fyerie streame, and went out from him. • A thousand times, a thousande serued him. & M. times ten thousand stode before hym.
The iudgement was set, and the bokes opened. Then toke I hede there vnto, because of the voice of the proud wordes, which the horne spake. I beheld tyl the beast was slaine, and his bodye destroyed, • geuen ouer to bee brent in the fyre. As for the power of the other beastes also it was taken away, but their lyues were prolonged for a tyme and season. I sawe in a vy-sion by night, and behold, • there came one in the cloudes of heauen lyke the sonne of man, which wente vnto the olde aged, before whom they brought him. Then gaue he him • power and dignitie regal, that al people, trybes, and tunges shoulde serue him. • Hys power is an euerlastynge power, which shall neuer be put downe: and his kingdom endured vncorrupt. My heart was vexed, and I • Daniel had a troubled spirite wythin me, and the visions of my head made me afrayde: till I gat me vnto • one of them that stode by, to knowe the trueth concernynge all these thinges. So he tolde me, and made me vnderstande the interpretation of these thynges. These foure greate beastes, are foure kinges whych shall aryse oute of the earthe.
These shall take in the kyngedome of the sayntes of the most hyest, and pos-sesse it still more and more for a longe season. After this I requyred diligent-lye to knowe the trueth, concerninge the fourth beaste, which was so farre vnlyke the other beastes, and so horrible: whose teeth were of yron, and his nailes of brasse: whiche deuoured & destroied, & slāyed the residue vnder his fete. I desyred also to knowe the truth as touching the • ten horns that he had vpon his head, and this other, whiche came vppe afterwarde, before whose face there fel down thre, which horn had eies and a mouth, that spake presumptuous thynges, and looked with a grymmer visage then his fellowes. I beheld, and the same horne made battaile against the saincts: yea and gate the victorie of theym, vntyll the tyme that the olde aged came, that the iudgement was geuē to the chiefest Sainctes: and tyll the tyme that the sainctes had the kyngdom in possession. He gaue mee this answere.
That fourthe beast shalbe the fourth kyngdome vppon earthe: it shall bee more thenne all other kyngedomes, it shall deuoure, treade downe, and de-stroye all other landes. • The tenne hornes, are tenne kynges, that shall aryse oute of the kyngedome, after whom there shall stande vp another, whiche shalbe greater then the fyrste.

The. viii. Chapter.

A IN the third yeare of the regne of kyng Balthasar, there appeared a vision vnto me Daniell af-Dani. 7 a ter that I had sene the * firste. I sawe in a vision (and when I sawe it, I was at Susis in the chefe citye, whi-Jer. 49. f che lieth in the land of * Elam) and in Ezec. 32 d the vision, me thought I was by the ryuer of Ulai. Then I loked vp and sawe: and beholde, there stode before the ryuer, a ramme, which hadde two hornes: and these two hornes were hye, but one was hyer then another, and the hyest came vp behynd. I sawe that thys ramme pushed with hys hornes, agaynst the west, agaynst the north, and agaynste the south: so that no beastes mighte stande before hym, nor defend them from his power: but he did as him lysted, and waxed gret-
B ye. I toke hede vnto thys, and then came there an he goate from the west ouer the whole earth and touched not the ground. This goate had a maruelous wrethen horne betwixt his eies and came vnto the rãme, that had the two hornes (whom I had sene afore by the ryuer syde) and ranne fearcely vpon him with hys mighte. I sawe him draw nye vnto the ramme, beyng very fierce vpon him: ye, he gaue him such a stroke, that he brake hys two hornes. Neyther hadde the ramme so muche strengthe as to stande before him: but he cast him down, trode him vnder his fete: and no man was able to delyuer the ramme oute of his power. The goate waxed exceadynge great, and when he was at the strongest, his great horne was broken also Dan. 7. 1 Esd. 11 C * Then grewe there other foure such lyke in the steade, toward the foure windes of the heauen. Yea, out of one of the least of these hornes, there came vp yet another horne, whiche waxed marueious great, toward the south, toward the east, and toward the fayre pleasant land. It grew vp to the host of heauen, whereof it dyd caste some downe to the ground, and of the starres also, and trode them vnder fete. Yea, it grewe vppe vnto the prince of the host, from whom the dayly offerynge was taken, and the place of his Sanctuary casten downe. And a certayne season was geuen vnto it, agaynst the dayly offerynge (because of wickednes) that it might cast downe the veritye to the ground, and so to prosper in all thinges, that it went aboute.
D Upon this I herd one of the sayntes speakyng, whiche sayncte sayde vnto one that asked this question. Howe long shall this vision of the dayly sacrifice and of the wasting abhomination endure: that the Sanctuarye and the power shall so be troden vnder fote? And he answered him: Vnto the euening and the morneng, euen two thousand and three hundreth dayes: then shall the Sanctuarye be clensed agayne. Nowe when I Daniell had sene this vision, and sought for the vnderstandynge of it: beholde, there stode before me a thinge lyke vnto a man. And I herd a mans voyce in the ryuer of Ulai, which cryed, and sayd:
O Gabriell, make this man vnderstande the vision. So he came, and stode by me. But I was afrayed at his commynge, and fell downe vpon my face. Then sayde he vnto me: O E thou sonne of man, marke well, for in the last tyme shall this vision be fulfylled fylled. Anon as he was speakinge vnto me, I waxed faint, so that I sanke downe to the grounde. But he toocke hold vpon me, and sette me vp again, sayinge: Beholde, I will shewe thee what shall happen in the last wrathe: for in the tyme appoynted, it shall bee fulfylled. The ramme whyche thou sawest with the twoo hornes, is the kyng of the Medes and Perses: but the goate is the kyng of Greke lande: the greate horne that stoode betwixte his eyes, that is the principall kyng. But where as it brake, and foure other rose vp in the stede: it signifieth, that out of this people shall stande vp foure kyngdoms, but not so mighty as it. After these kyngdomes (while vngodlynesse is a growynge) there shall arise a kynge of an vnshamefast face, whiche shalbe wyse in darke speakynges. He shall bee mighty and stronge, but not in his owne strength. He shal destroy aboue measure, and al that he goeth about, shall prosper: he shall slea the strong and holy people. And thorowe his craftynes, falshode shall prospere in his hande, his herte shalbe proude, and many one shall bee put to deathe in his welthinesse. He shall stande vp agaynst the Prynce of Princes, but he shall bee destroyed without hande. And this vision that is shewed vnto thee, is as sure as the euening and the morning. Therfore write thou vp this sight, for it wil be long or it come to passe. Vppon thys, was I Daniell very fainte, so that I lay sicke certayne dayes: but when I rose vp, I went about the kyngs businesse, and meruailed at the vision, ne nertheiesse no man knewe of it.

The. ix. Chapter.

In the fyrst yeare of Darius, the sonne of Ahasuerus, which was of the sede of the Medes, and was made kyng ouer the realme of the Chaldees: yea, euen in the fyrst yeare of his reigne, I Daniell desyred to knowe the yearely numbre out of the bokes, wherof the Lord spake vnto Jeremie the Prophet: that Jerusalem should lye waste. lxx. yeares: I tourned me vnto God the Lorde, for to praye and make myne intercession, with fasting sackcloth and ashes, I prayed before the Lorde my God, and knowledged, saying: O LORDE, thou great and fearefull God, thou that keepest couenaunte and mercye with them whyche loue thee, and doo thy commandementes. We haue synned, we haue offended, we haue beene disobedient, and gone backe; yea, we haue departed from all thy precepts and iudgementes. We wouldе neuer followe thy seruauntes the Prophetes, that spake in thy name to our kynges and Princes, to our forefathers, and to all the people of the land. O LORD ryghteousnesse belongeth vnto thee, vnto vs pertayneth nothynge but open shame: as it is come to passe thys daye vnto euery man of Juda, and to them that dwelle at Jerusalem. Yea, vnto all Israell, whether they be far or nye, thrugh out all landes: wherin thou hast strawed them, because of the offences, that they hadde done agaynst thee. Yea, O Lorde, vnto vs, to our kynges and princes, to our forefathers, euen to vs all, that haue offended thee, belongeth open shame. But vnto thee, O Lorde oure God, pertayneth mercye and forgeuenesse. As for vs, wee are gone backe frome hym, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lord our GOD, to walke in hys lawes, whyche he layde before vs by hys seruantes, the Prophetes: yea, all Israell haue transgressed, and gone backe from thy law, so that they haue not hearkened vnto thy voyce. Wherfore, the curse and othe that is wrytten in the lawe of Moyses, the seruaunt of GOD (against whome wee haue offended) is poured vppon vs. And he hathe performed hys wordes, whyche he spake against vs, and agaynst our Judges, that iudged vs, to bryng vppon vs, suche a greate plague, as neuer was vnder heauen, lyke as nowe it is comme to passe in Jerusalem. Yea, all thys plague, as it is wrytten in the lawe of Moyses ses, is come vppon vs. Yet made we not our prayer before the Lorde oure God, that wee myghte turne agayne from oure wickednes, and to be learned in the veritye. Therfore hath the D Lorde made haste, to bring this plague vppon vs, for the Lorde oure God is ryghteous, in all his workes whiche he doeth: for why? we wolde not herken vnto his voyce. * And nowe, O Baru. 2b * Exo. 12 13. 514b lord our God, thou that with a mighty hand hast brought thy people out of Egypt, to get thy self a name whiche remaynyth this day: we have sinned, O Lorde, and done wickedlye agaynst all thy ryghteousnes: yet lette thy wrathfull displeasure be turned away (I beseech the) from thy citye of Jerusalem, thy holy hyll. And why? for our synnes sake, and for the wyckednesse of our forefathers, is Jerusalem and thy people abhorred, of all them that are about vs: Nowe therfore, O our God, heare the prayer of thy seruaunt, and his intercession. O let thy face shine ouer thy Sanctuary that lyeth wast: for the Lordes sake.

O my God, enclyne thyne eare, and E herken (at the leaste for thyne owne sake) open thyne eyes: behold howe we be desolated, yea and the citie also, whiche is called after thy name: for we do not cast our prayers before the in oure owne ryghteousnesse, no, but onely in thy great mercyes. O Lord heare: O forgeue Lord, O Lord consider, tary not ouer long: but for thine owne sake do it, O my God: for thy citie, and thy people is called after thy name. As I was yet speakyng at my prayers, knowledgynge myne owne sinnes, and the sinnes of my people, makynge so myne intercession before the Lord my God, for the holye hylles sake of my God: yea, whyle I was yet speakyng in my prayer: beholde, Dani. 7c and. 8.a the man Gabriell, (* whome I had sene afore in the vision) came flyinge to me, and touched me about the offeryng tyme in the euening. He informed me, and spake vnto me: O Daniell sayd he: I am nowe come to make the vnderstand it. For assone as thou begannest to make thy prayer, it was so deuised, and therfore am I come to shewe thee. And why? * For thou art Dan. 9 a man greatly beloued. Wherfore, ponder the matter well, that thou mayst learne to vnderstande the vision. lxx. weekes are determined ouer thy people, and ouer the holye citye: that the wickednes may be consumed, that the synne may haue an ende, that the offence maye be reconcyled, to bring in euerlastyng ryghteousnes, to fulfyll the visions, and the prophetes, and to annoynte the most holy one. Understand this thē, and marke it well: that

Then shall the stretes and walles be buylded agayne. lxii. weekes, but with harde troublous time. After these. lxii. weekes, shall Christe be slayne, and they shall haue no pleasure in him. Then shall there come a people with the Prince, and destroye the citie, and the Sanctuary: and his end shal come as the water floode. But the desolation shall continue till the ende of the battell. He shall make a stronge bonde with many for ỹ space of a weeke: and when the weke is halfe gone, he shall put downe the slayne and meateofferyng. * And in the temple there shal mat. 24 b be an abhominable desolation, tyll it mar. 13 b haue destroied al. And it is conclided, that thys wasting shall continue vnto the ende.

IN the thirde yere of kyng Cirus 1 of Persia, ther was shewed vnto Danyell (otherwyse called Balthazar) a matter, yea a true mater, but it is yet a longe tyme vnto it. He vnderstode the matter well, and perceaued what ỹ vision was. At the same tyme, I Daniell mourned for the space of three weekes, so that I had no lust to eate breade: as for flesshe and wyne, there came none wythin my mouth; No, I dyd not once anoynte my

my selfe, tyll the whole three weekes were ent. Upon the .xxiiii. day of the first moneth, I was by the gret flood cailed Tigris, ✠ I lyft vp myne eyes, Dan.7.b Apoc.1.c and loked: and beholde, a man clothed in lynnen, whose loynes were gyrded vp with fyne golde of Araby: his body was lyke the Chrisolyte stone, his face (to loke vpon) was lyke lyghtening, his eies as the flame of fyre, his armes and fete were lyke fayre glysteryng metall, but the voyce of hys wordes was lyke the voyce of a multitude. ✠ I Daniell alone sawe thys Dan.3.c vision, ✠ the men that were with me, Act.9.a saw it not: but a great fearefulnes fell vpon them, so that they fled away and hid them selues. I was left there my selfe alone, and sawe this great vision, so long tyl ther remayned no more strength within me: yea, I loste my colour clene, I wasted away, and my strength was gone. Yet hearde I the voice of his wordes: and as sone as I heard it, sayntnes came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the grounde, vpon my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, which set me vp vpō my knees, and vppon the palmes of my handes, saying vnto me: ✠ O Daniel, Dan.9.b thou welbeloued man: take good hede of the wordes, that I shall saye vnto thee, and stand ryght vp, for vnto the C am I nowe sente. And when he had sayde these wordes, I stode vp, trembling. Thē sayd he vnto me: feare not Daniell: for why? sence the first daye that thou set thin hert to vnderstand, and diddest chasten thy selfe before thi God: thy wordes haue ben herd. And I had come vnto thee, when thou begannest to speake, had not the prince ouer the kingdom of the Perses withstand me .xxi. dayes. But lo ✠ Michael Dan.3.b 12.a one of the chefe princes, came to helpe me, and I was left to continue there with the kynges of Persia, and am come to shewe the, what shall happen vnto the people in the latter dayes. For it wilbe long yet or the vision be fulfylled. Now when he had spoken these wordes vnto me. I cast downe my head to the ground, and helde my tonge. Behold, ther touched my lyps one very lyke vnto a man. Then opened I my mouth, and sayde vnto him that stode before me: O my Lorde, my ioyntes are losed in the vision, & there is nomore strength within me. How D maye my Lordes seruaunt then talke with my Lorde? seynge there is no strength in me, so that I can not take my breth? Upon this there touched me agayne, one much lyke a man ✠ and Dani.9d comforted me, saying: O thou man so welbeloued, feare not, be content, take a good hert vnto thee, and be strong. So when he had spoken vnto me, I recouered, and sayde: Speake on my Lord, for thou hast refreshed me. Thē sayd he, knowest thou wherfore I am come vnto the? nowe wil I go again to fight with the kyng & prince of the Perses. As sone as I go forth, lo, the prince of Grekeland shall come. Neuertheles I will shew the that thing that is faste noted in the scripture of truthe. And as for all ponder matters, there is none that helpeth me in them, but Michaell your prince.

A Nd in the firste yeare of Darius of Media, I stode by hym to comforte hym, and to strength him, and nowe will I shew thee the trueth. Beholde: there shall stand vp yet thre kings of Persia, but the fourth shalbe far rycher then they all. And when he is in the chefest power of his ryches, he shal prouoke euery man against the realm of Greke lande. ✠ Then shall there arise yet a Dani.7.d mightye kynge, that shall rule with great dominiō, and do what him list. ✠ And as sone as hys kyngdome com- 1 Mac.1.a meth vppe, it shall be destroyed, and deuyded towarde the foure wyndes of the heauen. They that come after hym, shalle not haue suche power and dominion as hee, but hys kyngedome shallbe scatred, yea, euen among other then those. And the kynge of the south shalbe myghtyer, then hys other princes. And one shalbe strōger then he, and shall rule his dominion with great power. And in the ende of yeares, they shall be ioyned together, and the kynges daughter of the south shall come to the kynge of the north, for to make frendshyppe, but she shall not obtayne the power of that arme, neyther shall shee be able to endure thorowe his might, but she and suche as brought her (yee, and he that begat her, and confozted her for hys tyme) shalbe delivered vp. Out of the braūches of her rote, there shall one stande vp in his stead which with power of armes shal go thorowe the kyngs land of the north, and hādle him accozding to hys strength. As for their Idoles and pzinces, with their costlye Jewels of gold and siluer, he shall carye them away captiues into Egipt, and he shall reygne moze yeares then the kynge of the north. And when he is come into the kynges realme of the south, he shalbe fayne to turne agayne into his owne land. Wherfoze his sons shalbe displeased, and shall gather together a mighty great host of people: and one of theym shall come, and goo thorowe lyke a water flood: then shal he turne, and go foorth with defynge and boastynge vnto his owne lande.

C Then the kyng of the south shalbe angry, & shal come forth to fight against the kynge of the North: yea, he shall bring a great multitude of people together, and a great heape shalbe geuen into his hand: these shall he carye away with great pryde, for so much as he hath cast downe so many thousandes, neuertheles, he shal not preuayle. For the king of the north shall gather (of the newe) a greater heape of people then afore, and come forth (after a certaine time and yeres) with a mighty hoste, and exceadyng greate good. At ỹ same time there shal many stand vp agaynst the kyng of the south, so that the wicked childrē of thy people also shall exalt them selues (to fulfyll the vision) and then fall. So the king of the north shal come to lay syge, and to take the stronge fensed cityes. And the power of them of the south shall not be able to abyde him, and the best men of the people shal not be so strōg, as to resist him. Whorthy, whē he cōmeth, he shall handle him as he lyste, and no mā shalbe so hardy as to stand agaynste him. He shall stande in the pleasaunt countrey, whiche thorowe hym shalbe destroyed: he shall set his face with al his power to obtaine his kyngdome, and to be lyke it. Yea, that shall he doo, and geue hym vnto the daughters among wemen, to destroy him. But he shall fayle, neyther shall he obtayne his purpose. After thys shall he set his face vnto the Iles and take many of them. A pzince shal stop him, to do him a shame: beside the confusion that els shall come vnto hym. Thus shall he turne agayne to hys owne lande, stomble and fall, and be nomore found: so he that came vppon him and did him violence, shall stand in his place, & haue a pleasaunt kingdome: and after a fewe days he shalbe destroyed, and that neyther in wrath, nor in battell. In his steade ther shall arysen vyle person, not holdē worthy of a kynges dignitye: this shall come in peaceably, and obtayn the kingdom with fayre wordes: he shall fyght agaynst the armes of the mightye (and destroye them) yea, and agaynste the pzynce of the couenaūt. So after that he hath taken truce with him, he shall handle disceatfully: that he maye get vp, and ouercome hym with a small flocke: and so with craftynesse to get him to ỹ fattest place of the lande, and to deale other wyse, then ether his fathers or graundfathers dyd. For he shall destroy the thyng, that they had robbed and spoyled, yea, and all theyr substaunce, ymagenyng thoughtes agaynst the strong holdes, and that for a tyme. His power and harte shall be stered vp with a great armie agaynst the kyng of the south, where thorowe the kynge of the south shalbe moued then vnto battell, with a greate and mighty host also. Neuertheless, he shall not be able to stand, for they shal cōspire against him. Yea, they that eat of his meat shall hurt him: so that his hoost shall fall, and many be slayne

creyte at one table: but they shall not prosper, for whye? the ende shall not Say your brethren, that they are my people, & your systers, that they haue obteined mercye. As for youre mother, ye shall chyde with her, & reproue her: for she is not my wife, neither am I her husband, onelesse she put away her whordom oute of my syght, and her aduoutrie frome her breastes. If no, I shall strip her naked, and sett her euen as she came into the worlde: yea, I shall laye her wast, and make her like a wyldernes, and slea her for thirst. I shal haue no pitie also vpon her children, for they be the children of fornication. Their mother hath broken her wedlock, and she that bare them is come to confusion. For she sayd: I wyl go after my louers, that geue me my water & my bread, my woll and flaxe, my oyle and my drynke. But I wyll hedge the way with thornes, and stoppe it, that she shall not fynd her foote steps: and though she runne after her louers, yet shall she not get them: she shall seeke them, but not fynd them. ¶ Then shal she say: Wel, I will go turne again to my first husband, for at that time was I better at ease, then nowe. But this wold she not know, where as I yet gaue her corne, wyne, oyle, syluer, and gold, which she hath hanged vpon Baal. Wherfore, now wil I go take my corne and wyne again in their season, and fet agayne my woll and my flaxe, which I gaue her, to couer her shame. And nowe will I discouer foolyshnes, euen in the syght of her louers, and no man shall deliuer her out of my handes. Moreouer, I wyll take away all her mirthe, her holye dayes, her newe moones, her Sabbothes, and all her solemne feastes. I will destroy her vineyardes, and fygtrees, though she saythe: Lo, here are my rewardes, that my louers haue geuen me. I wil make it a wood, and wyld beastes shall eate it vp. I wyll punishe her also for the dais of Baal, wherin she censed him, decking him with her eare rynges and cheyns whe she folowed her louers, & forgate me, saith the Lord. Wherfore behold, I wil call her agayn, bring her into a wyldernes, and speake frendly vnto her: there wyl I geue her her vineyardes agayn, yea, and the valley of Achor also, to shewe her hope and comforte. Then shall she syng there, as in the tyme of her youthe, and lyke as the day when she came out of the land of Egypt. Then (saythe the Lorde, she shall saye vnto me (O my husbande, and shall call me no more Baal: for I wyl take away those names of Baal from her mouthe, yea, she shall neuer remember theyr names any more. Then wil I make a couenant with them, with the wyld beasts, with the foules of the ayre, & with euery thing that creepeth vpon the earth. As for bowe, sweard, and battell, I will destroy suche out of the lande, and wyll make theym to sleape safely. Thus will I marrye thee vnto myne owne selfe for euermore: yea, euen to my self wil I mary thee in righteousnes, in equitie, in louyng kindnes and mercy In faithe also wyl I mary thee vnto my self, and thou shalt know the Lord. At the same time wil I shew my self frendely & gracious vnto the heauēs, saith the lord: & the heuēs shal help the earth, and the earth shall help the corne, wine, and oile, & they shal help Israel I will sow them vpon earthe, for a sede to myne owne self, and wyl haue mercy vpon her, that was without mercy. And to them whiche were not my people, I wyl say: Thou art my people, and he shal say: Thou art my god.

Lo, they shall get theym away for the destruction. Egypt shal receiue them Noph shall burie theym. The nettles shal ouergrowe their pleasant goods, burres shall bee in their tabernacles.
Be ye sure (O Israel) the time of visitation is come, the days of recompē-syng ar at hand. And then shal Israel knowe, that they were deceiued by a prophet foolishe, mad, and in a frene-sy, for the multitude of thyne iniquitie, god shal multiply enemies against thee. Ephraim hathe made hymselfe a watchman of my God, a prophet, that is become a snare to doo hurt in euery strete, and abhomination in the house of his God. They bee gone to farre, and haue destroyed theim selues, lyke as they dydde afore tyme, at Gaboa, therfore their wickednes shall be re-membred, and their synnes punished.
I found Israel like grapes in the wil-

In so muche, that they shall neyther begette, conceaue, nor beare childzen.
And thoughe they bryngе vp any, yet geue them: what shalt thou geue the?

geue them an vnfruitfull wombe and dry breastes. All their wickednesses is done at Gilgall, there do I abhorre them. For the vngratiousnes of their owne inuentions, I will drive them out of my house. I will loue them no more, for al their princes are vnfaithfull. Ephraim is hewen downe, their roote is dried vp, so ỳ they shall bryng no more fruite, yea, and though they bryng forth any, yet will I slea euen

The booke of Joel the prophet.

THys is the woord of the Lord, that came vnto Joel the sonne of Phatuel. Heare, O ye elders: ponder thys wel, all ye that dwell in the lande: yf euer there happened such a thing in youre dayes, or in the daies of your fathers. Tel your children of it, and let theym shewe it vnto their children, and so they to certifie their posteritie thereof. B Looke what the caterpiller hath lefte, that hath the greshopper eaten vppe: what the gresshopper left, that hath the locust eatē vp: and what the locust hath left, that hath ỹ blasting wind consumed. Wake vp ye dronkards, & wepe: mourne all ye wyne suppers, because of your swete wyne, for it shalbe taken awaye from youre mouth. Yea, a myghtye and an innumerable people shal come vp into my land: these haue teeth like ỹ teeth of lions, & chawbones lyke the Lionesses. Deu.32.d * They shall make my vyneyarde waste, they shall pyll of the barckes of my fyggetrees, stryppe them bare, caste theim awaye, and make the branches whyte. C Make thy mone as a virgin doeth, that girdeth her selfe wyth sacke, because of her brydegroome. For the meate and drinkeoffring: shalbe taken away frō the house of the Lord, and the preests the Lordes ministers shal mourne. C The feld shalbe wasted, the land shalbe in a miserable case: for the corn shal be destroyed, the sweete wyne shall come to confusion, and the oyle vtterly desolate. The husbandmen and the wyne gardeners, shall loke pitcously and make lamentation, for the wheat wine & barly, and because the harvest vpō the feld is so clene destroied. The grape gatherers shal make gret mone when the vineyard and figtrees be so vtterly wasted. Yea, al the pōgranats palme trees, appletrees, and the other trees of the field shal wither awaye, Thus the mery cheare of the children of men, shal come to confusion. Girde you, and make your mone, O ye preestes, mourne ye ministers of the aulter: go your way in, and slepe in sacke cloth, O yee officers of my God: for the meat and drinkeoffring shalbe takē away from the house of your God. D Proclayme a fasting, call the congregation, gather the elders * and all the Joel.2.d inhabitoures of the land together into the house of the Lorde your God, and crye vnto the Lord: alas, alas for thys day. And why? the daye of the Lorde is at hande, and commeth as a destroier from the almyghtye. Shal not the meates bee taken awaye before oure eyes, the mirth also and ioye from the house of our God? The sede shall perysshe in the grounde, the Garneres shall lye waste, the floores shalbe brokē downe, for the corne shalbe destroied. O what a sighing make the kine? the bullockes are in very euil lyking, because they haue no pasture: and the shepe are vanyshed away. O Lord, to thee will I cry: for the fire hath consumed the goodly pastures of the wildernes, and the flame hath brent vp al the trees of the feeld. Yea, the wylde beastes crye also vnto thee, for the water ryuers are dryed vp, and the fyre hath consumed the pastures of the wyldernes.

I BLowe out the trompet in Sion, and crye vpon my holy hil that all suche as dwell in the lande, may tremble at it: for the daye of the Lord commeth, and is harde at hande: a darke day, a glooming daye, a cloudy daye, yea a stormy daye, lyke as the mornyng spreadeth out vpon the hylles. Namely, a greate and myghtye people, such as haue not ben sence the beginning, neither shall bee after them for euermore. Before him shalbe a consuming fyre, and behynde hym a burning flame. The lande shal be as a garden of pleasure before him, but behynd him shal it be a very wast wyldernesse, and there is no man that shal escape him: They are to loke vpon lyke barbed horses, and run lyke horsemen. They skippe vp vpon the hilles as it were the sound of charettes: as the flame of fyre that cōsumeth the strawe, and as a myghtye people ready to the battaile. The folke shall be afrayed of hym, all faces shalbe as blacke as a pot: These shal runne like gyauntes, and leape ouer the walles lyke men of warre. Euery manne in his going shal kepe his aray, and not go oute of hys path. There shall not one dryue another, but eche shal kepe hys owne waye. They shal breake in at the windowes, and not bee hurte: They shal come into the citie, and run vpon the walles. They shall clymbe vp vpon the houses, and skippe in at the wyndowes like a theefe. The erth shal quake before hym, yea the heuēs shalbe moued. The Sunne and the Moone shalbe darkened, and the starres shal wythdrawe their shine. The Lorde shal shewe hys voice before his hoste, for his host is great, strong and myghtye to fulfil his commaundemēt This is that greate and maruaylous feareful day of the Lorde. And who is able to abyde it? Now therfore saieth the Lorde. Turne you vnto mee wyth all your heartes, wyth fastinge weppynge and mourning, rente youre heartes and not your clothes. Turne you vnto the lord your god, for he is gracious and mercyful, long suffring, and of great compassion: and ready to pardon wyckednes. Then (no dout) he also shal turne, and forgeue, and after his chastening, he shal let your increase remayne, for meat and drynke offrynges vnto the Lorde your God. Blowe oute wyth the trompette in Sion, proclayme a fasting, cal the congregation, and gather the people together, warne the congregation, gather the elders, bring the children and sucklynges together. Let the brydegrome go forth of hys chambre, and the bride out of her closet. Let the prestes serue the Lord betwyxte the porche and the aulter, weping and saying, be fauourable, O Lord, be fauorable vnto thy people, lette not thyne heritage bee brought to suche confusion, leaste the Heathen be lordes thereof. Wherefore should they saye among the Heathen: where is now theyr God? The shal the Lord be gelous ouer his land, & spare his people: yea the Lorde shal answer and say vnto his people, Beholde, I wil sēd you corne, wine & oile, so that ye shall haue plentye of them: and I will no more geue you ouer to be a reproche among the Heathen. Agayne, as for him of the north, I shall dryue him farre from you: and shutte him out into a drie and wast land, his face toward the east sea, and his hynder partes towarde the vtmoste sea. The stinke of him shal go vp, and his filthy corruption shall fall vpon hym selfe, because he hath dealt so proudly. Feare not (O land) but be glad, and reioyce, for the Lorde wyll do greate things. Be not ye afraied, nether (O ye beasts of the field) for the pastures shalbe grene, and the trees shall beare their frute: the fygtrees and vyneyardes shall geue their increase. Be glad then (O ye children of Sion) and reioyce in the Lorde youre God, for he hath geuen you a teacher of righteousnesse: and he it is that shal sende you downe shoures of rayne, early & late in the firste moneth: so that the garners shalbe full of corne, and the presses plenteous in wyne and oyle. And as for the eares that the greshoper, locust blasting, and caterpiller (my great host, which I sent among you) haue eaten vp, I shall restore them to you agayne, so that ye shall haue ynough to eate, and be satisfyed: and prayse the name of the Lorde your God, that so marueilously hath dealte with you. And my people shall neuer be confounded any more. Ye shall well knowe, that I am in the myddest of Israell, and that I am the Lorde your God, yea, and that there is none other, and my people shall nomore be brought to confusion. After this, wyll I poure out my spryte vpon all flesh: and your sonnes and your daughters shall prophesye: youre olde men shall dreame dreames, and youre yonge men shal se vysyons, yea, in those dayes I wyll poure out my spryte vpon seruauntes and maydens. I will shew wonders in heauen aboue and tokens in the earth beneth, blood and fyre, and the vapoure of smoke. The sunne shal be turned into darknes, and the moone into bloode, before the greate and notable daye of the Lorde come. And the tyme shal come, that whosoeuer calleth on the name of the Lorde shall be saued, for vpon the mount Syon and at Jerusalem, ther shalbe a saluacion, lyke as the Lorde hath promysed: yea, and among the other remnaunt, who the Lorde shall cal.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

HEare, what the Lorde speaketh vnto you (O ye childrẽ of Israel) namely, vnto al the trybes, whom I brought oute of Egypte, and sayde: you onelye haue I accepted from all the generations of the earth: therfore, wil I visit you in all youre wickednesses. May twayn walke together, excepte they bee agreed amonge theim selues? Dooth a Lyon roare in the woodde, excepte he haue a praye? Dz cryeth a Lyons whelpe oute of hys denne, excepte he haue gotten some thing? Dooth a birde fall in a snare vppon the earthe where no fouler is? the people not afraide? Cōmeth there any plage in the cytye without it bee the Lordes doynge? Nowe doeth the Lorde God no maner of thing, but he telleth hys secrete before vnto his seruauntes the prophetes. When a Lion roreth, who wil not be afrayde? Seing then that the Lorde God him self speaketh, whoe will not prophecye? Preache in the palaces of Assod, and in the palaces of ỹ land of Egipt, and C saye: gather you together vpp on the mountaynes of Samaria, so shall ye see great murther and violent oppression amonge them: for why? they regarde not the thing that is right sayeth the Lord: they gather together euil gotten goodes, and lay vp robbe-D rye in theyr houses. Therefore, thus sayth the Lorde God: This land shal be troubled and beseged round about, thy strength shalbe pluckt from thee, and thy palaces robbed. Thus saith the Lord, lyke as an heardman taketh two legges or a pece of an eare out of the lions mouth: Euen so the childrē of Israel (that dwel in Samaria) hauing their couches in the corner, their beds at Damascus, shalbe pluckt awaye. Heare and beare record in the Ca.16. house of Jacob (sayth the Lorde God of hosts) that when I beginne to visit the wickednes of Israell, I wyll visit the alters at Bethel also: so that the hornes of the aulter shalbe broken of, and fall to the grounde. As for the winter house, and sommer house, I wyl smyte them downe: and the houses of yuory, yea and many other houses shal perish, and be destroyed, sayth the Lord.

C The.iiii. Chapter.

HEare thys word ye fat kyne, that be vppon the hill of Samaria: ye that do poore menne wrong, and oppresse the nedy: ye that saye to your lordes: bryng hither, let vs drynke. Therfore, the Lorde hath sworne by hys holinesse: The dayes shal come vpon you, that the enemyes shal carye you awaye in shyppes, and your posteritie shalbe caried away vpon fyshers hookes. Yee shal get you oute at the gappes one after another, euen the kinges palace shal you ouerthrowe, to make a way to escape, saieth the Lorde. Ye came to Bethel for to worke vngraciousnes, and haue increased youre sinnes at Gylgall: yee broughte your sacrifyces in the morning, and youre tythes vnto the third day. Ye made a thankoffring of leuen, ye promised free wil offringes, and proclaymed them. Such luste had ye, O ye childzen of Israel, sayth the Lorde God. Therfore haue I geuen you pure teeth in al your cities, and scarsenes of breade in all youre places: yet wyl ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lord. When there were but three monethes vnto the haruest, I withheld the rayne from you: yea: I rayned vpon one citie, and not vppon another: one piece of grounde was moysture with rayne, and the grounde that I rayned not vpon, was dry. Wherefore two, yea, three cities cam vnto one to dryncke water, but they were not satisfyed, yet wil ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. I haue smitten you wyth drouth and blastinge: and looke howe manye orchardes, vineyardes, fygtrees and oliuetrees ye hadde, the caterpyller hath eaten them vp: But yet wyl ye not tourne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. Pestilence haue I sente among you, as I dyd in Egypt: your younge men haue I slayne wyth the sweard, and caused your horses to bee taken captiue: I made the stinckynge sauour of your tentes to come vp into your nostreis. Yet wyll ye not tourne vnto me sayeth the Lorde. Some of you haue I ouerthrowen, as I ouerthrew Sodome and Gomorra, so that ye were as the brand pluckt out of the fyre: Yet wil ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. Therfore, thus will I handle thee agayne, O Israell, yea euen thus wil I handle thee. Make thee readye then to meete thy GOD, O Israell. For loe, hee maketh the mountaynes, he ordeyneth ỹ wind, he sheweth man what hee is about to do, he maketh ỹ morning & the darknes he tredeth vpō the hie places shall sende an hunger into the earth, not the hunger of bread, nor the thirst of water: but an honger to heare the word of the Lord: so that they shall go from the one sea to the other, yea from the north vnto the easte, runnynge ashall not fynde it. In that tyme shall the fayre virgins, and the yong men plant vineyards, and drinke the wine therof, they shall make gardeins, and enioye the fruites of theym. And I will plant theym vppon their owne

So he payed his fare, and went aboord, that he might go with them vnto Tharsis, from the presence of the Lord. But the Lorde hurled a greate winde into the sea: and there was a mighty tempest in the sea: so that the shippe was in ieopardy of goynge in peces. Then the mariners wer afraid and cryed euerye man vnto hys God: and the goodes that were in the shyp, they cast into the sea, to lyghten it of them. But Jonas gat him vnder the hatches, where hee layed him downe and slombred. So the mayster of the shyp came to him and sayd vnto hym: why slombrest thou? Vp, call vppon thy God: yf God happely will thinke vpō vs that we perysh not. And they sayde one to another: come let vs caste lottes, that we may know, for whose cause wee are thus troubled. And so they cast lottes, and the lot fell vppon Jonas. Then sayd they vnto him: tell vs for whose cause are we thus troubled? what is thine occupatiō? whēce cōmest thou, and whether goest thou? what countrye man arte thou, and of what nation? He answered them: I am an Ebrue, and I feare the Lorde God of heauen, which made both the sea, and dry land. Then were the mē exceadingly afrayde, and sayde vnto him: whye dyddest thou so? for (they knewe, that he was fled from the presence of the Lorde, because he had told them) and sayde moreouer vnto him: what shall we do vnto thee, that the sea may ceasse from troubling vs? for the sea wrought and was troublous, he answered theym: take me, and caste me into the sea, so shal it let you be in rest: for I wote, it is for my sake, that D thys great tempest is come vppon you. Neuertheleße, the men assayed wyth rowing, to bryng the shyp to land: but it wold not be, because ẏ sea wrought so: and was so troublous against thē. wherfore they cryed vnto the Lorde, and sayd: O Lord, let vs not perysh for thys mans death, nether laye thou innocent bludde vnto oure charge: for thou, O lord, hast don euē as thy plesure was. The. ii. Chapter.

BVt the Lord prepared a great fyshe to swalow vp Jonas. So was Jonas in the bely of the fyshe, three dayes and three nightes. And Jonas prayed vnto the Lord his God, out of the fyshes bealy, and sayd: In my trouble I called vnto the Lorde, and he heard me, out of the bely of hell I cried, and thou herdest my voyce. Thou haddest caste me downe in the myddest of the sea, and the flud compassed me about: yea, al thy waues and rowles of water went ouer me, I thought that I had bene cast away out of thy syght. But I wil yet agayne loke toward thy holy temple. The waters compassed me, euē to the very soule: the depe laye about me, and the weedes were wrapte aboute myne heade. I went downe to the bottome of the hylles, and was barred in with earth for euer. But thou, O Lord my God, haste brought vp my life againe out of corruption. When my soul fainted wythin me, I thought vppon the Lord: and my prayer cam in vnto thee euen into thy holy temple. They that holde of vayne vanities, will forsake hys mercy. But I will do thee sacrifyce wyth the voyce of thanckesgeuyng, and wyl pay that I haue vowed: for why? saluation commeth of the Lorde. And the Lorde spake vnto the fyshe, and it cast out Jonas againe vpon the dry land.

The. iii. Chapter.

THen cam the word of the Lord vnto Jonas agayne, sayinge: vp, and gette thee to Niniue that great Citie, and preach vnto thē the preaching which I bad thee. So Jonas arose, and went to Niniue at the Lordes commandement. Niniue was a great Citie vnto God, namely, of three dayes iourney. And Jonas went to, and entred into the citie: euen a dayes iourney, and cried, saying: There are yet fortye dayes, and then shal Niniue be ouerthrowē. And the people of Niniue beleued God, and proclaymed fastynge, and arayed themselues in sackecloth, as well the great as the small of them. And the tydynges came vnto the kynge of Niniue, whyche nowe O Lorde, take my lyfe from me (I beseche thee) for I had rather dye thou so angrye? And Jonas gat hym out of the citye, and sat downe on the eastlyde therof: and there made him a booth, and sat vnder it in the shadow, tyll he myght se, what should chaunce B vnto the citye. And the Lorde God prepared a wyld vyne: which sprange vp ouer Jonas, that he myghte haue shadowe aboue hys heade, to delyuer him out of his payne. And Jonas was exceading glad of the wild vine.

But vpon the next morowe agaynste C the spring of the day. The Lord ordeyned a wormе, which smote the wylde vyne, so that it witherred awaye: And when the Sunne was vp, God prepared a feruente eastе wynd: and the Sunne bet ouer the heade of Jonas, that he faynted agayne, and wyshed vnto his soule, that he might dye, and sayde: It is better for me to dye, then to lyue. And God sayde vnto Jonas: Art thou so angry for the wyld vyne?
And he sayd: yea, verye angrye am I, euen vnto the deathe. And the Lorde D sayde: thou haste compassion vppon a wyld vyne, wheron thou beste bestowedst no labour: nor madest it growe, which sprang vp in one nighte, and perysshed in another: And shoulde not I then haue compassion vppon Ninine that great citie, wherin there are about an

THis is the heauye burthen of Ninue, which Nahum of Elchos did write as he sawe it.

The Lorde is a gelous God, and a taker of vengeaunce is the Lord, & wrathfull. The Lorde taketh vengeaunce of his enemyes, and reserueth displeasure for his aduersaryes. The Lord suffreth longe, he is of great power, and so innocent that he leaueth no man faultiesse before him. The Lord goth forth in the tempest & storme wether, the cloudes are the duste of his feete, when he rebuketh the sea, he dryeth it vp, and turneth all the floudes to drye lande: Basan is desolate, Carmell and the pleasure of Libanus wasteth awaye. The mountaynes tremble for him, the hilles consume. At the sight of him, the earth quaketh, yea, the whole worlde, and all that dwell therin. Who may endure before his wrath? Or who is able to abide his grim displeasure? His anger taketh on lyke fyre, and the harde rockes are clouen a sunder before him. Ful gracious is the Lord and a strong hold in the time of trouble, he knoweth them that put their trust in him: when the floud runneth ouer, and destroieth the place, & when the darknes foloweth still vpon his enemyes. What doo ye ymagine then agaynste the Lorde on this maner? (Cushe when he hath once made an ende, there shal come nomore trouble) For like as the thornes that stryke together, and as the drye strawe, so shal the dronkards be consumed together, euen when they be full. There come out of thee such as ymagin mischiefe, and geue vngracious councell agaynste the Lorde. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde: Let them be as well prepared: yea, and as manye as they can, yet shall they be hewen downe and passe away. And as for the, I wil vexe thee, but not vtterly destroy thee. And nowe will I breake his rodde from thy backe, and burste thy bonds in sunder. But the Lord hath geuen a cōmaundement concerning thee: that there shall come no more seede of thy name. The carued & caste ymages will I roote oute of the house of thy God. Thy graue shall I prepare for thee, and thou shalt be confounded.

O Lorde, when I heard speake of thee, I was afrayde. The worke that thou hast taken in hande, shalte thou perfourme in hys tyme. O Lorde: and when thy tyme commeth, thou shalt declare it. In thy very wrath thou thinkest vpon mercy. God commeth from Theman, and the holy one from the mount of Pharan. Selah. Hys glorye couereth the heauens, and the earth is ful of hys prayse. Hys shine is as the sunne, and beames of lyght go out of hys hands, there is hys power hyd. Destruction goeth before hym, and a pestilent sickenes goeth from hys feete. • Hee standeth, and measureth the earth. He looketh, and the people consume awaye, the mountaynes of the worlde fall downe to poulder, and the hilles are faine to bowe them selues, for his goinges are euerlasting and sure. I saw that the pauilions of the Morians, and the tentes of the land of Madian were vexed for werines. Waste thou not angrye, O Lorde, in the waters: was not thy wrath in the flouddes, and thy displeasure in the Sea: Yea, when thou sattest vpon thyne horse, and when thy charettes had the victorye. Thou shewedst thy bowe openly, lyke as thou haddest promised with an oth • vnto the tribes. Selah. Thou dyddest deuyde the waters of the earth. When the mountaynes saw thee, they were afrayde, the water streame went away: the depe made a noyse at the lyfting vp of thyne hand. The • Sunne and Moone remained still in their habitation. Thine arowes went out glysteringe, and thy speares as the shyne of the lightning. • Thou troadest downe the lande in thine anger, and diddest threshe the hethen in thy displeasure. Thou camest forth to helpe thy people, to helpe thine annoynted. Thou smotest downe the head of the house of the vngodly, and discouredste hys foundations, euen vnto the necke of him. Selah. Thou dyddest stryke through with his scepter the heades of hys playne people: which come as a stormy wind to scatter me abrode, and are glad when they may eate vp the poore secretly. Thou makest a way for thyne horses in the sea, euen in the myddes of great waters. When I heare thys, my body is vexed, my lippes tremble at the voice therof, my bones corrupt. I am afraid where I stand. O that I myght rest in the daye of trouble, that I myghte go vp vnto our people, which are already prepared. For the sygtrees shal not be grene: and the vines shal beare no fruite. The labour of the Olyue shalbe but lost, and the land shal bring no corne: the shepe shalbe taken out of the folde, and there shalbe no cattell in the stalles. But as for me, I will be glad in the Lord, and will reioyce in God my Sauiour. • The Lord God is my strength, he shal make my feete as the feete of hartes, and hee whiche geueth the victorye, shal bryng me to my hye places, syngynge vppon my Psalmes.

The Boke of the Prophete Zacharie.

N the eight moneth of the second yere of kyng Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto * zacharye, the sonne of Barachias, the son of Addo, the prophete, sayinge: The Lorde hathe ben sore displeased at youre forefathers. And say thou vnto them: Thus you from your euill ways, and frome youre wicked imaginations. * But they would not heare nor regard me, sayth the Lorde. What is now become of your forefathers, and the prophets? are they styll alyue? But dyd not my wordes and statutes which I cõmanded by my seruantes, the Prophets) touche your forefathers? Upon thys, they gaue answer, and said: Like as ꝓ Lorde of hostes deuised to do vnto vs, accordyng to our own ways and imaginations, euen so hath he delt wyth vs. Upon the .xxiiii. day of the .xi. moneth, which is the moneth Sebat, in the second yeare of Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto zacharye, the sonne of Barachias, the sonne of Addo, ꝓ prophet, saying: I sawe by night, and lo, there sat one vpon * a red horse and stode styll among the myrte trees that were benethe vpon the grounde, and behynd hym wer there red speckled and whyte horses. Then sayd I, O my Lorde, what are these? And the angell that talked wyth me, sayd vnto me: I wyll shewe thee, what these bee. And the manne that stoode amonge the Myrte trees, aunswered, and sayde: These are they, whome the LORDE hathe sent to go thorough the worlde. And they answered the angell of the Lorde, that stode amonge the Myrte trees, and sayde: We haue gone thorow the world: and behold, al the world dwelleth at ease, C and are careiesse. Thenne the Lordes aungell gaue answere, and sayde: O Lorde of Hoostes, howe longe wylte thou bee vnmercyfull to Jerusalem, Jer. 25. and to the Cytyes of Juda? wyth and. 29. whome thou haste beene displeased 1. Esd. 1. nowe these three score and tenne yeares. So the LORDE gaue a louyng and a comfortable answere vnto the Aungell, that talked wyth me. And the angell that commened wyth me, sayde vnto mee: Crye thou, and speake: Thus sayth the LORDE of Hostes: I am exceadynge ielous ouer Jerusalem and Syon, and sore displeased at the careiesse Heythen: For where as I was but a lyttell angrye, they dydde theyr beste that I myghte destroye theym. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord: * I wyl turne zach. 1. d me agayne in mercy toward Jerusalem, so that my house shalbe buylded in it, sayth the Lorde of Hostes, yea, and the plommet shalbe layde abroade in Jerusalem, sayethe the LORD of Hoostes. Crye also, and speake: Thus sayethe the Lorde of Hoostes: My Cityes shall bee in good prosperitie agayne, the Lorde shall yet comforte Syon, and choose Jerusalem. Thenne lyfte I vppe myne eyes, and sawe, and behold fower hornes. And I sayd vnto the aungell, that talked wyth me: What bee these? He aunswered me: * These are the hornes, Dan. 7. whyche haue scattered Juda, Israel, and Jerusalem abroade. And the Lord shewed me fower carpenters. Then said I: what will these do? He answered, & said: Those ar the hornes, which haue so strawed Juda abroade, that no man durst lift vp his head. But these are come to fray them away, & to caste out the hornes of the Gentils: which lift vp their horn ouer the land of Juda, to scatter it abroade.

The .ii. Chapter.

A I lift vp mine eyes agayn, and looked: and beholde, a man with a measure lyne in his hande. Then I sayd: whither goest thou? and hee sayd vnto me: To measure Ierusalem, that I may see, howe longe and howe brode it is. And beholde, the angell that talked with me, wente his way foorth. Then went there out an other angel to mete him, and sayd vnto him: Runne, speake to this younge man, and say: Ierusalem shalbe inhabited without any wall, for the verye multitude of people and cattell that shalbe therin. Yea, I my selfe (sayth the Lorde) will be vnto her a wall of fyre rounde about me, and will be honoured in her. O get you foorth, O flee from the land of the northe, sayeth the Lorde, yee whom I haue scatred into the foure windes vnder heauen, sayeth the LORD. Saue thy selfe, O Sion, thou that dwellest with the daughter of Babilon. For thus sayeth the LORD of hostes, After that glorious power hath he sent me out to the Heathen, which spoyled you: for who so toucheth you, shall touche the apple of his own eie. Behold, I will lifte vp mine hande ouer them: so that they shall bee spoyled of those which afore serued them, and ye shall know, that the Lorde of hostes hath sent me. Be gladde, and retoyce, O daughter of Sion, for loe, I am come to dwell in the midst of thee, sayth the Lord. At the same time there shall manye Heathen cleaue to the Lord, and shalbe my people. Thus will I dwell in the middest of thee, and thou shalt know that the Lord of hostes hath sente me vnto thee. The Lord shall haue Iuda in possession for his part in the holy ground, and shall chose Ierusalem yet agayne. Let all flesh be still before the Lorde, for he is risen out of his holy place.

¶ The. iij. Chapter.

A Nd he shewed me Iesua the hye Priest, standinge before the angell of the Lorde, and Sathan stode at his right hand to resist him. And the lord said vnto Sa-than: The Lorde rebuke thee (thou Sathan) yea, the Lord that hath chosen Ierusalem, rebuke thee. Is not this a brande taken out of the fire?
Now Iesua was clothed in vncleane rayment, and stode before the aungell, which answered and sayd vnto those that stoode before him: Take awaye B the foule clothes from him. And vnto him he sayde: Beholde, I haue taken awaye thy sinne from thee, and will decke thee with chaunge of ray-ment. He sayde moreouer, sette a fayre myter vpon his heade. So they set a fayre myter vpon his head, and put on cloathes vpon him, and the angell of the Lord stode there. Then the angell of the Lord testified vnto Iesua, and C spake: Thus sayth the Lord of hostes If thou wilt walke in my ways, and kepe my watche, thou shalte rule my house, and kepe my courtes, & I will geue thee place among these that stād D here. Heare (O Iesua) thou highe Priest, thou and thy frendes, that dwell before thee, for they are wonderous people. Behold, I will bringe forth the branches of my seruaunts: For loe, the stone that I haue layde

A Nd the Angell that talked A with me, camme agayne, and waked me vppe, as a manne that is raysed out of his sleepe, and sayde vnto me: what seest thou? And I sayd, I haue looked, and beholde: A Candlesticke all of gold, with a boll vppon it, and his seuen lampes therein, and vppon euery lampe seuen stalkes. And two Oliue trees thereby, one vppon the right side of the bolle, and the other vppon the lefte side.
So I answered and spake to the angell

gel that talked with me, sayinge: O B my Lorde what are these? the angell that talked with mee aunswered and sayde vnto mee: knowest thou not what these be? And I sayde: No my Lorde. He aunswered, and sayde vnto me: This is the worde of the Lorde Esa.11.a vnto Zorobabel, saying: ¶ Nether tho rough an hoste of menne, nor through strength, but through my spirit sayth the Lorde of hostes. What art thou, thou great mountayne, before Zoro-C dabel? thou must be made euen. And Esa.28.c he shall bringe vp the first ¶ stoane, so that men shal cry vnto him, good luck good lucke. Moreouer, the woorde of Phi.1.a. the Lord came vnto me, saying: ¶ The handes of Zorobabell haue layed the foundation of this house, his handes deu.18.d shal also finish it, ¶ that ye may know howe that the Lorde of hoostes hath sent me vnto you. For he that hath bē despised a litle season, shall reioyce, when he seeth the tynne weighte in D Zorobabels hand. The seuen eyes are the Lordes whiche go throughe the whole worlde. Then aunswered I and sayde vnto him: what are these two oliue trees vppon the right and lefte syde of the candlesticke? I spake moreouer and sayde vnto him: what be those two oliue braunches (which through the two golden pypes (empt-tye them selues into the gold? He answered me, and sayde: knowest thou Apo.1.a. not what these be? And I said, no my Lorde. Then sayde he: ¶ These are the two Oliue braunches, that stand before the ruler of the whole earth.

¶ The.v. Chapter.

I SO I turned me, lifting vp mine eyes, and loked, and behold, a flying booke. And he sayd vnto me: what seest thou? I answered: I see a flying booke of twentye cubites long and ten cubites brode. Then sayde he vnto me: This is the curse, that goeth forth ouer the whole earth: for all B theues shalbe iudged after this booke, and al swearers shalbe iudged according to the same, and I will bringe it forth saith the Lorde of hostes, so that it shal come to the house of the theefe, and to the house of him, that falsely sweareth by my name, and shall re-mayne in his house, and consume it, with the timber and stones therof.
Then the angell that talked with me, wente forth and sayde vnto me, lifte vp thine eyes and see, what is this, ỹ goth forth. And I sayd: what is it?
He answered, this is a measure going out. He said moreouer: Euen thus are they that dwel vpon the whole earth, to looke vpon. And behold, ther was lifte vp a talent of lead: and lo, a woman sat in the middest of that measure And he sayde, this is vngodlynesse. C So hee caste her into the middest of the measure, and threwe the lumpe of leade into the mouth of the measure.
Then lift I vp mine eyes, and loked and behold, there came oute two womenne, and the winde was in their winges (for they had winges like D the winges of a storke) and they lifte vp the measure betwixt the earth and the heauen. Then spake I to the aungel that talked with me: whither wil these beare the measure? And he sayde Ge.10 vnto me, into the lande of ¶ Sinear, to build them an house, which when it is prepared, the measure shalbe sette there in his place.

¶ The.vi. Chapter. I

MOreouer, I turned me, lyfting vp mine eyes, and looked, and beholde, there came foure charettes out from betwixte ỹ. hilles, whiche hilles were of brasse, Zach.1 In the firste charet were red horses, in the seconde charet blacke horses, in the thirde charet were white horses, in the fourth charet were horses of di-uerse colours, and stronge. Thē spake I, and sayd vnto the aungell that talked with me, O lord, what are these?
The aungel aunswered and said vnto Jere.4 me. ¶ These are the foure windes of B heauen, which be come forth to stande before the ruler of al the earth. That with the blacke horse went into the land of the north, and the white folo-wed theym, and the speckled horses wente forth towarde the South.
These horses were verye stronge
and

and went out, and sought to go & take their iourney ouer the whole earthe.
And he sayde: Get you hence, and go thorough the world. Then cryed they C vnto me, and spake vnto me, saying: Behold, these that go toward ẏ north, shall stylle my wrathe in the Northe countrey. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me saying: Take of the prisoners that are come from Babilon: namely, Heldai, Tobiath, and Idaia, and come thou the same day, and go in to the house of Iosiah, the son of Sophonye. Then take golde and syluer, and make crownes thereof, and sette them vpon the heade of Iesua, the son of Iosedech, the hye priest, and speake vnto him: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: Behold, the man, whose name is • the branch, and he that shall spring vp after him, • shall build vp the temple of the Lord, yea, euen he shal buyld vp the temple of the Lorde. • He shall beare the prayse, he shall syt vpon the Lordes throne, and haue the dominion. • A priest shall be also vppon his throne, and a peaceable counceil shall be betwixt them both. And the crownes shalbe in the temple of the Lorde, for a remembraunce vnto Helem, Tobiah, Idoiah, and Hen the sonne of Sophonie, & suche as be farre of, shall come and build the temple of the lord, that ye maye knowe, howe that the Lorde of hoostes hath sente me vnto you. And this shall come to passe, yf ye will hearken diligently vnto the voyce of the Lord your God.

1 It chaped also in the fourth yere of king Darius, that the worde of the Lord came vnto Zachary in the fourth daye of the nynth moneth, whiche is called Casleu: What tyme as Sarasar and Rogemelech, and the men that were with them, sent vnto Bethel, for to praye before the Lorde: and that they shold say vnto the priestes, whiche were in the house of the Lord of hoostes, and to the prophetes. Should I wepe in the • fyft moneth, & abstayne as I haue don now certain yeres? Then came the worde of ẏ Lord of hoostes vnto me, saying: Speake vnto all the people of the lande, and to the Priestes, and saye: When ye fasted and mourned in the fyfthe • and seuenth moneth (nowe this. lxx. yeres) Jer. 41. a dyd ye faste vnto mee? when ye dyd eate also and drinke, didde ye not eate and drinke for your owne selues? Are not these the wordes which the Lord spake by his prophetes afore tyme, when Ierusalem was yet inhabited C and welthie, she and the cities rounde about her: when there dwelte men, bothe towarde the southe, and in the playne countreis? And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Zacharie, saying: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes.
• Execute true iudgement, shewe mercye and louing kindnes, euery man to Leu. 25. a his brother: Do the widowe, the fatherles, the stranger & poore no wrõg, and let no man ymagine euill agaynst his brother in his heart. Neuertheles they would not take hede, but turned their backes, and stopped their eares, that they shoulde not heare: yea, they made their hearttes as an Idamante stone, least they should heare the lawe and wordes, • whiche the Lorde of 1. pet. 1. d hoostes sent in his holy spirite by the D Prophetes afore tyme. Wherefore the Lorde of hoostes was very wrothe at them. And thus is it come to passe:
• that like as he spake, and they wold Jer. 11. c not heare: euen so they cryed, and I would not heare (sayth the Lorde of hoostes) but scattered them among all Gentiles, whom they knewe not. Thus the land was made so desolate, that there trauailed no man in it, neyther too, nor fro, for that pleasant land was vtterly layd waste.

SO the worde of the Lorde came B vnto me, saying: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: I was in great ielousie ouer Sion. Yea, I haue ben verye gealousse ouer her in a greate displeasure. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: I wyll tourne mee a-

Thus sayth the Lorde of hooستes: let your hands be stronge, ye that nowe heare these wordes by the mouth of the prophetes, whiche be in these dayes, that the foundation is layed vpon the Lorde of hostes house that the temple may be buylded. For whyle • before these dayes, neyther men nor cattell could win any thinge, neyther mighte any man come in and out in rest, for trouble: but I let euery man go agaynst his neighboure. The vineyard shall geue her fruite, the ground shall geue her increase, & the heauens shall geue their dewe: and I shall cause the remnaunt of this people, to haue all these in possession. And it shal C come to passe, that lyke as ye were a curse among the Hethen (O ye house of Juda, and ye house of Israell:) Euen so will I deliuer you, that ye shal be a blessinge: feare not, but let your handes be strong. For thus sayth the Lord of hostes: lyke as I deuised to punyshe you, what time as your fathers prouoked me vnto wrath, sayth the Lord of hosts, & spared not: euen so am I determined now in these daies, for to do well vnto ỹ house of Juda, & Jerusalem, therfore fear ye not. Now the thinges that ye shall do, are these: • Speake euery man the trueth vnto his neighboure: execute iudgement truely, and peaceablie within your portes, none of you ymagine euill in his hearte agaynst his neighbour, and loue no false othes, for all these are the thinges that I hate, sayth the Lorde. And the worde of the Lord of hostes, came vnto me, saying: thus sayth the Lord of hostes. The fast of the fourth moneth, the fast of the fyfte, the fast of the seuenth, and the faste of the tenth, shalbe ioy & gladnes, and prosperous hye feastes vnto the house of Juda: Onelye, loue the trueth and peace. Thus sayth the Lord of hostes. Ther D shall yet come people, and the inhabitoures of many cities, and they that dwell in one citie shall go to another. saying. • Up, let vs go, and praye before the Lorde, let vs seke the Lorde of hostes, I will go with you, yea, much people and mightie heathen shal come and seke the Lorde of hostes at Jerusalem, and to praye before the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde of hooستes: In that time shall ten men (out of al maner of language of the Gentils) take one Iewe by the hem of his garment, and say: We will go with you, for we haue heard that God is among you.

¶ The.xi. Chapter.

OPen thy dores, O Libanus, that the fyre may consume thy Cedre trees. Howle ye fyre trees for the Cedre is fallen: yea, all the proude are wasted awaye. Howle (O ye oke trees of Balan) for ỹ migh tye strong wodde is cut downe. Men may here the shepherdes mourne, for their glorye is destroyed. Men maye here the Lions whelpes roare, for the pryde of Jordan is wasted awaye. Thus sayth the Lord my God: Fede the shepe of the slaughter, which shal be slayne of those that possesse theym: yet they take it for no synne, but they that sell them, say: The Lord be thanked, I am rych: yea, their own shepeherdes spare them not. Therfore wyl B I nomore spare those that dwell in the lande, (sayth the Lorde) but lo, I will deliuer the people, euery man into his neyghbours hand, and into the hand of his kyng: that they may smyte the lande, and out of their handes I will not deliuer them. I my selfe fede the slaughter shepe (a poze flocke verely) and toke vnto me two staues, the one is called louyng kyndnes, the other is called destroyer, and so kepte the sheepe. Three shepherdes I put oute of office in one moneth, for I might not awaye with them, neyther had they any delyte in me. Then sayd Apo.22.c I: I wil fede you nomore. The thing that dieth, let it dye: and that that wil perysshe, let it perishe, and let the remnaunt eate, euery one the fleshe of his neyghboure. I toke also my louynge mekestaffe, and brake it, that I might disanull the couenaūt, which I made with all people. And so it was broken C in that daye. Then the poore symple shepe, that hadde a respecte vnto me, knewe therby that it was the worde of the Lorde. And I sayd vnto them: yf ye thinke it good, bryng hyther my price: if no, thē leaue. So they waied Mat.27 down.xxx. siluer pence, the paine that I was prised at. And the Lorde sayd vnto me: cast it vnto thi potter (a good lye price for me to be valued at of thē) and I toke the.xxx. syluer pence, and cast them to the potter in the house of the Lorde. Then brake I my other D staffe also (namely destroyer) that I might lowse the brotherhead betwixt Juda and Israell. And the Lord said vnto me: Take thee also the staffe of a folysshe shepherde, for lo, I will rayse vp a shepherd in the land, which shall not seke after the things that be lost, nor care for such as go astray, he shall not heale the wounded, he shall not norysshe the thyng that is whole, but he shall eate the flesh of such as be fat, and teare their clawes in peces. O Idolles shepherde, that leaueth the flocke. The swearde shall come vpon his arme and vpon his right eye. His arme shalbe cleane dryed vp, and hys ryght eye shalbe sore blynded.

THe heauye burthen whyche the A Lorde hath deuised for Israell. Thus sayth the Lorde • whych Esa.10 spredde the heauens abrode, layde the Mat.17 foundacions of the erth • and geueth • Ge.2 man the breath of life. Behold, I wil make Jerusalem a cup of surfet vnto all the people that are rounde aboute her. • Yea, Juda him selfe also shalbe Zac.14 in the seege agaynste Jerusalem. At the same tyme will I make Jerusalem an heauye stone for all people, so that all such as lyft it vp, shalbe torne and rente, and all the people of the earthe shall be gathered together agaynste it. • In that daye, sayeth the E Lord, I will make al horses abashed, Ibdi.1 and those that ryde vpon theym, to be Amo.1 oute of their wyttes. I wyll open myne eyes vppon the house of Juda, and

and ſmyte all the horſes of the people with blyndneſſe. And the prynces of Juda ſhall ſaye in their hertes: The inhabyters of Ieruſalem ſhall geue me conſolation in the Lorde of hoſtes their God. In that time wyl I make ꝥ princes of Juda, like as an hot burning oue with wod, & like a creſſet of fire amõg ꝥ ſtrawe: ſo ꝥ they ſhal conſume al the people round about them, both vpõ the ryght hand and the left. Ieruſalẽ alſo ſhalbe inhabited again: namely, in the ſame place where Ieruſalem ſtandeth. The Lord ſhal preſerue the tentes of Juda, like as afore tyme, ſo that the glory of the houſe of Dauid, and the glory of the citizens of Ieruſalem, ſhalbe but lytle regarded, in comparyſon of the glorye of Juda. In that daye ſhall the Lorde defende the citezens of Ieruſalem, ſo that the weakeſt then among them ſhall be as Dauyd: and the houſe of Dauyd ſhalbe like as Gods houſe, and as the Angel of the Lord before them. At the ſame tyme will I go about to deſtroy all ſuche people as come agaynſt Ieruſalem. Moreouer, vpon the houſe of Dauyd, and vppon the citizens of Ieruſalem will I poure oute the ſpyrete of grace and compaſſion, ſo that they ſhall loke vpon me, whom they haue pearſed, and they ſhall bewepe him as men mourne for their onelye begotten ſonne: yea, and be ſorye for hym, as men are ſorye for their firſte chylde. Then ſhall there be a greate mournyng at Ieruſalem, like as the lamentacion of Adremnõ in the fielde of Maggadon. And the land ſhall bewayle euery kynred by them ſelues. The kynrede of the houſe of Dauyd them ſelues alone, and their wiues by thẽſelues. The kinred of the houſe of Nathanthem ſelues alone, and their wyues by them ſelues. The kynred of the houſe of Leui, themſelues alone and their wiues by them ſelues. The kyndred of the houſe of Semei them ſelues alone, and their wiues by them ſelues: In lyke maner, all the other generacions euerychone by them ſelues alone, & their wiues by thẽſelues.

The.xiii.Chapter.

IN that tyme ſhall the houſe of Dauid and the citizens of Ieruſalem haue an open well, to waſhe of ſynne and vncleanneſſe. And then (ſayth the Lorde of hooſtes) I wyll deſtroy the names of the Idoles out of the lande, ſo that they ſhall nomore be put in remembraunce. As for the falſe prophetes alſo, and the vncleane ſpyrytes, I ſhall take them oute of the land: So that if any of them prophecy any more, his owne father and mother that begatte him, ſhall ſaye vnto him: Thou ſhalt die, for thou ſpeakeſt lyes vnder the name of the Lorde: yea, his owne father and mother that begate him ſhall wounde him, when he prophecyeth. And then ſhal thoſe prophetes be confounded, euerye one of his viſion when he prophecieth: neyther ſhall they weare ſackclothes any more, to deſcreyue men withall. But he ſhal be ſayne to ſay. I am no prophet: I am an huſbandman, for ſo am I taught by Adam from my youthe vp. And if it be ſayd vnto him: howe comme theſe wounde then in thyn handes: he ſhall anſwere: Thus am I wounded in the houſe of myn owen frendes. Aryſe, O thou ſwerde, vpon my ſhepherde, and vpon the prince of my people, ſayth the Lorde of hoſtes. Smyte the ſhepherde, and the ſhepe ſhalbe ſcatred abrode, & ſo will I turn myne hande to the lytle ones. And it ſhall come to paſſe (ſayeth the Lorde) that in all the land two partes ſhalbe roted oute, but the thirde parte ſhall remayne therein. And the ſame third parte will I bring thorowe the fire, and will clenſe them, as the ſyluer is clenſed, yea, and trye them lyke as golde is tryed. Then ſhall they call vpon my name, and I will heare thẽ: I will ſay: it is my people. And they ſhall ſaye: Lord my God.

The.xiiii.Chapter.

BEhold, the day of the Lord cõmeth that thou ſhalte be ſpoyled and robbed, for I will gather together all the heathen to fight agaynſt Ieruſalẽ, ſo ꝥ the city ſhalbe wonne, ỳ houses spoiled, & the wome defyled. The halfe of the citye shal go away into captiuitee, and the residue of the people shall not be caryed out of the cityе. After that shall the Lord go forth to fight agaynst those Heathen, as men vse to fighte in the day of battell. Then shall his fete stande vppon the mount Oliuet, that lieth vpon the B east syde of Jerusalem. And the mount Oliuet shall cleue in two, eastwarde and westward, so that there shall be a great valley, and the halfe mount shal remoue towarde the north, and the other towarde the southe. And ye shall flee vnto the valley of my hylles, for the valley of the hylles shall reache

This shal be the plage, wherwith the Lorde will smyte all people, that haue fought agaynst Jerusalem. Namely, their fleshe shalbe consumed awaye, though they stande vpon theyr fete, theyr eyes shalbe corrupte in theyr holes, and their tonge shall consume in their mouthe. At that tyme shall the rydyng geare of the horses be holye vnto the LORDE, and the ketteles in the LORDE ỳ house, shall be lyke the balyns before the aultare: yea, all the ketteles in Jerusalem and Juda, shall be holye vnto the LORDE of hoostes: and all they that sacrifyce, shall come and take of them, and dyghte them therein. And at that tyme there shall be no mo Cananites in the house of the Lorde of hoostes.

¶ The boke of the Prophet Malachy.

THe heauy burtheyn which the Lord shewed against Israel by Malachi. I haue loued you, saieth the LORDE: and yet ye say: Wherin hast thou loued vs? Was not Esau Jacobs brother, saith the Lord: yet haue I loued Jacob, and hated Esau, yea I haue made his hilles wast, and his heritage a wylderneſſe for dragons. And though Edom say: Well, we are destroyed, we will go buylde vp againe the places that be wasted, yet (saieth the Lorde of Hoſtes) what they buylded, that brake I downe: so that it was called, a cursed land, and a people, whome the Lord hathe euer been angrye withall. Your eyes haue seene, and ye your selues muste confesse, that the Lorde hath brought the land of Israell to grete honor. Should not a son honor his father, & a seruant his maister? If I be now a father, where is myne honour? If I be the Lord, where am I feared? saythe the Lorde of Hoſtes. Nowe to you priestes, that despise my name. And yf ye saye, wherein haue wee despised thy name? In this, that ye offer vncleane breade vppon myne aultar. And yf ye will say: wherin haue we offered any vncleane thynge vnto thee? In thys that ye say: The aulter of the Lord is not to be regarded: If ye offre a blinde is not that euyll? And yf ye offre the lame and sicke, is not that euill? Yea offer it vnto thy prince, shalt he be content with thee, or accepte thy persone, saith the Lord of hoſtes? And nowe make your prayer before God, that he maye haue mercy vppon vs: for sithe thinges haue ye done. Shall he regard your persons, thinke ye, saith the lord of hoſtes? Yea, what is he among you that will do so muche as to shutte the doores, or to kyndle the fyre vppon myne aultar for naught? I haue no pleasure in you, saythe the LORD of hoſtes: And as for the meateoffe- Gen. 4.a rynge, I will not accepte it at youre hande. For from the vprysyng vp of the Sunne, vnto the goyng down of the same, my name is greate amonge the Gentils: yea, in euery place shal there sacrifice be done, and a cleane meatoffe- Esai. 1.b rynge offered vp vnto my name: For Ps. 113.a my name is great among the Hethen, saieth the Lorde of Hoſtes. But ye haue vnhalowed it, in that ye say, the aulter of the Lord is not to be regarded, and the thyng that is set thervpon not worthy to be eaten. Now say yee: It is but laboure and trauayle, and thus haue ye thoughte frome at it (saieth the Lorde of Hoſtes) offerynge robberye, yea, the lame and the sycke. Ye haue brought me in a meatofferyng, should I accept it of youre hande, saith the Lord? Cursed be the dissembler, which hath in hys flocke one that is a male, and when he maketh a vowe, offreth a spotted one vnto the Lorde. For I am a great kyng (saieth the Lorde of Hoſtes) and my name is feareful among the Heathen.

AND nowe (O ye Priests) thys commaundemente toucheth you: If ye will not here it, nor regard it, to geue the glory vnto my name, saith the Lord of hoſtes, Deu. 28.c
I will send a curse vpon you, & will curse your blessynges: yea, curse them all ready, yf ye doo not take hede. Behold, I shall corrupte your seede, and caste dounge in youre faces, euen the donge of your solemne feastes, and it shall cleaue faste vppon you. And ye shall knowe, that I haue sente thys Commaundement vnto you, that my Nu. 25. couenaunte whyche I made wyth Leui, myght stande, saythe the Lorde of Hoſtes. I made a couenaunte of lyfe and peace wyth hym: This I gaue hym, that he myghte stand in awe of me: and so he dydde feare me, and had my name in reuerence. The lawe of truth was in hys mouth, and there was no wyckednes founde in hys lyppes. He walked wyth mee in peace and equitie, and dyd turne many one awaye from their sinnes. For in the priestes lyppes shoulde be sure knowledge that menne maye seke the lawe at his mouth, for he is a messanger of the Lorde of hostes. But as for you, ye are gon cleane out of the way, and haue caused the multitude to bee offended at the lawe: ye haue broken the couenant of Leui, sayth the Lord of hostes. Therfore wyl I also make you to be despysed, and to be of no reputation among al the people: because ye haue not kept my wayes, but haue bene partial in the lawe. Haue wee not al one father? hath not one God made vs? why doth euery one of vs then despyse hys owne brother, and so breake the couenant of our fathers. Now hath Juda offended, yea, the abhomination is done in Israel, and in Jerusalem, for Juda hath defiled the Sanctuary of the Lord which he loued, and hath kepte the daughter of a straunge God. But the Lorde shall destroye the man that doth thys: (yea both the master and the scoler) out of the Tabernacle of Jacob, wyth hym that offereth meatofferinge vnto the Lord of hostes. Now haue ye brought it to thys poynt again, that the auter of the Lorde is couered wyth teares, weping and mourning: so that I wil nomore regard the meatoffering, neyther wyll I receaue or accepte anye thyng at your handes. And yet ye say wherfore? Euen because that where as the Lord made a couenant betwixt thee, and the wyfe of thy youth, thou hast despysed. Yet is she thine owne companion and maryed wyfe. So didde not the one, & yet had he an excellent spirit. What dyd then the one? He sought the seede promised of GOD. Therefore loke well to youre spirite, and let no manne despyse the wyfe of hys youth. If thou hatest her, putte her away sayeth the Lorde of Israell and geue her clothinge for the scorne sayth the Lord of hostes. Looke well then to youre spirite, and despise her not. Ye greue the Lorde wyth youre wordes, and yet ye say: wherewith al haue we greued hym? In this that ye say. All that dooe euil are good in the sight of God, and such as please him. Or els where is the God that punysheth.

The.iii. Chapter.

BEhold. I wil send my messanger, which shal prepare the way before me: and the Lord whom ye would haue: shall sone come to hys temple, yea, euen the messanger of the couenaunte whom ye longe for. Behold, he commeth, sayth the Lorde of hostes. But who may abide the daye of hys comynge? who shalbe able to endure, when he appereth? For he is lyke a golde smythes fyre, and lyke washers sope. He shal set him downe to crye and to clense the siluer, he shal pourge the childzen of Leui, and purifie theym lyke as golde and siluer, that they maye bring meatofferinges vnto the Lord in all ryghteousnesse. Then shall the offering of Juda and Jerusalem bee acceptable vnto the Lorde lyke as from the beginninge and in the yeares afore time, I wyll comme, and punyshe you, and I my selfe wyll be a swyfte wytnesse agaynst the wytches agaynste the aduoutrers, agaynst false swearers: yea and agaynste those that wrongfully keepe backe the hyrelynges dewtye: wyych were the wyddowes and the fatherlesse, and oppresse the straunger and feare not me, sayeth the Lorde of Hoostes. For I am the Lorde that change not: and ye (O ye childzen of Jacob) wil not leaue of, ye are gone away fro myne ordinances, and sence the tyme of youre fore fathers haue I not kepte them. Tourne you nowe vnto me, and I wil tourne mee vnto you, sayth the Lord of hostes: ye saye: wherein shall we tourne? ¶ To the Reader.

IN consideration ꝑ the bokes before ar found in ꝑ Hebrue tong, receiued of all mē: and ꝑ the other folowing, which ar called Hagiographa (because they wer wont to be red, not opēly, & in cōmon, but as it wer in secrete, & apart) are neither found in the Hebrue nor in ꝑ Caldei: in whiche tunges they haue not of long time ben writtē (onelesse then it were haply the boke of Sapience) wherupon it were now very hard to repaire & amend thē: And that also they are not receiued nor take as legitimate & ieful, aswel of the Hebrues of ꝑ whole church, as S. Ierom sheweth: we haue separate them, & set thē a side, ꝑ they may the better be knowē: to thintent ꝑ men may know of whiche bokes witnes ought to be receiued, & of whiche not. For the said S. Hierom speaking of the boke of Judith (which is Hagiographa) saith, that the auctorite therof is not estemed worthy & sufficient to confirme & stablishe the things that light in disputation. And generally of al the bokes called Hagiographa: he saith, that men may rede them to the edifying of the people: but not to confirme & strengthen the doctrine of ꝑ church. I leaue out here ꝑ law as they cal it of Canō. c. Sācta Romana. xb. dist. wher he sheweth his iudgement. Likewise the Glose of. c. Canones. xbi. distinct. which saith, ꝑ men rede them, but not in generall: as though he should say, that generally & thorowly they are not allowed. And not without a cause. For that they haue bene corrupted & falsified in many places, it appereth sufficiently by Eusebius in his boke called Historia Ecclesiastica. which thing is easy to be knowē enē now a days in certain pointes, namely in the bookes of the Machabees, whose second boke S. Ierom confesseth, that he found not in the Hebrue, by the meanes wherof, it is become vnto vs ꝑ more suspect, & the lesse receiued. In like maner is it of the third & fourth boke of Esdras, which S. Hierom protesteth that he wold not haue translated, esteming them for dreames: where as Iosephus yet in his boke of his antiquities declareth ꝑ summe of the matter after the maner of a story, aswel of the boke of Machabees, as of the. iii. of Esdras: although he esteme the bokes compiled from ꝑ reigne of kyng Artarerxes vnto his time, to be Hagiographa. wherfore then, whē thou wilt mainteyn any thing for certein, rendring a reason of thy faith, take hede to procede therin by ꝑ liuing & pitthy Scriptures, folowing S. Peter, which saith: He ꝑ speaketh, let hym speake as though he spake the word of God. He saith, the word of God, as a thing most true and certein, opened by the Prophets & Apostles, inspired with the holy ghost: of whom we haue witnesse more clere then the day. Lawyers hauing great desire to confirme and stablish their opinions by the law of man, say: that they shame to speake without law. How much more feare & dreade then ought he to haue, that saith, he is a Christian, the whiche holdeth not him self, or resteth not in the lawes of the liuing God, but in mēs inuentions: Iudging of all things according to them, and leaning to an vncertain imagination & fantasy? Let vs therfore, that are buylded on the foundation of the holy Prophetes, and Apostles, and on the head corner stone (on which they them selues were founded, & whych they preached, that is, Iesus Christ, the sure stone) leue the thinges that are vncerten to folowe the certain: holding vs, and resting vs in them, and fastening our anker there, as in a sure place. For our Christen faith consisteth not in doubtfull thynges, but in playn and most certayn assurance, and in moste true persuasion, taken and confyrmed by infallible veritie. In which GOD graunt vs to walke perpetually, to thintent that according to it, fulfyllyng his holy wyl in vs, and settyng aside all inuentions contrary vnto hym) wee maye lyue to hys honour, and to the edifyeng of hys Churche. So bee it.

AND Josias helde the feaste of Easter in Jerusalē vnto the Lorde, and slewe the Passeouer the fourtenth day of the first moneth. He sette the Priestes also in order (accordinge to their dayelye courses) beynge arayed in longe garmentes in the temple of the Lorde. And he spake vnto the Leuytes the holye ministers of Israell, that they shoulde halow them selues vnto the Lord, to set the holy Arke of the Lorde, in the house that king Salomō the sonne of Dauid had builded, and sayd: Ye shal nomore bear the ark vppon youre shoulders. Nowe serue your Lord, and take the charge of hys people of Israel, after your byllages and your trybes: accordynge as kyng Dauid the king of Israel hath ordeined, and accordyng as Salomon hys sonne hath honorablye prepared: yea, loke that ye al do seruyce in the temple, according to the ordrynge and dystribution of the principal mē whiche are appoynted out of the trybes, to do seruyce for the children of Israel. Kil the Passeouer, and prepare offrynges for your brethren, and do accordyng to the commaundemente of the Lorde which was geuen vnto Moses. And vnto the people that was founde, Josias gaue thirtie thousande of sheepe, lambes, kyddes and goates, and three thousande oxen. These the kinge (of hys kingly lyberalitie) gaue vnto the people, accordyng as he had promised: and to the priestes for the Passeouer, he gaue two. M. sheepe, and an hundred oxen. Moreouer Iechonias and Semeiah, and Nathaniel hys brethren, and Hazabias, Jehiel, and Josabab gaue them to the Passeouer. v. thousand sheepe and fyue hundred bullockes. And whan these thynges were brought to passe, the priestes and the Leuytes stoode goodly in their order, and had the vnleuened bread through out the trybes. And after the ordringe of the principal men in the tribes, thei offred vnto the Lorde in the syghte of the people, according as it is wrytten in the booke of Moyses, and so they rosted the Easter lambe, as according was. As for the thankofferinges and the other, they dyght them in ketels and pottes, and sette them before the people wyth good wil, and afterward before them selues, and the priestes. For the priestes offered the fat, vntil the tyme was expyred, but the Leuytes prepared for them selues and for their brethren the children of Aaron. The holy singers also the childrē of Asaph stoode in their order, accordinge as Dauid deuysed. So dyd Asaph, Zacharye and Iduthum, which were appointed by the king. Moreouer the porters and dore kepers stode by the doores, and that diligentlye, so that none went out of hys standinge and seruyce: for their brethren, the Leuits, prepared for them. Thus wer al thynges perfourmed, that belonged to the offring of the Lord. In that day they helde the Passeouer, and offered thankeoffringe beside the sacrifice of the Lord, according to the commaundement of kinge Josias. So the children of Israel which were then presente, helde an honorable Passeouer, and the feast of swete bread. vii. daies long. Yea suche a Passeouer was not kepte in Israel, from the tyme of the prophete Samuel. And al the kynges of Israel held not such an Easter, as this which king Josias held, and the Priestes, the Leuytes, the Iewes, and al Israell, of all theym that were at Jerusalem. And in the Eyghtenthe yeare of the reygne of Iosyas, was thys Passeouer kept. And wyth a perfecte hearte dydde kynge Iosyas order all hys woorckes, before the LORDE, and the thynges that were wryttenne of hym in tymes paste, concernynge those that synned

Thus became they prisoners and bondemen of the king of Babilon, til they wer deliuered, and reigned for theym selues, * when the wordes of the Lorde were fulfylled, which he promised them by the mouth of the prophet Jeremye, & tyl the land had her rest: namely, al the time that it laye walte, had it rest and quietnes. lxx. vii. yeares.

NOw whan king Cyrus reigned ouer the Persians, and when the Lorde wolde performe the word that he had promysed by the mouth of the prophete Jeremy, the Lord raised vp the spyrite of Cyrus, the king of the Persinas, so ỳ he caused hys writing to be proclaimed throughoute hys whole realme, saying: Thus saith the king of Persians: The Lorde of Israell, that hye Lord hath made me kyng of the land, and commaunded me to build him an house at Jerusalem in Jewrye. If there be any newe of your people, the Lorde be wyth him, and go vp wyth him to Jerusalem. And al they that dwel round about that place shal help thē, whether it be wyth gold, with syluer, with giftes, wyth horses and necessarye cattell, and al other thinges that are brought with a freewyll to the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem. Then the principal men out of ỳ tribes & villages of Juda and Beniamin stode vp: so dyd the priests also & the Leuites (whome ỳ Lord had moued) to go vp, & to buyld the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem. And they that were about them, helped theym with all maner of gold and syluer, & cattell also, and with manye liberall giftes: and this dyd many one, whose mynd was stirred vp therto. * Kyng Cyrus also brought forth the vessels and ornaments, that wer halowed vnto the Lord (which Nabuchodonosor the king had caried away from Jerusalem, and consecrated them to his ydoll and ymage) and deliuered thē to Mithridatus his treasurer, & by him they were deliuered to Salmanasar, the debitie in Jewrye. And this was the numbre of them: Two thousande and. iiii. C. syluer bolles. xxx. syluer basyns. xxx. basons of golde. ii. M. & iii. C. vessels of syluer, and a. M. beside. All the vessels of gold and syluer were. v. M. viii. C. and. lx. These wer numbred vnto Salmanasar, and to them that were come agayne with him to Jerusalem out of the captiuitie of Babylon. * Now in ỳ tyme of kyng Artaxerses the kyng of Persia these men: Belemus and Mithridatus, Sabbellius, Rathimus, Balthemus, Semelius the Scribe, & other that dwelt in Samaria, and in other places vnder the domynion thereof, wrote a letter vnto kyng Artaxerxes, wherein they complained vnto the kyng of them in Jewry and Jerusalem. The letter was made after this maner: Syr, thy seruants Rathimus the storye wryter, Sabbellius, the scribe, and other iudges of the court in Celosiria and Phenices. Wee it knowen and manyfest to oure Lorde the Kynge, that the Jewes which are comme vp frome you vnto vs into the rebellious and wicked Citie, begynne to buylde it agayne, and the walles about it, and to sette vppe the Temple a newe. Nowe yt thys Ci-

tie and the walles thereof be sette vp agayne, they shall not only refuse to geue tributes and taxes, but also rebell vtterly agaynst the king. And for soo muche as they take this in hande now about the temple, we thought it reason, to thinke no scorne of it, but to shewe it vnto our Lord the kyng, and to certifie him therof: to thintent that if it please the kynge, he maye cause it to be sought in the bokes of olde: and thou shalt fynd such warnyng wrytten, and shalte vnderstande, that thys Citye hathe alwaye bene rebellyous and dysobedient, that it hath subdued kynges and cities: and that the Iewes which dwell therin, haue euer bene a rebellious, obstinate, vnfaythful, and fightyng people, for the whiche cause thys citye is wasted. Wherfore nowe we certifye our Lord the kyng, that if this citye be buylded and occuppyed agayne, and the walles therof set vp a newe, thou canst haue no passage into Celosiria and Phenices. Then wrote the kyng to Rathimus the storye writen, to Balthemus, to Sabellius the Scrybe, and to the other officers and dwellers in Siria and Phenices, after this maner: I haue red the Epistle which thou sentest vnto me, and haue commaunded to make diligente search, and haue found, that the cytye hath euer resisted kings, that the same people are disobedient, and haue caused muche warre, and that mightye kinges haue reygned in Ierusalem, which also haue raysed vppe taxes in Siria and Phenices. Wherefore, I haue commaunded those people, that they shall not buylde the Cytie, that they make nomore in it, and that they proceade no further with the buyldyng: for so much as it myghte be the cause of warre, and dyspleasure vnto kynges. Now when Rathimus and Sabellius the Scrybe, and the rulers in the land had red the wrytynge of kyng Artaxerses, they gat them together, and came in all the hast to Ierusalem with an hooste of horsemen, and with muchpeople of fote, and forbad them to build. And so they lefte of from building of the temple, vnto the second yere of kyng Darius.

The .iii. Chapter.

KYnge Darius made a greate feaste vnto his seruantes, vnto all his court, and to all the officers of Media and Persia, yea, to all the debities and rulers that were vnder him, from India vnto Ethiopia, an hundreth and .xxvii. countreys. So when they had eaten and dronken, beyng satisfied, and wer gone home agayne, Darius the kyng wente into his chamber, layed hym downe to slepe, and so awaked. Then the three ponge menne, that kepte the kynges person, and watched hys bodye, commoned amonge them selues, and spake one to another: let euery one of vs say some thyng, and loke whose sentence is wiser and more excellente then the other, vnto hym shall kynge Darius geue great gyftes, and clothe him with purple. He shall geue hym vessels of golde to drink in, clothes of golde and couerynges: he shall make hym a costlye charette and a brydle of golde, he shall geue hym a bonette of whyte silcke, and a cheyne of golde aboute hys necke: yea, he shalbe the second and principall nexte vnto kynge Darius, and that because of his wysdome, and shall bee called the kynges kinseman. So, euery one wrote his meaning, sealed it, and laied it vnder the kynges pelowe, and sayd: whē the kynge aryseth, we will geue hym our writings, and loke whose worde the kyng and hys chefe Lordes iudge to be the most wisely spoken, the same shall haue the victorye. One wrote: Wine is a stronge thing. The seconde wrote: The kynge is stronger. The thirde wrote: Wemen haue yet more strength, but aboue all thynges, the tructh beareth awaye the victorye. Now when the kyng was rysen vp, they toke their wrytynges and delyuered them vnto him, and so he redde theym. Then sente he forth to call all hys chefe Lordes, all the debitues and rulers of the countrees of Media and Persia. And when they were set downe downe in the councell, the writinges were red red before them. And he commaunded to cal for the yong men, that they might declare their meanynges themselues by mouth. So when they were sente for, and came in, the kyng sayde vnto them: shewe vs and make vs to vnderstande what the thynges D are that ye haue written. Then began the firste (whiche had spoken of the strengthe of wyne) and sayde: O ye Ps.100 men, wine is maruelous strong, and ouercommeth them that drinke it: it disceaueth the mynde, and bryngeth both the poore man, and the kynge to dotage and vanitie. Thus doeth it also with the bondeman and with the free, with the pore and ryche: it taketh away their vnderstandynge, and maketh them careles and merye, so that none of them remembreth any heauynes, or det or deuty. It causeth a mã to thinke also that the thing which he doth, is honest and good: and remembreth not that he is a king, nor that he is in authoritie, and that hee ought not to doo suche thynges. More ouer, when men are drynkynge, they forget all frēdshyp, al brotherly faythfulnes and loue: but as soone as they are dronken, they draw out the sword and will fyghte: and when they are layed downe from the wyne, and so risen vp agayne, they can not tell what they did: iudge ye nowe, is not wyne the strongest? For who wold els take in hand to do such things? And when he had spoken this, he held his tonge.

THen the secōd (which had sayd) that the kyng was stronger began to speake saying: O ye men are not they the strongest and mooste excellent, that conquere the lande and the sea, and al that is in the sea, and in the earth? Nowe is the kynge lorde of all these thynges, and hath dominyon of theym all, and looke what he commaundeth, it is done. If he sende hys men forth a warfare, they go and breake downe hyls, walles & towres. They are slaine, and slay (other men) them selues, and ouerpasse not the kinges woord. If they get the victorye, they bryng the kynge all the spoyle. Lykewyse, the other, that meddle not with warres and fyghting, but tylle the grounde: when they reape, they bryng tribute vnto the kyng. And if the kyng alone do but commaunde to kyll: they kill: if he commande to forgeue, they forgeue: if he cōmaunde to smyte, they smyte: if he bydde driue away, they driue away: if he cōmaunde to buyld, they buyld: if he commaunde to breake downe, they breake downe: if he commande to plant, they plante. The common people and the rulers
C are obedient vnto him. And the kynge in the mean season sitteth hym down, eateth and drinketh, & taketh his rest: then kepe they watche round aboute the king, and not one of them dare get out of the way to do hys owne busynes, but muste be obediente vnto the kyng at a worde. Iudge ye now, O ye men, how should not he go farre aboue, vnto whom men are thus obedient? And when he had spoken thus he held his tongue. The third whose name was Zorobabell, whiche hadde spoken of women, and of truthe, begānne to saye after this maner: O ye men, it is not the great kyng, it is not the multitude of menne, neither is it wyne that excellethe. Who is it then, that hath the lordshyp ouer thē? Haue not women borne the king, and al the people that rule those thynges? Haue not women borne them, and brought them vp, that plant the vynes, wherout the wyne commeth? They make garmentes for all men, they geue honour vnto all men, and without women can not men lyue. If they gather gold and syluer, and all precious thinges, and see a fayre wel fauoured woman, they leaue al together, and turne their eyes only vnto the woman, and gape vpon her, and haue more desyre vnto her, thenne vnto the syluer and gold, or any maner of precious thing. Doeth it not greue you? A man taketh his ſweard, and goth his way to ſteale, to kyll, to murther, to ſayle vpon the ſea, and ſeeth a Lion, & goeth in the darkenes: and when he hath ſtollen, diſceaued and robbed, he bringeth it vnto his loue. Agayne, a man loueth hys wyfe better then father or mother: yea, manye one there be that renne out of their wittes, and become bondmen for their wyues ſakes: manye one alſo haue peryſhed, haue bene ſlaine, and haue ſinned becauſe of wemen. And nowe beleue me, I knowe a kyng which is greate in his power, and all landes ſtande in awe of hym, and no man dare laye hand vpon him: yet did I ſee, that Apame (the daughter of the great kynge Bartacus) the kynges concubine, ſat beſide the kyng vpon the ryght hand, and toke of hys crowne from his heade, and ſet it vpon her owne heade, and ſmote the D kyng with her lefte hand. Moreouer, the kynge loked vpon her with open mouth: if ſhe laughed vppon hym, hee laughed alſo: but if ſhe toke anye diſpleaſure with hym, the kynge was fayne to flatter her, and to geue her good woordes, tyll he had gotten her fauour againe. O ye men, are not wemen then ſtrõger? Great is the earth and hye is the heauen. Who doth theſe thinges? Then the kyng and the pyntes loked one vpon another. So he beganne to ſpeake of the trueth. O ye men, are not wemen ſtronger? Great is the earth, hye is the heauen, ſwifte

In the iudgement of it there is no vnryghteous thynge, but ſtrength, kyngdome, and power and maieſtie for euermore. Bleſſed be the God of trueth. And with that he held his tonge, and all the people cried, and ſayd: Greate is the trueth, and aboue all. Then ſayde the kynge vnto hym: Aſke what thou wylte, more then is appoynted in the wryting, and I ſhal geue it the: for thou art founde wyſer then thy companyons, thou ſhalte ſyt next me, and be my kynſeman. Then ſaid he vnto the king: Remember thy promiſe and bowe, which thou haſte bowed & promiſed (in the daye when thou cameſt to the kingdome) to build vp Jeruſalem, and to ſend agayne all the veſſels and Jewels, that wer taken away out of Jeruſalem: whiche Cyrus ſeparated, when he offered in Babylon, and would ſende theym agayne. And thy mynd was to buyld were in Celosyria and Phenices, and vnto Libanus, that they should draw Cedre trees from Lybanus vnto Jerusalem, to bylde the cityе withall. Moreouer, he wrot vnto al ỹ Jewes that were gone out of his realme into Jewry because of the fredome, that no officer, no ruler, nor Shreue shold come to their dores, and that all theyr land which they had conquered, shold be free and not tributary. And that the Edomites sholde geue ouer the cities and vyllages of the Jewes, whiche they had taken in: yea, and that they sholde yerely geue .xx. talentes to the buyldynge of the temple, vntyll the time that it were fynished, and to the dayly halowing of the brentoffringes (as it is commaunded) ten talentes yerely also: And that all they whyche come from Babilon to bylde the cyte, shoulde haue free lybertye, they and their children, and al the prestes. He wrote the greatnes also, and commaunded that the holy garment shold be geuē to thē, wherin thei ministred: and wrote that commaundementes shold be geuen to the Leuites, vntyll the day, that the house were fynished, and Jerusalem buylded vp: and commaunded that all they that watched the citie shold haue their porcions and

He gaue ouer also all the vessels that Cyrus had separated frome Babilon: and all that Cyrus had geuen in commaundemente, the same charged he also, that it shold be done, and sent vnto Jerusalem. Now whē this yonge man was gone forthe, hee turned his face towarde Jerusalem, and prayed the kynge of heauen, and 1.Esd. sayd: Of thee commeth the victorye, of thee commeth wisdome and clearenesse, and I am thy seruaunt. Blessed arte thou, which hast geuen me wysdome: thee will I prayse, O Lorde, thou God of oure fathers. And so he tooke the letters, and wente vnto Babylon. And when hee came there, he tolde this vnto all hys brethren that were at Babylon, and they prayed the GOD of their fathers, that he had geuen theym refreshynge and lybertye to go vp, and to buylde Jerusalem and the temple (wherein the name of the Lorde is called vpon) and they reioyced with instrumentes and gladnes seuen dayes longe.

* Then Zorobabel the son of Salathiel, & Jesua, the son of Josedech, stode vp, and began to build the house of the Lord at Jerusalē, whan the prophets of the Lord helped them. At the same tyme cam Sisennes the vnder shreue in Siria and Phenyces, with the landlordes and hys companions, and sayde vnto them: Who hath bydde and commaunded you to build the house, to make the rouse, and al other thynges agayne? And who are the workmen that buylde them? Neuertheles the elders of the Jewes hadde suche grace of the Lorde, that they wouldе not be let (thoughe they were prouoked thereto) but builded on stil, vntil the tyme that kyng Darius wer certifyed thereof, and an aunswer receaued from hym. The letter that these men sent vnto kyng Darius, was after thys manner. Sisennes the vnder shreue in Siria and Phenices, and the landlordes with their companyons, which are head rulers in Syria and Phenyces, sende their salutation vnto Darius the kynge. We certifye the Lorde the kynge, that we came into the lande of Jewry, and wente to Jerusalem: where we founde theym B building the greate house of God and the temple, with greate costlye free stone, and with goodly timber for the walles: yea, they make greate haste with the worke, and helpe one another, and it goeth forth prosperouslye in theyr handes, and with greate diligence and worshyp is it made. Thē asked we the elders, who hadde commaunded them to make vp the house and the building, and thys we dyd, to the intent that we myght certify thee perfectlye, and write vnto thee, the names of those that wer the rulers of the worke. And the chyldren of Israell (wyth those that were come oute of captiuitye) helde the Passouer the fourtēth day of the firste moneth, whenne the prystes and the Leuites were sanctifyed. And the chyldren of Israell that came out of captiuitye, and escaped from all the abhominacions of the Heathen, sought the Lorde, and kept the feast of the vnleuened breade seuen daies long, eating and drinking and were mery before the Lorde: that the Lord had turned the deuice of the kyng of Assiria, and conforted their handes to the workes of the Lorde God of Israell.

1 Esd. 7 b AND after him, when Artaxerses the kyng of the Persians reigned, ther went vnto him Esdras the sonne of Sarayas, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Helchi ach, the sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Sadoch, the sonne of Achitob, the son of Amarias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Boccus, the sonne of Abisu, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron the firste Priest. This Esdras went vp from Babilon (for he had good vnderstandyng in the lawe of Moses, that was geuen of the Lord God of Israell, to be taught and done in dede.) And the kyng fauored him, and dyd him great worshippe and honoure after all hys desires. There went vp with him also certayne of the chyldren of Israell, of the prystes, of the Leuites, of the syngers, porters and ministres of the temple at Jerusalem. In the seuenth yere of the reigne of kyng Artaxerses, in the fiueth moneth, that is in the seuenth yere of the raygne, they wente from Babylon in the newe moone of the. v. moneth, and came the hye waye to Jerusalem after hys commaundement, lyke as the Lorde had prospered their iourney. For in these Esdras gat great instruction, that he shoulde leaue none of the things behind, whiche are in the lawe and commaundementes of God. And he taught whol Israell all ryghteousnes and iudgement. Then came the Secretaries of kyng Artaxerses, and deliuered the wrytinges (that were come from Artaxerses the kyng (to Esdras ẏ priest and reader of the lawe of the Lorde. And this is the coppe of the letter: King Artaxerses sendeth his greting vnto Esdras the priestе and reader of the lawe of the Lord. Of frendshyp & good wil, I haue ordeined & charged, if ther be any of the Iewes, of ẏ prestes and Leuites in my realm, which desireth and is contēt to go with thee vnto Jerusalem, that he maye doo it.
B Therfor, if any man be minded to bear thee company, let them come together and go with thee (lyke as I am content, and my seuen frendes, my counceliers) to see what they do at Jerusalem and in Jewry, and keepe the thynges accordyng as thou hast in the lawe of the Lorde: and to bryng the gyftes vnto God the Lorde of Israel,

that I and my frendes haue promised to Jerusalem, and all the syluer and golde that is in the countrie of Babilon, vnto the Lorde to Jerusalē, with the thyng that is geuen for the people in the Lordes temple at Jerusalem. Yea, that the same syluer and golde may be gathered: and oxen, rammes, sheepe and goates and other that belonge to these thinges: and that they offer sacrifyces vnto the Lorde, vpon the auiter of their Lorde, whiche is at Jerusalem. And what soeuer thou and thy brethren will do with the siluer and golde, that do after thy mynd, accordyng to the commaundemente of the Lord thy God: and likewise, with the holy vessels that are geuen the, for the seruice of the house of the Lorde thy God: and other thynges whatsoeuer is necessary for the to the worke of the temple, that shalbe geuen thee of the kynges treasure, and loke what thou with thy brethren will do with the golde and syluer, that do after the will of the Lorde. And I kynge Artaxerses haue cōmaunded the kepers of the treasures in Siria and Phenices, that whatsoeuer Esdras ỹ priest and reader of the lawe of the Lorde doeth wryte, it shalbe geuen him: till an hundred talentes of syluer, and of gold in lyke maner. Of corne also an hundred measures, and tyll an hundred vessels of wyne, and other plenteous thynges wythoute number. Lette all thynges be doone after the lawe of the hyest GOD, that the wroth of God aryse not in the realme of the kynge, and of hys soonnes. I commaunde you also, that ye require no taxe nor trybute of the Priestes, Leuytes, Syngers, and mynysters of the temple, nor of the writers and that no man haue authorytye to medle anye thynge agaynste theym. As for thee (O Esdras) set thou iudges and arbitrers in the whole lande of Siria and Phenices, after the wisdom of God: and learne all such as are ignorant in the lawe of God thy lord, and let al them that offend againſt the lawe be punished: whether it be wyth death, with payne to be condemned in money, or to be banyshed. Then sayde Esdras the writer. ¶ Blessed bee the God of our fathers, that hath geuen so good a mynde & will into the heart of the kynge, to magnifye his house that is at Jerusalem, and hath made me to be accepted in the syghte of the kyng, of his councell, of his frendes, & of his nobles. And so I was stedfast in my mynde, accordyng as ỹ Lord my God helped me, and I chose oute mē of Israel to go vp with me. ¶ And these are the heades (after their kynredes & houses of their fathers) that went vp with me from Babylon, out of the kyngdome of Artaxerses: Of the soonnes of Phares, Gersonius: Of the soonnes of Siemarith, Amenus. Of the sonnes of Dauid, Iecus, the sonne of Cecilia. Of the sonnes of Phares, Zacharye: and wyth hym there turned agayne an hundred and fifty menne. Of the sonnes of the captain of Moabilon, Zaraei, & with hym. ii. C. and. l. men. Of the sonnes of Zachnes, Jechonias, Zecholy, and with hym two hundred and fifty mē. Of the soonnes of Salamasias, Botholy, and. lxx. with him. Of the sonnes of Zaphatia, zarias. Miheli, and with hym foure score. Of the sonnes of Job, Abdias, Jehely, & with hym two hundred and twelue men. Of ỹ sonnes of Bania, Salimoth the sonnes of Josaphia, and wyth hym an hundred and three score men. Of the sonnes of Beer, zacharie Behei, and with hym two hundred and. viii. mē. Of the sonnes of Esead, Johannes Ezechā, and with hym an hundred and ten men. Of the sonnes of Adonicam those that were the last, & these are theyr names. Eliphalā the sonne of Gebel and Semeias, & with hym lxx. men. All these called I together by the water of Thia, where we pitched our tentes three dais, and there I mustered them. As for the sons of the Priestes and Leuites, I found none there. Then sente I vnto Eleazar, and Ecrelom, and Maimam, and Nalabam, and Enaathan, and Samea, and

and Jozabmathan, Eunagan, Jachazie, Mosollamun, these were the Elders and menne of experience: and I sente them woorde, that they shoulde come vnto Loddeus, whiche was by the place of the treasurye, and commaunded them that they shuld speake vnto Loddeus and to his brethrē, and to those that were in the treasurye, to sende vs such men, as myghte execute the prieſtes office in the house of the Lord our God. And wyth the mightye hande of oure Lorde God, they brought vnto vs men of good experience, from amonge the sons of Moolins, the sonne of Leui, the son of Israell, Sebetiam, and the sonnes, and his brethren Asbin and Anin, of whō there were eyghtene. From amonge the children of the sonnes of Chananeus, and their sonnes were .xx. menne. And of theym that serued in the tēple, whom Dauid had ordeyned, and the principal men that ministred for the worke vnto the Leuytes in the temple two hundred and twenty menne, whose names are al tokened vppe in wrytinge. • Than commaunded I a fasting vnto the yonge men before the Lorde, that I myghte despye of hym a prosperous iourney, and a good waye for vs, yee, for vs, for our chyldren and for the cattel, because of the layinges awayte, and I durste not requyre of the kinge men of horse and of foote, to conueye vs safely agaynst oure ennemyes: for we had sayde vnto the king that the power of the Lord our God should be wyth them that seeke hym wyth their whole hearte. In· therefore, we besought God our Lord earnestly because of these thinges, and he was merciful vnto vs, and heard our prayer. And I separated from among the rulers of the people, and from the prieſtes of the temple twelue men, and Sebeia and Asania, and ten menne of their brethren wyth theym. And I weyed them the golde and the syluer and al the prieſtlye ornamentes of the house of our God, which the kynge, and hys councel, and his princes, and whole Israel had geuen. And when I had weyed it, I gaue them an hundred and fiftie talentes in syluer and an hundred Talentes of syluer vessel, an hundred talentes of golde, and of golden vessel seuen tymes twenty, and vessels of other metal (ye, of good metal) twelue glistering as the gold, and sayde vnto them: ye are holye vnto the Lorde, and the vessels are holy, and the golde and the siluer is promised vnto the Lord God of our fathers. Be diligent nowe and kepe it, vntyll the tyme that ye deliuer it to the rulers of the people, to the prieſtes, to the Leuytes, and to the principal men of the cities of Israel in Jerusalem, and in the chamber of the house of our God. • So the Prieſtes and the Leuytes, which receaued of me the gold the syluer and the vessel, brought it vnto Jerusalem, into the temple of the Lord. And from the riuer of This we brake vp the twelueth daye of the fyrſt moneth, til wee came to Jerusalem. And when the thyrde daye was paste, the weyed gold, and syluer was deliuered in the house of the Lord the fourth daye, vnto Marimoth, the son of Joz the prieſte, and with him was Eleazar the soonne of Phineas, and wyth theim were Josabdus the sonnes of Jasnet, Medias and the sonne of Banus, and certayne of the Leuytes to the number and to the waygh: and the waight of them was written vppe the same time. As for those that were come out of captiuitie, they offered sacrifyce vnto the Lorde the God of Israel: euen twelue oxen for al Israel. lxxxvi. rammes. lxxii. sheepe. xii. goates for sinne, twelue kyne for a thankeoffering, al to the sacrifyce of the Lorde. And the kinges commissiō deliuered they vnto the stewardes and debities of the kynge, and to the vndershrieues in Celosiria and Phenices. • Nowe, when these thynges were done, the rulers came vnto me, and sayde: The generation of Israel, the princes, the prieſtes, and Leuites, the strange people, and indwellers of the land, haue not put away their vnclennes, from ỹ Cananites, Hethites

So all they that were moued thorow the word of the God of Israell, came vnto me: and I sat still, full of heauines, vntyll the euenynge sacrifyce. Then stode I vp from fastyng, hauyng rent clothes and the holy garment, kneled downe vppon myknees, helde vp my handes vnto the Lorde, and sayde: O Lorde, I am confounded and ashamed before thy face, for our synnes are become many vpon our heades, and our wickednesses are exalted vnto the heauen, for sens the tyme of our fathers, we are in great synne vnto thys day. And for the synnes of vs and our fathers, we with our brethrē and with our priestes haue bene delyuered vnto the kynges of the earthe, into the sword, and into captiuitie, and became a spoyle, with confusion and shame vnto this day. And nowe, O Lorde god, how great is thy mercy that we haue gotten of thee: in that thou haste leite vs a rote & a name in the place of thy sanctuary, to discouer our light in the house of ϒ lord our god, & hast genē vs meat at all tymes of oure ministration. And whē we were in captiuitiy we were not forsakē of ϒ Lord our god: but he made ϒ kings of Persia gracious and fauourable vnto vs, so that they gaue vs vyttayles and meate, yea, and leaue to buylde vp the temple of our Lord God againe, to repayre the wasted places of Sion, and to dwell in Iewry and Jerusalem. And now, O Lord, what shal we say, hauyng all these thinges in possessiō? For we haue brokē thy cōmandemēts which thou gauest vnto vs by the handes of thy seruantes ϒ prophets, sayinge: The lande that ye go vnto and that is geuen you for an herytage to haue in possession, is defyled with the vnclennesse and fylthines of the Heathen, and with their abhomination haue they poluted it altogether. Ther G fore, shal ye not ioyne your daughters vnto their sonnes, nor marye youre sonnes vnto their daughters. Moreouer, ye shall not seeke to make peace with them, that ye maye increase and eate the beste in the lande, and that ye may deuyde the inherytaunce of the land vnto your children for euermore. As for the thynge that nowe happeth vnto vs, it commeth all for our wycked workes and great sinnes, yet hast thou geuen vs such a rote, that we are come agayne into our owne land, and we are so wicked, that we haue broken thy statuees and commaundementes agayne, and myngled oure selues with the vnclennes of the outlandish Hethen. O Lord, art thou angry with vs: wilt thou rote vs cleane out: that our rote and name remayne nomore? O Lord god of Israell thou art true, for our roote endureth yet vnto thys present daye. And beholde, nowe are we before thee in our sinnes, now can we not stand before thee in thē. ¶ And 1 Es. 10 when Esdras with thys prayer had knowledged the synne, weppynge, and lying flat vpon the ground before the temple, there gathered vnto him from Jerusalem a great multitude of men and wemen, of yonge men and maydens, for there was a very great weppyng and mourning in the congregation. So when Iechonias the sonne of Jeheli one of the chyldren of Israell cryed, he sayde vnto Esdras: we haue synned agaynste the Lorde, because wee haue maryed outelandyshe wemen of the Heathen. Nowe arte thou ouer all Israel. We will sweare an othe therfore vnto the Lorde, that we shall put awaye all oure wyues, which we haue taken of the Hethen, with their chyldren: lyke as it is appointed thee by our forelders. Stand vp then, open thou it, and declare it playneiye vnto vs, accordynge to the law of the Lord: for the matter belongeth vnto thee, and we will helpe the, quite thy selfe manly. So Esdras arose, and toke an othe of the rulers, of the Priestes, and of the Leuites, and of Israell, to do after these thynges: and they sware.

1 Esl. 10b THen Esdras stode vp from the court of the temple without, and wente into the chamber of Jonathas, the soonne of Nalabus, and remayned there, and dyd eate no meate, nor dronke drinke, for the multitude of the wyckednesse of the people. And there was made a proclamation in all Jewry and at Jerusalem, for all such as wer gathered at Jerusalem out of captiuitye, that whosoeuer came not to Jerusalē within two or three days (accordīg to the iudge-ment of the old lordes of the councel) his goodes should be taken from him, and be excluded from the congregatiō of the captiuitye. And in three dayes were all they of the trybe of Juda and Beniamin gathered together at Jerusalem, the twentieth daye of the ninth moneth. And the whole multitude sat tremblyng in the court of the temple, for it was wynter. So Esdras arose vp, and sayde vnto them: ye haue done vnryghteousnye, in that ye haue taken outlandishe wiues in ma-riage, and so to increase the synnes of Israell. And nowe knowledge the same, and geue prayse vnto the Lorde god of our fathers, and perfourme his B will, departyng from the Heathen of the lande, and from the outlandyshe wiues. Then cryed the whole multitude with a loude voyce, and said: like as thou hast spoken, so will we do: but for so much as the people are manye, and the wynter here, we maye not stand without the house: agayne, this worke is not a thynge, that can be fynyshed in a day or two, for we be many that haue synned in these thynges.
Ordeyne therefore that the rulers of the multytude, and they that dwell with vs, and as manye as haue outlandysh wyues, that the priests also & iudges of euery place may stand in the tyme appoynted, tyll they swage the wrath of the Lorde in this busynes.
Then Jonathas the sonne of Ezely, and Ozias and Thecan receiued the charge of this mater, and Bozozamus and Leius, and Sabatheus helpeth them therto. After thys all they stode vp that were come oute of captiui-tye. And Esdras the priest chose vnto him the principall men from amonge the fathers, according to their names, and the newe mone of the tenthe mo-neth they sat together, to examin this C matter. And so the matter was a determining (concernynge the men that had outlandyshe wyues) vntyll the newe mone of the firste moneth. And of the priestes that had myxte theym 1 Esl. 10 selues with outlandyshe wyues, ther were found: Of the sons of Jesus, the sons of Josedec and his brethren, Mazeas, Eleazar, Jozibus and Joadeus, which offred them selues to put away their wiues, and to offer a ram for their ignorannce. And of the sons of Semmeri, Masseas, and Elles, and Jeelech, Azartas. Of the sonnes of Fosera, Limosias, Hisinaen, Mathanea, Jussio, Jeddus, and Taisas.
And of the Leuites, Jolabdus, Semeis, and Colnis, Caletas, Facteas, Colnas, and Elionas. Of the singers of the sanctuary, Eliarib, Zacharus.
Of the porters, Sallumus and Tol banes. And of Israel, of the childzen of Foro, Oki, and Remias, and Ged-dias, and Melchias, Michelus, Elea zarus, Jemmebias, & Wannas. And the chyldzen of Jolaman, Thanias, zachari, Jeizrelus, Jodius, Erimoth and Elias. And of the soonnes of Ja-thoim, Eliadas, Liasamus, and Jo- D chias, Larimoth, Sabdis, and Zebedias. And of the sonnes of Zebes, Joannes, Amanias, Jabdias, and Emmeus. And of the sonnes of Wannus, Olammus, Malachus, Jeddus, Jasub, Asabus, & Jerimoth And of the sonnes of Jdden, Nastus

and Hooshas, and Caleus, and Raanas, Maalias, Mathathias, Besell, Bannus, and Manasses. And of the sonnes of Naue, Nones, Aras, Melchias, Sameas, Simon, Beniamin, Malchus, and Marras. And of the sonnes of Asom, Cartaneus, Mathathias, Bamus, Eliphalach, Manasses, Semei. Of the sonnes of Bannus, Jeremie, Hoodias, Abzamas, Johell, Baneas, Pelias, Jona, Marimoth, Eliasib, Mathaneus, Eliasis C Ozias, Dielus, Semedius, Zambzis, and Joseph. Of the sonnes of Nobeius, Idelus, Mathathias, Shabadus, Zecheda, Sedmi, Jesseus, and Baneas. All these had taken outlandish women to mariage, and they put them away with theyr childzen. The Pziestes and Leuytes, and all they that were of Jsraell, dwelte at Jerusalem, and thozowout all the land, in the newe moone of the seuenth moneth, and the childzen of Jsrael were in theyr dwellynges: And the whole multitude came together, vppon the flooze at the Easte syde of the holye Pozt of the Temple. And they spake vnto Esdzas, the hye Pziest and reader, that he would bzyng the lawe of Moyses, whyche was geuen of the LORD GOD of Jsraell. So Esdzas the hye Pziest bzoughte the lawe vnto the whole multitude, to man and woman, and to all the pziestes, that they myght heare the lawe, Ef.3.a monethe. And he redde in the flooze that is befoze the holy pozt of the temple, from the mozning earely vnto the euenyng, befoze men and womenne.

F And they applyed theyr mynd all vnto the lawe. And Esozas the Pziest and reader of the lawe stoode vp vppon a pulpyt of wodde, whyche was made therefoze: and vppon hys right hande there stode by hym Mathathias, Samus, Anamias, Azarias, Urias, Ozechias, and Balsamus. Vpon hys lefte hande stoode Faldeus, Mishael, Malachias, Abulchas, Sabus, Nabadias, and zacharye. Then tooke Esdzas the Booke befoze the whole multitude: foz he was the pzincipall, and hadde in moste honoure of theym all. And when he hadde redde out the lawe, they stoode all streight vppon theyr feete. So Esdzas pzayse the LORDE, the moste hye GOD, the Almyghtye GOD of Hoostes. And all the people answered, Amen: and healde vp theyr handes, felle downe flatte vppon the earthe, and pzayse the LORDE. And Jesus, Beneas, Sarebias, Jaddimus, Accubus, Sabbatheus, B
Calithes, Azarias, Jozadus, Ananias, and Philias, the Leuites, lyfte theyr handes vpwarde, and bowed theyr faces to the grounde, and pzaised the LORD. Those were they whyche taught the lawe of the Lozd: and redde the lawe of the LORD in the congregation: and euery man sette theym befoze, that vnderstoode the lawe. Thenne spake Atharates vnto Esdzas, the hye Pziest and reader, and to the Leuytes, that taughte the multitude, sayenge: Thys daye is holye vnto the Lozde, and all they 2.Esd.8. that hearde the lawe wept. So Esdzas sayd: * Departe your way then, and eate the beste, and dzynke the sweeteste, and sende gyftes vnto them that haue nothynge: foz thys daye is holye vnto the Lozde, and bee not ye sozy: foz the LORDE wyll bzyng you vnto honour. Then wente they theyr waye euerychone, and dyd eate and dzynke, and were mery, and sente rewardes vnto theym that hadde nothynge, that they also myght eate wyth gladnesse: foz they were exceedyng reioyced, thozowe the woozdes that were redde vnto theym in the lawe. And so they were al gathered together at Jerusalem, to hold the feast, accozding to the couenaunte of the Lozde GOD of Jsrael.

The.iiii. Booke of Esdras.

A 1.Es.7 a 3.Es.8.a

The seconde Boke of the Prophete • Esdras, the son of Saraias, the soonne of Azarias, the sonne of Helchia, the sonne of Sallum, the son of Sadoc, the soonne of Achitob, the son of Achia, the soonne of Phinees, ỹ sonne of Hely Amerias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Marimoth, the sonne of Sarahias, the sonne of Uzi, the sonne of Bocchus, the son of Abisu, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the soonne of Aaron (of the tribe of Leui) which was prisoner in Esa.58 a the lande of Medes, in the raigne of Artaxerses kyng of Persia. • And the word of the Lord came vnto me, sayeng: Go thy way & shewe my people theyr synfull dedes, and theyr childrē theyr wickednesses, which they haue done against me, that they maye telle their childrens childrē the same, for W. the synnes of their fathers are increased in them. And why? they haue forgotten me, & haue offred vnto strange goods. Am not I euē he, that brought them out of the land of Egypte from the house of bondage? But they haue prouoked me vnto wrath, and despysed my councels. Pull thou out than the heare of thy head, and cast all euil ouer them, for they haue not ben obediente vnto my lawe. ¶ The. ii. Chapter.

THus sayethe the LORDE: A I brought this people oute of of bondage, I gaue theim my commaundementes by my seruauntes, the Prophetes, whyche they wouldе not heare, but despysed my counsayles. The mother that bare theym, sayeth vnto theym: Goe youre waye yee chyldren, for I am a wydowe, and forsaken: I broughte you vppe with gladdenesse, but with sorowe and heuynesse haue I lost you: for yee haue synned before the Lorde your GOD, and doone the thynge that is euyll before hym. But what shall I nowe dooe vnto you? I am a wydow, & forsaken: Goe your waye O my children, and aske mercy of the B Lord. As for me, O father, I call vpGe. 19. on the for a wytnes ouer the mother of these chyldren, whiche wouldе not keepe my couenant, that thou bryngе them to confusyon, and their mother to a spoyle, that she beare no more. Let theyr names be scattered amonge the Hethen. Let thē be put out of ẏ earth for they haue thought scorn of my couenannt. Wo be vnto the Assur, thou that hydest the vnryghteousnesse by thee. Thou wycked people, remember * what I dyd vnto Sodom and Gomorra, whose laude is tourned to pitche and ashes. Euen so also wyll I doo vnto all theym, that heare me not, sayth the Almighty Lord. Thus sayth the Lord vnto Esdras, Tel my people, that I wylle gene theym the kyngdom of Jerusalem, whyche I would haue geuē vnto Israel. Their glory also I toke vnto me, & geue thē the euerlastyng tabernacles, whiche I had prepared for those. The tree of lyfe shalbe vnto thē a swete smellyng oyntment, they shall neyther labour, C nor be weery. Go ye your waye, and ye shall receaue it. Pray for your selues a fewe days, that they may dwell therein. Nowe is the kyngdome prepared for you, therfore watche. Take heauen and earthe to wytnesse, for I haue broken the euyll in pieces, and created the good: for I lyue, sayth the Lord. Mother embrace thy chyldren, and bryng thē vp with gladnes: make their sete as fast as a pilier, for I haue chosen thee, sayth the Lord. And those that be deade will I rayse vp agayne from their places, and bryng them out of the graues, for I haue knowen my name in Israell. Feare not thou mother of the children, for I haue chosen thee, sayth the Lord. And for thy helpe I shall sende thee my seruauntes Esay and Jeremy, after whose counceil I haue sanctified and prepared for the twelue trees with diuerse frutes, and as many welles, flowyng with milk and honye, and seuen mountaynes, whervpon there growe roses and lyllyes, wherin I will fyll my children with ioy. Execute iustice for the widowe, be iudge for the fatherles: geue to the poore, defende the comfortlesse, clothe the naked, heale the wounded and sicke, laughe not a lame manne to scorne, defende the crepell, and let the blynd come into the lyght of my clearnes: * where soeuer thou fyndest the dead, take them, and bury them, and I shall geue thee, the firste place in my resurrection. Holde still (O my people) and take thy rest, for thy quietnes is come. Feede thy children, O thou good norse, stablyshe their sete: As for the seruauntes whom I haue geuen thee, there shall not one of theym perysshe. For I will seke them from thy numbre, vexe not thy selfe. For when the day of trouble and heauynes commeth, other shall wepe and be sorowfull, but thou shalt be mery and plenteous. The hethen shalbe gelous, but they shalbe able to do nothing against the, sayth the Lord. My handes shall couer the, so that thy children shal not see the fire euerlastyng. Be ioyfull, O thou mother with thy children, for I will deliuer the, sayth the Lord. Remember thy dead children, for I shall bryng them out of the earth, and shewe mercy vnto them, for I am mercifull, sayth the Lorde almightye. Embrace thy children, vntill I come, and shewe mercy vnto them, for my wels runne ouer, and my grace shall not fayle. I Esdras receaued a charge of the Lord vpon the mount Oreb, that I should go vnto Israell. But when I came vnto Israell, they set me at naughte, and despised the commaundemente of the Lorde. And therefore I saye vnto you, O ye heathen that heare and vnderstand: Loke for your shepeheарde, he shall geue you euerlastyng rest, for he is nye at hande, that shall come in the ende of the worlde: Be readye to the reward of the kyngdome, for the euerlastynge lyghte shall shyne vpon you for euermore. Flee the shadowe of this worlde, receaue the ioyfulnes of your glory. I testify my sauiour openly, O receyue the gyft that is geuen you, and be glad, geuing thankes vnto him that hath called you to the heauenly kyngdome. Aryse vp, and stande fast: behold the number of those that be sealed in the feast of the Lord, whiche are departed from the shadowe of the worlde, and haue receaued glorious garmentes of the Lord. Take thy number O Sion, and shut vp thy purified, which haue fulfylled the lawe of the Lord. The number of thy children whom thou longest for, is fulfilled, beseech the power of the Lord, that thy people whiche haue bene called from the beginning, may be halowed. * I Esdras sawe vpon the mount Sion a great people, whom I could not number, and they all praysed the Lord with songes of thankesgeuyng. And in the myddest of theym there was a yonge man of an hye stature, more excellent then all they, and vpon euerye one of their heades he set a crowne, and was euer higher and higher, whiche I marueled at greatly. So I asked the aungell, and sayde: Sir: what are these? He answered and sayd vnto me: These be they, that haue put of the mortall clothynge and put on the immortall, & haue testified and knowledged the name of God. Nowe are they crowned, & receaue the rewarde. Then sayd I vnto the aungell: what yong person is it, that crowneth them, and geueth them the palmes in their handes?

the whole worlde, thou hast chosē thee one pti: and of all floures of the grou̅d thou hast chosen thee one lilye: and of al the depthes of the sea thou hast filled the one ryuer: and of al builded cytyes thou hast halowed Sion vnto thy seife: and of all the fowles that are created, thou hast named the one doue: and of al the cattel that are made, thou hast prouided the one sheepe, and among al ꝑ multitudes of folckes, thou hast gotten the one people, and vnto thys people whome thou louest, thou gauest a law, that is proued of al. And nowe, O Lorde, why hast thou geuē this one people ouer vnto many: and vpon the one roote thou hast prepared other, and why hast thou scattred thy one only people among many: wyych treade them downe: yee whyche haue euer withstand thy promises, and neuer beleeued thy couenauntes: And C though thou werest enemye vnto thy people, yet shouldest thou punishe tyē with thine owne handes. Now whē I had spoken these wordes, the Angel that came to me the nyghte afore, was sent vnto me, and sayd vnto me: Here me, and herken to the thing that I say, and I shal tel the more. And I sayd: Speake on my Lord. Then said he vnto me: Thou arte sore vexed and troubled for Israels sake. Louest thou that people better then him that made them: And I said: No Lord, but of verye greife and compassion haue I spoken. For my reynes payne me euerye houre, because I would haue experyence of the way of the moste hiest, and to seeke oute part of hys iudgemente. And he sayde vnto me: that thou mayest not. And I sayde: wherfore Lord, whereunto was I borne then: Or why was not my mothers childebed then my graue: So hadde I not sene the misery and trouble of Iacob, and the trauayle of my people of Israell. And hee sayde vnto me: Number the thynges that are not yet come: gather me together the droppes that are scattred abrode: make me ꝑ floures grene agayne, that are withered: open mee the thing that is closed: and bring me forth the wyndes, that are shut vppe: Shewe me the ymage of a voice, and then shal I declare the thynge, that thou labourest to know. And I said: O Lorde Lord, who may know these things, but he that hath not his dwellyng wyth men: As for me, I am vnwise: how may I then speake of these thinges wherof thou askest me. Thē sayde he vnto me: lyke as thou canste do none of these thynges that I haue spoken of, euen so canst thou not fynd out my iudgemente, or in the ende the loue that I haue promised vnto my people. And I said: Behold O Lord, yet art thou nye vnto them that haue no ende: and what shall they doe, that haue beene before mee: or we that bee nowe, or they that shall comme after vs: And he sayde vnto me: I wyl lyken my iudgement vnto a ryng. Lyke as there is no slackenesse of the laste, euen so is there no swyftenes of the ryght. Soo I aunswered and sayde: couldest thou not make those (that haue bene made, and be now, and that ar for to come) in one, that thou mightest shew thy iudgemente the sooner: Then answered he me, and sayd: The D creature may not haste aboue the maker, nether may the world hold thē at once, that shalbe created. And I sayd: How hast thou said then vnto thy seruaunt, that thou liuyng maker, haste made the creature, liuing at once, and the creature bare it: euen so myght it now also bear them that be present at ones. And he said vnto me: Aske the childbed of a womā, and say vnto her: If thou bringest forth children, why doest thou it not together, but one after an other. Pray her therfor, to bring forth ten children at ones. And I said: She cānot, but muste doo it one after another. Then said he vnto me: Euē so haue I geuen a childebed vnto the earthe, for those that be sowen vpon it by processe of tyme. For lyke as a younge chylde maye not bryng forth thinges that belonge to the aged: euen so haue I ordeyned the worlde whyche I made. And I asked, and sayde: Seeyng thou haste nowe geuen vs aswaye, I will speake before thee: for our mother of whom thou haste tolde me, is yet yonge, and nowe she drawe=eth nye vnto age. He aunswered me, and sayd: Aske a woman that beareth chyldren, and she shal tel thee. Saye vnto her: wherefore are not they (whō thou haste nowe brought forth) lyke these that were before thee, but lesse of stature. And she shal aunswer thee: They that bee borne in the youthe of strength are of one fashion, and they that are borne in the time of age (whē the childbed fayleth) are otherwyse. Consider nowe thy selfe, how that ye are lesse of stature, thē those that were before you, and so are they that come after you lesse thē ye, as the creatures which nowe begynne to be olde, and haue passed ouer the strēgth of youth. Then sayde I: Lorde I beeeche thee, if I haue found fauour in thy syghte, shewe thy seruaunt, by whome doest thou visite thy creature?

AND he sayd vnto me: In the beginning when the ground was made: before the worlde stoode, or euer the windes blewe, before it thondred and lyghtened, or euer the foundations of Paradyse were layed, before the fayre floures were seene, or euer the moueable powers were stablyshed, before the innumerable multitude of aungelles were gathered together, or euer the highnesses of the ayre were lifted vp, afore the measures of the fyrmamente were named, or euer the chimneys in Syon were hote, and or the presente yeares were sought out, and or euer the inuēctions of them that now synne, wer put aside, before they wer sealed that nowe gather faythe for a treasure: then did I consider and ponder all these thynges, and they al wer made through me, and throughe none other: by me also they be ended, and by none other. Then aunswered I and sayde: whych shalbe the partyng asunder of the times? Or when shalbe the ende of the fyrste, and the begynninge of it that followeth? And he sayde vnto mee: From Abraham vnto Isaac, when Jacob and Esau were borne of him, Jacobs hande helde fyrste the heele of Esau: for Esau is the ende of thys worlde, and Jacob is the begyn=ning of it that followeth. The hand of man betwixte the hele and the hande. Other question (Esdras) aske not thou. I aunswered then, and said: O Lorde, Lorde, yf I haue found fauour in thy syght, I beseche thee, shew thy seruaunte, the ende of thy tokens, whereof thou shewedst me parte the laste nyghte. So he aunswered, and sayde vnto me: Stand vp vppon thy feete, and heare the perfect voyce and sounde. There shal come a great mo=tion, but the place wher thou standest shal not be moued. And therefore whē thou heareſt the wordes: be not afraid: for of the ende shal the woorld and the foundacion of the earth be vnderstand And why? the word therof trembleth and quaketh, for it knoweth, that it must be chaunged at the ende. And it happeneth that when I had heard it, I stoode vp vpon my fete, and herke=ned: and beholde, there was a voyce that spake, and the sounde of it was lyke the sounde of manye waters, and it saide: Beholde the dayes come, that I will begynne to drawe nye, and to visite them that dwel vpon earth, and wil begynne to make inquisition of them, what they be that haue hurt e=quitye with vnryghteousnesse, and when the lowe estate of Syon shall be fulfylled: and when the worlde, that shal vanyshe aswaye, shalbe ouerse=led, then wyl I do these tokens. The bookes shalbe opened before the fyr=mamente, and they shall see altoge=ther, and the chyldren of a yeare olde shall speake with theyr voyces: the wemen with childe shall bryng forth vntymelye children of three or foure monthes olde, and they shall lyue, and be rayled vp: and sodenly shal the sow en places appeare as the vnsowen, the full store houses shall sodenlye be shal geue a sounde, which when euery man heareth, they shalbe hastelye fyght one agaynst another lyke ennemyes, and the earth shall stand wyth them. The springs of the welles shal stand styl, and in three houres they shal not renne, whoe so euer remayneth from al these thynges that I haue tolde thee, shal escape, and see my saluation, and the ende of youre worlde. And the men that haue receiued, shal see it, they that haue not tasted death from theyr byrthe, and the heart of the indwellers shalbe chaunged, and turned into another mening: for euil shalbe put out, and disceit shal bee quenched. As for faith, it shal florysshe, corruption shalbe ouercome, and the truth, whiche hath beene so longe wythout fruite, shalbe declared. And it happened whenne hee talked wyth me, that I looked demurely vpō him, before whom I stode, and these wordes sayde he vnto mee: I am come to shewe thee the tyme of the nyghte for to come. If thou wylt praye yet more and faste seuen dayes agayne, I shall tell thee more thynges, and greater C then before: for thy voyce is heard before the hyest: for whyche the myghtye hath seene thy ryghteous dealyng: he hath seene also thy chastytie, whiche thou haste had euer sence thy youthe: and therefore hath he sent me to shewe thee all these thynges, and to saye vnto thee: Be of good confort, and feare not, and haste not with the times that are paste to thynke vayne things, and make not hast of the latter times. And it hapned after this, ỹ I wept agayn, and fasted seuen daies in like maner, that I myghte fulfyll the three weekes: whyche hee tolde mee: In the eyghte nyghte was my hearte vexed wythin me agayne, and I beganne to speake before the hyest: for my spyrite was greatelye sette on fyre, and my soule was in dystresse, and I said: O Lorde, thou spakest vnto thy creature daye) and saydest. ✱ Lette heauen and earth be made, and thy worde was a perfect worke. And then was there the spirite, and the darknesses were yet on euery side, and silēce: there was no mans voyce as yet from thee. Thē commaundedst thou a fayre lyghte to come foorth out of thy treasures, that thy worke might appeare and be sene.

Upon the second day thou madest the spirite of the firmament, and commandedst it to part a sunder, and to make a diuision betwixt the waters, that the one part myght remayne aboue: And the other benethe. Vppon the thyrde day thou broughtest to passe, that the waters were gathered in the seuenth part of the earth: sixe partes hast thou dryed vp, and kepte them, to thintent that men myght sow and occupy husbandry therin. As soone as thy word wente foorthe, the worke was made.
For immediatly there was great and that the Sunne should geue his shine man, that was for to bee made. Upon the fyft day, thou saydest vnto the seuenth part (where the ✱ waters were Gen. 1.c gathered) that they shold bryng forth dyuers beastes, foules, and fyshes.

And so it came to passe, that the dombe D waters, and withoute soule, brought foorth lyuyng beasts, at the commandement of God, that all people might prayse thy wonderous workes. Then dydst thou preserue two soules, ỹ one thou calledst Enoch, and the other Leuiathan, and dyddest separate the one from the other: for the seuenth parte (namely, wher the water was gathered together) might not holde theym bothe. Vnto Enoch thou gauest one part, whiche was dried vp the thirde day, that he shoulde dwell in the same part, wherin are a thousand hyls. But vnto Leuiathā, thou gauest the seuēth part, namely the moyst, and hast kepte hym

hym to demeane what thou wilte, and whan. Upon the syxte daye thou gauest commaundement vnto the earth, that before thee, it should bryng forth beastes, cattel, and all that creepe, and (besydes thys) Adam also, whome thou madest Lorde of all thy creatures. Of hym come we al, and the people also, whom thou haste chosen specially vnto thy selfe. Al thys haue I said now and spoken before thee, that I myght shewe how that the worlde is made for our sakes. As for the other people which also come of Adā, thou haste sayd, that they are nothing but be lyke a spetle, and haste lykened the aboundaunce of them vnto a drop that falleth frō the rooke of the house. And nowe O Lorde, the Heathen which haue euer bene reputed as nothing, haue begonne to be lordes ouer vs, and to deuour vs: but we thy people (whom thou haste called the firste borne, thy onely begotten, and thy feruent louer) are geuen into their handes and power. If the worlde now be made for our sakes, why haue we not the inheritaunce in possession wyth the worlde. How longe shal this endure?

The. vii. Chapter.

AND it happened after that I had spoken out these wordes, there was sente vnto mee an angel, which had bene by me also the nightes afore, and he sayde vnto mee: Vp Esdras, and heare the woordes that I am comme to tell thee. And I sayde: speake on Lorde my God. Thē sayde he vnto me: The sea is set in a wyde place, that it myght be depe and great: but the entraunce is narrowe and smal lyke a ryuer. For who wold goe into the sea, to looke vpon it, and to rule it? If he wente not throughe the narowe, howe myght he come into the brode? Item another: A citye is builded, and set vpon a brode field, and is ful of all goodes, the entraunce is narow and sodaine, like as yf there were a fyre at the ryghte hande, and a deepe water at the left, and as it were onely one straite path betwixt theym both, so small that there could but one man go there. If this citie now were geuen to an heyre and he neuer wente throughe the perilous waye, howe woulde he receaue hys inheritaunce? And I sayde: It is so Lord. Thē said hee: Euen so is Israel also a portion. And why, for their sakes haue I made the worlde: and when Adam transgressed my statutes, then was the thinge iudged that was done. Then wer the entrances of the world made narowe, ful of sorowe and trauayle. They are but fewe and euyl, full of perels and laboure. For the entraunces of the fore worlde were wyde and sure, and brought immortall fruite. If they nowe whiche are entred into this world may not comprehend these strayte and bayne thinges, much lesse may they comprehend and vnderstand the secrete thynges. Why disquietest thou thy selfe then, seing thou art but a corruptible man? And what wouldest thou know, whereas thou art but mortal? And whye haste thou not receaued into thyne heart the thing that is for to comme, but that is presente? Then sayde I: O Lorde Lord, thou haste ordeyned in the lawe, that the ryghteous should inherite these thinges, but that the vnfaythfull and vngodlye should perysshe. Neuertheles the ryghteous shal suffer strayte thinges, and hope for wyde: for they that haue lyued vngodly and suffred strayt thynges, shal not see the wide. And he sayde vnto me: There is no iudge aboue God, and none that hath vnderstandynge aboue the hiest. For there be manye that perysshe, because they despise the law of God, that is set before them. For God hath geuen strait commandement to such as come, that they knowe what they do, and howe they shold liue: and if they kept this, they should not be punished. Neuertheles they were not obediente vnto him, but spake agaynste him: ymagyned vaine thynges, and purposed to synne, and sayde moreouer, that there was no God, and that God regarded it not. Hys wayes haue they not knowen Deu. 16

wen, hys law haue they despised, and denied hys promises: in hys statutes and ordinaunces haue they not beene faythfull and stedfast, and haue not performed hys workes. And therefore Esdras: vnto the full, plentye: and to the emptye, emptines. Beholde the tyme shal come, that these tokens whiche I haue tolde thee, shall come to passe, and the bryde shal appeare, and the earth that now passeth away, shal be shewed, and whosoeuer is deliuered from the foresayde euels, shall see my wonders. For my sonne Jesus shalbe openlye declared, wyth those that be wyth him: and they that remayne, shalbe merie in foure hundred yeares. After these same yeares shall my sonne Chryst dye, and all menne that haue lyfe, and the worlde shalbe turned into the old silence seuē daies, lyke as in the fore iudgementes, so that no man shal remayne. And after seuen dayes, the worlde that yet awaked not, shalbe raised vp, and shall dye corrupte. And the earth shall restore those that haue slepte in her, and so shal the duste those that dwell in scylence, and the secrete places shal deliuer those that bee commytted vnto C theym. And the moste hyest shalbe openly declared vpon the seat of iudgement, and all mysery shall vanishe awaye, and longe sufferinge shalbe gathered together. But the iudgemente shal continue, the truth shal remaine, and faith shal waxe strong, the worke shal folowe, and the reward shalbe shewed: the ryghteousnes shal watch and the vnrighteousnes shal beare no rule. Then sayde I: Abraham prayed firste for the Sodomites, and Moses for the fathers that synned in the wyldernes, and hee that came after hym for Israel, in the time of Achas and Samuel: and Dauid for the destruction, and Salomon for theym that came into the Sanctuarye, and Helias for those that receaued rayne, and for the dead, that he myghte lyue: and Ezekias for the people in the tyme of Sennacherib: and diuerse other in lyke maner, which haue prayed for many. Euen so now, seinge the corrupte is growen vp, and wyckednes increased, and the righteous haue prayed for the vngodlye, wherefore shal it not bee so nowe also? He answered me, and saide: Thys presente worlde is not the end, there remayneth much honoure in it. Therefore haue they prayed for the weake. But the daye of doome shalbe the ende of thys tyme, and the begynninge of the immortalytie for to come, wherein all corruption vanyshed, all voluptеousnes is losed, al mysbeleefe taken away, ryghteousnes growne, and the verity spronge vp. Then shal no man bee able to saue him that is destroyed, nor to oppresse him that hath gotten the victorye. I answered then, and said: Thys is my fyrst and last saying: that it hadde bene better, not to haue geuen the earth vnto Adam: or els when it was geuen him, to kepe hym that hee shoulde not synne. For what profit is it for men now in thys presente tyme to lyue in heauines, and after death to looke for punishment? O thou Adam what haste thou done? For though it was thou that synned, thou arte not fallē alone, but we al that come of the. For what profit is it vnto vs, if there be promised vs an immortall tyme, where as we medle wyth deadly workes: and that there is promised vs an euerlasting hope, where as our selues are euil and vaine, and that there are laied vp for vs dwellings of health & fredome, wher as we haue lined euil, and that the worshippe of the hest is kept to defend them, which haue led a patient life, wheras we haue walked in the most wicked waies of al? And that there shalbe shewed a paradyse, whose fruit endureth for euer, wherin is fredome and medicyne, where as we shall not go in: for we haue walked in vnpleasaunte places: And that the faces of them, which haue abstey- D ned, shal shine aboue the starres, wher as our faces shalbe blacke and darke: For while we lined and dyd vnrighteously, we consydered not that wes shoulde suffer thereafter after death:

Then.

The answered hys me, and sayd: This is the consideration and thoughte of the battayle, whiche man hath vppon earth: that yf he bee ouercome, he shall suffer as thou haste sayd. But if he get the victorye, he shal receaue the thing that I saye. For thys is the lyfe, wherof Moyses spake vnto the people, whyle he lyued, sayinge: • Chose the lyfe, that thou mayest lyue. Neuer theles, they beleued hym not, neither the prophetes after him. No nor mee whiche haue spoken vnto theym that heauines should not reache vnto them to their destruction, lyke as ioye is for to come ouer those that haue suffered them selues to be enfourmed in salua tiō. I answered then, and sayde: I knowe Lorde, that the hiest is mercyful, in that he hath mercye vpon them which are not yet in the world, and vpon those also that walke in hys lawe: and that • he is paciente and long sufferynge towarde those that haue sinned in their workes, and that he is liberal to geue where as it requyreth: and that he is of great mercye, for hee multiplyed hys louinge kindnes towarde those that are present, and that are paste, and to them which are for to come. For yf he multiply not hys mercyes, the worlde shall not be made lyuynge, wyth those that dwel therein. He geueth also, for yf hee gaue not of hys goodnes, that they whiche haue done vnrighteously, bee eased from theyr wyckednes, the ten thousand parte of men should not be made lyuyng. And yf the iudge forgaue not those ỳ may be healed with his word, & if he wold stroye the multitude that stryueth, there shoulde be very fewe lefte in an innumerable multitude.

Rom. 2 a

And he answered me, sayinge: The moste hyest made thys worlde for many, but ỳ worlde to come for fewe. I wil tel thee a similitude, Esdras: As when thou askest the earth, it shal saye vnto thee, that it geueth much moulde, wherof earthen vesselles are made, but little of it that gold commeth of. Euen so is it wyth the worke of thys world, • There be many created, but fewe shalbe preserued. Then aunswered I and sayde: Then swalowe vppe the wit (thou soule) and deuour the vnderstanding, for thou art agreed to hearken and to geue eare, and wyllyng to prophecye: for thou haste no longer space geuen thee, but onelye to lyue. O Lord, wilt thou not geue thy seruants leaue that wee maye praye before thee, and that thou mayest geue sede vnto our heart, and builde our vnderstandynge, that there maye come fruit of it: and that euery one which is corrupte, and beareth the state and place of a man, maye lyue? For thou art alone, & we all are one workmanshyp of thy hands, lyke as thou hast sayd. And like as ỳ body is fashioned nowe in the mothers wombe, and geueste the members, and thy creature is preserued in fyre and water: and nyne monethes doeth thy worke suffer thy creature, which is fashioned in her: but the thing that preserueth, and it, that is preserued, shall bothe bee kepte together: and and when time is, the wombe deliuereth the thynge that is kepte and growen in her. For thou haste commaunded the brestes to geue mylke vnto the fruit, that the thyng whiche is created and fashioned, may be nourished for a tyme: and then thou disposest and ordrest it wyth thy mercye, bryngest it vp wyth thy ryghteousnes, nurturest it in thy lawe, and reformest it wyth thy vnderstanding, mortifyest it as thy creature, and makest it lyuing as thy worke. Seynge then that thou destroiedst him, which wyth so great labours is created and fashioned throughe thy commaundemente, thou couldest lyghtlye ordeyne also, that the thynge whiche is made, might be preserued. And this I speak nowe of al menne in general: as thou knowest, but of thy people: for whose sake I am sorye: and of thy inheritaunce, for whose cause I mourn: and of Israel for whom I am woful: and of Iacob, for whose sake I am grieued, therefore begin I to praye before

thee, for my selfe and for them, for I see the fall of vs, euen of vs, that dwell vpon earth. But I haue hearde the swiftnes of the iudge, whiche is to come: therfore heare my voice, and vnderstand my wordes, and I shall speke before thee. This is the beginnyng of the wordes of Esdras, before he was receaued: O Lorde, thou that dwellest in euerlastyngnesse, whose eyes are lyft vp in the ayre, whose stoole is exceading hye, whose glorye and maiestye maye not be comprehended, before whō the Hostes of heauē stand with trembling, whose keping is turned in wynde and fyre, whose word is true, whose talking is stedfast, whose commaundement is stronge, whose ordynaunce is fearefull, whose loke drieth vp the depthes, whose wrath maketh the mountaynes to melte awaye, and whose truth beareth witnes. O heare the prayer of thy seruaunt, and marke with thyne eares the petition of thy creature. For whyle I lyue, I wyll speake, and so longe as I haue vnderstanding, I will answer. O loke not vpon the synnes of thy people, which serue in the trueth. Haue no respecte vnto the wicked studies of the Heathen, but to the desire of those that kepe thy testimonyes with sorowes. Thinke not vpō those that do walke sayndlye beefore thee, but vppon them, which with will haue knowen thy feare. Let it not be thy will to destroy them, whiche haue had beastlye maners, but to loke vppon them that haue clearly taught thy lawe. Take thou no indignation at them, whiche are worse then beastes: but loue them, that alway put their trust in thy righteousnes and glorye: for we and oure fathers haue all the same sickenes and disease, but because of our sinnes thou shalt be called mercifull. For yf thou hast mercy vpon vs, thou shalt be called mercifull, where as we haue no workes of ryghteousnes: for the ryghteous whiche haue layed vppe manye good workes together, shall oute of their dedes receue reward. For what is man, that thou shouldest take displeasure at hym? Or what is the corruptible & mortall generation, y thou shouldest be so rough towarde hym? 2 Par. 6.
• For of a trueth there is no man among them that be borne, but he hath dealt wickedly: and among the faythfull ther is none, which hath not done amysse. For in this (O lord) thy righteousnes and thy goodnes shalbe praysed and declared, if thou be mercyfull vnto them, which are not rich in good workes. Then aunswered he me, and sayd: Some thinges hast thou spoken aright, and accordyng vnto thy wordes it shal be. For I will not beleye considre the workes of them, whiche haue synned before deathe, before the iudgement, before destruction, but • I wil reioyce ouer the worke & thought of the ryghteous. I wyll remember also the pilgremage, the holy making and the reward. Like as I haue spoken now, so shall it come to passe. For as the husbandman soweth much sede vpon the ground, and planteth manye trees, and yet alway the thyng that is sowen or planted is not all kept safe, nepther doeth it all take rote: Euen so is it of theym that are sowen in the world, they shall not all be preserued. I answered then and sayd: If I haue found grace, then let me speake. Lyke as the husband mans sede perysheth, if it receaue not rayne in due season, or if ther come to much rayne vpon it: Euen so perysheth man also, whyche is created with thy hands, and is like vnto thyne owne ymage, and to thy selfe, for whose sake thou haste made all thinges, and lykened him vnto the husband mans sede. Be not wroth at vs, O Lord, but spare thy people, and haue mercy vpon thyne owne inheritaunce: O be mercifull vnto thy creature. Then answered he me and sayd: Thinges present are for the presente, and thinges to come, for such as be to come. For thou lackest yet muche, seynge thou mayest loue my creature aboue me: I haue ofte tymes drawen nye vnto thee, but neuer to the vnrighteous. In this also thou art marueilous before the hyest, in that thou Gen. 4.a 1. Joh. 1 C D haste humbled thy selfe, as it becommeth the, and hast not regarded thine owne selfe, that thou arte had in such honoure among the ryghteous. Ther fore shall great wretchednes and my-sery come vpon them, that in the latter time shall dwel in the worlde, because they haue walked in great pride But vnderstand thou for thy self, and seke out glory for such as be lyke the:

for vnto you is paradise opened, the tree of life is planted, the time to come is prepared, plenteousnesse made rea-dye, a citye is buylded for you, and a reste is prepared, yea perfect goodnes and wisedome. The roote of euyll is marked from you, the weakenes, and mothe is hyd frome you, and into hell flyeth corruption in forgetfulnes.
Sorowes are banyshed away, and in the ende is shewed the treasure of immortalitye. And therfore aske thou no more questions concernynge the multitude of them that peryshe. For they haue taken libertie: despised the hyest, thought scorne of his lawe, and forsaken his waye. Moreouer, they haue Psa. 14 a troden down his righteous, and said in their herte, that there is no God, yea and that wittingly, for they dye.
For lyke as the thynge that I haue spoken of, is made ready for you: Euē so is thirste and payne prepared for them. For it was not hys wyll that men should come to naught, but they which be created, haue defiled the name of hym that made theym, and are vnthankefull vnto him, which prepared lyfe for theym. And therfore is my iudgement now at hand. These thin-ges haue I not shewed vnto all men, but vnto fewe, namely vnto thee, and to such as be like the. Then answerd I and sayde: Behold O Lorde, nowe hast thou shewed me the multitude of the tokens, whiche thou wilte begyn to do at the last: but at what tyme and when, thou hast not shewed me.

The.ix. Chapter.

3 HE answered me then & sayde: Measure thou the tyme dilygentlye in it selfe, when thou seest that one part of the tokens come to passe, whyche I haue tolde thee before: So shalte thou vnderstande, that it is the very same tyme, wherin the Hyest will begynne to visite the worlde, whiche he made. And when there shall be an earthe quake and vp-roare of the people in the worlde, then shalte thou well vnderstand, that the most hyest spake of those thinges, frō the dayes that were before thee, euen from the begynnyng. For lyke as all that is made in the worlde hath a beginning and end, and the ende is manyfest: Euen so the tymes also of the hyest haue plain beginnings in wonders and signes, and the ende in workynge and in tokens. And euerye one that shalbe saued, and shall be able to escape by hys workes and by faythe, wherin ye haue beleued, shalbe preser ued from the sayd perils: and shall see my sauioure in my lande, and within my borders, for I haue halowed me from the worlde. Then shall they be in carefulnesse, whiche nowe haue abused my wayes: and they that haue cast them out dispitefullye, shall dwell in payne. For suche as in their life haue receaued benefites, and haue not knowen me, and they that haue abhorred my lawe, whyle they had yet fredome, and when they had yet open leysure of amendemente and conuersion, and vnderstode not, but despysed it: the same muste knowe it after deathe in payne. And therefore be thou nomore carefull, how the vngodly shalbe punyshed, and howe the ryghteous shall be saued, and whose the worlde is, and for whom the worlde, and when it is.
Then answered I and sayde: I haue B talked before, and now I speake, and 4 Esd. will speake also hereafter, that there be many mo of them whiche peryshe, then shalbe saued; lyke as the floude is greater then the droppes. And he answered me, saying: lyke as the fruit is, so is also the sede: as the floures be, so are the coulours also: suche as the workeman is, such is also the worke: and as the husband man is hym selfe, so is hys husbandrye also, for it was the tyme of the worlde. And when I prepared for theym that are nowe, or euer the worlde was made, where in they should dwell, then was there no man that withstode me. Nowe when euery one was, and the maker also in the world, whiche is nowe prepared, and the moneth that ceaseth not, and the lawe, whyche is vnsearcheable, their maners were corrupte. Soo I considred the world, and beholde, ther was peryll, because of thoughtes that were come into it. And I sawe, and spared theim greately, and haue kepte me a wynebery of the grapes, and a plante frome amonge manye generacions. Let the multitude peryshe then, whiche are growen vp in vayne, and let my grape and wynebery be kepte: euen my plante, for with greatte laboure haue I made it vp. Neuertheles, yf thou wylte take vpon thee yet seuen dayes moo (but thou shalte not taste in them) goo thy waye then into the fielde of floures, where no house is buylded, and eate onely of the floures of the field, taste not flesshe, drinke no wyne, but eate floures onelye. Praye vnto the Hyest continually, so wyll I come, and talke with the. So I wente my waye and came into the fielde whiche is called Ardath (lyke as he commaunded me) and there I sat amonge the floures, and dyd eate of the hearbes of the fielde, and the meate of the same satisfyed me. After seuen dayes I sat vppon the grasse, and my herte was vexed within me lyke as afore: and I opened my mouth and beganne to talke before the Hyest, and sayde: O LORDE, thou that shewest thy selfe vnto vs, thou haste declared and opened thy selfe vnto oure fathers in the wylderneſſe, in a place, where no man dwelleth, in a baren place, when they came oute of Egypte, and thou spakest, sayinge: Heare me, O Israell, and marke my wordes, thou sede of Iacob: Behold, I sowe my lawe in you, and it shall bringe fruite in you, and ye shall bee honored in it for euer. For our fathers which receiued the lawe, kept it not, nor obserued not thyn ordinances and statutes, and the fruit of thy lawe was not declared, for it might not. for why it was not thyne. ✠ For they that re- den. 3 ceiued it, peryshed because they kepte not the thyng that was sowen in the. It is a custome when the ground receaueth sede, or the sea a ship, or a vessell meate and drynke, that when it perisheth, or is broke, wherin a thyng is sowen, or wherin any thing is put: the thynges also peryshe, and are broken, whiche are sowen or put therin. But vnto vs it hath not happened so: D for wee that haue receyued the lawe, peryshe in synne, and our heart whyche also receaued the lawe: Not withstandynge, ✠ the Lawe perisheth not, Esa 40 but remaynethe in hys laboure. And 2.tim.2 when I consydered these thynges in my hearte after thys manner, I looked aboute me wyth myne eyes, and vppon the ryght syde. ✠ I sawe a wo- 4.Es. 10 man, which mourned sore, made great lamentation, and wept with a lowde voyce: her cloathes were rent in pieces, and shee hadde ashes vppon her heade. Then let I my thoughtes go, that I was in, and tourned me vnto her, and sayd: wherfore wepest thou? why arte thou so sory, and discomforted? And she sayd vnto me: Syr, let me bewayle my selfe, and take yet more sorowe: for I am sore vexed in my mynde, and brought very lowe. And I sayde vnto her: what ayleth thee? Or who hath done any thyng to thee? Tell me. She sayde: I haue bene vnfruitfull and bareyn, and haue hadde an husbande thyrtye yeares. And these thyrtye yeares I doo nothynge elles daye and nyghte, and all howers, but make my prayer to the Hyest. After thyrtye yeares GOD heard me thy handmayden, & loked vpon my miserie, consydred my trouble and gaue me a sonne, and I was glad of hym, so was my husbande also, and all my neyghbours, & we gaue greate honoure vnto the Myghtie. And I nourysshed hym wyth great trauayle. So when he grewe vp, and came to the tyme, that he should haue a wyfe, I made a feaſt.

a AND it happened that whē my ſonne went into hys chamber he fel dowꝛne, and dyed: then ouerthꝛewe we al the lyghtes, and all my neighbours roſe vp to conforte me. Then toke I my reſt vnto the ſecond day at nyght: and when they hadde al reſted, that they myghte comforte me, I reſted and alſo roſe vppe by nighte, and fledde, and am comme hither into thys fyelde as thou ſeeſt: and am purpoſed not to come in the citye, but to remayne here, and neyther to eate noꝛ dꝛynke, but continually to mourn and to faſte, vntyl I dye. Then let I my meditations and thoughtes fall, that I was in, and ſpake to her in diſ pleaſure: Thou fooliſh woman, ſeeſt thou our heuines and mourninge, and what happeneth vnto vs? how Sion our mother is all woful, and ſoꝛy, and howe ſhee is clcane bꝛoughte dowꝛne and in myſerye? ſeing we be all nowe in heauines, and make oure mone (foꝛ we be all ſoꝛowful.) As foꝛ the heuynes that thou takeſt, it is but foꝛ one ſonne. Demaunde the earth, and ſhee ſhal tel the, that it is ſhe which ought (by reaſon) to mourne, foꝛ the fall of ſo manye that growe vppon her. Foꝛ from the begynnyng al men are bozne of her, and other ſhal come: and behold they walke almoſte al into deſtruction, and manye of theym ſhalbe rooted oute. Whoe ſhoulde then (by reaſon) make moꝛe mourninge then ſhe, that hath loſte ſo greate a multitude? and not thou which art ſoꝛye, but foꝛ one. But yf thou wouldeſt ſaye vnto me: My mourning is not lyke the mournyng of the earth, foꝛ I haue loſte the fruite of my body, which I bare with heauynes: but the earth is accoꝛdyng to the maner of the earth, and the pꝛeſent multitude goeth agayne into her as it is come to paſſe. Then ſay I vnto thee: lyke as thou haſt bozne wyth trauayle and ſoꝛowe, euen ſo the earth alſo from the begynninge geueth her fruite vnto manne, of hym that made her. And therefoꝛe wyrdholde thy ſoꝛowe and heauines by thy ſelfe, and looke what happeneth vnto the, beare it ſtronglye. Foꝛ yf thou iudgeſt the marcke and ende of God to be righteous and good, and receaueſt hys counſel in tyme, thou ſhalt be commended therein. Go thy way then into the citye to thy huſband. And ſhe ſayd vnto me: that wyll I not do, I wyl not go into the citye, but here wil I dye. So I commened moꝛe with her and ſaid: Doe not ſo, but be counſelled, and folowe me: foꝛ howe manye falles hath Sion? Be of good comfoꝛt becauſe of the ſoꝛowe of Jeruſalem. Foꝛ thou ſeeſt that our ſanctuary is laid waſte, & our aulter bꝛoken, our tẽple deſtroyed, our playinge of inſtrumentes and ſyngynge layed dowꝛne, the thankes geuing put to ſilence, our mirth is banyſhed awaye, the lyghte of oure candleſtycke is quenched, the arcke of the couenaunte is taken from vs, all our holy thyngs are defiled, and the name that is called vpon ouer vs, is dyſhonoured: our childꝛen are put to ſhame, our pꝛyeſtes are bꝛente, oure Leuytes are caried awaye into captiuitye, oure byrgyns are defyled, and oure wyues rauiſhed, our ryghteous men ſpoyled, and our chyldꝛen deſtroyed, our yong men are bꝛought in bondage, and our ſtronge woꝛthyes are become weake: and Sion (whyche ſeale is the greateſt of al) is louſed vp from her woꝛſhip: foꝛ ſhe is deliuered into the handes of theym that hate vs. And therefoꝛe ſhake of thy great heauynes, and put awaye the multitude of ſoꝛowes: that the myghty may be merciful vnto thee, and that the hyeſt maye geue the reſt from thy labour and trauaile. And it happened, that when I was talkyng wyth her, her face dyd ſhyne, and glyſter, ſo that I was afrayde of her, and muſed what it myght be. And immediatly ſhe caſt out a great voice, verye feareful, ſo that the earth ſhoke at the noyſe of the woman: and I loꝛked, and beholde, the woman, appeared vnto mee nomoꝛe: but there was a Cytye buylded, and a place was ſhewed wed frome the grounde and foundation. C Thenne was I afrayde, and cryed wyth a lowde voyce, and sayde: where is Uriell the angell, which came to me at the fyrst? For he hathe cauled me to comme in many consyderations and hye thoughtes, and myne ende is turned into corruption, & my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speakyng these wordes, he came vnto me, and loked vpon me, and I laye as one that had bene dead, and myne vnderstandyng was altered, and he toke me by the ryght hande, and comforted me, and sette me vpon my fete, and sayde vnto me: What ayleth thee? and why is thyne vnderstandynge vexed? and the vnderstandyng of thy hearte, and wherfore arte thou sory? And I said: Because thou haste forsaken me: and I haue done accordyng vnto thy wordes: I went into the fielde, and there haue I seene thynges, that I am not able to expresse. He sayde vnto mee: Stand vp, and be manly, and I shall geue thee exhortation. Then sayd I: Speake vnto me my Lord, forsake me not, least I dye in vayne: for I haue sene that I knew not, and heard that I doo not know. Or shall my vnderstandyng bee disceaued, & my mynde? But nowe I beseche thee, that thou wilt shew thy seruaunt of this wonder. He answered me then and sayd: Heare me, and I shall enfourme thee, and tell thee wherfore thou art afraid, for the hyest hath opened many secrete thynges vnto thee. He hath sene that thy way is right, and that thou takest sorowe contynually for thy people, and makest great lamētation for Sion: and therfore vnderstande the vision, whiche thou sawest a little while agoe after this maner: Thou sawest a woman mournynge, and thou haste comforted her: Neuertheless, nowe seest thou the lykenes of that woman noo more, but thou thoughtest there was a Citie builded: and lyke as shee tolde thee of the fall of her sonne, so is thys the answere: The woman whō thou sawest, is Syon, and where as she tolde thee, that she hath ben thyrtye yeres vnfruitfull and barein, those are the .xxx. yeres, wherin there was no offerynge made in her. But after D xxx. yeres Salomon buylded her, and offred, and then bare the bareyn a son. And where as she tolde thee: that shee nourysshed hym with labor, that was the dwellynge of Jerusalem. But where as she told thee that her sonne dyed, when she came into her chaumber, that is the fal of Jerusalem. And thou sawest her lykenesse, howe shee mourned for her sonne: and what els hapned vnto her, I haue shewed the. And nowe God seeth, that thou arte sorye in thy mynde, and suffrest frome thy hert for her, and so hath he shewed thee her clerenesse, and the fayrenesse of her beautie. And therfore I badde thee remayne in the fielde where noo house is buylded. For I knewe that the Hyest wold shew this vnto thee, therfore I cōmanded thee to go into the field, where no foūdation nor buildynge is. For in the place where the Hyest wyll shew his cittie, there shall be no mās building. And therfore feare not, and let not thyne heart be afrayd, but goe thy way in, and see the glorious and fayre buyldynge, and howe great it is, & how great thou thinkest it after the measure of thyne eies, and then shalt thou heare as much as thyn eares may comprehend. For thou art blessed aboue many other, and art called with the Hyest, as the fewe. But to morowe at nyght thou shalt remain here, and so shall the Hyest shew thee visions of hye thynges, which he will doo vnto them, that dwell vpon earth in the last dayes. So I slept the same nyght, lyke as he commaunded me.

THen sawe I a dreame, and behold, there came vppe from the sea an Egle, whiche hadde .xii. wynges, and thre heades. And I sawe and beholde, he spredde hys wynges ouer all the earth, and all the wynds of the ayre blewe in them, and so they were put together agayn. And I beheelde, and oute of his fethers there grewe other lyttle contrarye fethers: the heades rested, the head in the middest was greater then the other, yet rested it wyth the residue. Moreouer I sawe, that the Egle flewe wyth hys wynges, and reygned vpon earth, and ouer all theym that dwell vppon the earth: and I sawe that al thinges vnder heauen, were subiecte vnto him, and no man spake agaynst him, no not one creature vpon earth. I sawe also, that the Egle stode vp vpon hys clawes, and gaue a sounde with his fethers, and a voyce, sayinge after thys maner: watch not altogether, slepe euery man in his owne place, & watch for a tyme, but let the heades be preserued at the last. Neuertheles I sawe that the voyce wente not oute of hys heades, but from the middest of his body. And I numbred hys contrarye fethers, and beholde, there were eyghte of them. And I loked, and beholde vpon the ryght syde there arose one fether, and reygned ouer al the earthe.

B And it happened, that when it reigned, the ende of it came, and the place therof appeared no more. So the next folowing stoode vp, and reygned, and had a greate tyme, and it hapened that when it reigned, the end of it came also lyke as the first, so that it appeared nomore. Then came there a voice vnto it, and sayde: Heare thou that haste kept in the earth so longe, this I saye vnto thee, before thou beginnest to appeare nomore: There shal none after thee atteyne vnto thy tyme. Then arose the thyrde: and reygned as the other afore, and appeared nomore also. So wente it with all the residue one after another, so that euerye one reygned, and then appeared nomore. Then I looked, and beholde, in processe of tyme the fethers that folowed were set vp vpon the ryghte syde, that they myght rule also: and some of them ruled, but within a whyle they appeared nomore: for some of them were set vp, but ruled not. After thys I loked, and behold the twelue fethers appeared no more, nor the twoo wynges: and there was nomore vpon the Egles body, but twoo heades that rested and syxe fethers. Then sawe I also that the syxe fethers were parted in twoe, and remained vnder the heade, that was vpon the ryghte side, for the C foure continued in their place. So I loked, and behold, they that were vnder the wynges, thoughte to sette vp theym selues, and to haue the rule. Then was ther one set vp, but shortly it appeared nomore, and the second was sooner away then the first. And I beheilde and lo, the twoo thought also by themselues to reigne, and when they so thought, behold, there waked one of the heades that were at reste, namelye, it that was in the myddest, for that was the greater of the twoe heades. And thenne I sawe, that the twoe heades were ioyned wyth hym, and the heade was turned wyth them that were by hym, and dydde eate vp the two vnder wynges, that woulde haue reygned. But thys head put the whole earth in feare, and bare rule in it ouer al those that dwelt vpon erth, with muche laboure, and he hadde the gouernaunce of the world, ouer al the foules that haue bene. After thys, I looked, and beholde, the heade that was in the middest sodeinly appered nomore, lyke as the wynges: then came the twoo heades, which ruled vpon earth, and ouer those that dwelte therin. And I beheld, and lo, the head vppon the ryghte syde, deuoured it that was vppon the lefte syde. And I heard a voyce, whyche saide vnto me: looke before thee, and consider the thinge that thou seest. Then I sawe, and beholde, as it were a lion that roreth, renning hastely out of the wood and he sent out a mannes voyce vnto the Egle, and sayde: Heare thou, I wyl talke wyth thee, and the hiest shal saye vnto thee: Is it not thou that hast the victory of the foure beastes, whom I made to reygne vppon earth and in my worlde, and that the D ende of theyr tymes might come thorough them? And the fourth cam, and ouerranne all the beastes that were past, and had power ouer the worlde

wyth great fearefulnes, and ouer the whole compasse of the earth, with the moste wycked labour, and so longe time dweite he vppon the earth with dysceate, and the earth haste thou iudged not wyth trueth. For thou haste troubled the meke, thou hast hurt the peaceable and quiet, thou haste loued lyers, and destroied the dwellinges of them that brought forth fruit, and hast cast downe the walles of such as dyd thee no harme. Therfore is thy wrõgeous dealinge and blasphemye come vp vnto the hyest, and thy pryde vnto the myghtye. The hiest also hath looked vppon the proude tymes, and beholde, they are ended, and their abhominations are fulfylled. And therfore appeare nomore thou Iegle, and thy horrible wynges, and thy wycked fethers, and thy vngracious heades and thy synful clawes, and al thy vain body: that the earth maye bee refreshed, and come agayne to her self, whan she is deliuered from thy violence, and that she may hope for the iudgemente and mercy of him that made her.

The.xii. Chapter.

AND it happened when the Lyon spake these wordes vnto the Egle, I sawe and beholde, the head that afore had the vpper hande, appered no more: neither dyd the four winges, appere any more that came to him, and were sette vp to raygne, and their kingdom was smal and ful of vproure. And I sawe, and beholde, they appeared nomore, and the whole body of the Egle was brent, and the earth was in great fear Then awaked I out of the traunce of my mynde, and from greate feare, and sayde vnto my spyrite. Lo, thys haste thou geuen me in that thou searchest out the wayes of the hyest: lo, yet am I wery in my mind, and very weake in my spirite, and lyttle strength is there in me, for the great feare that I receaued thys nyght. Therfore wil I nowe beseche the hiest, that hee wyll comfort me vnto the end: and I sayde, Lorde Lord, yf I haue found grace be fore thy syghte, and yf I am iustifyed with the before many other, and if my prayer be come vp before thy face, confort me then, and shewe mee thy seruaunte the interpretation and plaine difference of thys horrible sight, that thou mayest perfectlye comforte my soule: for thou haste iudged me worthye, to shewe me the laste of tymes. And he sayde vnto me: thys is the interpretation of thys syght. The Eagle whom thou sawest come vp from the sea, is the kingdome which was Dan.7.c
sene in the vision of thy brother Daniel, but it was not expounded vnto hym, for nowe I declare it vnto thee. B Beholde, the dayes comme, that there shal rysе vp a kingdome vppon earth, and it shalbe feared aboue al the kingdomes that wer before it. In the same kingdome shal.xii. kinges reigne, one after another. For the seconde shall begyn to reygne, and shall haue more time then the other twelue: and this do the twelue winges signify, which thou sawest. As for the voyce that spake, and that thou sawest goe oute from the heades, but not from the body, it betokeneth, that after the tyme of the Kyngedome, there shal arise greate stryuynges, and it shal stande in peryll of fallynge: neuertheless it shall not yet fall, but shalbe sette into hys beginning. And the eyght vnderwinges which thou sawest hãg vnto the winges of him betokẽ, that in him ther shal arise. viii. kings, whose time shalbe but smal, and their yeres swift, and two of them shal beare. But whẽ the middest tyme commeth, there shal be foure kepte in the tyme, when hys time beginneth to come that it may be ended, but two shall be kept vnto the end. And where as thou sawest three heades resting, this is the interpretation: In his last shall the Hyest rayse vp thre kyngdomes, and call many agayne into them, and they shall haue C the dominion of the earth, and of those that dwelle therein, wyth muche labour aboue all those that were before them. Therefore are they called the heades of the Egle: for it is they that shall bryngе for the his wickednes a-gayne, and that shall performe and finyshe his laste. And where as thou sawest, that the greate head appeareth nomore, it signifieth, that one of them shall dye vppon his bed, and yet with payne, for the two that remayne, shall be slayn with ỹ swerd. For the swerd of the one shall devoure the other, but at the laste shall he fall thorowe the swerd him selfe. And wheras thou sa-west two vnderwings vpon the head that is on the ryght syde, it signifyeth that it is they, whom the Hyest hath kepte vnto their ende: thys is a small kingdome, & full of trouble. The Lion whom thou sawest rysyng out of the wood, and roaring, and speaking vnto the Egle, and rebukynge him for hys vnrighteousnesse, is the wind, which the Hyest hath kept for them, and for their wickednes vnto the end: he shal reprove them, and rent them a sunder D before them. For he shall set them lyvyng before the iudgement, and shall rebuke them: for the residue of my peo ple shall he deliuer with trouble, these that be preserued ouer myne endes: and he shall make them ioyfull vntill the comming of the day of iudgement, wherof I haue spoken vnto the from the begynnynge. Thys is the dreame that thou sawest, and this is the inter pretacion. Thou onely hast bene mete to knowe the secret of the hyest. Ther fore wrpte all these thinges that thou haste sene in a booke, and hyde them, and teache them the wyse in the people, whose hertes thou knowest may comprehende and kepe these secretes.

But wayte thou here thy selfe yet seuen daies moo, that it may be shewed thee, whatsoeuer it pleaseth the Hyest to declare vnto thee, and with that he went his way. And when al the people perceaued, that the seuen dayes were past, and I not come agayne into the citie, they gathered them all together from the leaste vnto the moste, and cam vnto me, and sayd: what haue we offended the: and what euyll haue we done against thee, that thou forsa-dest vs, and sittest here in this place: For of all people thou onely arte lefte vs, as a grape of the vyne, and as a can dell in a darke place, and as an heuen and hyp preserued from the tempest.
Haue we not els aduersitye ynough, but thou must forsake vs: Were it not better for vs, that we had bene vrente with Sion: For we are not better, then they that dyed there: and they wept with a loude voyce. Then ans-swered I them and sayd: Be of good comforte O Israell, and be not heauy thou house of Jacob: for the Hyest hath you in remembraunce, and the mighty hath not forgotte you in ỹ tẽp tation. As for me, I haue not forsaken you, neither am I departed from you: but am come into this place to praye, because of the misery of Israell, that I might seke mercy for the low estate of youre Sanctuarye. And nowe go your waye home euery man, and after these dayes wyll I come vnto you.
So the people went their waye into the city, like as I commaunded them: but I remayned styl in the field seuen dayes, as the Angell bad me, and dyd eate onely of the flowres of the fielde, and hadde my meate of the herbes in those dayes.

¶ The .xiii. Chapter.

AND it happened after the se- I uen dayes, that I dreamed a dreame by nyght. And behold there arose a wynde from the sea, that it moued all the floudes thereof. And I loked, and beholde: the man was stronge and increased with the cloudes of heuen: and when he turned his countenance to consider, all the thin-ges trembled that were seene vnder him: and when the voyce went out of his mouthe, all they vrente that herde him, lyke as the earth when it feleth the fire. After those I sawe, and be-holde, there was gathered together a multitude of men out of number from the foure windes of the heauen, to fighte agaynst the man, that came out from the sea. And I loked, and behold he graued hym selfe a greate moutayne, and sitte we vp vpon it. But I wolde haue sene the border or place, wherout the hill was grauen, and I could not. I sawe after these, that all they which cam to fight against him, were sore afrayed, and yet durste they fighte. Neuertheiesse, when he sawe the fearsenes and violence of the people, he nether lyfte vp hys hande nor helde swearde, nor anye weapon: but onely (As I sawe) he sent out of hys mouthe, as it had bene a blaste of fyre, and oute of hys lyppes the wynde of the flame: and out of his tonge he cast oute sparkes and stormes, and they were all myxte together: the blaste of fire, the wynde of the flames, and the great storme, and fel with a rushe vppon the people, whiche was prepared to fyghte, and brente them vp every-chone: so that of the innumerable mul titude there was nothynge seene, but onely duste and smoke. When I sawe hys, I was afrayde. Afterwarde sawe I the same man come downe from the mountayne, and callyng vnto hym another peaceable people: and there came muche people vnto hym: some were glad, some were sory, some of them were bound, so that they wer tarped and brought forth. Then was I sicke thorowe greate feare, and I awaked, and sayde: thou hast shewed thy seruant all thy wonders from the begynnynge, and haste counted me worthye, that thou myghtest receaue my prayer: shew me nowe yet the interpretation of this dreame. For thus I cõsider in my vnderstading: wo vn to them that shall be left in those days and much more wo vnto them that ar not lefte behynde: for they that were not left, were in heauines. Now vn-derstand I the thinges that are layed vp in the latter dayes which shal happen vnto theym, and to those that are not lefte behynde. Therfore are they come into great perels, and many necessities, like as these dreames declare.

Yet is it easier, that he which suffreth harte, come in these, then to passe away as a cloude out of the world, and not to se the thinges that shall happen in the last. Then answered he me, and sayde: The interpretation of the sight shall I shewe thee, and I wyll open vnto thee, the thing that thou hast required. For thou hast spoken of them that are lefte behynde, and thys is the interpretacion. He that taketh awaye the perill in that tyme, hath kept hym selfe. They that be fallen into harme, are suche as haue workes and fayth vnto the mosse mightye. Knowe this therfore, that they whiche be lefte behynde, are more blessed, then they that be deade. This is the meanyng of the vision. Where as thou sawest a man comynge vp from the depe of the sea, the same is he, whom God the Hyest hath kepte a greate season, whyche by hys owne selfe shall deliuer his creature, and he shall order them that are left behynde. And where as thou sa-west, that out of his mouth ther came a blaste of wynde, fire and storme, and howe that he lifte vp neyther sweard nor weapon, but that the rushynge in of him destroyed the whole multitude that came to fight agaynst him: it signifyeth, that the dayes come, when God will deliuer them that are vpon earth, and in a traunce of mynd shal he come vppon theym, that dwell in the earth. And one shal vndertake to fight agaynst another, one citye agaynst an other, one place agaynst another: one mat. 24. a people agaynst another, & one realme agaynst another. When this commeth to passe, then shall the tokens come, that I shewed thee before: and then shal my sonne be declared, whom thou sawest clyme vp as a man. And when all the people heare his voyce, euery man shal in their owne land leaue the battayle that they haue one agaynste another, and an innumerable multitude shalbe gathered to ether, as they that be wyllyng to come, and to ouer-come hym by fyghtyng. But he shall stande vpon the toppe of the mounte Sion. Neuertheles Sion shal come, and shall be shewed, beynge prepared and buylded for all men, lyke as thou sawest the hyll grauen forth without any handes. But my sonne shall rebuke the people that are com, for their wickednes, with the tempest, and for their euyll ymaginacions: and theyr paynes wherwith they shalbe punyshed, are likened vnto the flame: and without any labour, shall he destroy them, euen by the law, which is compared vnto the fire. And wheras thou sawest, that he gathered another peaceable people vnto hym: those are the ten trybes whiche were caryed away preioners oute of their owne lande,

Then dwelt they there vnto the latter tyme: and when they come forthe agayne, the Hyest shall holde styll the sprynges of the streame agayne, that they maye go thorow, therfore sawest thou the multitude with peace. And they that be lefte behynde of thy people, are those that be founde within my border.

Now when he destroyeth the multitude that is gathered together, he shal defende hys people that remayne, and then shall he shewe them great wonders. Then sayde I: O Lorde, Lord, shewe me this, wherfore haue I sene the man commyng vp from the deepe of the sea? And he sayd vnto me: Like as thou canneste neyther seke oute nor knowe these thynges that are in the deepe of the sea, euen so mayest thou not se my sonne, or those that be with hym, but in the tyme of the day. Thys is the interpretation of the dreame, which thou sawest, therfore thou only arte here lyghtened: for thou haste forsaken thyne owne lawe, and applyed thy dylygence vnto myne, and soughte it. • Thy lyfe haste thou ordred in wisdome, and • hast called vnderstandynge thy mother, and therfore haue I shewed thee, the treasure of the Hyest. After three dayes I will shewe thee more, and talke with thee more at large, yea heauy and wonderous thynges wyll I declare vnto thee. Then wente I forthe into the field, geuing praise and thanks greatlye vnto God, because of his wonders which he dyd in tyme, and because he gouerneth the same, and such as is in time, and there I sat three dayes.

VPon the thirde daye I satte vnder an oke tree, then came there a voyce vnto me oute of the bushe, and sayd: Esdras, Esdras? And I sayde: here am I Lorde, and stode vp vpon my fete. Then spake he vnto me: • in the bushe dyd I appeare vnto Moyses, and talked with hym, when my people serued in Egypte. And I sent him, and ledde my people out of Egypt, and brought him vpon the mount Sion, where I helde him by me a longe season, and told him my wonderous wordes, and shewed him the secretes of the times and the ende, and commaunded him, sayinge: These wordes shalt thou declare, and not hide them. And nowe I say vnto the, that thou lay vp in thyne hert the dreames that thou haste sene, and the interpretations whiche I haue shewed thee: for thou shalt be receaued of all, thou shalte bee turned and remayne with my councell, and with such as be lyke thee, vntyll the tymes be ended. For the worlde hath loste hys youthe, and the tymes beginne to waxe olde. For the time is deuided into twelue parts and ten partes of it are gone alreadye, and halfe of the tenth part: yet remayneth there that whyche is after the halfe of the tenthe parte. Therefore

For nowe hasteth the vision to come, that thou haste seene. Then answered I before thee, & said: Behold Lord, I wyl go as thou hast commanded me, and reforme the people whiche are present. But they that shalbe borne afterward, who will exhorte, or rebuke theym? Thus the worlde is set in darknes: and they that dwell therein, are without lyght: for thy lawe is kyndled, because no man knoweth the thynges that are done of thee, or that shall be done. If I haue founde grace before thee, send the holy ghost into me, and I shall wryte al that hath ben doone in the worlde sens the beginning, which was written in thy law, that men may fynd the path, and that they which liue in the latter days, may lyue. And he answered me saying: Go thy waye, gather the people together, and say vnto theym, that they seeke thee not for forty days, but loke thou gather thee many boxetrees and take wyth thee Sarea, Dabria, Selemia, Ecanus, and Asiell, these fyue, which are redy to wryte swiftly and come hyther, and I shall lyght a candell of vnderstandynge in thyne hearte, which shall not be put out, tyll the thynges be performed which thou shalt begyn to wryte. And then shalte thou declare some thyngs openly vnto the perfect, and some thinges shalt thou shew secretly vnto the wise. To morow thys houre shalt thou begynn to wryte. Then went I foorthe (as he commaunded me) and gathered all C the people together, and sayde: Heare these wordes, O Israel: Our fathers at the begynnyng, were strangers in Egypt, from whens they were deliuered, and receyued the lawe of lyfe, • whyche they kept not, which ye also haue transgressed after them. Then was this lande and the land of Sion parted among you by lotte to possesse. But your fathers, and ye your selues also haue doon vnrighteousnesse, and haue not kepte the ways, whyche the Hyest commaunded you. And for soo muche as he is a righteous iudge, he toke from you in tyme the thyng that he hadde geuen you. And nowe are ye here, and your brethren amonge you. Therfore yf so bee, that ye wyll subdue your owne vnderstandynge, and reforme your heart, ye shalbe kepte alyue, and after deathe shall ye obteyne mercy. For after death shal the iudgement come, when we shal liue again: and then shall the names of the righteous, bee manyfeste, and the woorkes of the vngodly shall bee declared. Lette no man therefore comme nowe D

Then opened I my mouth, and beholde, hee reached me a full cuppe, whyche was fulle, as it were wyth water, but the coloure of it was lyke fyre. And I toke it, and dranke. And when I had dronken it, my heart had vnderstandyng, and wysedom grewe in my breste: for my spirite was kept in remembraunce, and my mouthe was opened, and shutte no more. The Hyest gaue vnderstandyng vnto the fyue menne, that they wrote the hye thynges of the nyghte, whyche they vnderstode not. But in the night they dyd eate bread: As for me, I spake in the day, and held not my tongue by nyghte. In forty dayes, they wrote twoo hundrede and fower Bookes,

Woo woꝛth the woꝛlde and theym that dwel therein, foꝛ the swearde and their destruction dꝛaweth ny, and one people shal stand vp to fyght against another, and swordes in their handes. Foꝛ men shalbe vnstedfaste, and some shal do violence vnto other: they shal not regard their king and pꝛynces, the wayes of theyꝛ doings and handlings shalbe in their powꝛer. A man shal haue no pitye vpon hys neyghbour, but one shal pꝛouoke another vnto battel, to spoile their goodes because of the hunger of bꝛead, and because of the gret trouble. Go your way ye chyldꝛen from vyolence, defyle not my Sanctuarye: foꝛ the Lozde knoweth all theim that syn agaynst hym, and therfoꝛe delyuereth he theim vnto death and destructyon: Foꝛ nowe are the plages come vpon the wozld, and ye shal remaine in thē. Foꝛ god shal not delyuer you, because ye haue synned agaynste him. Behold an hoꝛrible vision commeth from the shalbe as the wynde vpon earth, that all they which heare them ragynge in theyr wrath, may feare, and be afraid, and as the wild boores out of the wod, so shall they go oute, and with greate power shall they come, and stand fighting with theym, and shall waste the portion of the lande of the Assyrians. And then shall the Dragons haue the vpper hande, not remembrynge theyr byrthe, and shall turne aboute, swearyng together in great power, to persecute theym. But these shalbe afraid kepe silence at their power, and shall flee, and one out of the land of the Assirians shall besiege them, & consume one of them, and in theyr host shall be feare and drede, and strife among their kynges. Beholde, clowdes frome the Easte, and frome the Northe vnto the South, and they are very horrible to loke vpon, full of wrath and stormie. They shall smyte one vpon an other, and they shal smite at the great starre vppon earth, and theyr starre, and the blood shalbe from the sweard vntothe bealy, and the smoke of man vnto the Camelles lytter: And there shall be great fearefulnes and trembleyng vpon earth: and they that see the wrath shall be afrayde, and a trembling shall come vpon them. And then shal there come great raynes from the Southe, and from the Northe, and parte from the Weste, and from the stormy wynd from the East, and shall shutte theym vp agayne, and the cloude whyche he raised vp in wrathe, and the starre to cause feare toward the East and west wynde, shalbe destroyed: & the greate cloudes shalbe lyfte vp, and the mightie cloudes fulle of wrathe, and the starre: that they maye make all the earth afrayde, and theym that dwelle therein, and that they may poure out ouer all places an horrible starre, fire and hayle, flying swearde, and manye waters: that all fieldes maye bee ful, and all riuers, and they shal breke downe the cities and walles, mountaynes and hylles, all trees, woodde, and the grasse of the medowes, and all their frute. And they shall go stedfast vnto Babylon, and make her afrayde: they shall come to her, and besiege her, the starre and all wrath shal they poure out vppon her. Then shal the dust and smoke go vp vnto the heauen, and all they that bee aboute her, shall bee waple her: and they that remayne vnder her, shall doo scruice vnto theym that haue put her in feare. And thou Asia, that comfortest thy selfe also vpon the hope of Babylon, and arte a worshyp of her person: woo bee vnto thee thou wretche, because thou haste made thy self lyke vnto her and haste decked thye daughters in whoredome, that they myghte tryumphe and please thy louers, whiche haue alway desyred to commyt whoredome wyth thee, thou haste folowed the abhominable citie in all her workes and inuentions. Therfore sayethe God: I wyl send plagues vpon thee, wydowhead, pouertie, hunger, warres, and pestilence, to waste thy houses wyth destruction and deathe: and the glorye of thy power shalbe dried vp as a flower, when the heate riseth that is sent ouer thee. Thou shalt be sycke as a poore wyfe, that is plagued and beaten of wome: so that the mightie and louer shal not be able to receue thee. Woulde I soo hate thee, sayethe the Lorde: If thou haddest not alwaye slayne my chosen, exaltyng the stroke of thy hands, & sayd ouer their deathe, when thou wast dronken, set foorth the beautie of thy countenance The reward of thy whoredome shall bee recompenced thee in thy bosome, therefore shalte thou receiue reward. Lyke as thou hast done vnto my chosen (sayeth the Lorde) euen so shall God doo vnto thee, and shall deliuer thee into the plague. Thy childerne shal dye of hunger, and thou shalt fall thorow the sweard. Thy cities shall be broken downe, and all thyne shall perishe with the swerde in the fielde. They that be in the mountaynes shal dye of hunger, and eate theyr owne flesshe, and drynke theyr owne blood, for very hunger of breade, and thyrst of water. Thou vnhappye shalt come through the sea, and receaue plagues agayne. In the passage they shal caste downe the stayne citye, and shal roote out one part of thy land, and consume ꝑ portiõ of thy glory. They shal tread the downe lyke stubble, and they shal be thy fyre, and shal consume thee, thy cytyes and thy land, thy wood and thy fruitful trees shal thei burne vp with the fyre. Thy cytizen shal they carye awaye captyue, and looke what thou hast, they shal spoile it, and marre the bewtye of thy face.

A WO be vnto the Babilon and Asia, wo be vnto Egipt and Syria: gyrde youre selues with clothes of sacke, and heare, & mourn for your chyldren: bee sory, for your destruction is at hande. A sweard is sent vpon you, and who wyl turne it backe? A fyre is kyndled amonge you, and who wil quench it? Plages are sent vnto you, and what is he that wyll dryue theym awaye? May any man dryue awaye an hungrye lyon in the wood? Or may anye man quench the fyre in stubble, when it hath begonne to burne? May one turne agayne the arowe, that is shot of a strong archer. The myghty Lord sendeth the plages, and what is hee that wyll dryue theym awaye? The fyre is kindled and gone forth in his wrath, and what is he that wil quẽch it? He shal cast lyghtninges, and who shall not feare? Hee shall thonder, and who shal not be afrayde? The Lorde shal threaten, and who shal not vtterly be beaten to pouder at his presẽce? The earth quaketh, and the foundations thereof: the sea aryseth vp wyth waues from the depe, and the fluddes of it are vnquiet, and the fishes therof also before the Lord, and before the glorye of hys power. For stronge is hys ryght hand that holdeth the bow, hys B arowes that hee shooteth are sharpe, and shal not misse when they beginne to be shot into the endes of the world. Beholde, the plages are sent, and shal not turne againe, til they come vppon earth. The fyre is kyndled and shall not be put out til it consume the foundations of the earth. Lyke as an arow which is shot of a myghtye archer, retourneth not backeward: euen so the plagues that shall bee sente vppon Earthe, shall not tourne agayne. Wo is me, wo is me, who shal delyuer me in those dayes? The beginning of sorowes and great mourning: the beginninge of dearth and greate death, the begynnyng of warres, and the powers shal stande in feare: the beginning of euils and they shal tremble euerye one. What shal I do in these thynges, when the plages come? Behold, hunger and plague, trouble and anguyshe are sent, as scourges for amendmente. But for all these things, they shal not tourne from their wyckednes, nor bee alwaye myndful of the scourges. Be- C holde, bytayles shalbe so good cheape vpon earth that they shal thinke them selues to be in good case: and euẽ then shal mischefe grow vpon earth, warres, derth, and great dysquietnes. For many of them that dwel vppon earth, shal perysshe for hunger, and the other that escape the hunger, shal the sword destroye: and the dead shalbe caste out as doung, and there shalbe no man to conforte theym. For the earth shalbe wasted, and the Cytyes shalbe caste D downe: there shalbe no man left to tyl the earth and to sowe it. The trees shal geue fruite, and who shall plucke them of, and gather theym? The grapes shalbe rype, and who shall treade them? For al places shalbe desolate of men, so that one man shal desyre to see another, or to heare hys voyce. For of one whole citye there shalbe ten lefte, and two in the felde, which shal hyde them selues in the thycke bushes, and in the clyffes of stones, like as when there remain three or foure oliues vpon the olyue tree, or as when a vyneyard is gathered: there are left some grapes E of them that diligently sought throgh the vyneyard. Euen so in those dayes there shalbe thre or four left, for theym that searche their houses wyth the sword. And the earth shalbe left waste, and the feldes throf shall ware alder-

and

and her wayes and al her pathes shall growe ful of thornes, because no man shall trauayle there thrroughe. The daughters shal mourne, hauynge no bridegromes: the wemen shal make la mētation, hauing no husbandes, they daughters shal wepe hauing no helpe of their brydegrome. In the warres shal they be destroyed, and their husbandes shal perysshe of hunger. O yee seruauntes of the Lorde, heare these thynges, and marke theym. Beholde, the woorde of the Lord, O receaue it: beholde, the plagues drawe nye, and are not slacke in taryinge. Lyke as a trauaylinge woman, whiche after the ninth month bryngeth forth a soonne when the houre of the birth is come, an houre, twoe or three afore that the paynes come vpon her body, and whē the childe commeth to the byrth, they tarie not the twinckling of an eie. E= uen so shal not the plages be slacke to come vpon earth, and the worlde shal mourne, and sorowes shal come vpon it on euerye syde. O my people, heare my word, make you redy to the battel: & in al euyl be euen as pylgrims vpō earth. He that selleth, let hym be as he that fleeth his way, & he that byeth, as one that wil lese. Whoso occu-pyeth marchaundyse, as he that winneth not, & he that buildeth, as he that shal not dwel therein: he that soweth, as one that shal not reape: he that trimmeth the vyneyarde, as hee that shall not gather the grapes, they that marye, as they that shal get no childrē: and they that marye not, as the wyd-dowes: and therfore they that labor, labour in vayne. For straungers shal reape their fruites, and spoile theyr goodes, ouerthrowe their houses, and take their childrē captiue, for in cap-tiuitye and hunger, shall they gette childrē. And they that occupie theyr marchaundyse wyth robberye, howe longe decke they their Cityes, their houses, their possessions, and persons, the more will I punyshe theym for their synnes, sayeth the LORDE.
Like as an whoore enuyeth an honest woman, so shall ryghteousnesse hate inyquitye, when she decketh her self, and shall accuse her to her face, when he cometh that defendeth, whych shal make inquisition for all synne vppon earthe. And therefore bee not ye lyke therunto, nor to the woorkes therof: for or euer it bee longe, iniquitie shall be taken awaye out of the earthe, and F ryghtousnes shall reigne among you.
Let not the synner saye, that he hathe not sinned: for coles of fyre shall burn vpon his head, whiche saythe before the Lorde God and his glory: I haue not synned. Behold, the LORDE knoweth all the woorkes of menne, Gen. 1.3 their imaginations, their thoughtes, and theyr heartes. For he spake but the worde: let the earth be made, and it was made: Let the heauen be made and it was made. In hys word were the starres made, and he knoweth the numbre of theym. Hee searcheth the grounde of the deepe, and the treasures therof: he hathe measured the sea, and what it conteyneth. He hath shut the sea in the myddeste of the waters, and wyth hys worde hathe he hanged the Earth vpon the waters. He spre-deth out the Heauen like a bawt, vp-on the waters hathe he founded it.
In the deserte and drye wyldernesse, hathe he made springes of water, and pooles vppon the toppe of the moun-taynes, that the floudes myght poure downe frome the stony rockes to water the earthe. He made manne, and putte hys heart in the myddest of the body, and gaue hym breathe, lyfe, and vnderstandynge: yea, and the spyryte of the Almyghtye GOD, whyche made all thynges, and hathe searched the grounde of all the secretes of the earthe. He knoweth all your ymaginations and inuentions, and what ye thynk when ye syn, and woulde hyde youre synnes. Therfore hath the lord G serched and sought out al your woorks and he shall bewray you al. And whē youre synnes are brought foorthe, yee shall be ashamed before men, and your owne synnes shall bee youre accusers in that daye. What wyll yee do? Or how wyll ye lyde your synnes before

Esa.

God and his angels: Beholde, God himself is the Iudge, feare him, leane of from your synnes, and forget youre vnrighteousnesses, and medle nomore with theym: so shall God leade you forth, and deliuer you from all trouble. For beholde, the heate of a greate multitude is kyndled ouer you, & they shall take awaye certayne of you, and fede the ydle with Idols: & they that consent vnto them, shalbe had in derision, laughed to scorne, and troden vnder foote. For vnto the places, there shalbe a place, and in the next cities a greate insurrection vppon those that feare the Lorde. They shalbe like mad men, they shall spare no manne: they shall spoyle and waste suche as feare the Lorde, theyr goodes shall they take from them, and shut them out of theyr houses. Then shall it be knowē who are my chosen, and they shall bee tried as the gold in the fyre. Heare Ye my beloued, sayth the Lord: behold the days of trouble are at hand: but I will deliuer you from the same. Be not ye afrayde, despaire not, for God is your captayne. Who so kepeth my commandementes and preceptes (sayeth the Lord God) let not youre synnes wey you downe, and let not your vnrighteousnesse be lyfte vp. wo bee vnto them that ar subdued vnto their synnes, and tangled in theyr wickednesse: lyke as a fielde is hedged in with bushes, and the pathe thereof couered with thornes, that noo man may trauayle thorowe: and so is hee taken, and caste in the fyre, and brent.

The ende of the fourth Boke of Esdras.

The Boke of Tobias.

The fyrst Chapter.

TObias was of the tribe and Citie of Nephthali, whiche lyeth in the hye countreis of Galilee aboue Nason, the way toward the west, hauyng the citie of Sephet vppon the left syde. Though he was take prisoner in the days of Salmanasar kyng of the Assyrians, neuertheles beyng in captiuitie, he forsoke not the way of truth: In so much, that whatsoeuer he mighte get, he parted it dayely with his fellow prisoners & brethren, that were of his kinred. And though he were yōger then al they in the tribe of Nephthali, yet dyd he not behaue himself chyldyshly in hys workes. And when all the other went to the golden calues, whiche Ieroboam the kyng of Israell had made, he hym selfe alone fledde all their companies, and gatte hym to Ierusalem, vnto the Temple of the Lord, and there worshypped the lorde God of Israell, faithfully offeryng of all his fyrst fruites and tythes, so that in the thirde yeare he mynistred al the tythes vnto the strangers and conuertes. These and such lyke thynges dyd he obserue, accordynge to the lawe of God, whenne he was yet but ponge. But when he was a mane, he toke of his owne tribe, a wife called Anna, & of her he gat a son, whō he called Tobias, after his owne name, & taught hym from hys youth vp, to feare god, and to refrayne from all synne. Now when he with his wyfe, his soonne, and with all his kinred, was come in to captiuitie vnto the citie of Ninine, what tyme as they all dyd eate of the meates of the Heathen, he kepte hys soule, and was neuer defyled in theyr meates. And for so muche as he was myndfull of the Lord in all his heart. God gaue hym fauour in the syght of Salmenasar the kyng, whiche gaue hym power to go where he wolde, and so had he libertie to do what soeuer hym lyst. So went Tobias vnto all them that were in prison, and comforted them, and gaue them wholsom exhortations. And when he comme to Rages, a Citie of the Medes, hauing ten talentes of syluer (of the thinges wherwith the kyng had honored him) and sawe among a great companye of people of his kynrede, one Gabelus, (which

(which was of hys owne tribe) being in necessitie, he gaue him the sayd weyght of syluer vnder an hande wryteynge. After a longe season when Salmanasar the kynge was deade, and Sennacherib hys sonne reygned in his stead, which hated the chyldren of Israell. Tobias wente dayly thorowout all hys kynred, and confoxted them, and gaue of hys goodes to euerye one of them, as much as he might: he fed the hungrye, clothed the naked, and buryed the deade and slayne, and that diligently. And when Sennacherib the king came agayne and fled out of Iewry (what tyme as God punished hym for hys blasphemye) and in his wrath slewe many of the chyldren of Israell, Tobias buryed their bodyes. But whē it was told the king, he commaunded to slay him, and take away all his goodes. Neuertheless, Tobias with his sonne and with his wyfe fled hys way, and was hyd naked, for there were manye that loued him. But after .xlv. dayes the kynge was slayne of hys owne sōnes. Then came Tobias agayn to his house, and al his goodes wer restored vnto him.

AFter these thinges vpon a solempne daye of the Lord Tobias made a good feast in hys house, and sayde vnto hys sonne: Goo thy waye and bryng hyther some of our tribe, such as feare God, that they maye make mery with vs. And when he was gone, he came againe, and told hys father, that one of the chyldren of Israell laye slayne vppon the streete. And immediatelye he lepte from hys table, lefte the feaste, came fastynge to the deade coarse, toke hym, and bare him preuely into hys house, that whē the sunne was downe, he might safelye burye hym. And when he had hyd the coarse, he dyd eate his meate with mournynge and feare, remembrynge the wordes, that the Lorde sayeth by the prophet Amos: youre hye feastes shall be turned to sorowe and heauynes. But whē the sunne was downe, he wente hys waye and buryed hym. Then all hys neyghboures reproued hym, sayeng: It is not longe, sens it was commaunded to slay thee because of this matter, and hast scarce escaped the daunger of death, and buriest thou the deade agayne? Neuertheles, Tobias fearynge God moare then the kynge, tooke the bodyes of the slayne, and hyd them in his house, and buried them at mydnyght. It happened vpon a day, that he had buryed the dead and was wery, came home, and layed him downe by the wal, and slept. And whyle he was a sleepe, ther fell downe vpon hys eyes warme donge oute of the swalowes nest, so ỳ he was blind. Thys temptacion dyd God suffer to happen vnto hym, that they whyche came after, myght haue an example of his pacience, lyke as of holy Job. For in so much as he euer feared god from his youth vp, and kept hys commandementes, he grudged not agaynste God, that the plage of blindnes chanced vnto him, but remayned stedfaste in the feare of God, and thanked God all the dayes of hys lyfe. For lyke as blessed Job was hadde in derision of kynges, euen so was he laughed to scorne of hys elders and kynsfolkes, whiche sayde vnto him: where is thy hope, for the which thou hast done almes and buried the deade? But Tobias rebuked them, and spake: Say not so, for we are the chyldren of holy men, and loke for the life, which God shall geue vnto them that neuer turn their beleefe from him. Anna his wife went dayly to the weauing worke: and loke what liuinge she coude get with the labour of her handes, she brought it. And it happened that shee toke a kyd, and broughte it home. And when her husband herd it crye, he sayd: loke that it be not stollen, restore it agayne to the owners: for it is not lawefull for vs to eat or to touch any thing of theft. Then was his wife angrye and said: Nowe is thy hope become vain openly, and thy almes dedes are manifeste. With these and such lyke wordes dyd she cast him in the teeth.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

A Then Tobias toke it heauily, & with teares hee began to make hys prayer, sayinge: O Lorde thou art righteous, and all thy iudgementes are true, yea, all thy ways are mercye, faythfulnes and iudgemente. And nowe O Lorde, be myndefull of me, & take no vengeaunce of my sins, neyther remember my misdedes, neyther the misdedes of my elders. For we haue not bene obediente vnto thy commaundementes, therefore are we spoyled, broughte into captiuitie, into death, into derision and shame vnto al nacions, among whom thou hast scatred vs. And now O Lorde, thy iudgements are great, for we haue not done accordyng to thy commaundementes, neyther haue we walked innocently before thee. And nowe O Lorde, deale with me accordynge to thy wyll, and command my spirite to be receaued in peace, for more expediente were it for B me to dye, then to lyue. At the same tyme it happened, that Sara ỳ daughter of Raguell at Rages, a citie of the Medes was sclaundred of one of her fathers handmaydēs, namely, that she shoulde haue hadde seuen husbandes, which as soone as they were gone in vnto her, were slayn of the deuyll called Asmodeus. Therefore, when shee reproued the mayden for her faute, she answered her, sayinge: God let vs neuer see son nor daughter of thee more vpon earthe, thou kyller of thy husbandes. Wilte thou slaye me also, as thou hast slayne seuen men? At thys voyce went Sara into an hye chamber of her house, and thres dayes and thre nightes she nether eat nor dranke, but continued in prayer, and besought God with teares, that he wolde deliuer her from thys rebuke. Upon the C third daye it chaunced, that when she had made an ende of prayer, she praised the Lorde, sayinge: Blessed be thy name O God of our fathers, whyche when thou art wrothe, shewest mercye, and in time of trouble thou forgeuest the sinnes of them, that call vpon thee. Vnto thee O Lorde turne I my face, vnto thee lyfte I vp myne eyes. I beseche the O Lord, lose me out of the bondes of this rebuke, or els take me vtterlye awaye frome the earthe. Thou knowest Lorde, that I neuer had desire vnto man, and that I haue kept my soule cleane from all vncleanlye luste. I haue not kept companye with those ỳ passe their time in spoyt, neyther haue I made my selfe partaker with theym that walke in lyghte behauour. Neuertheles, an husband haue I consented to take, not for my pleasure, but in thy feare. Now per-D aduenture either I haue ben vnworthy of them, or els were they vnmete for me, or thou happily hast kept me to another husband. For why? thy counsell is not in the power of man. But whosoeuer loueth thee & serueth thee a right, is sure of thys, that if his lyfe be tempted and proued, it standeth in the tryinge, and if he endure in patience, he shal haue a reward, and be hylye crowned: and if he be in trouble, that God (no doubt) shal deliuer him: and if his lyfe be in chastening, that he shal haue leaue to come vnto thy mercye. For thou hast no pleasure in our dampnation: and why? after a storme thou makest the weather fayre & stil, after weping & heuynes, thou geuest great ioye. Thy name O God of Israell, be praysed for euer. At the same tyme were both their prayers herd in the sighte of the maiestye of the Hyest God. And Raphael the holy Angell of the Lorde was sent to helpe theym both, whose prayers came at one time together before God.

SO when Tobias thoughte hys I prayer to be herde, that he might dye, he called vnto him his sonne Tobias, and said vnto him: My sone heare the wordes of my mouthe, and lay them in thyne hert, as a foundation. When God taketh away my soul, bury thou my body, and hold thy mother in honoure all the dayes of her lyfe. For thou oughtest to remember, what and howe great perylls she suffred for the in her wombe. And when she she also hath faithfully led the tyme of her lyfe, bury her beside me. Haue God in thy thought all the dayes of thy lyfe, and beware, lest at any time thou consent vnto sinne, and lest thou let slippe the commaundementes of the Lorde our God. Geue almes of thy goodes, and turn neuer thy face from the poore, and so shall it come to passe, that the face of the Lorde shall not be turned awaye from thee. Be mercifull after thy power. If thou haste muche, geue plenteously, if thou haste litle, do thy diligence, gladly to geue of that lytle. For so gatherest thou thy selfe a good reward in the daye of necessitie. For mercye delyuereth from all sinne, and from death, and suffereth not the soule to come in darkenes. A great confort is mercy before the hye God, vnto all them that shewe it. My sonne, keepe thee well from all whoredome, and (beside thy wife) se that no faute be knowen of thee. Let neuer pryde haue rule in thy mynde nor in thy worde, for in pride began al destruction. Whosoeuer worketh any thyng for thee, immediately geue him his hyre, and loke that thy hyred seruauntes wages remayn not by the ouer night. Loke that thou neuer do vnto another man, the thyng that thou wouldest not another man should do vnto thee. Eate thy breade with the hungry and poore, and couer the naked with thy clothes. Set thy bread and wine vpon the burial of the righteous, and do not thou eate and drinke therof with the sinners. Aske euer counsell at the wise. Be alwaye thankefull vnto God, and beseech him, that he will order thy waies, and that whatsoeuer thou deuisest or takest in hand, it may remayne in him. I certifie thee also my sonne, that (when thou wast yet but a babe) I deliuered ten talentes of syluer vnto Gabelus, at Rages a citie of the Medes, and hys hande writyng haue I by me. And therfore seke some meanes, how thou mayest come by hym, and receaue of him the sayd weight of siluer, & geue him hys hand writynge againe. My sonne, be not afrayed: trueth it is, we leade here a poore lyfe: but great good shall we haue, yf we feare God, and depart from all sinne, and do well.

The.v.Chapter.

Then answered Tobias hys father and said: father, al that thou haste commaunded me, will I do and that diligently. But how I shall require this money, I cannot tell. Neyther doeth he knowe me, nor I him. What token shall I geue hym? And as for the waye thither, I neuer knewe it. Then his father answered him, & said: I haue his hand writyng by me, whiche whē thou shewest him vnfained, immediately he shall paye thee. But go thy waye nowe, and get thee some faythfull manne to go with thee for an hyre, that thou mayest receaue the money, while I am yet lyuyng. Then went Tobias oute, and vpon the strete he found a fayre ponge man standynge, girded vppe, and as it were one readye to take hys iourney. And he knewe not that it was an Angel of God, but saluted him, and sayd: From whence art thou, thou good pong man? He answered: Of the children of Israell. And Tobias said vnto him: knowest thou the waye, that leadeth vnto the contrey of ỹ Medes? He answered: I know it well, and al those stretes haue I gone ofte tymes, & haue lodged with oure brother Gabelus, that dwelleth in Rages, a city of the Medes, whiche lyeth vpon the mounte Egbathanis: Tobias sayde vnto him: I praye thee tarye for me, tyll I haue told my father these thinges. Then went Tobias in, and tolde his father all. At the which his father marueled, and prayed, that he woulde come in vnto hym. Nowe when the Aungell came in, he saluted hym, and sayde: Ioye be with the for euermore. And olde Tobias sayde: what ioye can I haue that sit here in darkenes, and see not the light of heauen. The pouge man sayd vnto him: be of good cheare, God shall helpe thee shortely. And Tobias sayde vnto him: Canste thou bryngе my sonne to Gabelus, vnto the citye of Rages in Media: And when thou commest agayne, I shall pay thee thy hyre. And the Angell sayde vnto him: I shall leade thy sonne, and bringe him to thee agayne. Then Tobias answered him: tell me I pray thee, of what house or of what tribe art thou? The Angell Raphael sayde vnto hym: Askest thou after the kynred of an hyrelyng, or seekest thou a gyde for thy sonne to go with hym? But that I make thee not carefull, I am Azarias the sonne of great Hananias. And Tobias answered: thou art come of a great kinred: but I pray the be not displeased, that I desyred to knowe thy kinred. The Angell sayde vnto him: thy sonne shall I lead forth safely, and bring him whole to thee agayne. Then answered Tobias, and sayd: well, go on your way, and God be in your iourney, and hys Angell beare you companye. So when they hadde prepared all thynges, that they wold take with them in their iorney. Tobias bad his father and his mother fare wel, and they went on their way both together. Now when they wer gone: hys mother began to wepe, and sayde: The staffe of our age haste thou taken awaye, and sente hym from vs. Would god that ỹ money had neuer bē, for the which thou haste sente hym awaye. If we had bene contente with our pouertie, this had bene greate ryches vnto vs, that we sawe our sonne here. Then sayde Tobias vnto her: wepe not, our sonne shall come to vs agayne safe and sound, and thyne eyes shal se him. For I trust, that the good Angell of God shall beare hym companye, and order well all the thinges that he doeth: so that he shall come to vs agayne with ioy. At these wordes his mother left of from weppyng, and held her tonge.

SO Tobias went on hys waye, & a dog followed him, and the firste night they abode by the water of Tygris. Then went he out to washe hys fete, and beholde, there came forth an horrible fishe to deuoure hym. Of whom Tobias was afrayd, and cried with a loude voyce, saying: Lorde, he commeth vpon me: And the Aungell sayd vnto him: Take him by the gyll, and drawe hym to thee. And he did so, and drewe him vpon the lande. And the fyshe beganne to leape at his fete. Then sayd the Angell vnto him: take out the bowels of this fish, and as for the herte, the gall and the lyuer, keepe them by thee. For these thynges are necessary and good for medecine. Tobias dyd so, and rosted the fyshe, and they toke him with them in their iorney: the residue they salted, as muche as was sufficiente for theym, tyll they came to Rages a citye of the Medes. Then Tobias asked the Angell, and sayd vnto him: I pray the brother Azarias, tel me, wherto are these thynges good of the fishe thou hast bidden me keepe? The Aungell answered him, and saide: If thou layest a piece of the hert vpon the coales, the smoke therof dryueth awaye all maner of euyll spirites, whether it be from man or from woman, so that frome thence forth the same shall come nomore vnto them. The gall is good to anoynte or to strike the eyes withal, where as there is any blemyshe in them, so that they shalbe whole. And Tobias sayde vnto hym: where wilte thou that we remayne? The Angell answered and sayd: Here is a nye kynsman of thine, one Raguell by name, whiche hath a daughter called Sara, and hath neyther sonne nor daughter but her. All hys good belongeth vnto thee, and thou must mary her, and therfore desire her of her father, and he shal geue her thee to wyfe. Then answered Tobias and sayd: As I vnderstande, she hath bene maried vnto seuen husbandes, and they all are deade: and I haue herd saye, that the deuyll slewe them. I am afrayde therfore, lest such thinges happen vnto me also, whiche if it came to passe (seynge I am the onely sonne of my father and my mother) I shoulde bringe them in their age wyth sorowe to their graues.

D Then sayde the angel Raphael vnto him: Heare mee, and I wyl tell thee what they be, of whom the deuil hath power. Namely, they that receaue mariage of such a fashion, that they shut God oute from theim, and from theyr heart, and geue theym selues to theyr owne luste, euen as it were an horse and mule, whiche haue no vnderstanding: vpō such hath the deuyl power. But when thou takest her, and arte come into the chamber, withhold thy self from her thre dayes, and geue thy diligence vnto nothing but vnto prayer wyth her. And in the fyrst nyghte, roste the iyuer of the fysh, and the deuil shalbe dryuen away. The seconde nyght shalt thou be receaued into the company of the holy patriarkes. The thirde nyght shalte thou obteyne the blessinge of God, so that whole chyldren shalbe borne of you. After the thirde nyght, take the mayden in the feare of God, and more for the desyre of children, then for any fleshly luste: that in the seede of Abraham, thou mayest obtayne the blessynge in chyldren.

¶ The. vii. Chapter.

I Then went they in to Raguel, which receaued them ioyfully. And when Raguel loked vpon Tobias, he sayde vnto Anna hys wyfe: Howe lyke is this yong manne vnto my systers sonne? And when he had spoken thys, he sayde: whence be ye good brethren? They sayd: Of the tribe of Nephthaly, out of the captyuitye of Nintue. Then sayd Raguel vnto them: Knowe ye my brother Tobias? They sayde, yea, we knowe him wel. And when they had spokē much good of hym, the aungel sayde vnto Raguel: Tobias of whō thou askest is this yong mās father. Then Raguel bowed hym self down, & wept, toke him about the neck, and kissed him, & sayde: Gods blessinge haue thou my sonne, for thou art the sonne of a good vertuous man. And Anna hys wyfe, and Sara hys daughter wept also. Now when they had talked together Raguel badde kill a wether, and to make a feast. And when he prayed thē to syt downe to dynner, Tobias said: I wil neither eate nor dryncke here thys day, except thou first graunt me my petition, and promise to geue mee thy daughter Sara. When Raguell heard thys, he was astonnied: for he knewe, what had happened vnto the other seuen menne, that went in vnto her, and hee beganne to feare, that it shoulde chaunce vnto him also in like maner. And whyle he stode so in dout and gaue the yonge man no aunswer, the aungel sayde vnto him: Feare not to geue him thy daughter, for vnto thys manne that feareth God, belongeth thy daughter to wyfe, therefore myghte none other haue her. Then C sayd Raguel: I dought not, but God hathe accepted my prayers and teares in hys syghte: and I truste hee caused you to come vnto me for the same intente, that thys daughter of myne might be maried in her owne kinred, accordynge to the lawe of Moyses. And nowe doubt thou not, but I wil geue her vnto thee: So hee tooke the ryghte hande of hys daughter, and gaue hes into the ryghte hand of Tobias, and sayde: The God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Iacob be wyth you, ioyne you together, and fulfyl his blessing in you. And they tooke a letter, and made a writynge of the mariage. And then made they mery, and praysed God. And Raguel called Anna hys wyfe vnto hym, and badde her prepare another chamber, and thyther he brought Sara hys daughter, and shee wepte. Then sayde he vnto her: Bee of good chere my daughter, the Lord of heuen geue thee ioye, for the boauines that thou hast suffred.

NOw after that they had supped, they brought the yonge A man into her. Then thought Tobias vpon the wordes of the Angel: and toke out of hys bagge a piece of the iyuer of the fysshe, and layd it vpon the hoate coales. So the Angel Raphaell toke holde of the deuyll, and sent him away, and bound him in the wildernes of the hier Egypte. Then spake Tobias vnto the virgin, & sayd: Vp Sara, let vs make our prayer vnto God to daye, to morowe, and ouer morowe: for these three nightes will we reconcile our selues with god: and when the third holy night is past, we shal ioyne together in the duty of maryage. For we are the children of holy men, and we maye not come together B as the Heathen that knowe not God. Then stode they vp both together, and besought God earnestly, that he wold preserue them. And Tobias sayd: O Lorde God of our fathers, praysed bee thou of heauen and earthe, of the sea, welles and floudes, and of all thy creatures that be therin. Thou madest A-Gene. 2. dam of the moulde of the earthe, and gauest him Eua for an helper. And now lord thou knowest that it is not becauke of voluptcousnes, that I take this sister of mine to wyfe, but onelye for the loue of children, in whom thy name be blessed for euermore. And Sara sayde: haue mercy vpon vs (O Lord) haue mercy vpon vs, and let vs both come whole and sound together to a good age. And about the cock crowyng, it happened, that Raguell called hys seruauntes, and they wente with hym, to make a graue. For he said: it is chanced now vnto hym peraduenture, as it dydde vnto the other seuen menne, that wente in vnto her. Now when they had made the graue Raguell came againe to his wife, and sayd vnto her: send one of thy maides, to loke if he be dead, that I may bury hym afore it be light day. So she sent a maiden to see, which when she came into the chamber, founde them whole and sounde, slepyng together. And so she came againe, and brought good ti-D dynges. Then Raguel and Anna his wife praysed the Lord, and sayd: praysed be thou, O Lorde God of Israell, for it is not happened vnto vs, as we thought. For thou hast dealt mercifulye with vs, and put away frō vs the enemye that persecuted vs, and hast shewed mercy vnto yonder two beloued, O Lord, cause them to magnifye thee more perfectly, and to offer the sacrifice of thy praise, and of their helth, that all people maye knowe, that thou onelye arte God in all the earth. And immediatelye Raguell commaunded his seruauntes, to fyll the graue, that thei had made with erth, afore it was light, and bad his wife prepare a feast and to make ready al things that wer necessary for meate, to suche as wente by the waye. He caused two fat kyne also, and foure wethers to be slayne, & the meats to be prepared for all hys neighbours and frendes. And Raguell charged Tobias to remayne with him two wekes. As for all the good that he had, he gaue Tobias the halfe of it, and made this writyng, that the halfe which remained, should fall vnto Tobias after their death.

¶ The. xi. Chapter.

Then Tobias called vnto hym B the Aungell, whom he thought to haue bene a man, and sayde vnto him: Brother Azarias, I praye thee herken vnto my woordes: If I shold geue my selfe to be thy seruant, I shall not deserue thy prouydence. Neuertheles, I beseech thee, that thou wilt take the beastes and the seruantes, and go vnto Gabelus in Rages the citye of Medes, and deliuer hym his hande writynge, and receaue the money of him, and pray him to com to my maryage. For thou knowest thy B selfe, that my father dothe number the dayes: and if I tary one day to longe, he will be sory in hys mynde. Nowe seest thou howe earnestlye Raguell hath required mee, soo that I can not saye hym naye. Then toke Raphaell foure of Raguelles seruauntes, and two Camelles, and wente vnto Rages, the Cytye of the Medes: and when he had found Gabelus, he gaue hym his hand writynge, and receaued all the money. He tolde hym also of C Tobias the sonne of Tobi, howe all thynges hadde happened, and caused him to com with hym to the mariage.

Nowe

Now when he came into the house of Raguell, he found Tobias sytting at the table, & he leaped vp, and they kissed one an another, & Gabelus wept, and prayed God, and sayd: The blessyng of the God of Israell haue thou, for thou art the son of a right vertuous and iust man, and of one that feareth God, and geueth greate almes. And blessyng haue thy wife, and your elders, that ye may see your children, and youre childers children, vnto the third and fourth generation, and your seede be blessed of the God of Israell, whiche reigneth world without end. And when they all hadde saide Amen, they wente to the feast, but with the feare of the Lord, held they the feast of the mariage.

NOwe whyle yonge Tobias made long tarying, by reason of the maryage, hys father was full of care & heuines, & thought what should be the cause, that my son tarieth so long? Or why should he be kept so long there? Peraduenture Gabelus is dead, & no mā wil giue him ỹ money. Thus began he to be very sorowfull, he and Anna his wyfe with him, and began to wepe both together because their sonne was not come again vnto them at the day appoynted. As for his mother, she wept with discomfortable teares, and sayde: Woo is me, my sonne: Oh what ayled vs to send thee away into a straunge countrey, thou light of our eies, thou staffe of our age, thou comforte of our lyfe, thou hope of our generation. Seyng all the things that we haue, are onely in thee, we should not haue sent thee away from vs. Then Tobias comforted her, and sayd: Holde thy tonge, and be not discomforted: our son is whole and sound, the man that we sent hym withall, is faithfull inough. Neuertheless, she myght in no wise be comforted, but daily wente out, looked about, and went about all the streetes, wherby she thought he shoulde come agayne: that (if it were possible) shee myght see hym commynge afarre of.

But Raguell sayde vnto his sonne in lawe: O tary here, and I shall send a messanger vnto thy father Tobias, to tell hym that thou arte in good helth. Tobias sayde vnto hym: I am sure, that my father and my mother counte euery day, and that their herts are sorye. So when Raguell prayed Tobias with many wordes, and would in noo wyse heare hym: he deliuered Sara vnto hym, and the halfe part of all his good: in seruentes, and handemaidens, in shepe, in Camels, and in kyne, and much money, & so sent hym away from hym with peace and ioye, and sayd: The holy angell of the Lord be with you in your iorney, and bring you foorth safe and sound, that ye may fynd all things in good case with your elders, and that myne eies maye see your children afore I dye. So the elders embraced their daughter, kyssed her, and lette her go, exhortyng her to honour her father and mother in lawe to loue her husbande, to rule well her household, to kepe her hous in good order, & to shewe her selfe fautelesse.

AS they nowe were goynge homewarde agayne, vpon the xi. daye, they came to Charra, whyche lyeth in the halfe way towarde Ninive. And the angel saide: Brother Tobias, thou knowest howe thou haste left thy father: therfore yf it please thee, we two wyll goe before, and lette the household with thy wyfe and the cattell come softe and fair after vs. And whē Tobias was content that they shouldee go before, Raphaell sayd vnto him: Take of the gall of the fysshe with thee, for it shalbe necessary. So Tobias toke of the gal and they went their way. But Anna, the mother of Tobias sat daily by the way syde, vppon the toppe of an hyll, frome whense she myght see farre about her. And whyle shee was waytynge there for hys commyng, she looked afarre of, and anone shee perceaued her sonne commynge, and ranne and told her husband, saying: Behold thy sonne commeth. And Raphaell sayde vnto Tobias: As soone as thou commest into the house, immediately worship the Lord thy God, and gene thankes vnto hym: then go to thy father, and kisse him: and strike his eyes ouer with the gall of the fyshe that thou hast broughte with thee. For be sure, that hys eyes shall streyght way be opened, and thy father shall see the light of heauen, and shal reioyce at the sight of the. Then the dogge that had bene with them in their iourney, ran before, and came as a messenger, and wagged with his tayle for gladnesse. ¶ So the blynd father arose, and began to runne, and stombled with his fete, and gaue a seruant his hand, ranne to mete his sonne, receaued him, and kissed him, he and his wyfe, and they began to wepe for ioye. Now whē they had worshypped and thanked God, they sat downe. Then toke Tobias of the fyshes gal, and anoynted his fathers eyes: and taryed halfe an houre, and then began the blemishe to go out of hys eyes, lyke as it hadde bene the whyte skynne of an egge: which Tobias toke and drewe frome hys eyes, & immediately he receaued his sighte. Then they praysed God, he and hys wyfe, and all they that knewe hym. ¶ And Tobias sayde: O Lorde God of Israell, I geue thee prayse and thankes, for thou haste chastened me, and made me whole. And lo, nowe do I see my sonne Tobias. After seuē days came Sara his sons wife also, whole and sound with all the housholde and cattell, with camels and much money of hys wyues, and with the money that he had receaued of Gabelus: and he tolde his father and his mother all the benefites, which God had done for him, by the man that led him. Achior also and Nabath Tobias syster sons came, and were glad and reioysed with him, by reasō of all the good that God had shewed vnto hym. And so for the space of seuen dayes they made mery, and were right ioyfull euerychone.

Then Tobias called hys sonne vnto him, and sayd: What maye we geue thys holye man, that went wyth thee? Tobias answered his father, and said: Father what reward shall we geue him? Or what thynge can deserue hys benefytes? He hath bene my gyde, and brought me safe agayne: he receaued the money frome Gabelus, he caused me to get my wife he droue the euyll spyrete from her, he hath bene an occasion of gladnesse to her father and mother: he delyuered me, that I was not deuoured of the fyshe, he hath made the to see the lyght of heauen, yea, we all haue receaued great good of him. Howe shoulde we worthely deserue these thynges vnto him? But I pray thee my father, that thou wilte desire hym, yf happelye he will vouchsafe, to take with hym the halfe of all that we haue brought. So the father and the sonne called hym, toke him aside, and beganne to praye him, that he wolde be contente to take in good worth, the half part of al that they had brought. Then said he secretlye vnto them: Prayse ye the God of heauen, and geue thankes vnto hym before all men lyuyng, for he hath shewed his mercy vnto vs. It is good to hyde the kynges secrete, but to shewe and to praise the workes of God, it is an honorable thyng. Prayer is good with fasting, and mercy is better, then to hoorde vp treasures of golde. For mercy delyuereth from deth, clenseth sinne, and causeth to finde euerlasting lyfe. But they that do synne and vnrighteousnes, are the enemies of their owne soule. Wherefore I telle you trueth, and will hyde nothynge from you. When thou prayedst with teares, and buryedst the deade, and lefteste thy dyner, and hyddest the deade in thy house vppon the daye tyme, that thou mightest burye them in the nighte, I offered thy prayer before the Lorde. And because thou was accept and beloued of God, it was necessarye, that tentation should trye thee. And nowe hath the lord sent me to heale the, and to deliuer Sara thy sons wyfe from the.

the euil spirite. For I am Raphaell an aungel one of the seuen that stande D before God. When they heard thys, they were sore afrayde, and trembled, and fel downe vpon their faces vnto the ground. Then sayde the Aungel: Peace be wyth you, feare not. Where as I haue beene wyth you, it is the wyll of God: geue prayse and thankes vnto hym. You thoughte that I 12.18.a dyd eate and dryncke wyth you, but I vse meate that is inuisible, and drinke that cannot be seene of menne. Nowe therefore is the tyme that I muste turne agayne, vnto him that sent me, but be ye thankful vnto God, and tell out al hys wonderous woorkes. And when he had spoken these wordes, he was taken away out of their syghte, so that they sawe him nomore. Then fel they downe flat vppon their faces by the space of three houres, and praised God: when they rose vp, they told all hys wonderous woorkes.

THen olde Tobias opened hys mouthe and prayed the Lorde, and saide: Greate arte thou O Lord for euermore, and thy kingdome world wythoute ende: for thou scourgest and healest: thou leadest vnto hel, and bryngest out agayne, and there is none that may escape thyne hande. O geue thankes vnto the Lorde, ye children of Israel, and prayse him in the syght of the heathen. For amonge the heathen which knowe him not hath he scattered you, to the intente that ye should shewe foorth hys marueylous woorkes: and cause them for to knowe that there is none other God almigh ty but he. Hee hath chastened vs for our misdedes, and for his owne mer- B cy sake shal he saue vs. Consider then howe hee hath dealte wyth you, and prayse him wyth feare and dreade, and magnify the euerlasting king in your woorkes. I will praise him euen in the land of my captiuitie, for he hath shewed his maiesty vnto a sinful people. Tourne you therefore, O ye sinners, and do ryghteousnes before God, and be ye sure, that he wil shew his mercye vpon you. As for me and my soul, we wyl reioyce in God. O praise the Lorde al ye his chosen, holde the dates of gladnes, and be thankful vnto him O Jerusalem thou citie of God, the Lord hath punished thee for the woorkes of thyne owne handes. O praise the Lord in thy good things, and geue thankes to the euerlasting God, that he may build vp his tabernacle again in thee, that hee maye cal againe vnto thee, al suche as be in captiuitye, and that thou maiest haue ioye for euermore. Wyth a faire lighte shalte thou shine, & al the endes of the world shall honoure thee. The people shal come vnto thee from farre, they shal bringe giftes, and worship the Lord in thee, and thy land shal they haue for a sanctuarye, for they shall call vppon the greate name of thee. Curſed shall C they bee that despyse thee, and all that blaspheme the, shalbe condemned: but blessed shall they bee that buylde thee vp. As for thee, thou shalte reioyce in thy chyldren, for they all shall be blessed, and gathered together vnto the Lorde. Blessed are all they that loue thee, and that bee gladde of thy peace. Praise thou the Lorde, O my soule, for the Lorde our God hath deliuered his citie Jerusalem from al her troubles, I wyll count my selfe happy, if my sede remayn to see the clerenesse of Jerusalem. ✱ The gates of Jerusalem shall be buylded wyth Saphire & Smaragde, and all the compasse of her walles wyth precious stones. Al her stretes shall be paued wyth white marble stone, and in al the stretes shal Allelujа bee songe. Praised bee the Lorde, whiche hathe exalted her, that his kyngdome may bee vppon her for euermore. Amen. And so Tobias made an ende of his talkyng.

¶ The .xiiii. Chapter.

AND after that Tobias hadde I gotten his syght agayn, he liued .xlii. yeares, and sawe hys childers childzen. Now whē he was C. and .ii. yeare olde, he dyed, and was buryed honourablye in Ninive. For whan he was sixe and fiftye yeares of age:

age he loſt the ſyghte of hys eyes, and when hee was three ſcore yeare olde, he gat his ſight again. The reſidue of his life led he in ioy, and increſed wel B in the feare of God, and departed in peace. But in the houre of hys death he called vnto him his ſonne Tobias and ſeuen yonge ſpringalde hys ſonnes children, and ſayde vnto thē: The deſtruction of Niniue is at hande, for the word of the Lord cannot faile, and our brethren that are ſcattered oute of the lande of Iſrael, ſhal come thither agayne. And the whole land of it that hath bene waſte, ſhalbe filled: and the houſe of God that was brēt in it, ſhall be builded again: and al ſuche as feare God, ſhal returne thyther: the hethen alſo ſhal forſake their ydols, and come to Ieruſalem and dwel there, and all the kinges of the earth ſhalbe glad of C her, and worſhip the Lord God of Iſrael. And therefore my children, heare youre father: Serue the Lorde in the trueth, ſeeke after his will, and do the thing that pleaſeth him. Commaund your children that they do ryght, geue almes, be mindful of God, and euer to be thankefull vnto him in trueth, and wyth al their powre. Heare me nowe therefore my children, and abyde not here, but in what daye ſoeuer ye haue buried your mother beſide me, get you from hence. For I ſee, that the wyckednes of it ſhal bring it to deſtruction and end. After the death of his mo-D ther, Tobias departed away frō Niniue, with his wife & childrē, & with his childers children, & came agayn to his father and mother in law, & found thē whole, & in a good age, & tooke the care of thē. And he cloſed their eyes, & was heire vnto Raguels goodes, and ſaw the fifth generation and his childers children. And whē he was. xcix. yeare of age, he died in the feare of the Lord, and his kinſfolkes buried him, and all his poſterity cōtinued in good life, & holye converſation: ſo that they were loued & accepted bothe of God & man, and of al the people of the land.

Arphaxat the king of E Medes ſubdued ma
nye people vnto hys dominion, & builded a noble ſtrong cuye, which he called Egbathanis. The walles of it made he of fre ſtone, four ſquared ſcuentie cubites hie, & thirty cubites brode. He made towres therepon an hundred cubites hie. But vpon the four corners euerye ſyde was twenty fote brode. He made the portes in the height like as the towres. This king truſted in his mighty hoſt, and in hys F glorious charets. So in the twelfth yeare of his regne, it happened, that Nabuchodonoſor the king of the Aſſirias, which regned in the great Cytie of Niniue) fought againſte Arphaxat, and ouercame him in the great field called Ragau, beſyde Euphrates and Tigris and Iadaſon in the ſpeld of Ercath the kinges of the Elykes. Then was the kyngdome of Nabuchodonoſor exalted, and his hert was lykte vp, and he ſent vnto al them that dwelte in Celicia, in Damaſcus, in Libanus, and vnto the heathen that dwelte in Carmel and Cedar, and to ſuche as dwelt in Galile, in the great ſpelde of Eſdrelon, to all theym that G wer in Samaria, and beyond the water of Iordan vnto Ieruſalem, and the whole lande of Teſſe vnto the mountaynes of Ethiopia. Vnto all theſe did Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of the Aſſirians ſende meſſaungers. But they al with one conſent would not agree vnto him, & ſent ỹ meſſēgers agayne emptye, and put theim awaye without honour. Then Nabuchodonoſor the kynge tooke indygnation at all theſe landes, & ſware by his throne and by his kingdome, that he would be auenged of all thoſe countrees.

¶ The. ii. Chapter.

IN the thirtenth yeare of kynge Nabuchodonoſor, vppon the .xii. day of the fyrſt month, it was declared in the court of Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of the Aſſirians, that hee would auenge him ſelfe. So he called vnto him al the elders, al his captaynes, and men of warre and ſhewed them his ſecret counſel, and told them that his purpoſe was to bringe the whole earth vnder his dominion.

Nowe when they were all contente wyth thys sayinge, Nabuchodonoſor the king called Holofernes the chyefe captayne of his warres, and ſaid vnto him: Go thy way forth againſte all the kyngdomes of the weſt, and ſpecially againſt thoſe that haue deſpiſed my commaundemente. Thou ſhalte ſpare no realme, al ſtrong cities ſhalte thou bringe in ſubiection vnto mee.

B Then Holofernes called together all the captaynes and rulers of al the power in Aſſiria, and muſtred the ſouldiers vnto the hoſt (lyke as the kyng commaunded him) namely, an hundred and twentye thouſande fighting men vppon foote, and twelue thouſande archers vppon horſebacke. All his ordeynaunce ſente he before wyth an innumerable multitude of camelles, ſo that the hoſte was wel prouided for wyth oxen, and ſmal cattel, and that wythout number. He cauſed corne to be prepared out of al Syria for his hoolke.

C Muche golde and ſiluer alſo tooke he out of the kynges houſe. So he tooke his iourney, he and all his hoſt, with charettes, horſemenne, and archers, of whom there were ſo manye, that they couered the grounde of the lande, lyke the greſhoppers. And when hee was gone paſte the borders of the Aſſirians he came toward the greate mountaynes of Ange, whyche lye vpon the left ſide of Celicia: and ſo went he vp into their caſtels, and wanne euery ſtrong holde. As for the welthy citie of Molothus, he brake it downe, and ſpoiled al the children of Tharſis and the Iſmaelytes, which laye toward the wildernes, and vppon the South ſyde of the lande of Chelon. Hee went ouer Euphrates alſo, and came into Meſopotamia, and brake downe all the hye cityes that were there, from the broke of Mambre til a man come to the ſea: and he toke the borders in from Celicia vnto the coaſtes of Japhet toward the South. Hee caried awaye al the Madianyts, and ſpoyled al their goodes, and whoſoeuer withſtode him, he ſlewe theym wyth the ſwearde. After this he went downe into the fielde of Damaſcus in the tyme of harueſt, and brent vp al the corne and all the trees, and cauſed the vynes to be cutte downe. And the feare of him fel vpon al them that dwelt vpon the earth.

¶ The .iii. Chapter.

SO the kinges and princes of all cities and landes ſent their Embaſſadours: namely, they of Syria, and Meſopotamia, Siria, Sobal and Libia, and Celicia, which came to Holofernes, and ſayd: Let thy wrathe ceaſſe towarde vs: It is better for vs to ſerue the great kyng Nabuchodonoſor wyth our lyues, and to be ſubiecte vnto thee, then that wee ſhoulde dye, and be ſlayne, and receaue greater hurt. All our Cities and poſſeſſions, all mountaynes and hylles, all fyeldes, greate and ſmalle catteil, ſheepe, goates, horſes and cammelles, all our gooddes and houſholdes, bee in thy power, vnder thy ſubiection, bee it all together. Wee oure ſelues alſo and oure chylderne wyll bee thyne owne, come vnto vs a peaceable LORD, & vſe our ſeruice at thy pleſure. Then cam Holofernes downe frō the mountains wyth horſemen & great power, and conquered all ſtronge fenſed Cities, and all that dwelte in the lande. And out of all cities he tooke ſtronge menne, and ſuche as were meete for the warre to helpe hym. There came ſuche a feare alſoo vppon thoſe countreys, that the indwellers of all the Cities, the Princes, and rulers, and the people together, wēt forth to mete hym as he cam̄e, and receaued hym honorably wyth garlandes & torches, with swich daunces, tabzettes, and pypes. Neuertheleſſe, though they dyd thys, yet myght they not ſwage hys rygorous ſtomacke: but he deſtroyed theyr cities, and hewed downe their woddes. For Nabuchodonoſor the kyng had commaunded hym, that he ſhould roote out all the goddes of the lande, to the intent that he onely myght bee called & taken for the God of the nations, which Holofernes with his power brought vnder hym. So wente he thorow Syria Sobal, and thorow all Appamia, and all Meſopotamia, & came to the Idumeans, in the lande of Gabaa, and Septopolite, and tooke theyr cities, and remayned there thirtye dayes, wherein he cauſed all the whole multitude of hys hoſte to bee gathered together.

When the chyldren of Iſraell that dwelt in Jewry, heard this, they were ſore afrayde of hym. There came ſuche trembling alſo and feare vpon them, that they ſorowed he ſhould doo vnto the citie of Jeruſalem, and the temple of the Lorde, as he he had doone to other cities and their temples. So thei ſent [illegible] all Samaria rounde aboute vnto Jericho, toke in, and occupied al toppes of the mountaynes, and made faſt the townes with walles, and prepared corne for theim agaynſt the battaile. Eliachim alſo the Prieſt wrote vnto all them that dwelt toward Eſdrolon (whiche lieth ouer againſt the great field by Dothaim) and vnto all thoſe by whom men myght haue paſſage vnto them, that they ſhould take in the wais of the mountains, wherby there myght bee any way and paſſage to Jeruſalem, & that they ſhould hold diligent watch wher any ſtraite was betwixte the mountaynes. And the chyldren of Iſraell dyd, as Eliachim the Prieſt of the Lord had commanded them. And al the people cried earneſtely, and humbled theyr ſoules with faſtyngs and prayers, they and theyr wyues. The Prieſtes putte on heary clothes, and layde the yonge babes before the temple of the Lord, and couered the aultar of the Lorde wyth an heary clothe. And with one accord they cried vnto the Lorde God of Iſraell, that theyr chyldren ſhoulde not be geuen into a praye, and their wyues into a ſpoyle, that theyr Cyties ſhold not be layd waſt, and that theyr Sanctuarie ſhold not be vnhalowed, and ſo they to bee a ſhame and rebuke vnto the Heathen. Thenne Eliachim the Hye prieſt of the Lord went rounde about all Iſrael, and ſpake vnto thē: ſaying: Be ye ſure, that the Lord will heare youre petitions, if ye continue ſtedfaſte in faſtynges and prayers, in the ſyghte of the Lorde. Remembre Moyſes, the ſeruaunte of the Lorde, whiche ouerthrewe the Amalechites (that truſted in their myghte and power, in theyr hooſte, in theyr ſhieldes, in theyr charettes and horſemen) not wyth weapons, but wyth holye prayers. Euen ſo ſhal all the enemies of Iſraell bee, if ye continue in thys worke, that ye haue begonne. So vpon this exhortation, they continued in prayer before the Lord. In ſo much that thei which offred brent ſacrifices vnto the Lord, offred the offryngs vnto the Lorde, beyng arayed in hearye clothes, and aſhes vpon theyr heades. And they al beſought God from their whole heart, that he would viſite his people of Iſraell.

And worde came to Holofernes the Prince of the warres of the Aſſirians, that the chyldrē of Iſraell prepared themſelues to make reſiſtance, & how they had ſtopped the ways betwyxt the mountaynes. Then was he exceedyng wrothe, and called all the Princes of Moab, and the Captaynes of Ammon, and ſayde vnto them: Tell me what people is thys, that kepeth in the mountaynes? Or what maner of cities are they? what is theyr power? Or what maner of hoſt haue thei? who is their captain? And why do they deſpiſe vs

more then al those that dwell in the East, and come not forth to meete vs, that they myghte receaue vs wyth peace? Then Achior the captayne of the Ammonites aunswered, and said: Sir if it please thee to heare, I wyll tel the truth before thee, concernynge the people that dwelle in the moun-taynes, and there shal no lye go out of my mouth. This people is of the generation of the Chaldees, they dwelt fyrste in Mesopotamia, for they wold not folow the godues of their fathers that were in the land of the Caldees, and so forsooke they the customes of their forefathers (whiche had manye gods) and worshypped one God, that made heauen and earth: which also cō maunded thē, that they should go frō thence, and dwell at Haran. Nowe when there camme a dearthe into the whole lande, they wente downe into Egypt, and ther they dwelt four. C. yeares, in the which they multipyed so greatly, that their hoost myght not be numbred. And when the Kinge of Egypt oppressed theym, and subdued them in building of his Cities wyth makyng of clay and bricke, they cryed vnto God their Lord which punished the whole lande of Egypte with dy-uers plages. Now when the kyng of Egipt let them go their way, and the plage ceassed, and then folowed after them, to take them, and to bring them agayne into hys seruice, whyle they were flying away, the God of heauē opened the sea, so that ẏ waters stode fast vpon both the sydes as a wal, and these went through the botome of the sea dry shod. In the whych place whē an innumerable people of the Egyptians folowed vpon them, they were so ouerwhelmed wyth the waters, that there remayned not one, to tel thē that cam after, howe it happened. So whē thys people was passed through the red sea, they came into the wildernes of mount e Sinai, where neuer man might dwel afore, and where the sonne of man had neuer rested. There were the bytter waters made sweete for them, that they myght drynke, and forty yeares had they meat from heauen. Whersoeuer they went (wythout bow and arowe, without buckler or sword) theyr god fought for them, and caused them to haue the victory.
Yea, no man was able to hurte thys people, except it were so, that they departed vnfaythfullye from the worshypping of the Lord their God. But as ofte as they worshypped any other beside their God, he gaue theym ouer to bee spoyled, to be slayne, and to bee putte to confusion. Neuertheless, as oft as they were sorye for departynge from the worshippe of their God, the same God of heauen gaue thē power and strength to wythstand their ene-myes. Moreouer, they slew the kynges of the Cananytes, Iebusites, Pheres-ytes, Hethytes, Heuytes, and Amorites, and of al the mighty in Heshebon and tooke their landes and Cities in possession: and so longe as they sinned not in the sight of their God, it went wel with them, for their God hateth vnryghteousnes. For in tymes paste, when they wente oute of the waye, which God had geuen them, that they shoulde walke in it, they wer destroy ed in diuers battels of many nations, and many of them were caryed away prysoners vnto a strange coūtry. But now lately they haue tourned thē sel-ues agayn vnto ẏ Lord their God, & are come together again out of ẏ coū-treis where they wer scatted abrode: and thus haue they conquered these mountaynes, and dwel therin: and as for Ierusalem where their Sanctuary is, they haue it agayne in possessyoon. And therfore my Lord, make dily-gent inquisition, yf thys people haue done wickednes in the syght of theyr God, then let vs go vp agaynste thē, for doubteles their God shal deliuer them into thy handes, and subdue thē vnto thy power. But if this people haue not displeased their God, wee shal not be able to wythstande thē, for their God shal defende thē, and so shal we be a shame to al the worlde. Now when Achior hadde spoken oute these wordes, al the greate men of Holofernes

nes were wroth, and thought to slay him, and sayd one to another, what is hee which dare saye, that the children of Israell are able to withstand Nabuchodonosor the kyng and hys host? where as they are an vnwepened people, without strength or vnderstanding of the feates of warre? That Achior therfore may know that he hath disceaued vs, we wyl goe vp into the mountaynes: and when the mightye men of them are taken, hee also shalbe stricke wyth the sweard, that all people may knowe, that Nabuchodonosor is the God of the earthe, and that there is none other wythout him.

¶ The.vi. Chapter.

SO when they had lefte of speaking, Holofernes toke sore indignation, and sayde vnto Achior: For so much as thou haste prophecied vnto vs, saying: that the people of Israell shalbe defended of their God, I wyl shewe thee, that there is no God but Nabuchodonosor. Yea, when we slaye them al as one manne, thou also shalt perysh ewyth them through the sweard of the Assirians, and all Israel shalbe destroyed wyth thee, and then shalt thou fele that Nabuchodonosor is the Lord of the whole earth. Then shal the sweard of my knyghthode go throughe thy sides, and thou shalte fal downe stricke amonge the wounded of Israel, and shalt not com to thy selfe agayne, but be vtterlye destroyed wyth them. But if thou thinkest thy prophecy to be true, why doest thou then change thy colour? why Bart thou afrayed? Thinkest thou that my woordes are not able to be performed? But that thou mayest knowe that thou shalt fele these things with them, beholde, from this houre forth wyl I send thee vnto yonder people, that when the punishemente of my sweard (which they haue worthelye deserued) falleth vppon theym, thou mayest be punyshed with theym. So Holofernes commaunded his seruantes to take Achior, and to carye hym vnto Bethulia, and to deliuer him into the handes of the children of Israel. Then Holofernes seruantes tooke him, and wente throughe the plaine felde. But when they drewe nye vnto the mountaynes, the slynge casters came out agaynst them: Neuertheles they gat them away by the side of the mountayne, and bounde Achiors hand and foote to a tree, and so lefte hym bounde wyth wythes, and tourned agayne vnto their Lord. Notwithstandinge, the chyldren of Israell wente downe from Bethulia, camme vnto him, loosed him, brought him into Bethulia, sette him in the myddest of the people, and asked hym, what the matter was, that the Assirians hadde lefte him bound? Osias the sonne of Micha of the trybe of Simeon, and Charmin (which is also called Gothoniel) were the principal rulers at the same tyme. Nowe when Achior stoode in the middest of the Senatoures, and before them al he told them what answer he gaue Holofernes, to ꝑ thinge that he asked him, and howe Holofernes people wouldе haue slayne hym for so sayinge, and howe Holofernes hymselfe was wroth, and commaunded him for the same cause to be deliuered vnto the Israelytes: that whē he ouercame the children of Israel, he myght commande Achior also to bee put to death wyth dyuers tormentes, because he said: ꝑ God of heuē is their defender. And when Achior had plainly told out al these thinges, al the people fel downe vpon their faces, prayeng the Lorde, and poured oute theyr prayers together vnto the Lorde, with a general complaynt and weping, and saide: O Lorde God of heauen and of earth, behold their pryde, and loke vpon oure lowlines, and consider how it standeth wyth thy Sainctes, and make it to be knowen that thou forsakest not those, which hold them fast by thee, and howe that thou bringest them lowe, that presume of themselues, and make their boaste in theyr owne strength. So whē the weping and prayer of the people (whiche they had made the whole day long) was ended, they conforted Achior, sayinge:

The

The God of oure fathers, whose power and strength thou haste prayed, shall so reward thee, that thou shalte rather see theyr destruction. When the Lord our God then shall geue his seruants this libertie, God be also with thee among vs: so that if it pleasethee thou with all thyne mayst dwel with vs. Now when Ozias had ended the councell, he tooke him into his house, and made a great supper, called the elders to it, and so they refreshed theim selues after the fastynge. And afterward was all the people called together, which made their prayers all the nyght long in the congregation, and besought the God of Israell for help.

¶ The. vii. Chapter.

THe next daye, Holofernes commaunded his hoste, to go vp to Bethulia: * There were an hundred & twenty thousand fyghting men on foote, and twoo and twentye thousand horsemen, besyde the preparyng of them that wer won, and came to them on euery syde out of the countreys and cities whiche he had taken. All these prepared theym selues vnto the battail against the Israelites, and came by the hill side, vnto the top that looketh ouer against Dothaim, from ỹ place which is called Belma, vnto Chelmō, that lieth toward Esdrelon. Nowe when the childerne of Israell saw so great a multitude of the Assirians, they fell downe flatte vppon the ground, strawed ashes vpon their heades, & prayed with one accord, that the God of Israell wold shew his mercy vpō his people. And so they toke their weapons, and sat betwixt the mountains in the narowe place, & kepte the way day and nyght. But while Holofernes was goyng about, he fouṅd the water spryng which from the South syde was conueyde into the citie by a Condite: this commanded he to be direct an other way, and cut their Condite asunder. There were welles also not farre from the walles, which they vsed secretly, more for pleasure, thē for Neceſſitie. Then went the Ammonites, and the Moabites vnto Holofernes, and said: The childzen of Israell trust neither in speare nor arowe, but haue taken in, and kept the mountaines & hils. That thou mayst ouercom them therfore, without the strikynge of any battel, set mē to kepe ỹ welles, that they draw no water out of them: So shalt thou destroy theim without sweard, or at the least, they shall be so feble, that they must be fain to geue ouer the citie: whiche they thynke not able to be won, for so muche as it lieth in the mountains. These words pleased Holofernes well, & all his men of warre, and * he set an hundreth at euery well round about. And whenne this watch had endured twenty dais, the Cesternes and all that had water, failed them ỹ dwelt in the city of Bethulia, so that in the whole Citie they had not drinke inough for one day, for ỹ people had water geuen thē daily in a measure. Then came the mē & womē yong persons, & childzen all vnto Ozias, and saide all with one voyce: God be iudge betwixt vs and thee, for thou hast delte cruell with vs, thou wouldest not speake peaceably wyth the kynge of the Assirians, therefore hathe God sold vs in their hands, and there is no man to help vs wheras we ar brought downe before their eies in thirst & great destructiō. Therfore gather nowe together all the people that be in the citie, that we may all yelde oure selues willingely vnto the people of Holofernes: for better it is, that we be captiue, and prayse the Lord with our liues, then to be slaine & perysshe, & to be laughed to scorne, and shamed of euery man, whē we se our wiues & chyldzen dye before our eies. We take heauen and earth this daye to recorde, and the God of our fathers, which punisheth vs accordyng to the destruynge of our syns) and geue you warnyng that ye geue vppe the citee nowe into ỹ power of Holofernes hoste, that our ende maye be shorte with the sweard, whiche elles shall endure longer, for wante of water, and for thyrste.

Jn. 16.a D

Ex. 17.a

When

When they had spoken out these wordes, there was a great weepynge and howlyng in the whole congregation, and that of euery man, and they cried on whole hower longe vnto GOD with one voyce, saying: We haue sinned with our fathers, we haue doone amysse, we haue delt wickedly. Thou that art gracious, haue mercye vppon vs, punishe our vnrighteousnes with thyne owne scourge, & geue not those ouer, that knowledge thee, vnto a people that knowe thee not, least they say amonge the Heathen: Where is their God? And when they were so werye with this crying and weepyng, that they helde their tongues, Ozias stode vp with watry eyes, and said: O take good hertes vnto you (dere brethren) and be of good chere, and let vs wayt yet these fyue dayes for mercye of the LORD: peraduenture he shall put away his indignation, and geue glory vnto his name. But if he help vs not when these fiue days are past, we shal doo as ye haue sayde.

The. viii. Chapter.

AND it happened when these woordes came to the eares of Judith a widow, which was the daughter of Merari, the sonne of Idor, the sonne of Joseph, the soonne of Osia, the sonne of Elai, the sonne of Jammor, the sonne of Jedeon, the sonne of Raphoim, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Melchia, the sonne of Enam, the sonne of Nathania, the son of Salathiell, the soonne of Symeon, the sonne of Ruben. And her husband was called Manasses, whiche dyed in ꝑ days of ꝑ barley haruest. For while he was bindyng the sheaues together in the fielde, the heate came vpon his head, and he died at Bethulia his citie and there was he buried beside his fathers. Nowe was Judith his desolate widowe thre yeares, and six monethes. And in the hyer partes of her house, she made her self a priuy chamber, where she dwelt, beyng closed in with her maides. She ware a smocke of heare, and fasted all the dayes of her lyfe, excepte the Sabbothes, and newe Moones, and the solemne dayes that the people of Israell kept. She was a very faire and beautiful person. Her husband also had left her great riches, plenteous houshold, great vnmoueable possessions, and many cattell. Thys Judith was of a verye good reporte with euery one, for she feared the lord greatly, and there was no bodye that spake an euyll woorde of her. When this Judith heard, howe Ozias had promised the people, that after the fift day, he woulde geue vp the citie vnto the Assirians, she sent for the Elders, Chambri, and Charmi, and whenne they came to her, she sayd: What thyng is this, wherin Osias hath consented that if God help not within fiue dais he will geue ouer the citie to the Assirians? What are ye, that ye tempt the Lorde? This deuise obteineth no mercy of god, but prouoketh him to wrath and displeasure. Wyll ye set the mercy of the Lord a tyme, and appoynt hym a daye after your wyll? Neuertheles, for so muche as the Lorde is patiente, let vs rather repent, pouryng out teares, and beseechyng hym of grace. For God threatneth not as a man, neither wyll he bee prouoked vnto wrathe as the chyldren of men. And therfore let vs heartily fal downe before him, and serue hym wyth a meeke spirite, and wyth weppyng eies say vnto the Lord, that hee deale with vs, accordynge to hys owne wyll and mercye: that lyke as our heart is nowe vexed & brought lowe thorow the pride of them, it may be so comforted thorow his grace: in so muche as we folow not the synnes of oure fathers, whiche forsoke theyr God, and worshypped other goddes: for the whyche synne they perysshed with the swearde, were spoyled, and broughte to shame of all theyr ennemyes. As for vs, we knowe none other God, but onely hym, for whose comforte lette vs tary with meekenes. He shal require and make inquisition for our blood, frome the vexations of our enemies: he shall bryng downe all the Heathen that ryse vp agaynst vs,

and

and put them to dishonoure, euen the D Lorde oure God Therfore deare brethren, seynge ye are the honorable and elders in the people of god, vnto whō al the people haue respect, & vpō whō the lyfe of the people standeth, lyft vp their hertes with youre exhortations that they maye call to remembraunce, howe our fathers also in tymes paste were tempted, that they myght be pro ued, if they worshipped theyr God aryght. They ought to remēber, howe III our father Abraham beyng tempted, and tryed thorow many tribulations, was found a louer and frend of God.
So was Isaac, so was Jacob, so was Moses, and al they that pleased God, beyng tryed thorowe many troubles, were found stedfast in fayth. Agayne, they that receaued not their temptations with the feare of God, but put them selues forthe with vnpacience and murmurynge agaynst God, perished of the destroyer, and were slayne of the serpentes. And therfore should not we vndertake to bee auenged, for the thynge that is doone vnto vs, but consider, that all these punyshmentes are farre lesse then our sinnes and mis dedes. Beleuyng also that this correc tion commeth vnto vs (as to the ser-E uauntes of God) for amendment, and not for oure destruction. Then sayde Olias and the elders vnto Judith: Al that thou speakest, is true, & no mā can reproue thy wordes. Praye thou for vs nowe therefore vnto God, for thou art an holye woman and feareſt God. And Judith sayde vnto theym: Seyng that ye knowe that my word-des are of God, then proue my counsel and deuice, if it be of God: and beseche God that he will bringe my counsell to good ende. Thus haue I deuysed: Ye shall stande thys nighte before the port, and I will go forth with Abra my mayden. Praye ye therefore vnto God, that he will graciously remember his people of Israell within fyue dayes, as ye haue sayde. As for the thyng that I go in hand withall, aske ye no question of it, till I open it vnto you my selfe: do ye nothyng els but praye vnto the Lord your God for me.
Then Ostias the prince of the people of Juda sayde vnto her: Go thy way in peace, the Lorde be with thee, that we maye be auenged of our enemyes.
And so they went from her agayne.

¶ The. ix. Chapter.

NOwe when they were gone A their way, Judith went into her closet, putte on an hearye smock, strowed ashes vpon her head, fell downe before the Lord, and cryed vnto him, saying: O Lord God of my father Simeon, which gaueſt hym a Gen. 24d sweard for a defence agaynst the ene-myes that vsed violence and wylfulnes, and that rauished the virgin, and put her to dishonesty. Thou that gaueſt their wiues into a praye, and their daughters into captiuitie, and al their praye for a spoyle vnto thy seruantes, which bare a zele vnto thee: helpe me a widowe O Lord my God, I beseche thee. For thou haſte done all thinges from the beginninge: and looke what thou haſt taken in hand and deuyſed, it came euer to passe For al thy ways are prepared, and thy iudgementes, are done in thy euerlastyng foreknowledge. O loke nowe vpon the armyes of the Assirians, lyke as it was thy pleasure sometyme to loke vppon the hoſt of the Egyptians, when they beyng weapened, persecuted thy seruan-tes, and put their truſt in their charet tes, horsemen, and in the multitude of their men of warre. But thou lokedſt vppon their hooſte, castynge a thicke darkenes before them: and when they came into the deepe the waters ouerwhelmed them. Euen so Lord, let it B go with these: that truſt in the power and multitude of their men of warre, in their charets arowes and speares, and knowe not that thou onelye arte our God, whiche deſtroyeſt warres from the beginning, and that thou art the Lord. O lift vp thyne arme nowe, lyke as euer from the begynnyng, and in thy power bringe their power to naught: cause their might to fal in thy wrath. They make their booſte, that they wyll vnhalowe and defyle thy ſanctuarie, and to waſt the Taberna cle of thy name, and to caſt downe the horne of thyne Vultare wyth theyr ſwearde. Bryng to paſſe (O Lorde) that the pryde of the enemye may bee cut downe with his owne ſwearde, that he may be taken with the ſnare of his eyes in me, and that thou mayſt ſmite hym with the lyppes of my loue. O C geue me a ſtedfaſt mynde, that I may deſpiſe hym and his ſtrength, and that I may deſtroy hym. This ſhall bring thy name an euerlaſting remembrãce, if the hande of a woman ouerthrowe hym. For thy power (O Lord) ſtan deth not in the power of men, neither haſt thou any pleaſure in the ſtrength of horſes. There was neuer proude perſon that pleſed the, but in the prai er of the humble and meeke hathe thy pleaſure bene euermore. O thou God of the heuens, thou maker of the wa ters, and Lorde of all creatures, heare me poore woman, callyng vpon thee, and puttyng my truſt in thy mercy.

Remembre thy couenaunt, O Lorde, and miniſter woordes in my mouthe, and ſtabliſhe this deuice in my herte, that thy houſe maye continue ſtille in holineſſe, and that all the Hethen may knowe that thou art God, & that there is none other but thou.

C The .x. Chapter.

AND when ſhe had left of cry ing vnto the Lord, ſhe roſe vp from the place where ſhe had layen flatte before the Lorde, and called her mayden, wente downe into her houſe, layd the heary clothe from her, put of the garmentes of her wydow hode, waſhed her body, anoynted her ſelfe with precious thynges, of ſwete ſauour, broided and platted her heare: ſet an houe vpon her head, and put on ſuch apparell as belongeth vnto glad nes, ſlippers vpon her feete, armelet tes, ſpanges, eareringes, fyngerrynges and decked her ſelfe with all her beſte aray. The Lord gaue her alſo a ſpeci all beautie and fayrenes (for all thys deckynge of her ſelfe was not doone for any voluptuouſneſſe and pleaſure of the fleſhe, but of a right diſcretion and vertue, therfore dyd the Lord in creaſe her beautie) ſo that ſhe was ex cedyng amiable and well fauoured in al mens eyes. She gaue her mayden alſo a bottel of wine, a pot with oyle, pottage, cakebread and cheſe, & wente her way. Now when ſhe came to the port of the citie, ſhe found Ozias, and the elders of the citie waytyng there.
Whiche whenne they ſawe her, they were aſtonied, and meruayled great ly at her beautie. Neuertheleſſe, they aſked no queſtion at her, but lette her go, ſaying: The God of our fathers, geue thee his grace, and with his po wer performe al the deuice of thy hert that Ieruſalem may reioyce ouer thee and that thy name may be in the num ber of the holy and righteous. And all they that were there, ſayde with one voyce: So beit, ſo be it. Iudith made her prayer vnto the Lorde, and wente out at the port, ſhe and her mayd. And as ſhe was goyng downe the moun tayne, it hapned that about the ſpring of the daye, the ſpies of the Aſſirians mette with her, and toke her, ſaying: Whence commeſt thou? Or whether goeſt thou? She aunſwered: I am a daughter of the Hebrues, and am fled frome them, for I knowe that they ſhalbe geuen vnto you to be deuoured: becauſe they thoughte ſcorne to yelde themſelues vnto you, that they might fynde mercy in your ſyght. Therfore haue I deuiſed by my ſelfe after this maner: I wil go before the prince Ho lofernes, and tell hym all theyr ſecre tes, and wyll ſhew hym, how he may come by them, and wynne them, ſo that not one man of his hooſte ſhall C periſh. And when theſe men had herd her woordes, and conſydered her fayre face, they wer aſtonied (for they won dred at her excellent beautie) and ſaid vnto her: Thou haſt ſaued thy lyfe by fyndyng out this deuice, that thou wol deſt come downe to our Lord: & be thou ſure, that when thou cõmeſt vnto him he ſhall intreate thee well, & thou ſhalt pleſe him at the hert: So they brought her into Holofernes pauilion, and tolde

tolde hym of her. Nowe when shee came in beefore hym, immediately hee was ouercomme and taken with her beautie. Then sayde his seruantes: Who would despyse the people of the Iewes, that haue soo fayre women? Shoulde we not by reason fyghte against them for these? So when Judith sawe Holofernes sytting in a canapie, that was wroughte of purple, sylke, gold, Smaragde and precyous stones, she loked fast vpon hym, and fell downe vpon the earthe. And Holofernes seruantes toke her vp again, at their lordes commaundement.

¶ The .xi. Chapter.

Then said Holofernes vnto her: Be of good chere, and feare not in thyn heart, for I neuer hurt man that wold serue Nabuchodonosor the king. As for the people, if they had not despised me, I shold not haue lift vp my speare agaynst them. But tell me nowe, what is the cause that thou art departed from them, & wherfore art thou come vnto vs? And Judith sayd vnto hym: Syr, vnderstand the wordes of thy handemayden: for if thou wylt doo after the woordes of thy handmaiden, the Lord shall bryng thy matter to a prosperous effecte. As truely as Nabuchodonosor a Lorde of the lande lyueth, and as truely as his power lyueth, whyche is in thee, to the punyshement of all men that goe wrong, all men shal not onely be subdued vnto hym: thorowe thee, but all the beastes also of the fielde. For all people speake of thy prudent actiuitie: and it hathe euer bene reported, how thou only art good & myghty in all his kyngdome, and thy discretion is cõmended in all landes. The thing is manyfeste also, that Achior spake, and it is welle knowen, what thou commmandest to dooe vnto hym. For thys is playne, and of a surette, that our God is so wroth with vs (by the reason of our synnes) that he hath shewed by hys Prophetes vnto the people, howe that for theyr synnes hee wyll deliuer them ouer vnto the enemye. And for so much as the children of Israel know, that they haue so displeased theyr God, they ar sore afrayd of thee. They suffre great hunger also, and for waute of water, they are deade nowe in a manner. Moreouer, they are appoynted to slea al theyr cattel, that they may drynke the bloud of them, and are purposed to spend al the ornamentes of theyr GOD (whyche he hathe forbydden theym to touche) for corne, wyne, and oyle. Seynge nowe, that they doo these thynges, it is a playne case, that they must nedes bee destroyed. Whiche whenne thy handmayden perceaued, I fledde from them, and the Lord hath sent me vnto thee, to shew thee these thyngs. For I thy handemayden worshyppe GOD euen here nowe despyde thee, and thy handmayden shall go foorthe and I wylle make my prayer vnto GOD, and he shall telle me, when he wyll reworde theym theyr synne: then shall I come and shew thee, and bryngе thee thorowe the myddest of Jerusalem, so that thou shalte haue all the people of Israell, as the shepe without a shephearde: there shall not so muche as one dogge barke against thee: for these thynges are shewed me by the prouydence of GOD: for so muche as GOD is displeased wyth them, hee hath sent me to tell thee the same. These woordes pleased Holofernes and all hys seruantes, whyche meruayled at the wysedome of her, and sayde one to another: There is not suche a woman vppon earthe, in beautie and discretion of woordes. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: God hathe doone well, that he hathe sente thee hyther beefore thy people, that thou mayste geue them vnto our handes. And for soo muche as thy promyse is good, yf thy God performe it vnto me, he shall bee my God also, and thou shalte bee excellente, and greate in the courte of Nabuchodonosor, and thy name shall be spoken of in all the lande.

¶ The.xii. Chapter.

I Then commaunded he her to go in where his treasure laye, and charged that shee shoulde haue her dwellynge there, and appoynted what shoulde be geuen her from hys table. Judith answerd him, and said: As for the meate that thou hast commaunded to geue me, I maye not eate of it as nowe (leste I displease my God) but will eate of such as I haue brought with me. Then sayde Holofernes vnto her: If those things that thou haste broughte wyth thee fayle, what shall we do vnto the? And Judith sayd: As truely as thou liuest my Lord, thy handmayden shal not spend al this, till God haue brought to passe in my hande, the thinges that I haue deuised. So his seruauntes broughte her into the tent, where as he had appoynted. B And as she was goynge in, shee desired that she might haue leaue to go forth by night and before daye to her prayer, and to make intercession vnto the Lorde. Then commaunded Holofernes hys chamberlaynes, that she shoulde go out and in, at her pleasure, to praye vnto God those three dayes. And so in the nighte season she went forth into ỹ valey of Bethulia, & washed her selfe in the well water. Then went she vp, and besoughte the Lord God of Israell, that he woulde prosper her way, for the deliueraunce of his people. And so she went in, and remayned cleane in her tente, tyll she ¶ toke her meate in the euenyng. Upon the fourth day it happened, that Holofernes made a supper vnto his seruantes, and sayde vnto Bagao his chamberlayne: Go thy waye, and councell this Hebrueste, that she maye be wylling to consent to kepe company with me. For it were a shame vnto all the Assirians, that a woman shoulde so laughe a man to scorne, that she were come fromhym vnmedled withall. Then went Bagao vnto Judith, and sayd: Let not the good daughter be afrayde, to come into my Lord, that she may be honoured with hym, that she may eate and drinke wine, and be merye with hym. Unto whom Judith answered: Who am I, that I shoulde saye my Lorde naye? what so euer is good before his eyes, I shall do it: and loke what is his pleasure, that shal I thinke well done, as longe as I lyue. So she stode vp, and decked her selfe with her apparell, and wente in, and D stode before hym. And Holofernes hert was whole moued, so ỹ he brent in desire toward her. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: drinke nowe, and syt downe, and be mery, for thou haste found fauoure before me. Then sayde Judith: Syr, I wyll drynke, for my mynde is meryer to daye, then euer it was in all my lyfe. And she tooke, and dyd eate, and dranke before hym, the thinges that her mayden had prepared for her. And Holofernes was mery with her, and dranke more wine, then euer he dyd afore in all his life.

¶ The.xiii. Chapter.

NOw when it was late in the I nighte, hys seruauntes made haste euery manne to his lodging. And Bagao shutte the chamber dores, and went his way, for they were all ouerladen with wyne. So was Judith alone in the chamber. As for Holofernes, he laye vppon the bed all dronken, and of very dronkennes fell a slepe. Then commaunded Judith her mayden, to stand without before the dooze, and to wayte. And Judith stode before the bed, makyng her prayer with teares, and moued her lyps secretly, and said: Strengthen me, O Lorde God of Israell, and haue respecte vnto the worckes of my handes in this houre, that thou mayest set vp thy citye of Jerusalem, lyke as thou hast promised: O graunt that by thee I maye perfourme the thinge, which I haue deuysed thorowe the beleue that I haue in thee. And when she B had spoken this, she went to the bedsteade, and losed the swearde that hanged vppon it, and drewe it oute. Then toke shee holde of the heare lockes of hys heade, and sayd: strengthen me, O Lorde God in this houre,

and

and with that, she gaue him two strokes vpon the necke, and smote of hys heade. Then tooke she the canappe away, and rolled the deade body aside.
Immediately she gat her forth, and de liuered the heade of Holofernes vnto her mayden, and bad her put it in her wallet. And so these two went forthe together after their custom, as though they wold praye, and so passed by the hoolte, and came thorowe the valley vnto the port of the citie. And Judith cryed a farre of vnto the watchemen vpon the wals: Open the gates (sayd she) for God is with vs, which hath shewed his power in Israell. And when they herd her voyce, they called the elders of the citye together. And they came all to mete her, lytle and great, yong and olde, for they thought not that she should haue come so sone.
So they lighted candels, and gathered about her euerychone, but she wēt vppe into an hye place, and caused sy-lence to be proclaymed. When euerye man nowe helde hys tongue, Judith sayd: O prayse the Lord our God, for he hath not despised nor forsaken thē, that put their trust in him: and in me his handmayden he hath performed his mercye, whiche he promysed vnto the house of Israell: yea, in my hande this same night hath he slayne the ene mye of his people. And with that she toke forth the head of Holofernes out of the wallet, and shewed it them, say ing: Behold the heade of Holofernes the captaine of the Assirians, and this is the canapy, wherin he laye in hys dronkennes: wher the Lord our God hath slayne him by the hand of a woman. But as truely as the Lorde lyeth, his Angell hath kept me, goyng thyther, remaynynge there, and commyng hither againe from thence. And the Lord hath not suffred me his hand maiden to be defiled, but without any filthynes of sinne hath he brought me agayne vnto you: and that with great victorye, so that I am escaped, and ye delivered. O geue thankes vnto hym everychone, for he is gracious and his mercye endureth for euer. So they praysed the Lorde altogether, & gaue thankes vnto hym. And to her they sayde: The Lorde hath blessed thee in hys power, for thorowe thee he hath brought our enemyes to naught. And Ozias the chiefe ruler of the people of Israell, sayde vnto her: Blessed arte D thou of the Lorde the hye God, aboue all wemen vpon earth. Blessed be the Lord, the maker of heauen and earth, which hath gided the aright to wold and to smyte of the heade of the Captayne of oure enemyes. For this daye he hath made thy name so honorable, that thy praise shall neuer come out of the mouth of men, which shall alway remember the power of ꝯ Lord, seyng thou hast not sparcd thyne owne selfe, but put the in ieopardy, considering ꝯ anguishe & trouble of thy people, and so haste helped their fall before God our Lorde. And all the people sayde: Amen, Amen. Achior also was called, E and he came. Then sayd Judith vnto him: The God of Israel vnto whom thou gauest witnes, that he wolde be auenged of hys enemyes, euen hes hath thys nyght thorowe my hande smytten of the head of al the vnfaythfull. And that thou mayest see that it so is, beholde thys is the heade of Holofernes, which in his presumptuous pryde, despysed the God of the people of Israell, and threatened thee with destruction, sayinge: when the people of Israell is taken, I shall cause thee also to be stickte withe the swearde.
When Achior sawe Holofernes head he fell downe before vpon hys face to the grounde for verye anguyshe and feare, so that he sowned with al. But after that he was comme agayne to him selfe, he fell downe before her, and praysed her, sayinge: Blessed arte thou of thy God in all the tabernacles of Jacob: for all the people that heare of thy name, shall prayse the God of Israell because of thee.

¶ The .xiiii. Chapter.

IUdith sayde vnto all the peeple: A Brethren, heare me. Stycke vp this head vpon our walles, and when the Sunne aryseth, take euerye man hys weapon, and falle violentlye: not as thoughe ye woulde go beſyde them, but to renne vpon theym, with violence. When the ſpies in the tentes ſee this, they ſhal of neceſſitie be compelled to flee backeward, and to rayſe vp their captayne to the battell. So when their captaynes come into Holofernes pauilion, and fynde the dead

C body wrapped in the blood, fearefulnes ſhall fall vpon them: and when ye perceaue that they flye, folowe theym without all care, for God ſhal deliuer them vnto you, to be deſtroyed. Then Achior ſeynge the power of GOD, which he had ſhewed vnto the people of Iſraell, fell of from his Heathenithe beleefe, and put his truſt in God, and let hym ſelfe be circumcyſed: and ſo was he numbred among the people of Iſraell, he and all hys poſteritie vnto this day. Nowe as ſone as it was day, they ſtickte vp Holofernes heade vpon the walles, and euery man toke his weapon, and ſoo they wente oute with an horrible crie. When the ſpies ſawe that, they ranne vnto Holofernes tente. And they that were within the tent, came before his chamber, and made a great ruſhynge to wake hym vp, becauſe they thoughte with the B noyſe to haue rayſed hym. For there durſte not one of the Aſſirians knock, go in, or open: But when the captaynes and Princes and all the chiefe in the kyng of the Aſſirians hoſte came together, they ſayde vnto the Chamberlaines. Go your way in, and wake him vp, for the myſe are crepte oute of their holes, and dare prouoke vs vnto battel. Then went Bagao into his chamber, ſtode before the bed, and clapped with his handes, for he thoughte he had bene ſleppynge with Judyth. But when he had herkened perfectly with his eares, and could perceaue no ſterynge, he went nyer to the bed, and lifte it vp, and then ſawe he the deade body of Holofernes lying there with out a heade, weltred in hys blood vpon the earthe. Then cryed he with a loude voyce, and with wepyng rente his clothes, and went into Judithes tent, and founde her not: And ſo he lept out vnto the people and ſayd: one woman of the Iewes, hath brought al Nabuchodonoſors people to ſhame For lo, Holofernes lyeth vppon the grounde, and hath no head. When the cheefe of the Aſſirians hoſt herde that, they rent their clothes, and there fell an intollerable feare and tremblynge vpon them, ſo that their myndes were ſore afrayd. And there was an exceadyng great crye in the whole hoſt.

NOwe when all the hoſt herd A that Holofernes was headed their myndes and councel fell from them: and ſuch a feare came vpon them, that they vndertoke to defend theym ſelues by flyinge awaye: one ſpake not to another, but hanged downe their heades, lefte all behynde them, made haſte to eſcape from the Hebrues: for they herd, that they were haſtyng to come after with their weapons, and ſo they fled by the wayes of the fieldes, and thorowe all the foote pathes of the dales. And when the children of Iſrael ſaw that they fled, they folowed vppon them, and wente downe with trompettes, blowynge and makyng a greate crye afeer them. As for the Aſſirians, they had no order, & kepte not them ſelues together, but fled their waye. Neuertheles, the chyldren of Iſraell fell vppon theym with one company and order, and diſcomfyted as many as they might get. And Ozias ſente meſſaungers vnto all the cytyes and countreys of Iſ- B raell. So all the regyons and euerye cytye ſente oute their beſte men after theym in harneſſe, and ſmote theym with the ſwearde, tyll they came to the vttermoſte parte of their borders: And the other that were in Bethulia came into the tentes of the Aſſirians, and tooke all, that they whiche were fled had lefte behynde theym, and ſoo they founde greate good. And they,

that came agayne to Bethulia from the battayle, tooke with theym suche thynges as hadde bene theirs: there was no number of the cattell, and of all costlye Jewelles, so that from the lowest vnto the hyest, they were all made ryche of the spoyles of theym. And Joachim the hye prieste at Jerusalem, came to Bethulia with all the elders, that they myghte see Judith. Nowe when she came oute vnto theym, they beganne all to prayse her with one voice, saying: thou worshyppe of the citie of Jerusalem, thou ioye of Israell, thou honoure of our people, thou haste doone manlye, and thy hearte is confozted, because thou haste loued cleanlyneſſe and chastytye, and haste knowen no man but thyne owne husband: therfore hath the hand of the Lozde confozted thee, and blessed shalt thou be for euer. And all people sayde: so be it, so be it. In thirtye dayes coulde the people of Israell scarse gather vp the spoyles of the Assirians. But all that belonged vnto Holofernes, and had ben hys, specialye (whether it were of golde, of syluer, precious stone, clothynge, and all ornamẽts) they gaue it vnto Judith. And all the people reioysed, both wemen, maydens, and yong people, with ypes and harpes.

Then songe Judith thys songe vnto the Lozde: Begynne vnto the Lozde vppon the tabzetts, synge vnto the Lozde vppon the cymballes. O syng vnto hym a newe songe of thankes geuynge, be ioyfull and call vppon hys name. It is the Lozde that destroyeth warres: euen the Lozde is hys name. Whyche hathe pytched hys tentes in the myddest of hys people, that he myghte delyuer vs from the hand of all our enemyes. Assur came out of the mountaynes of the Nozthe in the multitude of hys strength. His people stopped the water brokes, and their hozses couered the valleyes, Hee pourposed to haue brente vp my lande, and to slaye my yonge menne wyth the sweorde. He woulde haue caryed awaye my chyldren and virgynnes into captiuitye, but the almyghtye Lozde hyndered hym, and delyuered hym into the handes of a woman, whiche broughte hym to confusion. For theyr myghty was not destroyed of the yonge men. It was not the sonnes of Titan that slewe hym, neyther haue the greate Gyauntes set theim selues agaynste hym: but Judith the daughter of Merary with her fayre bewtye hath dysconfyted hym, and broughte hym to naughte. For shee layde awaye her wyddowes garmente, and putte on the apparell of gladnesse to the reioysynge of the chyldren of Israell. She annoynted her face, and bound vp her heare in an houe to begyle hym. Her slyppers rauysshed his eyes, her bewtye captiuated hys mynde: with the sweorde smote shee of hys necke. The Perſians were astonyed at her stedfastnes, & the Medes at her boldnes. Then howled the armies of the Assirians, when my symple dyre of thirste appeared. The soonnes of the daughters haue pearsed them thorowe, and slayne them as fugitiue children: they perysshed in the battayle for the verye feare of the Lozde my God. Lette vs synge a songe of thankesgeuynge vnto the Lozde, a newe songe of prayse wyll we synge vnto our God: Lozde, Lozde, thou arte a greate God, mighty in power, whom no manne maye ouercome. All thy creatures shoulde serue thee: for thou spakeſt but the word, and they were made: thou sentest thy spryte, and they were created, and no man can withstand thy voyce. The mountaynes shal moue from the foundations with the waters, the stony rockes shall melte before thee lyke waxe. But they that feare thee shalbe great with the in all thinges. Woe vnto the people that ryse vp agaynst my generacion, for the almyghtye Lozde will auenge him selfe of them, and in the daye of iudgement wyll he vysyte them. For he shal gene fire & wormes into their flesh, that they maye burne and kele it for euermore. After this it happened, that after the victory, al the people camme to Jerusalem, to geue prayse and thankes vnto the Lorde. And when they were purifyed, they offered al their brente sacrifyces, and theyr promised offerynges. And Judith offered all Holofernes weapons, and al the iewels that the people had geuen, her, and the canappe that shee toke from hys bed, and hanged theym vp vnto the Lorde. The people was ioyeful, as the vse is: and thys ioye by reason of the victorye, with Judyth, endured thre monthes. So after these daies, euery man went home agayne, and Judith was in greate reputation at Bethulia, and rycht honorably taken in al the land of Israel. Vnto her vertue also was chastitie ioyned, so that after her husbād Manasses dyed, she neuer knew man al the dais of her lyfe. Vpon the hie solempne dayes she went out wyth greate worshyppe. She dwelte in her husbandes house, an hundred and fyue yeare, and lefte her handemayden free, and dyed: and was buryed beside her husbande in Bethulia. And al the people mourned for her seuen dayes. So longe as shee lyued, there was none that troubled Israell, and manye yeares also after her death. The daye wherin this victorye was gotten, was solempnelye holden, and reckened of the Jewes in the number of the holy dayes, and it is yet greatlye holden of the Jewes euer sence, vnto this daye.

The. xi. Chapter after the Latin.

Mardocheus the son of Jair, the sonne of Semei, the sonne of Cisei of the tribe of Ben Jamin, a Jew which had his dwelling in the Cytye of Susis, a man of great reputation and excellent among all them that wer in the kynges courte. (Neuertheiesse, he was one of the prisoners, whome Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babylon hadde caryed awaye frome Jerusalem vnto Babilon wyth Jechonias the king of Juda.) In the seconde yeare of the reygne of greate Artaxerses in the fyrst day of the moneth Nisan, had this Mardocheus such a dreame: He thought he hearde a great tempest, horrible thonder clappes, earthquakes, and great byrour in the land, and that he sawe two greate dragons ready to fyght one agaynst another. Their crye was great. At the which roaring and crye al the Hethen were vp to fyght agaynst the righteous people. And the same daye was ful of darkenes and very vncleare, ful of trouble and anguishe, yea a greate fearefulnes was there in al the lande. The righteous were amased, for they feared the plage and euil that was deuysed ouer them, and were at a point wyth them selues to dis. So they cryed vnto God: & while they were crying, the litle wel grew into a greate ryuer, and into manye waters. And wyth that it was daye, and the Sunne rose vppe agayne, and the lowly were exalted, and deuoured the glorious and proude. Nowe whenne Mardocheus had sene this dreame, he awooke, and mused stedfastlye in his hert, what God wold do: and so he desired to knowe al the matter, and hys mind was therupon until the nyght.

¶ The .xii. Chapter.

AT the same time dwelt Mardocheus wyth Bagatha and Tares in the kinges courte, the Kinges chamberlaynes and porters of the palace. But when he herd their deuyce, and had diligently considered their ymaginations, her perceaued, that they wente aboute to lay their cruel handes upon the king Artaxerses: and so he certifyed the kinge therof. Then caused the kinge to examine the two gelded wyth torments. And when they had granted it, they were put to death. Thys the Kynge caused to be put in the Chronicles for an euerlastynge remembraunce, and Mardocheus wrote up the same matter. So the kinge commaunded that Mardocheus shoulde remayne in the court, and for thys faythfulnes of hys he gaue him a reward. But Aman the sonne of Amadathu the Agagyte, which was holden in greate honoure and reputation in the kinges courte, undertoke to hurte Mardocheus and hys people, because of the two Chamberlaynes that were put to death.

THe greate kinge Artaxerses, whiche reygneth from India and Ethiopia, ouer an hundred and seuen and twenty landes, sendeth his frendly salutatiō unto al the princes and debuties of the countreys, which be subiect unto hys dominion. When I was made Lorde ouer many people, and hadde subdued the whole earth unto my dominion, my mynde was not wyth cruelty and wronge to exalt my selfe by the reason of my power: but purposed with equity alwai and gentlenes, to gouerne those that be under my iurisdiction, and wholye to set them in a peceable lyfe, and therby to bring my kingedome unto tranquilitie that men might safely go thoroughe on euerye syde, and to renue peace agayne, which al menne desyre. Nowe when I asked my counceilers how these thinges myght be brought to a good ende, there was one by us excellent in wisdom whose good wyl truth and faythfulnes hath ofte bene shewed and proued (which was also the pryncipal and next unto the king) Aman by name: whiche certifyed us, howe that in all landes there was scatred abroade a rebellious folcke, that made statutes and lawes against al other people: and haue alway despyted the proclaymed commaundementes of kynges: and howe that for thys cause it wer not to be suffred, that such rule shold continue by you, and not be put downe. Seynge nowe, wee perceaue the same, that this people alone, are cōtrary unto euery man, using strange and other maner of lawes, and wythstande oure statutes and doinges, and go about to stablish shrewed matters that our kingdome should neuer come to good estate and stedfastnesse: Therfore haue wee commaunded, that all they that are appointed in wryptynge and shewed unto you by Aman (whiche is ordeyned and set ouer al our landes) and the moste principal next unto the king, and in maner as a father, shal wyth their wyues and children be destroyed and rooted out wyth the swearde of their enemies and aduersaries, and that there shal be no mercy shewed, and no man spared. And thys shalbe done the .xiiii. day of the month (called Adar) of this yeare, that they which of olde (and nowe also) haue euer bene rebellious maye in one daye wyth violence be thruste downe into the hel, to thinteut that after thys maner oure empyre maye haue peace and trāquility. But Mardocheus thought upon al the woorkes and noble actes of the Lorde, and made his prayer unto him, saying: O Lorde Lorde, thou valiant and almyghtye kinge (for all thynges are in thy power) and yf thou wylte helpe and deliuer Israel, there is no man that can withstand or lette thee: for thou hast made heauen and earth, and what wonderous thing soeuer is under the heauen: thou arte LORDE of al thynges, and there is no manne that canne resist thy maieslye(O Lord.)Thou knowest all thinges, thou wotest Lorde that it was neither of malice,nor of presumption,nor for any desyre of glorye, that I would not bowe downe my selfe, nor worshyp yonder proude presumpteous Aman(for I would haue beene contente,and that wyth good will,yf it might haue done Israel anye good, to haue kyst euen his fote steppes)but that I did it, because I woulde not set the honour of a man in the stede of the glory of God:and because I wold worshyp none but onely thee my Lord And this haue I done in no pride nor presumption. And therfore O Lorde thou God and king,haue mercy vpon my people,or they ymagin how they maye bringe vs to naughte,yea,their mynde and desyre is to destroye,and to ouerthrowe thy people, that hathe euer bene thine enheritance of old. O despise not thy portion, whiche thou halte deliuered and brought out of Egipte for thine owne selfe. Heare my prayer,and be merciful vnto thy people whom thou hast chosen for an heritage vnto thy selfe. Tourne oure complainte and sorowe into ioye,that we maye liue, O Lord,and prayse thy name. O Lorde, suffer not the mouthes of them that prayse thee to be destroyed. All the people of Israel in like manner, cryed as earnestlye as they couldе vnto the Lorde:for theyr death and destruction stode before their eies.

QVene Esther also beynge in the battaile of death, resorted vnto the Lorde, laied awaye her glorious apparel,and put on the garmentes that serued for sighinge and mourninge. In the steede of precious ointment,she scattered ashes and donge vpon her heade: and as for her body,she humbled it wyth fasting and brought it verie lowe. All the places where she was wont to haue ioye afore,those fylled thee wyth the heare that she pluckt of her selfe. She prayed also vnto the Lorde God of Israell wyth these wordes. O my LORD thou only arte our king,helpe me desolate woman whiche haue no helper but thee,for my miserye and destruction is hard at my hand. Fro my youth vp I haue heard out of the kynred of my father,that thou tokest Israel frō amonge al people(and so haue our fathers of their fore elders) that they shoulde be thy perpetual enheritance, and looke what thou dyddest promyse them,thou hast made it good vnto thē B Nowe Lorde,we haue synned before thee,therfore hathe thou geuen vs into the handes of our enemyes,because we worshypped their goddes. Lorde, thou art ryghteous. Neuertheless,it satisfied them not,that we ar in bitter & heauy captiuitie, & oppressed among them, but thou hast layed their hands vpon ỹ handes of their gods: so that they beginne to take away the thinge that thou wyth thy mouth hast ordeined and appointed,& to destroy thyne enheryptaunce,to shutte and stoppe the mouthes of theym that prayse thee,to quenche the glorye and worshyppe of thy house,and thine aulter,and to opē the mouthes of the heathen,that they may prayse the power and vertue of ỹ gods,& to magnify the fleshly king for euer, O Lord, geue not thy sceptre vn C to them ỹ be nothing, least they laugh vs to scorne in oure miserye and fall, but turne their deuyse vpon them selues,and punyshe him that hath begon the same ouer vs, & set him to an example. Thinke vpon vs O Lord,and shewe thy selfe vnto vs in the time of our distresse,& of our trouble. Strēgthen me, O thou king of gods,thou Lord of al power,geue me an eloquēt and a pleasant speche in my mouth before the lion. Turne hys heart in the hate of oure ennempes, to destroye hym, and all suche as consente vnto hym. But delyuer vs wyth thine hande, and helpe me thy handmaide, which haue no defence nor helper,but only the Lord,thou knowest al thynges,thou wotest that I loue not the glory & worshyp of the vnrighteous, and that I hate & abhorre the bed of the vncircumcised, & of al the Hethen Thou knowest my necessitie, that I hate the token of my preeminẽce and worshyp whiche I beare vpon myne head, what tyme as I must shew my selfe, and be sene, and that I abhorre it as an vncleane cloathe, and that I weare it not when I am quiete and alone by my self. Thou knowest also, D that I thy hãdmaidẽ, haue not eatẽ at Amans table, and that I haue had no pleasure nor delite in the kyngs feast, ỹ I haue not dronk ỹ wine of ỹ drinke offeryngs, and that I thy handmaydẽ haue no ioy sens the day that I was brought hyther, vntyll thys day, but onely in thee Lord. O thou God of Abraham, O thou myghtye God above all, heare the voyce of them, that haue none other hope, and delyuer vs out of the hand of the wycked, and deliuer me out of my feare.

¶ The. xv. Chapter.

A MArdocheus also bad Esther goe in vnto the kynge, and praye for her people, and for her contrey. Remember (saith he) the dayes of thy lowe estate, howe thou wast nourished vnder my hande. For Aman, whych is next vnto the kynge, hath geuen sentence of death againste vs. Call thou therfore vpon the Lord, and speake for vs vnto the kynge, and delyuer vs from death. And vpon the thirde day it hapned, that Esther laid away the mournyng garmentes, and put on her glorious apparel, and decked her selfe goodlye (after that she hadde called vpon God, which is the beholder and Sauiour of all thyngs) toke two hand maydens wyth her: vpon the one she leaned her self, as one that was tender: the other folowed her, and bare the trayne of her vesture. The shine of her beauty made her face rose coloured. The similitude of her face was cheerefull and amiable, but her hearte was sorowfull for greate feare. Shee went in thorowghe all the doores, and stode before the kyng. The kyng sat vpon the throne of his kyngdome, and was clothed in hys goodly aray, all of gold, and set with precious stones, & he was very terrible. He lift vp his face that shone in ỹ clerenesse, and looked grymly vppon her. Then fell the Queene downe, was pale and faynte, leaned her selfe vpon the head of the mayd, that went wyth her. Neuertheiesse, God tourned the kynges mynde that he was gentyll, that he leaped out of his seate for feare, and gate her in hys armes, and helde her vp, tyll she came to her self againe. He gaue her louing wordes also, and sayde vnto her: Esther, what is the matter? I am thy brother, bee of good chere, thou shalt not dye: for our commandement toucheth the cõmons and not thee. Come nye. And with that he helde vp his golden rodde, and layd it vpon her necke, and embraced her frendly, and said: Talke with me. Then sayde shee: I sawe thee (O Lorde) as an Aungelle of God, and my hearte was troubled for feare of thy maiestie and clearenesse. For excellente and wonderfulle arte thou (O Lorde) and thy face is full of amitie. But as she was thus speakyng vnto hym, she fell downe again for faynteneſſe: for the whyche cause the kyng was afrayd, and all his ser-seruantes comforted her. B

THe great kyng Artharerses, whiche reygneth frome India, vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred & xxvii. landes, sendeth vnto the Princes and rulers of the same landes, suche as loue hym, hys frendly salutation. There bee many, that for the sondry frendshyps and benefytes, whyche are dyuerslydoone vnto theym, for theyr worshyp bee euer the more proude and hyghe mynded, and vndertake not onely to hurte theyr Subiectes (for plenteous benefyttes maye they not suffre, and begynne to ymagine some thynge agaynst those that do them good, and take not onelye all vnthankfulnesse away awaye from men) but in pryde and pre sumption) as they that be vnmyndful and vnthankefull for the good dedes) they go about to escape the iudgement of God, that seeth all thinges, whiche iudgement hateth and punysheth all wickednesse. It happeneth ofte also, that they whych be set in office by the hyer power, and vnto whom the bu-synes and causes of the subiectes are committed to be handled, waxe proud, and defile them selues with sheading of innocent blood, which bringeth the to intollerable hurt. Which also with false and disceitfull wordes, and with lying tales, disceiue and betray the in-B nocent goodnesse of Princes. Nowe is it profitable and good, that we take hede, make search therafter, and consider, not only what hath happened vnto vs of olde: but the shamefull vnho-nest, and noysome things, that the debities haue nowe taken in hande before our eies, and therby to beware in tyme to come, that we maye make the kyngdome quiet and peaceable for all men: and that we myghte sometyme drawe it to a chaunge: and as for the thing that nowe is present before our eyes, to withstande it, and to putte it downe, after the most frendly maner.

What time nowe as Aman the sonne of Amadathu the Macedonian (a stranger vercly of the Persians blood and farre from oure goodnesse) was come in amonge vs as an aleaunt, and had obtayned the frendshyp that we bear to ward al people, so that he was called our father, and had in hygh henoure of euerye man, as the nexte and principall vnto the kynge, he coulde not forbeare him selfe from his pryde, hath vndertaken, not onelye to robbe vs of the kyngdome, but of oure lyfe.
C With manyfolde disceyte also hath he desired to destroye Mardocheus oure helper and preserver, which hath don vs good in all thinges: and innocente Hester the like partaker of our kyngdome, with all her people. For hys mynd was (when he had taken them out of the way, and robbed vs of the) by this meanes to translate the kingdome of the Persians vnto them of Macedonia. But we fynde, that the Iewes) whiche were accused of the wicked, that they might be destroied) are no euyll doers, but vse reasonable and ryght lawes: and that they be the chyldren of the moste Hygh lyuynge God, by whome the kyngdome of vs and our progenitours hath bene well ordred hytherto. Wherfore, as for the letters and commaundementes, that were put forth by Aman the sonne of Amadathu, ye shall do well, yf ye hold theym of none effecte: for he that sette them vp and inuented them, hangeth at Susis before the porte, with al his kinred, and God (which hath al thin-ges in hys power) hath rewarded him after hys deseruyng. And vppon D thys ye shall publyshe and set vp the coppye of thys letter in all places, that the Iewes maye freelye and without hinderaunce hold them selues after their owne statutes, and that they may be helped, and that vpon the .xiii. day of the .xii. moneth, Adar, they may be auenged of theym, whiche in the time of their anguyshe and trouble, wolde haue oppressed them. For the God that gouerneth all thinges, hath turned to ioye the daye, wherein the chosen people shoulde haue perysshed.
Moreouer, amonge the hye solempne dayes that ye haue, ye shall holde this day also with all gladnesse: that nowe and in tyme to come, thys daye maye bee a remembraunce to good, for all suche as loue the prosperytye of the Persians: but a remembraunce of destruction to those that be seditious vn to vs. All cityes and landes that do not thys shall horyblye perysshe and bee destroyed wyth the swearde and fire, and shall not onely be nomore inhabyted of men, but be abhorred also of the wyld beastes and fowles.

¶ The Booke of Wysedome.

1 Set youre affection vpon ryghteousnes ye that be iudges of the earthe. Haue a good opynion of the Lord, and seke hym in the synglenesse of heart. For he will be founde of them that tempt hym not, and appereth vnto suche as put their trust in hym. As for ẏ froward thoughts, they separate frome God, but vertue (if it be allowed) refourmethe the vnwyse. And why? wisedome shall not enter into a froward soule, nor dwell in the body that is subdued vnto synne. For the holy ghost abhorreth fayned nurtur, & withdrawethe himself frō the thoughtes that are without vnderstandyng: and where wyckednes hathe the vpper hand, he fleeth from thens. For ẏ spirite of wisedom is louyng, gentill, and gracious, and will haue no pleasure in hym that speaketh euill wyth his lips. For God is a witnes of his reines, a true sercher of his heart, and an hearer of his tongue. For the spirite of the Lord filleth the round compasse of the worlde: and the same that vpholdeth all thyngs, hath knowlege 3 also of the voyce. Therefore hee that speaketh vnrighteous things, can not be hyd, neither may he escape ẏ iudgement of reprofe. And why? inquisitiō shalbe made for the thoughtes of the vngodly, and the report of his wordes shal come vnto God, so that his wickednes shalbe punyshed. For the eare of ielousy heareth all thyngs, and the noise of the grudgynges shall not bee hydde. Therfore, beware of murmuryng, whiche is nothyng worthe, and refrayne your tongue frome sclander. For there is no worde so dark and secrete, that it shall go for naughte: and the mouthe that speaketh lyes, sleeth the soule. O seeke not youre owne owne death in the errour of your life, ¶ destroye not your selues thorowe the woorkes of youre owne handes. For God hath not made deth, neither hath hee pleasure in the destruction of the liuing. For he created all thyngs, that they might haue theyr beyng: yea, all the people of the earthe hath he made, that they should haue health, that ther should be no destruction in them, and that the kyngdome of hell should not be vpon earth (for ryghteousues is euerlastyng and immortall, but vnrighteousnes bryngeth death. (Neuertheless, the vngodly call her vnto them bothe with wordes and workes: and while they thynke to haue a frende of her, they come to naughte: for the vngodlye that are confederate with her, and take her part, are worthy of deth.

For the vngodly talke, and imagine thus among theym selues (but not ryghte:) The tyme of 2 our life is but short and tedious: and whē a man is gone, he hathe no more ioye nor pleasure, neyther knowe we any mā that turneth again from deth: for we are borne of naught, and we shalbe hereafter as though we hadde neuer bene. For oure breathe is as a smoke in our nosethyrls, and ẏ word as a sparke to moue our heart. As for our body, it shalbe very ashes that are quenched, and our soule shall banishe as the soft ayre. Oure lyfe shall passe away as the trace of a cloude, and come to naught, as the myst that is dryuen away with the beames of the Sonne and put downe with the heat therof. Our name also shall bee forgotten by lytle and lytle, and no man shall haue our workes in remembrance. For our 5 tyme is a very shadow that passeth away, and after our end, there is no returnyng: for it is fast sealed, so that no man commeth agayn. Come on therfore, lette vs enioy the pleasures that there are, and let vs sone vse the creature lyke as in youthe. Lette vs fyll our selues with good wine and ointmens mente, and let there no floure of the tyme goo by vs. Let vs crowne oure selues with roses afore they be wythered. Let there be no fayre medowe, but our lust go thorowe it. Let euerye one of von be partaker of our voluptuousnes. Let vs leaue some token of our pleasure in euery place, for that is our porcion, els get we nothynge. Let vs oppresse the poore & rightous, let vs not spare the widow nor old man: let vs not regarde the heades that are gray for age. Let the law of vnrighte ousnes be our auctoritie, for the thing ¶ that is feble is nothyng worth. Therfore let vs defraud the ryghteous, and why? he is not for our profite, yea, he is cleane contray to oure doynges. He checketh vs for offendyng agaynst the lawe, and sclaundreth vs as transgressours of all nurtour. He maketh his boaste to haue the knowledge of God, yea, he calleth him selfe Goddes son. He is the bewraier of our thoughtes: It greueth vs also to looke vpon him, for his life is not like other mēs, his wayes are of another fashion. He counteth vs but vayne persones, he withdraweth him selfe frō our ways as frome fylthynes: he commendeth greatly the latter ende of the iuste, and maketh his boast that God is his father. Let vs see then if his wordes be true, let vs proue what shal come vpon him: so shall we know what ende he shall haue. For if he be the true sōne of God, he will receaue him, and delyuer hym from the handes of hys enemyes. Let vs examine hym wyth dyspitefull rebuke and tormentynge, that we may knowe his dignitie, and proue his patience. Let vs condemne him with the moste shamefull death: for lyke as he hath spoken, so shall he be rewarded. Suche thynges doo the vngodly ymagyne, and go astraye, for their owne wickednes hath blynded them. As for the misteryes of God, they vnderstād them not: they neither hope for the reward of ryghteousnes, nor regarde the worshyppe that holy soules shall haue. For God created man to be vndestroyed, yea, after the ymage of his owne likenes made he him. Neuertheles, thorowe envy of the deuyl came death into the worlde: and they that holde of hys syde, do as he doeth. Gen. 3.

¶ The. iii. Chapter.

BVt the soules of the ryghteous ¶ are in the hande of God, and the payne of death shall not touche theym. In the syghte of the vnwyse they appeared to dye, and their end is taken for very destruction. The waye of the ryghteous is iudged to be vtter destruction, but they are in reste. And though they suffer payne before men, yet is their hope full of immortalitie. They are punyshed but in fewe thinges, neuertheles in manye thynges shall they be well rewarded. For God proueth them, and fyndeth them mete for hym selfe: yea, as the golde in the fornace doeth he trye them, and receaueth them as a burnt offeryng, and ¶ when the tyme commeth, they shall be loked vppon. ✣ The ryghteous shall Mat. 13. shine as the sparkes that ren thorowe the red bushe. ✣ They shall iudge the Mat. 19. nations, and haue dominion ouer the people, and their Lord shall reigne for euer. They that put their trust in him shall vnderstand the trueth, and suche as be faythfull, wyll agree vnto hym in loue, for his chosen shal haue giftes and peace. ✣ But the vngodly shall be mat. 23. punyshed accordyng to their owne ymaginacions, for they haue despysed the ryghteous, and forsaken the Lord. Who so despyseth wysdome and nurtoure, he is vnhappye, and as for the hope of suche, it is but vayne, their labours vnfruitfull, and their workes vnprofitable. Their wyues are vndyscrete, and their childzen moste vngodly. Their creature is cursed. Blessed is rather the baren and vndefyled, which hath not knowen ỳ sinful bed: she shall haue fruit in ỳ reward of the holy soules. And blessed is the gelded, which with his hands hath wrought no vnryghteousnes, nor ymagyned wycked thynges agaynste God. For

vnto

vnto him shalbe geuen the special gift of faith, and the moste acceptable portion in the temple of God. For glorious is the fruite of good labour, and the roote of wysedome shal neuer fade awaye. As for the children of aduoutrers, they shal come to an end, and the sede of an vnryghteous bed shalbe rooted out. And though they lyue longe, yet shall they bee nothinge regarded, and theyr laste age shalbe wythoute honoure. If they dye hastely, they haue no hope, neither shal they be spoken to in the day of knowledge. For horrible is the deathe and the ende of the vnryghteous.

¶ The.iiii. Chapter.

O howe fayre is a chaste generation wyth vertue? The memorial therof is immortal, for it is knowen with God & with men. When it is presente, men take exaumple therat, and yf it go awaye, yet they desyre it. It is alwaye crowned and holden in honoure, and winneth the rewarde of the vndefyled battel. But the multitude of vngodly children is vnprofitable: and the thinges that are planted with whordome shal take no depe rote, nor lay any fast foundation. Though they be greene in the braunches for a time, yet they shalbe shaken wyth the winde: for they stande not faste, and throughe the behemencie of the wynd they shalbe rooted out. For the vnperfect branches shalbe broke, their fruite shalbe vnprofitable and sowre to eate: yea, mete for nothynge. And whye? all the children that are borne of the wycked, muste beare recorde of the wyckednes agaynst theyr fathers and mothers when they be asked. But though the ryghteous be ouertaken wyth deathe, yet shal he bee in rest: Age is an honorable thing: Neuertheles, it standeth not onelye in the lengthe of time, nor in the multytude of yeares: but a mans wisedome is the graye heare, and an vndefyled lyfe is the olde age. Hee pleased God, and was beloued of him: so that wher as he lyued amonge sinners, he translated him. Yea sodenly was he take away, to the intent that wyckednesse shoulde not alter his vnderstandinge, and that hipocrisye should not begyle hys soule. For the crafty bewitching of lyes make good thinges darke, the vnstedfastnes also and wyckednes of volupteous desyre, turne aside the vnderstanding of the simple. Though he was soone dead, yet fulfylled he much tyme. For hys soule pleased GOD: therefore hasted he to take him awaye from amonge the wicked. Thys the people see, and vnderstand it not: they laye not vp such thinges in their hertes, howe that the louing fauour and mercye of God is vppon hys sayntes, and that he hath respect vnto his chosen. Thus the ryghtous that is dead, condemneth the vngodlye whych are lyuynge: and the youthe that is soone broughte to an ende, the longe lyfe of the vnryghteous. For they se the ende of the wyse, but they vnderstande not what God hath deuysed for hym, and wherefore the Lorde hath taken hym awaye. And whye? they see him and despyse hym, therefore shall God also laugh theym to scorne: So that they theym selues shall dye hereafter (but without honour) yea in shame among the dead for euermore. For wythoute anye boyce shal he burst those that bee pufte vp, and remoue theym from the foundations, so that they shalbe layed waste vnto the hyghest. They shall mourne, and theyr memorial shall perysshe. So they beyng afrayd, shal remember their synnes: and their owne wyckednes shal bewraye them.

Gen.4.c

¶ The fyfth Chapter.

THen shal the righteous stand in great stedfastnes against suche as haue dealt extreamelye wyth them, and taken awaye theyr labours. When they see it, they shalbe vexed wyth horrible feare, and shal wonder at ỹ halftines of the sodain health: groning for very distres of mind, and shal say within thẽ selues, hauing inward sorowe sorowe, and mourninge for very anguish of mynde. These are they whō we sometyme had in derision, and iested vppon. We fooles thoughte theyr lyfe verye madnes: and their ende to be wythout honoure. But loe, howe they are counted among the children of God, and their portion amonge the saintes: Therfore we haue erred frō the way of truth, the lyght of ryghteousnes hath not shined vnto vs, and ℣ Sun of vnderstanding rose not vp vpon vs, we haue wearied oure selues in the way of wickednes and destruction. Tedious wayes haue we gone: but as for the waye of the Lorde wes haue not knowen it. What good hath B oure pryde done vnto vs? Or what profite hath the pompe of ryches brought vs? All those thynges are passed away like a shadow, and as a messenger running before: as a shyp that passeth ouer the waues of the water, whiche when it is gone by, the trace thereof cannot be founde, neyther the path of it in the fludes. Or as a bird that flyeth through in the ayre, and no man can see anye token where shee is flowen, but onelye heareth the noyse of her wynges, beatinge the lyghte wynde, parting the ayre through the behemencye of her goynge, and flyeth on shaking her wynges, whereas afterward no token of her ways can be founde. Or lyke as when an arowe is shot at a marke it parteth the ayre, which immediatly commeth together agayne, so that a man cannot knowe where it went through. Euen so wee in lyke maner as soone as wee were borne, beganne immediatly to drawe to oure ende, and haue shewed no to-C ken of vertue, but are consumed in our owne wyckednes. Suche wordes shall they that haue sinned speake in the hel: for the hope of the vngodlye is lyke a drye thistle flooze (or duste) that is blowen away with the wind: lyke as a thyn scūme that is scattered abrode wyth the storme: lyke as the smoke whyche is dyspersed here and there wyth the winde, and as the remembraunce of a stranger, that tarryeth for a daye, and then departeth. But the ryghteous shal liue for euermore: their reward also is wyth the Lorde: and theyr remembraunce with the hyest. Therefore shal they receaue a glorious kingdome, and a beautifull crowne of the Lordes hande: for with hys ryght hand shal hee couer theym: and wyth his owne holye arme, shall he defende theym. His gelousye also shall take away the harneys, & he shal weapon the creature to be auenged of the ennemyes. He shal put on righteousnes for a brestplate, and take sure iudgement in stede of an helmet. The inuincible shild of equity shal he take, his cruell wrath shal he sharpen for a speare, and the whole compasse of the D worlde, shal fyght with him agaynste the vnwyse. Then shall the thonder boltes go out of the lyghtninges, and come out of the raynebow of the cloudes to the place appointed: oute of the harde stony indignation, there shal fal thycke hayles, and the water of the sea, shalbe wroth agaynste theym, and the floudes shal runne roughly together. Yea, a myghtye wynd shall stand vp agaynst them, and a storme shal scater them abrode. Thus the vnryghteous dealing of them shal bryng al the land to a wildernes, and wyckednes shall ouerthrow the dwellings of the myghtye.

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

WIsdom is better thē strēgth, and a man of vnderstandinge A is more worth then one that . . . is strong. Heare therfore (O ye kynges) and vnderstand: O lerne ye that bee iudges of the endes of the earth. Geue care ye that rule the multitudes, and delyte in muche people. For the power is geuen you of the Lorde, and the strength from the hiest which shal trye out your ymaginatyons. Howe that ye beinge officers of his kingdome, haue not executed true iudgement, haue not kept the lawe of B the ryghteous, nor walked after the wyl of G O D. Horribly, and that ryghte soone shal he appere vnto you:

for an hard iudgement shal they haue that beare rule. Mercye is graunted vnto the simple, but they that bee in auctho|rytie shalbe sore punyshed. For
S God which is Lorde ouer al, shall ex|cept no mans person, neither shall hee stande in awe of any mans greatnes. For he hath made the smal and great, and careth for al alyke. But the migh|ty shall haue the sorer punyshemente. Vnto you therefore (O ye Kynges) do I speake, that ye may learne wise|dome, and not goe amysse. For they that keepe his ryghteousenesse, shall bee ryghteouselye Iudged, and they that are learned in ryghteous thyn|ges, shal find to make answer. Where|fore set your luste vpon my woordes, and loue them, so shal ye come by nur|tour. Wisdome is a noble thinge, and neuer fadeth away: yea, she is easelye sene of them that loue her, and founde of such as seeke her. Shee preuenteth theym that desyre her, that shee maye fyrste shewe her self vnto them. Who
C so awaketh vnto her betimes, shall haue no great trauaile, for he shal find her sittinge readye at his doores. To thinke vpon her, is perfect vnderstan|dinge: and who so watcheth for her, shalbe safe, and that sone. For she go|eth about, seking such as are mete for her, she weth her self chearefully vn|to them in their goinges, and meeteth theym with al diligence. For the vn|fained desire of reformation is her be|gynnynge: to care for nourture, is loue, and loue is the keping of her la|wes. Now the keepinge of the lawe is perfection, and an vncorrupte lyfe: and an vncorrupte lyfe maketh a man familier with God. And so the desire of wysedome leadeth to the kingdome euerlasting. If your delyte be then in royal seates and scepters (O ye kyn|ges of the people) set your luste vpon
D wisdome, that ye may reygne for euer more. O loue the lyght of wisdome, al ye that be rulers of the people. As for wysedome what she is, and howe she came vp, I wyll tell you: and wil not hyde the mysteryes of God from you: but wyl seke her out from the begyn|ninge of the natiuitie, and bringe the knowledge of her into lyght, and wil not keepe backe the trueth. Neyther wyl I haue to doe with consuminge enuie, for suche a man shal not be par|taker of wysedome. But the multy|tude of the wise is the welfare of the world, and a wyse king is the vphold|inge of the people. O receyue nur|tour then through my woordes, and it shal do you good.

I My self am also a mortal manne, lyke as al other: and am comme of the earthye generation of him that was fyrste made, and in my mothers wombe was I fashioned to be fleshe: In the tyme of ten monethes was I brought together in bloode, throughe the sede of man, and the commodyous appetyte of slepe. When I was borne I receyued lyke ayre as other menne, and fel vpon the earth (whiche is my nature) cryinge and wepinge at the fyrst, as all other do. I was wrapped in swadling clothes, and broughte vp with greate cares. For there is no king that had any other beginnyng of byrth. All men haue one entrance vn|to lyfe, and one going out in lyke ma|ner. Wherfore I desired, and vnder|standing was geuen me: I called, and the spirite of wisdome came vnto me.
B I set more by her, then by kingdomes and royal seates, and counted ryches nothinge in comparison of her. As for precious stone, I compared it not vn|to her, for al golde is but grauel vnto her, and siluer shalbe counted but clay before her syght. I loued her aboue welfare and beawtye, and purposed to take her for my lyghte, for her lyghte cannot bee quenched. Al good thinges come to me with her, and innumera|ble riches through her handes. I was gladde in them al, for thys wysedome went before me, and I knew not that she is the mother of al good thinges. Now as I my self learned vnfay|nedly, so do I make other men partа|kers of her, and hide her riches from noman: for shee is an infinite treasure vnto men, which who so vse, become partakers of the loue and frendshyp of God, and are accepted vnto hym for the gyftes of wisedome. GOD hath graunted me to talke wyselye, and cōuenientlye to handle the thynges that C he hath gratiouslye lent me. For it is hee that leadeth vnto wysedome, and teacheth to vse wysedome aryght. In his hand are both we and our wordes: yea, al our wysedome, our vnderstanding and knowledge of al our woorkes. For hee hath geuen mee the true science of these thynges: so that I knowe, howe the worlde was made, and the powers of the elementes: the beginning, ending, and middest of the tymes: howe the tymes alter, howe one goeth after another, and how thei are fulfylled, the course of the yere: the ordynaunces of the starres: the nature and kindes of beastes, the furiousnes of beastes: the power of the wyndes: the ymaginations of men: the diuersities of ponge plantes: the vertues of rootes, and al such thynges as are secrete and not loked for, haue I learned:

D For the woorkemaster of all thynges hath taught me wysedome. In her is the spirite of vnderstanding, which is holy, manyfold, onely, subtil, curteous, discrete, quicke, vndefyled, playne, swete, louing the thing that is good, sharpe, whyche forbydden not to doo well, gentle, kind, stedfast, sure, free, hauing al vertues, circumspect in al things: receyuing al spirites of vnderstanding, being cleane and sharpe. For wisdome is nimbler then al nimble thinges: she goeth throughout and attayneth to al thinges, because of her cleannes. For she is the breath of the power of God, and a pure cleane expressing of the clearnes of almyghtye God. Therefore cannot vndefyled thinge come vnto her: for shee is the brightenes of ye euerlasting lyght, the vndefyled mirrour of the maiestie of God, and the image of hys goodnes. And for so much as she is one, she maie doe al thinges, and beinge stedfast her selfe, shee renueth all: and amonge the people conueyeth she her selfe into the holy soules. She maketh Gods frendes and prophetes: for God loueth no man, but him in whom wisdom dwelleth. For she is more bewtiful then the Sunne, and geueth more lyght than ye starres, and the day is not to be compared vnto her: for vpon the day commeth nyght. But wyckednes cannot ouercome wysedome: and folyshnesse may not be wyth her.

The. viii. Chapter.

WYsedome reacheth from one ende to another myghtelye, and louyngly doeth she order . . . al thynges, I haue loued her and laboured for her, euen from my youth vp: I dyd my diligence to mary my selfe wyth her, such loue hadde I vnto her bewtye. Who so hath the cōpanye of God, commendeth her nobylitie: yea, the Lord of all thynges hym selfe loueth her. For she is the schole maistresse of the nurture of God, and the choser oute of hys woorkes. If a man would despyse riches in this lyfe, what is richer then wysedome that woorketh all thynges? Thou wylte saye: vnderstanding woorketh. What is it among al thinges, that woorketh more then wysedome? If a man loue beleue and ryghteousnes, let hym labour for wysedome, for she hath great vertues. Find why, she teacheth sobernes and prudence, ryghteousnesse and strength, which are suche thynges as men can haue nothinge more profitable in their lyfe. If a man desire much knowledge, she can tel the things that are passe, and dyscerne thinges for to come, shee knoweth the subtelties of wordes, and can expounde darke sentences. She can tel of tokens & wonderous thynges, or euer they come to passe, and the endes of al tymes and ages. So I purposed after this maner I wyl take her vnto my compayne, and come louingly wyth her: no doute she shal geue me good counsayle, and speak comfortably vnto me in my carefulnes and grefe. For her sake shal I be, wel, and honestly taken among the commens and Lordes of the councell. Though I be ponge, yet shall I haue shrpe vnderstãding, so that I shalbe meruailous in the syght of great mẽ, and the faces of prynces shall wonder at me. When I hold my tongue, they shal abide my leisure: When I speake they shall loke vpon me, and if I talke muche, they shall laye their hands vpon theyr mouth. Moreouer, by the meanes of her, I shal obtaine immortalitie, and leaue behynde me, an euerlastyng memoriall among theym that come after me. I shall sette the people in order, and the nations shall be subdued vnto me. Horrible tyrants shall be afrayd, when they doo heare of me: among the multitude I shalbe counted good, & myghtie in battaile. When I come home, I shall fynd rest with her: for her cõpany hath no bitternes, and her felowshyp hathe no tediousnes, but mirth and ioye. Now when I consydred these thinges by my self, and pondered them in my heart, howe that to be ioyned vnto wisedom is immortalitie, and great pleasure to haue her frendshyp, howe that in the workes of her handes are infinite riches: howe that who soo kepeth companye with her, shalbe wise: & that he which talketh with her, shall come to honor: I went aboute seekyng to gather her vnto me: For I was a ladde of a ripe wyt, and had a good vnderstandyng. But when I grewe to more vnderstandyng, I came to an vndefyled body. Neuertheless when I perceyued that I could not kepe my selfe chaste, except God gaue it me (and that was a poynte of wisedome also, to knowe whose gyfte it was) I stepped vnto the Lord, & besought hym, & wyth my whole heart I sayd after this maner.

The.ix. Chapter.

O God of my fathers, & Lord of mercies (thou that hast made all thyngs with thy worde, & ordeined man thorow thy wysedome, that he should haue dominion ouer the creature whiche thou hast made: that he should order the worlde accordyng to equitie and ryghtousnes, and execute iudgement with a true heart) geue me wysedome, sit by the that euer about thy seat, and put me not out from among thy children: for I thy seruant and sonne of thy handmaiden am a feble person, of a short tyme, & to ponge to the vnderstandynge of iudgement, and the lawes. And though a man be neuer so perfect among the children of men, yet if thy wisedome be not wyth hym, he shalbe nothing regarded. But thou hast chosen me, to be a kynge vnto the people, and the Iudge of thy soonnes and daughters. Thou hast commaunded me to buylde a Temple vpon thy holye mount, and an aultar in the Citie wherin thou dwellest: a lykenesse of thy holy tabernacle, whiche thou hast prepared frome the begynnynge, and thy wysedome wyth thee, whyche knoweth thy woorkes, which also was with thee, whẽ thou madest the worlde, and knewe what was acceptable in thy sight, and right in thy commaundements. O sende her out of thy holy heauens, and from the throne of thy maiestye, that shee may bee wyth me: and labour wyth me, that I maye knowe what is acceptable in thy syghte. For shee knoweth and vnderstandeth all thynges: and shee shall leade me soberly in my woorkes, and preserue me in her power. So shall my woorkes be acceptable, and thenne shall I gouerne thy people rightously, & bee worthy to syt in my fathers seate. For what mã is he, that may know the counsel of god? Or who can thinke what the will of God is? For the thoughts of mortall men are measurable, and our forecastes are but vncertayn. And why? a mortall and corruptible body is heauy vnto the soule, & the earthly mansion kepeth downe that vnderstandyng that museth vpõ many things. Very hardly can we discerne the things that are vpon erth, and great labour haue we, or wee can fynde the thynges whiche are before oure eyes: who wyll then seke out the ground of the things that are doon in heauen? O Lord, who can haue knowlege of the vnderstandyng and meanynge, excepte thou geue hym wysdom, and send thy holy ghost from aboue, that the wayes of theim which are vpon earth, may be reformed: that men may learne the thynges that are pleasaunte vnto thee, and be preserued thorowe wisdome.

For by the thynges, wherē-

where thorowe their enemyes were punyshed, wer the childzen of Israell helped in their nede, to their comforte. For vnto the enemyes thou gauest mans blood in stede of lyuynge water. And where as they had scarcenes in the rebuke, when the childzen wer slayne, thou gauest vnto thyne owne a plenteous water vnlooked for: declarynge by the thirste that was at that time, howe thou woldest bzyng thine owne vnto honoure, and slaye theyr aduersaryes. ¶ For when they were tryed and nourtured with fatherlye mercy, they knowledged how the vngodly were iudged, and punished thorowe the wzath of God. These hadst thou exhorted as a father, and proued thē: but vnto the other thou hast bene a boysterous kyng, layed hard to their charge, and condemned theym. Whether they were absent or present, their punyshmente was a lyke. For their grefe was double: namely, mournyng and the remembzance of thinges past. But when they perceaued that their punyshmentes dyd theym good, they thought vpon the Lozde, and wondered at the ende. For at the laste they held much of him, of whom in the out castyng they thought scorne, as of an abiecte. Neuertheless, the ryghteous dyd not so when they were thirstye: but euen lyke as the thoughtes of the foolyshe were, so was also their wickednes. ¶ Wher as certayne men now (thorow erroz) dyd worshyp dombe serpentes and vaine beastes, thou sendest a multitude of domme beastes vpon them for a vengeaunce: that they might knowe, that loke where with all a manne synneth, by the same also shall he be punyshed. ¶ For vnto thy almightye hand, that made the world of naughte, it was not vnpossible, to send among them an heap of Beares, or wood Lyons, or cruell beastes of a straunge kynd, such as are vnknowē, or spoute fire, or caste oute a smoking breath, or shote horryble sparkes oute of their eyes, whiche mighte not onely destroye theym with hurtynge, but also kyll theym wyth their horryble sighte. Yea, without these beastes mighte they haue bene slayne with one wynd, beynge persecuted of their owne worckes, and scatered abzod thorowe the bzeath of thy power. Neuertheless, thou hast ordzed all thynges in measure, number and weight. For thou hast euer had great strength and might, and who maye withstande the power of thyne arme? And why? like as the small thynge that the balaunce weyeth, so is the world before the: yea as a dzoppe of the mozning dewe, that falleth downe vpon the earthe. Thou hast mercye vpon all, for thou hast power of al thinges: ¶ and makest the as though thou sawest not the sinnes of men, because they shoulde amende. For thou louest all the thynges that are, and hatest none of theym, whome thou hast made: neither dyddest thou ordeyne or make any thynge, of euyll will. Howe might any thyng endure, if it wer not thy will? Or how could any thyng be preserued, except it wer called of thee? But thou sparest all, for all are thyne (O Lozde) thou louer of soules.

The.xii. Chapter.

O Lozd howe gracious & swete is thy spirtte in al thynges.) Therfore chastenest thou thē measurably that go wrong, and warnest theym concernynge the thynges wherin they offend: thou speakest vnto them (O Lozd) and exhortest them to leaue their wickednesse, and to put their truste in thee. ¶ As for those olde inhabytoures of thy holy lande, thou myghtest not awaye with theym, for they committed abhominable worckes agaynst thee: as witchecrafte, sorcery, and Idolatry, they slewe their owne childzen without mercy: they dyd eate vp mennes bowels, and deuoured the blood: yea, because of such abhominacions, mysbeleues and offerings, thou slewest the fathers of the desolate soules by the handes of oure fathers: that the lande whiche thou louest aboue all other, myght be a dwellynge for the childzen of God. Neuertheles thou sparedst them also as men) & sendedst the lore runners of thyne host euen hornettes to destroye theym oute by litle and lytle. Not that thou wast vnable to subdue the vngodlye vnto the righteous in battaile, or wyth cruel beastes, or wyth one rough worde to destroye them together: • But thy Exo.23d mind was to dryue them out by lytle and litle, geuinge theym tyme and place to amende: knowing wel, that it was an vnryghteous nation and wicked of nature, and that their thought myght neuer be altered. For it was a cursed sede from the begynninge, and feared no man: Yet haste thou pardoned their synnes. For who wyll saye vnto thee: why haste thou done that? ℭ Or who wil stand agaynst thy iudgement? Or whoe wil come before thy face an auenger of vnrighteous men? Or who wil blame the, yf the people perysshe, whom thou haste made? For there is none other GOD but thou, 1Pet.9a • that carest for all thynges: that thou mayest declare howe that thy iudgement is not vnryght. There dare nether kinge, nor tyraunte in thy syghte requyre accomptes of thē whom thou haste destroyed. For so muche then as thou art ryghteous thy selfe, thou or- Iob.9.a. dreste all thynges ryghteously, • and punisheste euen him that hath not deserued to be punyshed, and tokest him for a straunger and an aleaunt in the land of thy power. For thy power is the begynninge of ryghteousnes: and because thou art Lord of all thynges, therfore art thou gracious vnto all. When men thinke thee not to bee of a full strēgth, thou declareste thy power: and boldly delyuereste thou them ouer that knowe thee not. But thou Lord of power iudgeste quietlye, and ordreste vs wyth greate worshippe, for thou D mayest doo as thou wylte. By suche workes nowe haste thou taughte thy people, that a man also shoulde be iust and louinge: and haste made thy chyldrē to be of a good hope: for euen whē thou iudgeste, thou geueste rowme to amend from synnes. For in so muche as thou haste punyshed, and wyth such diligence delyuered the ennemyes of thy seruauntes, which were worthye to dye (where throughe thou gaueste them tyme and place of amendement, that they myght turne from their wickednes) wyth howe greate diligence then punisheste thou thyne owne children vnto whose fathers thou haste sworne and made couenantes of good promyses? So where as thou doeste but chasten vs, thou punisheste our enemyes dyuers wayes, to the intente that when we punish, we shoulde remember thy goodnes: and when wee our selues are punished, to putte oure truste in thy mercye. Wherefore, where as men haue lyued vngouernably, and vnryghteously, thou haste punyshed them sore, euen through the same thinges that they worshypped. • For they Sap.11b went astraye verye longe in the waye of errour, and held the beastes (which euen their enemyes despysed) for goddes, lyuinge as children of no vnderstanding. Therefore haste thou sente a scorneful punyshment amonge them: as among the children of ignorance. As for such as would not be reformed by those scornes and rebukes, thei felt the worthy punishment of God. For the thinges that they suffered, they bare thē vnpaciētly, being not contēt in them, but vnwyllinge. And when they perysshed by the same thinges that they tooke for goddes, they knowledged them, that there was, but one true God, whome afore they woulde not knowe: therfore came the end of their damnation vpon them.

ℭ The.xiii. Chapter.

VAyne are al men, which haue not knowelege of God: • as were they that out of the good thinges whiche are seene: knewe not him, that of him selfe is euerlastinge. Neyther toke they so much regard of the workes that are made, as to know who was the craftesman of them, but some toke the fyre, some the winde or ayre, some the course of the starres, some the water, some tooke Sun and Mone, for the lyghtes of heuē which rule rule the earth for gods. But though they had such pleasure in their beawty that they thought them to haue beene goddes: yet should they haue knowen howe muche more fayrer hee is that made them. For the maker of beawtye hath ordeyned al these thynges. Or if they merueled at the power and workes of them, they should haue perceaued therby, that he whiche made these thynges, is myghtyer then they. For by the greatnes and beawty of the creature, the maker thereof may plainelye be knowen. Notwithstandinge they are the lesse to bee blamed, that seeke God, and woulde fynde hym, and yet mysse. And why? for so much as they go about in hys workes and seeke after them, it is a token, that they regard and holde muche of hys woorkes that are sene, howbeit they are not wholly to be excused. For yf their vnderstanding and knowlege be so greate, that they can discearne the worlde and the creatures, whye done they not rather find out the Lorde therof? But vnhappye are they, and amonge the deade is their hope, that calle theym Goddes, which are but the workes of mennes handes: gold, siluer, and the thing that is found out by cunninge, the similytude of beastes, or anye vayne stoane that hath bene made by ỹ hand of old.

Psa. 115 but cursed is the ydoll that is made wyth handes, • yea both it, and he that made it. Hye, because he made it: and it, because it was called God, where as it is but a fraple thyng. • For the vngodlye and hys vngodlynes are bothe lyke abhominable vnto God. Euen so the worke and he that made it also, shalbe punyshed together. Therefore shal there a plage come vpon the ydols of the hethen: for out of the creatures of God they are become an abhomination, and temptation vnto the soules of men, and a snare for the feete of the vnwyse. And why, the seking oute of ydols is the begynning of whordome and the bryngynge vp of theym is the destruction of lyfe. For they wer not from the begynning, nether shall they continue for euer. The wealthy ydlenes of men hath founde them out vpon erth, therfore shal they com shortly to a nende. When a father mourned for hys sonne that was taken awaye from him, hee made hym an ymage in ¶ al the hast of hys dead sonne: and so he began to worshyp him as God, which was but a dead man, and ordeined his seruants to offre vnto him. Thus by processe of time, and throughe an vngracious custome, thys errour was kept as a law: and tyrauntes compelled men by vyolence to honour ymages. As for those that were so farre of, that men myght not worshyp theym presently, their pycture was brought from farre (lyke the ymage of a kyng whom they woulde honour) to thintente that wyth greate diligence they myght worshyp him which was farre of, as though he had bene presente. Agayne, the singular conninge of the craftesman gaue the ignorant also a great occasion to worshyp ymages. For the workman willing to do him a pleasure that set him a worke, labored with al his cunninge to make the ymage of the best fashion. And so (throughe the bewtye of the worke) the commen people was dysceaued, in so much that they tooke him nowe for a God, which a lytle afore was not honoured as a manne. And thys was the errour of mans life, when men (either for to serue their owne affection, or to do some pleasure vnto kinges) ascrybed vnto stones and stockes the name of God, which ought to be geuen vnto no man. Moreouer, this was not ynoughe for theym that they erred in the knowledge of God: but where as they lyued in the great warres of ignorance, those many and greate plages called they peace. For ether • they Den. 18 slue their owne childzen, and offered them, or dyd sacrifice in the night season, or els held vnreasonable watches: so that they kept nether life nor mariage cleane: but eyther one slue another to death malicyously, or els greued hys neyghbour wyth aduoutrye. And thus were al thinges mixt together, blood, manslaughter, theft, dyssimulation, corruption, vnfaithfulnes sedition, periurie, disquieting of good men, vnthankfulnes, defyling of soules, chaunging of byrth, vnstedfastnes of marryage, mysorder, of aduoutrye and vnclennes. And why? the honouringe of abhominable ymages is the cause, the beginning and end of al euil For they that worshyp Idols, eyther they are mad when they be merye, or prophecye lyes, or lyue vngodlye, or els ryghtlye forsweare theym selues.

D For inso much as their trust is in the ydols (whiche haue neither soule nor vnderstanding) thoughe they sweare falsely, yet they thinke it shal not hurt them. Therfor commeth a great plage vppon theym, and that worthelye: for they haue an euil opinion of God, geuynge heede vnto Idolles, swearing vniustly to dysceaue, and despysinge ryghteousnes. For they swearing is no vertue, but a plage of them that synne, and goeth euer wyth the offence of the vngodlye.

BVt thou (O our GOD) arte sweete, long suffring and true, and in mercye ordrest thou all thynges. Though wee synne, yet are we thyne, for we knowe thy strengthe. If wee synne not, then are wee sure, that thou regardest vs. For to knowe thee, is perfect ryghteousnes. Yea, to knowe thy ryghteousnes and power, is the roote of immortalitie. As for the thing that men haue found out thorow their cuyl science, it hathe not deceiued vs: as the painting of the picture (an vnprofitable labour) carued image, with diuers colors whose sight enticeth the ignorant: so that he honoreth and loueth the picture of a dead image that hath no soule. Neuer B the lesse, they that loue such euil thinges, ar worthy of deth: they that trust in them, they that make the, they that loue theym, and they that honure theym. The potter also taketh and tempreth soft earth, laboreth it, and geueth it the fashion of a vessel, what so euer serueth for our vse: and so of one piece of claye, he maketh some cleane vessell for seruice, and some contrarye. But wherto euery vessel serueth, that knoweth the potter hymselfe. So C his vain labor, he maketh a god of the same clay, this dothe euen he, whiche a little afore was made of earthe hym selfe, and within a little while after, (when he dieth) tourneth to earth agayne. Not withstandyng, he careth not the more, because he shall labour, nor because his lyfe is short: but stryueth to excell goldsmithes, the syluer smithes, and coppersmythes, and taketh it for an honour, to make vayne thyngs. For his hearte is ashes, hys hope is but vayn earth, and his life is more vile then clay, for so much as he knoweth not his owne maker, that gaue him his soule to worke, and breathed in hym the breath of lyfe. They count our life but a pastyme, and oure conuersation to bee but a market, and that men should euer be gettyng, and that by cuyl meanes. Now he that of D earth maketh frayle vessels, and ymages, knowethhym selfe to offende aboue all other. All the enemies of the people, and that hold them in subiection, are vnwyse, vnhappy, and exceedyng proude vnto theyr owne soules, for they iudge al the Idols of the hea then to be gods, whiche neither haue eye sight to see, nor noses to smell, nor eares to heare, nor fyngers or handes for to grope: and as for their feete they are to slowe to go. For man made the and he that hath but a borowed spirit fashioned them. But no mā can make a God lyke vnto hym: for seyng he is but mortall hymself, it is but mortall that he maketh with vnrighteous handes. He hym selfe is better then they, whom he worshyppeth: for he liueth, though he was mortall, so dyd neuer they. Yea, they worshyp beastes also, which ar most miserable, for compare thyngs that can not feele vnto theym, and they are worse then those. Yet is there is not one of these beastes, that with his sight can beholde any good thyng, neither haue they geuen praise nor thankes vnto God.

FOr these and suche other thinges haue they suffered worthy punishment, and thorow the multitude of beastes are they rooted oute. In stede of the whiche punishments, thou hast graciously prouyded thyn owne people, and geuen them theyr desyre, ỹ they longed for: a newe and straunge taste, + preparing them quailes to bee their meat: to the intent ỹ (by the thinges which were shewed and sent vnto them) they that were so greedy of meat, might be withdrawen euen frō the desire ỹ was necessarye. But these within short time were brought vnto pouertie, and tasted a newe meat. For it was requisite that (without any excuse) destruction shold com vpō those which vsed tyrānye, and to shew onely vnto the other, howe their ennemies were destroyed. + For when the cruel wodnes of the beastes came vpon thē, they perished thorow the stinges of ỹ cruell serpentes. Notwithstandynge thy wrathe endured not perpetually, but they were put in feare for a litteli season, that they might bee reformed, hauing a token of saluation, to remēber the commaundement of thy lawe. nyght. For there appeared vnto them a sodayne fire, verye dredefull: At the whiche (when they sawe nothynge) they were so afrayd, that they thoght the thinge which they sawe, to be the more fearfull. ¶ As for the sorcery and enchauntment that they vsed, it came to derision, and the proude wysdome was brought to shame. For they that promised to dryue away the fearefulnes and drede from the weake soules, were sick for feare of them selues, and that with scorne. And though none of the wonders feared theym, yet were they afrayd at the beastes which came vpon them, and at the hyssynge of the serpentes. In so much that with tremblynge they sowned, and sayde they sawe not the ayre, whiche no man yet maye escape. For it is an heuy thing, when a mans owne conscience beareth recorde of hys wickednesse, and condempneth him. And whyle a vexed and wounded conscience, taketh euer cruell thinges in hande. ¶ Fearfulnes is nothynge els, but a declarynge that a man seketh helpe and defence, to answere for hym selfe. And looke howe muche lesse the hoape is wythin, the more is the vncertentie of the matter, for the whiche he is punyshed. But they that came in the mightye nyght: slepre the slepe that fell vppon theym from vnder and from aboue: somtime were they afrayde thorowe the feare of the wonders, and sometyme they swer so weake that they sowned with all: for an hasty and sodayne fearefulnes came vpon them. Afterwarde, yf any of them had fallen, he was kepte and shutte in prison, but wythoute cheynes. But if any dwelte in a village, yf he had ben an hearde or husbandman, he suffred intollerable necessitie: for they were al bound with one chayne of darkenes. Whether it were a blasyng wynde, or a swete songe of the byrdes amonge the thycke braunches of the trees, or the vehemencye of hastye runnynge water, or greate noyse of the fallinge downe of stones, or the playing and running of beastes whom they sawe not, or the myghtye noyse of rorynge beastes, or the sounde that aunswereth agayne in the hyghe mountains: it made them sown for very feare. For all the earth shyned wyth clere lyght, and no man was hindered in his labour. Only vpon them there fell a heuy nyght, an ymage of darkenesse that was to com vpon them. Yea they were vnto them selues, the most heauy and horrible darkenes.

NEuerthelesse, thy sainctes had a very great lyght (and the enemies herde their voyce, but thei sawe not the figure of them.) And because they suffred not the same thinges, they magnified thee: & they that were vexed afore (because they were not hurt now) thanked thee, and besought the, O God, that there might be a difference. Therfore hadde they a burnyng piller of fyre to leade theym in the vnknowen waye, and thou ganest theym the Sunne for a free gifte without any hurt. Reson it was that they should want lyght, and be put in the prison of darknes, which kept thy children in captiuitie, by whom the vncorrupt lyfe of the law of the world was for to be geuen. ¶ When they thought to slea the babes of the righteous (one beyng layde out, and preserued to bee leader vnto the other) thou broughtest oute the whole multitude of the chylderne, and destroyedste these in the myghtye water. Of that nyghte were our fathers certifyed afore, that they knowyng vnto what othes they had geuen credence, myght be of good cheere. Thus thy people receaued the healthe of the righteous, but the vngodlye were destroyed. For lyke as thou haste hurte our enemies, so hast thou promoted vs, whome thou calledst afore. For the ryghteous chyldren of the good men offred secretely, and ordred the law of righteousnes vnto vnitie: that the iust shuld receaue good and euyll in lyke manner, syngynge praises vnto the father of all men. Again, there was herd an vnconuenient voice of the ennemies, and a piteous crye for childzen that were bewailed.

C The master & the seruaunt were punished in like maner. For they altogether had innumerable that died one death. Nether wer the liuyng sufficient to bury the dead, for in ỹ twynkling of an eie, the noblest nacion of thē was destroyed. As oft as God helped them afore, yet wold it nat make them beleue: but in the destruction of ỹ first borne they knowledged, that it was the people of God. For while al thinges were styll and when the nyghte was in the middest of her course, thy Almightye worde (O Lorde) leapte downe from heaven out of thy royall throne, as a rough man of war, in the middest of the land that was destroyed: and the sharpe swerde persourmed thy strayte commaundemente, standynge and killynge all thynges wyth death: yea it stode vpon the earth & reached vnto the heauen. Then the sight of the euil dreames vexed them sodenly, and fearefulnesse came vpon theim vnawares. Then laye there one here, another there halfe dead, halfe quicke, & shewed the cause of his deth. For ỹ visions that vexed them shewed them these thinges afore: so that they were not ignorant, wherfore they perished.
D The tentacions of death touched the righteous also, and among the multitude in the wildernesse there was insurrection, but thy wrath endured not long. For the blamelesse man went in all the haste, and toke the battell vpon him, brought forth the weapon of hys ministration: euen prayer, and the censours of reconcilynge: set him selfe agaynst the wrath, and so broughte the misery to an ende: declarynge thereby that he was thy seruant. For he ouercame not the multitude with bodelye power, nor with weapons of mighte: but with the worde he subdued hym that vexed him, putting them in remēbraunce of the othe & couenaunt made vnto the fathers. For when the dead wer fallen down by heapes one vpon another, he stode in the middest, pacified the wrath, & parted the way vnto

C The.xix. Chapter.

AS for the vngodly, the wrath came vpō them without mercy vnto the end. For he knew before what shold happen vnto them: howe that (when they had consented to let them go, and had sent oute with great diligence) they wouldе repente, and followe vpon theym. For when Exo.14a they were yet mournyng & makynge lamentaciō by the graues of the dead, they deuised another folishnes: so that they persecuted them in their flying, whom they had caste oute afore with prayer. Worthy necessitie also broght thē vnto this ende, for they had cleane forgotten the thynges that happened vnto them afore. But the thinge that was wantynge of their punyshment, was requisite, so to be fulfylled vpon them with tormentes, that thy people might haue a maruelous passage thorowe, and that these myghte fynde a straunge death. Then was euery creB ture fashioned agayne of newe, accordyng to the will of their maker, obeynge thy commaundementes, that thy childzen might be kept without hurt. For the cloude ouershadowed their tentes, and the drye earthe appeared, wher afore was water, so that in the redde sea, there was a way without impediment, and the greate depe became a greene fyelde: wherethorowe all the people wente that were defended with thy hande, seeynge thy wonderous and maruelous workes. For as the horses, so were they fedde, and leapt like lambes, prayling the (O Lord (which haddest deliuered them: and why? they were yet myndfull of the thynges, that hapned whyle they dwelt in the land: howe the grounde brought forth flies in stede of cattell: and howe the riuer scrauled with the multitude of frogs in stede of fyshes.

But

But at the laste, they sawe a newe ng creation of birdes, what tyme as they were disceiued with lust, and desyred delicate meates. For when they wer speakyng of their appetite, the quay-les came vp vnto them from the sea, & punishements came vpon the sinners, not without the tokens whiche came to passe afore by the vehemency of the streames: for they suffered woorthyly accordyng to theyr wickednesses. they dealt so abhompnably and churlishely with straungers. Some receyued no vnknowen gestes, some broughte the strangers into bondage, that did them good. Beside all these thinges, there were some, that not only receyued no strangers with theyr willes, but persecuted those also, and did them mu-che euill, that receaued theym gladly.
Therefore were they punished with blyndnesse, like as they that wer co-uered with sodayn darknes at the dores of the rightous, so that euery one sought the entrance of his doze. Thus the elements turned into them selues lyke as when one tyme is changed vp-on an instrument of musike, and yet al the residue kepe their melody: whiche may easily be perceiued, by ỳ sight of the thynges that are come to passe.
The dry land was turned into a watery, and the thynge that afore swam in the water, wente nowe vppon the dry grounde. The fyre had power in the water (contrary to his own ver-tue) and the water forgate hys owne kynde to quenche. Againe, the flames of the noysome beastes hurte not the fleshe of them that went with theim, neyther melted they the yse, whyche elles melteth lyghtely. In all thyn-ges haste thou promoted thy people (O Lorde) and brought them to honour: thou hast not despised them, but alway, and in al places, thou hast stād by theym.

The ende of the boke of wysedome.

The boke of Iesus the sonne of Syrach, whiche is called in latin, Ecclesiasticus.

The prologue of Iesus, the sonne of Syrach vnto his boke.

Many & great mē haue declared wisedom vnto vs out of ỳ law, out of ỳ Prophets, & out of other ỳ folowed them. In ỳ which things Israel ought to be cōmended, by ỳ reason of doctrine & wisdom: Therfore, they ỳ haue it & rede it, should not only thēselues be wise there thorowe, but serue other also, with teaching & writing. After ỳ my grandfather Iesus had geuē diligēt labor to reade ỳ law, ỳ prophets, & other bokes, ỳ wer left vs of our fathers, & had wel exercised himself therin: he purposed also to write som thing of wisdom & good maners, to ỳ intēt ỳ they which wer willing to lern & to be wise, might haue ỳ more vnderstanding, & be ỳ more apt to leade a good cōuersation. Wherfore I exhort you to receiue it louingly, to rede it with diligēce, & to take it in good worth, though our words be not so eleqūt as the fa mous orators. For ỳ thing ỳ is writtē in ỳ Hebrue tong, soūdeth not so well whē it is translated to an other speech. Not only this boke of myn, but also the law, ỳ Prophets, & other bokes sound farre otherwise, than they do, whē thei are spokē in their own language. Now in ỳ. xxxviii. yeare, Whē I came into Egypt in ỳ time of Ptolemy Euerges, & cōtinued there all my life, I gat libertie to rede & write many good things. Wherfore I thought it good & neces sarie, to bestow my diligēce & trauaile to interprete this boke. And cōsidering that I had tyme, I labored & did my best, to performe this boke, & to bring it vnto light: ỳ ỳ strāgers also which ar disposed to lern, might apply thē selues vnto good maners, and lyue according to the law of the Lord,

2.Re.3.b

All wisedome + cometh of god the Lord and hathe bene euer with him, and is before all tyme. Who hath numbred ꝑ sād of the sea, the drops of the rayne, and the dayes of tyme? Who hath measured the heigth of heauen, the breadth of the earthe, and the depenes of the sea? Who hath sought out the ground of Goddes wisdome, whiche hath bene before all thynges? wisdome hath bene before all things, and the vnderstandynge of prudence from euerlasting. (Gods word in the heigth is the well of wisdome, and the euerlastynge commaundementes are the entraunce of her.) Vnto whome hath the rote of wisedome bene declared? Or who hath knowen her wittes? Vnto whō hath the doctryne of wisdome bene discouered and shewed? and who hath vnderstande the many B fold entraunce of her? There is one: euen the Hyest, the maker of all thinges, the Almighty, the kyng of power (of whom men ought to stande greatlye in awe) whiche sytteth vpon hys trone, beynge a God of dominion: He hath created her thorowe the holye ghost: he hath sene her, numbred her, and measured her: He hath poured her out vpon all his workes, and vpon all fleshe accordyng to his gyft: he geueth her richely vnto them that loue hym. The feare of the Lorde is worshyppe and triumphe, gladnesse and a ioyfull crowne: The feare of the Lorde maketh a mery hert, geueth gladnes, ioye and longe lyfe. Who so feareth the Lorde, it shall goo well with hym at the laste, and in the day of his death he shall be blessed. The loue of God is honorable wisdome: loke vnto whom it appeareth, they loue it, for they see what wonderous thynges it doeth.

C • The feare of the Lord is the begynnyng of wisdom, and was made with the faythfull in the mothers wombe, it shall go with the chosen wemē, and shalbe knowen of the ryghteous and faythfull. The feare of the Lord is the righte Gods seruyce, that preserueth and iustifyeth the hearte, and geueth mirth and gladnesse. Who so feareth the Lorde shall be happye, and when he hath nede of comforte, he shall be blessed. To feare God is the wisdome that maketh ryche, and bryngeth all good with her. She fylleth the holle house with her gyftes, and the garners with her treasure. The feare of the Lord is the crowne of wysdome, and geueth plenteous peace & health. Hee hath seene her and numbred her, (bothe these are the gyftes of God) knowledge and vnderstanding of wisdom hath he poured out as rayne, and them that held her fast, hath he brought vnto honoure. The feare of the Lorde is the rote of wisdome, and her braunches are longe lyfe. In the treasures of wisdome is vnderstanding, and deuotion of knowledge, but wysdome is abhorred of synners. The feare of D the Lord driueth out sinne: for he that is without feare cannot be made righteous, and his wilfull boldnes is hys owen destruction. A patient man will suffer vnto the tyme, and then shall he haue the reward of ioy. A good vnderstandyng will hyde hys wordes for a tyme, and many mennes lyppes shall speake of hys wisdome. In the treasures of wisdom is the declaracion of doctryne, but the sinner abhorreth the worshippe of God. My sonne, if thou desire wisdome, kepe the commandemente, and God shall gene her vnto thee: for the feare of the Lorde is wisdome and nurture, he hath pleasure in faythe and louyng meknesse, and he shal fyll the treasures thereof. Be not obstinate and vnfaythfull to the feare of the Lorde, and come not vnto hym with a double hearte. Be not an ypocrite in the sight of mē, and take good hede what thou speakest. Marke wel these things, leste thou happen to fall and bring thy soule to dyshonour, and so God dyscouer thy secretes, and cast the downe in the middest of the congregation: because thou woldest not receaue the feare of God: and because thy heart is ful of faynednes and disceate.

¶ The. ii. Chapter.

3 My sonne, • if thou wilt come into the seruice of God, stād

Holde thee fast vpon God, ioyne thy self vnto hym, and suffer that thy lyfe maye encrease at the last. Whatsoeuer happeneth vnto thee, receaue it: suffer in heauynes, and be pacient in thy trouble. • For lyke as gold and syluer are

Holde fast hys feare, and growe therein. O yee that feare the Lorde, take sure holde of his mercye: shrynke not away from him, that ye fal not. O ye that feare the Lorde, beleeue hym, and youre reward shall not bee emptye. O yee that feare the Lorde, put your trust in him, and mercy shal come vnto you for pleasure. O ye that feare the Lord, set your loue vpon him, and your hertes shalbe lightned. Consyder the old generations of 11a wel: • was there euer any one confoūded, that putte his trust in the Lorde? who euer continued in hys feare, and was forsaken? Or whom did he euer despyse, that called faythfullye vppon him? For God is gracious and mercyful, he forgeueth synnes in the time of trouble, & is a defender of all them that seke him in the truth. Woe be vnto him that hath a double heart, wicked lips and euil occupied handes, and to the sinner ỹ goth two maner of waies Woe bee vnto theym that are loose of hert, which put not their trust in god and therfore shal they not be defended of hym. ¶ The. iii. Chapter.

3 The children of wisdome are a congregacion of the righteous; and their exercise is obedience and loue. Heare me youre father (O my deare children) and do thereafter, that ye maye be safe. • For the Lorde Exo. 20b will haue the father honoured of the children: and loke what a mother cōmaundeth her children to do, he wyll haue it kepte. Who so honoureth hys father, hys synnes shall be forgeuen him: • and he that honoureth his mo- Ephe. 6a

He that feareth the Lorde, honoureth ¶ but the mothers curse roteth oute the foundations. Reioyce not when thy father is reproued, for it is not honor vnto thee, but a shame. For the worshyp of a mans father is his owne worshippe, and where the father is without honoure, it is the dishonesty of the sonne: My sonne, make muche of thy father in his age, and greeue him not as longe as he lyueth. And yf hys vnderstanding fayle, haue pacience with him, and despyse him not in thy stregthe. For ỹ good dede that thou shewest vnto thy father, shal not be forgotten, and when thou thy selfe wantest, it shalbe rewarded thee (and for thy mothers offence, thou shalt be recompensed with good: yea, it shalbe founded for thee in ryghteousnes) & in the day of trouble thou shalte bee remembred: thy sinnes also shal melte away, like as the yce in the fayre warme wether. He that forsaketh his father, shal come to shame: and he that defieth his mother, is cursed of God. My sonne, perfourme thy workes with louyng mekenes, so shalt thou be loued aboue other men. The greater thou arte, the more humble thy selfe (in al thynges) and thou shalt find fauor in the sighte of God. For greate power belongeth onelye vnto God, and he is honoured of the lowlye. Seke not the thinges that are aboue thy capacitie, and serch not the grounde of suche thinges as are to myghty for thee: but loke what god hath cõmanded thee, thinke vpon that alway, and be not curious in many of hys workes. For it is not nedeful for thee to se with thyne eies, the thynges that are secrete. Make not thou to muche searche in superfluous thynges, and bee not curious in many of hys woorkes: For manye thynges are shewed vnto thee alreadye, which be aboue the capacitye of men. The medling with such hath begyled many a man, and tangleth theyr witte in vanitie. Now he that loueth peryll, shall perysshe therin. An harde hearte shal fare euil at the last: (and he that loueth daunger, shall perish therin) an heart that goth two ways, shal not prosper: and he that is froward of heart, wyl euer be worse and worse.) A wycked hert shalbe laden with sorowe, and the vngodlye synner wyll heape one synne vppon another. The councell of the proude hath no health, for the plante of synne shalbe rooted oute in theym, and not knowen. The heart of him that hath vnderstanding shall perceaue hie thinges, and a good eare wyll gladlye herken vnto wysedome. An heart that is wise and hath vnderstanding, wyl abstaine frõ synnes, and increase in the woorkes of ryghteousnes. Water quencheth burnynge fyre, and mercye reconcyleth synnes. God hath respecte vnto hym that is thankeful: he thinketh vppon him agaynst the time to come: so that when he falleth, he shal find a stronge holde.

My sonne, defraude not the poore of his almes, and turn not awaye thyne eyes from him that hath nede. Despise not an hũgrye soule, and defye not the poore in his necessitie: greue not the hearte of him that is helpelesse, and withdrawe not the gyfte frome the nedefull. Refuse not the prayer of one that is in trouble, turne not away thy face from the nedye. Caste not thyne eyes aslyde from the poore, for any euill will, that thou geue him none occasion to speke euyll of thee. For if he complayne of thee in the bitternes of his soule, hys prayer shalbe herd, euen he that made him, shal heare him. Be curteous vnto the companye of the poore, humble thy soule vnto the elder, and bowe downe thy head to a man of worshyp. Let it not greue thee to bowe downe thyne eare vnto the poore, but pay thy det, and geue him a frendlye answere, and that with mekenesse. Deliuer him that suffereth wronge frome the hand of the oppressour, & be not faynt herted whẽ thou sittest in iudgement Be mercyful vnto the fatherlesse as a father, and be in steade of an husbande vnto their mother: so shalt thou be as an an obedient sonne of the Lyest, and he shall loue thee more then thy mother doeth: Wisdome quyckeneth life into her children, receaueth them that seke her, and will go before them in the way of ryghteousnes. He ỳ loueth her, loueth lyfe: and they that seke her diligently, shall haue great ioye. They that kepe her, shall haue the heritage of lyfe: for where she entreth in, there is the blessyng of God. They that honoure her, shalbe the seruauntes of the holy one: and they that loue her, are beloued of God. Who soo geueth care vnto her, shall iudge the Heathen: and he that hath respect vnto her, shall dwel safely. Hys that beleueth her, shal haue her in possession, and hys generacion shal endure: for when he falleth, she doeth go with him and choseth hym among the beste. Feare, drede and temptacion shal she bryng vpon him, and trye him in her doctrine: tyll she haue so proued him in his thoughtes, that he commit his soule vnto her. Then shall she stablyshe him, bryng the right way vnto him, make him a glad man, shew him her secretes, and heape vpon hym the treasures of knowledge, vnderstandyng and ryghteousnes. But if he go wrong, she shall forsake him, and geue him ouer into the handes of his enemye. My sonne, make muche of thy tyme, eschue the thinge that is euyll, and for thy lyfe, shame not to saye the truth. For there is a shame that bringeth synne, and there is a shame that bringeth worshyp and fauoure. • Accept no person after thine owne will, that thou be not confounded to thyne owne decaye. Be nat ashamed of thy neyghbour in his aduersitie, and kepe not backe thy counceil when it maye do good, nether hyde thy wisdome in her beutye. For in the tonge is wisdome knowen, so is vnderstandynge knowledge and learnynge in the talkyng of the wyse, and stedfastnesse in the workes of ryghteousnes. In no wise speke agaynst the word of truth but be ashamed of the lyes of thyne owne ignorance. Shame not to confesse thyne errour, and submit not thy selfe vnto euery man because of sinne. Withstand not the face of the mighty, & striue thou not against the streame. But for ryghteousnes, take paynes with all thy soule, and for the trueth striue thou vnto death, and God shall fight for thee agaynst thyne enemyes. Be not haskye in thy tongue, nether slacke and negligente in thy workes. Be not as a lyon in thyne owne house destroyinge thy houshold folkes, and oppressyng them that are vnder thee. • Let nat thyne hande be stretched out to receaue, and shut when thou shouldest geue. TRust not vnto thy ryches • and saye not: tushe, I haue ynough for my lyfe. (For it shall not helpe in the tyme of vengeaunce and temptacion.) Folowe not the lust of thyne owne hert in thy strength, and saye not: Tushe, howe haue I hadde strength, or who will bryngе me vnder because of my workes? for doubtles God shall auenge it. And saye not: I haue cõmitted no sinnes, but what euill hath happened me? For the almighty is a pacient rewarder. • Because thy synne is forgeuen thee, be not therefore without feare, nether heape one synne vpon another. • And saye not: Tushe, the mercy of the Lord is great, he shall forgeue me my sins, be they neuer so many. • For lyke as he is mercifull, so goeth wrathe from him also, and hys indignacion commeth downe vpon synners. Make no taryinge to turne vnto the Lorde, and put not of from day to day: for sodenly shall his wrath come, and in the tyme of vengeaunce he shall destroye thee. • Trust not in wicked riches, for they shall not helpe thee in the daye of punyshement and wrath. Be not caryed about with euery wind, & go not into euery way: for so doth the sinner that hath a double tonge. they that dwel therein also. ¶ An vn- 3 Re.12.a wyse king destroyeth his people, but where they that be in authoritie are men of vnderstanding, there the Cyty prospereth. The power of the earth is the hand of God (and all iniquitye of the people is to to bee abhorred) and when hys tyme is, he shal set a profitable ruler vppon it. In the hande of God is the power of man, and vpō the Scribes shal he laie his honor. ¶ Remember no wrong of thy neighbour, Leu.19.a and meddle thou wyth no vnryghte-ous worckes. Pryde is hateful before God and man, and al wyckednesse of the heathen is to bee abhorred. ¶ Because of vnryghteous dealing, wrōg, Ier.27.a blasphemyes, and dyuers dyscates, a realme shalbe translated from one peo ple to another. There is nothinge worse then a couetous man. Why arte thou proud, O thou earth and ashes? B Ther is not a more wicked thing, thē to loue money. And whye? suche one hath hys soule to sel: yet is he but filthy dong while he liueth. And though the phisition shewe his helpe neuer so long, yet in conclusion it goeth after thys maner, to daye a king, to mo-rowe dead. For when a man dieth, he is the heyre of serpentes, beastes, and wormes. The beginninge of mannes pryde, is to fal awaye from God: and why? his heart is gone from his maker, for pryde is the original of al syn.

Who so taketh holde therof, shalbe filled wyth curslinges, and at the laste it shal ouerthrowe him. Therefore hath the Lord broughte the congregations of the wicked to dishonoure, and destroied them vnto the end: ¶ God hath Sap.6.b destroied the seates of proude princes, and sette vp the meke in theyr steade.
God hath withered the rootes of the proude heathen, and planted the lowlye amonge theym. ¶ God hath ouer- Ge.29.a throwen the landes of the heathē, and destroyed them vnto the grounde. He hath caused them to wither away, he hath broughte theim to naughte, and made the memorial of theym to ceasse from out of the earth. (God hath destroyed the name of the proude, and left the name of the humble of mind.) Pryde was not made for man, neyther wrothfulnes for mens children. The sede of men that feareth GOD shalbe brought to honour, but the sede which transgresseth the commaundementes of the Lord shalbe shamed. He that is the ruler amonge brethren, is holden in honour among them, and he regardeth suche as feare the Lorde. The glorye of the rych, of the honorable, and of the poore, is the feare of God. Despyse not thou the iust poore man, and magnyfye not the ryche vngodly. Great is the iudge and myghtye in honour, yet is there none greater, then he that feareth God. • Unto

The poore is honoured for hys faithfulnes and trueth, but the rych is had in reputation because of hys goodes. He that ordereth himself honestly in powertye, howe much more shal he behaue himselfe in riches. And who so ordereth hym selfe vnhonestlye in ryches: howe much more shal he behaue hymselfe vnhonestly in powertie?

reward, in that he sayth: • now haue I gotten reste: and nowe will I eate and drynke of my goodes my selfe alone. And yet he considereth not, that the time draweth nye (and death approcheth) that he must leaue al these thinges vnto other menne, and dye hym selfe. Stande thou faste in thy couenuante, and exercyse thy selfe therin therin, and remayne in the worke vnto thy age. Continue not in the workes of sinners, but putte thy truste in God, and byde in thyne estate: for it is but an easye thing in the syghte of God, to make a poore man ryche, and that sodeynly. The blessinge of God hasteth to the reward of the righteous, and maketh his fruites soone to florysh and prosper. Saye not, what helpeth it me? and what shall I haue the while? Agayne, saye not: I haue ynough, howe can I wante? When thou art in welfare, forget not aduersitie: and when it goeth not wel with thee, haue a good hope, that it shalbe better. For it is but a smal thing vnto God, in the day of death to reward euery man accordinge to hys wayes. The aduersitye of an houre maketh one to forget all pleasure: and when a man dieth, hys workes are dyscouered. Prayse no bodye before his death for a man shalbe knowen in his children. Bring not euery man into thine house, for the disceatful layeth wayte dyuersye. Lyke as a partriche in a maund, so is the hearte of the proude: and lyke as a spye that lieth vppon the fal of his neighbour. For he turneth good vnto euyll, and slaundreth the chosen. Of one sparcke is made a great fyre (and of one dysceatful man is bludde increased) and an vngodlye man layeth wayt for bloud. Beware of the dysceitful mã, for he imagineth wycked thynges, to brynge thee into a perpetuall shame. If thou takest an vnkaunt vnto thee, he shal destroye the in vnquyetnes, and dryue thee from thyne owne wayes.

The. xii. Chapter.

When thou wilte dooe good, knowe to whom thou doest it, and so shalt thou be great ly thanked for thy benefites. Doo good vnto the ryghteous, and thou shalt fynd great reward, thogh not of him, yet (no doubte) the Lorde hym selfe shall rewarde thee. Hee standeth not in a good case that is alwaye occupyed in euil, and geueth no almes: for the hiest hateth the sinners and hath mercy vpon them that shew the woorkes of repentaunce. Geue thou vnto such as feare God, and receaue not a sinner. As for the vngodly and sinners, he shall recompence vengeaunce vnto them, and kepe them to the day of wrath. Geue thou vnto the good, & receaue not the sinner: do well vnto him that is lowly, but geue not to the vngodlye. Let not the breade be geuen him, that he be not mightier thē thy selfe therin. For so shalte thou receaue twyse as muche euyll, in all the good that thou doest vnto hym. And why? for hiest hateth sinners, & shal reward vengeaunce to the vngodly. In prosperitie a frend shal not be knowē and in aduersitie an enemy shal not be hid. For when a man is in wealth it greueth his enemyes: but in heuines and trouble a man shall knowe hys frend. Truste neuer thine enemye, for like as an iron rusteth, so doth his wickednes. And thoughe he make muche crouching & kneling, yet kepe wel thy mynd, & beware of him. Set him not by the, neither let him sit at thy ryght hand: leste he turne hym, get into thy place, take thy rowme & seke thy seat: and so thou at the laste remember my wordes, and be prycked at my sayinges. Bynd not two sinnes together, for there shall not one be vnpunished. Who will haue pitye of the charmer, that is stynged of the serpent, or of all suche as come nye the beastes? Euen so is it with him that kepeth company with a wycked man, and lappeth him selfe in hys synnes. For a season will he bide with the: but if thou stūble, he tarieth not. An enmy is swete in hys lippes, he can make many wordes, and speake much good thynges: Yea, he can wepe with his eies, but in his hert he imagineth, how to thro we thee into the pyt: and yf he maye fynd opportunitye: he wyll not be satisfyed with bloud. If aduersitye come vpon thee, thou shalt fynde him there first, and thoughe he pretende to doo thee helpe, yet shall he vndermyne the. He shall shake hys heade, and clappe hys handes ouer thee for verye gladnes:

and whyle he maketh manye wordes, he shall desguyse his countenance.

WHo so toucheth pytch, shalbe fyled withall: and he that is familiar with the proud, shall clothe him self with pryde. He taketh a burthen vpon him, that accompanieth a more honorable man then hym self. Therefore, kepe no familiaritye wyth one that is richer then thy selfe. How agree the kettle and the pot together? for if the one be smitte against the other, it shalbe broken. The ryche dealeth vnryghteously, and threateneth withall: but the poore beyng oppressed and wrongefully dealt withall, suffreth scarcenes, and geueth faire wordes. If thou be for hys profit, he vseth thee: but if thou haue nothyng, he shall forsake thee. As long as thou hast any thing of thine owne, he shall be a good felow with thee: yea he shal make the a bare man, and not be sorye for the. If he haue nede of the, he shall defraud the: and with a preuy mocke, shall he put thee in an hope, and geue thee all good wordes, and saye: what wantest thou? Thus shall he shame thee in hys meate, vntyl he haue supt the clene vp twyse or thryse, and at the laste shall he laugh thee to scorne. Afterwarde, when he seeth that thou hast nothyng, he shall forsake the, and shake his heade at thee. Submyt thy selfe vnto God, and wayte vpon hys hande. Beware, that thou be not dysceaued and brought downe in thy symplenesse. Be not to humble in thy wisdome: leste when thou arte broughte lowe, thou be disceaued thorowe foolyshnes. If thou be called of a mighty man, absente thy selfe, so shall he call thee to hym the more oft. Preasse not thou vnto hym, that thou be not shut out: but goo not thou farre of, leste he forget thee. Withdrawe not thy selfe frō hys speche, but beleue not his many wordes. For with much communication shall he tempt thee, and with a preuy mocke shall he question thee of thy secretes. The vnmercifull mynde of hys shal marke thy wordes, he shal not spare to do thee hurte, and to put the in prison. Beware, and take good hede to thy selfe, for thou walkest in parell of thy ouerthrowynge. Nowe when thou hearest his wordes, make the as thogh thou werest in a dreame and wake vp. Loue God all thy lyfe longe, and call vpon hym in thy nede. Euery beast loueth hys lyke, euen so let euery man loue hys neyghboure. All flesshe will resorte to their lyke, and euerye man will keepe companye with such as he is hym selfe. But as the wolfe agreeth with the lambe, so doth the vngodly with the ryghtous. What felowshyppe shoulde an holy mā haue with a dogge? How can the ryche and the poore agree together? The wylde Asse is the lyons praye in the wildernesse, euen so are poore men the meate of the ryche. Lyke as the proude maye not awaye with lowlynes, euen so doeth the ryche abhorre the poore: If a rych man fall, his frendes set hym vp agayne: but when the poore falleth, hys aquayntaunce forsake him. If a ryche man fall into an errour, he hath many helpers: he speaketh proude wordes, and yet men iustifye hym. But if a poore manne goo wronge, he is punyshed: yea thoughe he speake wyselye, yet can it haue no place. When the ryche man speaketh, euerye man holdeth hys tongue, and loke what he sayth, they praise it vnto the cloudes. But yf the poore man speake, they saye: what felowe is this? and if he do amysse, they shal destroy him. Riches are good vnto him that hath no synne in hys conscience, and pouertie is a wicked thyng in the mouth of the vngodly. The hart of a manne chaungeth hys countenaunce, whether it be in good or euill. A cherfull countenaunce is a token of a good herte, for els it is an harde thynge to knowe the thought.

meth not a couetous man and a ny-then when one disfauoureth him self, and this is a rewarde of his wickednes. If he do any good, he doeth it not knowynge thereof, and agaynste hys wil, and at the last he declareth his vn gracioulnes. A nygarde hath a wyc-ked eye, he turneth awaye his face, and despiseth his owne soule. A couetous mans eye hathe neuer ynoughe in the porcion of wickednes, vntil the tyme dysapoynted of the good daye, and let not the portion of the good day ouer-passe thee. Shalte thou not leaue thy trauayles and labours vnto other men? In the deuiding of the heritage geue and take, and sanctify thy soule.

Worke thou ryghteousnes before thy death, for in the hell there is no meate to fynde. All flesshe shall fade awaye like grasse, and like a flourysshyng leafe in a grene tree. Some growe, some are cast downe: euen so is the generation of al flesshe & blood: one cōmeth to an end, another is borne. All transito rye thynges shall fayle at the last, and the worker thereof shall goo withall.
Euery chosen worke shalbe iustified, and he that medleth withall, shall haue honour therin. Blessed is the manne that kepeth him in wisedome, and exercyseth himselfe in vnderstandynge, and wyth discretion shal he thinke vp-on the foreknowledge of God. Who-che considereth the wayes of wisdom is better, then a thousande vngodlye.

And better it is for a man to dye with out children, then to leaue behind him such children as are vngodly. For by one that hath vnderstandyng, maye a

O howe great is the louynge kyndnesse of the Lorde, and hys mercyfull goodnesse vnto suche as tourne vnto hym? For all thynges may not be in man: and why the sonne of man is not immortall, and hee hathe pleasure in the vanitie of wyckednesse. What is more clere then the Sunne?

Yet shall it fayle. Or what is more wicked then the thyng that flesshe and bloode hath imagined? and that same shall be reproued. The Lord seeth the power of the hye heauen, and all are earthe and ashes.

The.xviii.Chapter.

He that lyueth for euermore, made all thynges together, God only is ryghteous, and remaineth a victorious kyng for euer. Who shalbe able to expresse the wourkes of hym? who will seke out the grounde of hys noble actes? who shall declare the power of hys greatnes? Or who wyll take vppon hym, to tell out his mercy? As for the wondrous wourkes of the Lord, there may nothyng be taken from them, nothyng may be put vnto them, neyther may the ground of them be found out. But when a man hath done his best, he must begynne agayn: and when he thinketh to be come to an end, he must go agayn to his labour. What is man? Wherto is he wourthy? What good or euyll can he doo? If the numbre of a mans dais be almost an hundred yere, it is muche. Lyke as the droppes of rayne are vnto the sea, and as a grauel stone is in comparison of the sand: so are these fewe yeares to the days of euerlastyng. Therfore is the Lord pacient wyth them, and poureth oute his mercy vpon theym. He sawe and perceaued the thoughtes and imaginations of their heart, that they were euyll: therfore heaped he vp his mercifull goodnes vppon theym, and shewed them the way of righteousnes. The mercy that a man hath, reacheth to his neyghboure: but the mercye of GOD is vpon all flesshe. He chasteneth, he teacheth and nurtureth: yea, euen as a shepherde tourneth agayne his flocke, so dothe he all theym that receaue chastenyng, nurture, and doctrine. Mercyfull is he vnto theym, that stand in awe of his iudgements. My soonne, when thou dooest good, make no grudging at it: and what so euer thou geuest, speake noo discomfortable wourdes. Shall not the dewe coole the heate? euen soo is a wourde better then a gyft. Is not a frendly wourde a good honest gyfte? but a gracious mā geueth them both. A foole shall cast a man in the teethe, and that roughly, and a gyft of the nygard putteth out the eye. Gett the ryghteousnesse before thou come to iudgement. Learne before thou speake, and go to phisike, or euer thou be sycke: Examyne and iudge thy selfe, beefore the iudgement comme, and so shalte thou fynde grace in the syghte of GOD: Humble thy selfe afore thou be sycke, and in tyme of thy disease shewe thy conuersation. Lette not to prayse alway, and stande not in feare to be reformed vnto death, for the reward of God endureth for euer. Before thou prayest, prepare thy soule, and bee not as one that tempteth God. Thynke vpon the wrathfull indignation that shalbe at the end, and the houre of vengeaunce, when he shall tourne awaye his face. When thou haste ynoughe, remembre the tyme of hunger: & whē thou art rich, think vpon ỹ time of pouertie & scarsenes. Frō the morning vntill the euenyng, the tyme is changed & all suche thyngs are soone done in the syght of God. A wyse man feareth GOD in all thyngs, and in the days of transgression, he kepeth hym selfe from synne. A discrete man hath pleasure in wysedom, and he that fyndeth her, maketh muche of her. They that haue hadde vnderstandyng, haue dealt wysely in wourdes, haue vnderstande the truthe and rightcousnelle, and haue soughte out wyse sentences and iudgementes. Folowe not thy lustes, but turne thee from thyn owne wyll. For yf thou geuest thy sowle her desyres, it shall make thyne enemies, to laughe thee to scorne. Take not thy pleasure in great voluptuousnesse, and medle not to much wythall. Make not to greate cheare of the thynge that thou haste wonne by auantage, leste thou falle into pouertie, and haue nothing in thy purse.

A labou-

A Labouring man that is geuen vnto dronkennes, shall not be ryche: and he that maketh not much of small thinges, shall fall by lytle & lytle. ¶ Wyne and wemen make wyse men renagates, and put men of vnderstandyng to reproke, and he that accompanyeth aduouterers, shall become a wycked manne. Mothes and wormes shall haue him to herytage, yea, he shalbe set by to a greater example, and hys soule shalbe roted oute of the number. ¶ He that is hastye to geue credence, is lyghte mynded, and doeth agaynst him self. Who so reioyseth in wickednes, shall be punyshed: he that hateth to be reformed, hys lyfe shalbe shortened, and he that abhorreth babblynge of wordes, quencheth wickednes. He that offendeth agaynst his owne soule, shall repente it: and he that reioyseth in wickednes shalbe punished. Rehearse not a wicked and churlyshe worde twyse, and thou shalt not be hindred. Shew thy secretes neyther to frende nor foe: and if thou haste offended, tell it not oute. For he shall hearken vnto thee and marke thee: and when he fyndeth opportunitye, he shall hate thee (and so shall he be alwaye aboute thee.) ¶ If thou haste herde a worde agaynst thy neighboure, let it be dead within the: and be sure, thou shalt haue no harme thereby. A foole trauayleth wyth a worde, lyke as a woman that is payned with bearyng of a child. Lyke as an arowe shot in a dogges thighe, so is a worde in a fooles herte. ¶ Tell thy frende hys faute, leste he be ignorant, and saye: I haue not done it, or if he haue spoke, that he do it no more. Reproue thy neighbour, that he kepe hys tongue, and yf he haue spoken, that he say it nomore. Tell thy neighbour his faut, for oft times an offence is made, & geue not credence to euery word. A man falleth somtime with his tongue, but not with his will. For what is he, ỳ hath not offended in his tonge: geue thy neyghbour warning, before thou threaten hym, and geue place vnto the lawe of the Lord. The feare of God is al wisedome and hee that is a ryghtwise man, keepeth the lawe. As for the doctrine of wyckednes, it is no wysdome, and the prudẽce of synners is no good vnderstanding: it is but wyckednes, and abhomination and a blasphemyng of wysdome. A simple manne of smalle vnderstandinge that feareth God, is better then one that hath muche wysedome, and transgresseth the lawe of the hiest. A crafty suttle man can be wyse, but hee is vnryghteous: and wyth gyftes hee wrasteth the open and manyfest lawe. A wicked man can behaue hym selfe humblye, and canne bouke wyth hys heade, and yet is hee but a dyssembler wythin. He hideth hys face, and disguyseth it: and because he shoulde not be knowen, hee preuenteth thee. And though he be so weake that hee can do thee no harme, yet when he maye fynd opportunitie, he shall doo somme euill. A manne may be knowen by his face, and one that hath vnderstandinge, may be perceaued by the looke of hys countenaunce. ¶ A mans garmente, laughter, and goinge, declareth what he is.

SOme man reproueth hys neighbour ofte times, but not in due season: Againe, some manne holdeth hys tounge, and hee is wyse and discrete. It is muche better to geue warninge and to reproue, then to beare euyll wyll, for he that knowledgeth hymselfe openly, shall be preserued from hurt & destruction. Like as when a gelded man thorow desire and lust defyleth a mayden, euen so is it with hym that vseth violence, and vnryghteousnes in the lawe. O how good a thyng is it, a mã that is reproued, to shew opẽly his repẽtãce for so shalt thou escape wilfull syn. Some man kepeth silence, and is found wise: but hee that is not ashamed what hee sayth, is hatefull. Some man holdeth hys tongue, because he hathe not the vnderstandynge of the language: and some man kepeth silence, awaytyng a conue-

He taketh a more perilous fal by such woordes, thē yf he fel vppon the grounde: euen so shal the fal of wicked men com hastely. In the mouth of him that is vntaught, are many vnconuenient and vnmete woordes. A wise sentence shal not be alowed at the mouth of ẏ foole for he speaketh it not in due season.

Some man promiseth his frend a gyft for very shame, and getteth an enemy of him for naughte. A lye is a wicked shame in a man, yet shall it be euer in the mouthe of the vnwyse. The

The way of the vngodly is set with stones, but in their ende is hell, darknes, and paynes. He that kepeth the lawe, wil hold fast the vnderstanding therof, and the end of the feare of god is wysedome and vnderstandyng. He that is not wyse, will not be taughte in good: but the vnwise man aboundeth in wickednes: and where bitternes is, there is no vnderstandynge.

The knowlege of the wise, shal flow lyke water that runneth ouer, and his councel is like a fountayn of life. The heart of a foole is lyke a broken vessell, he can kepe no wisedom. When a man of vnderstandyng heareth a wise word, he shall commende it, and make much of it. But if a voluptuous mā heare it, he shall haue no pleasure therin, but cast it behynde his backe. The talkynge of a foole is lyke an heauye burthen by the waye: but to heare a wise man speke, it is a pleasure. Where a dout is in the congregation, it is asked at the mouth of the wise, and they shall pōder his words in their herts. Lyke as is a house that is destroyed, euen so is wysdome vnto a foole. As for the knowledge of the vnwise, it is but darke wordes. Doctrine is vnto hym that hath no vnderstandyng, euē as fetters aboute hys feete, and lyke manicles vpon his ryghte hande. A foole lifteth vp his voice w̄ laughter, but a wyse mā shal scarse laugh secretly. Learnyng is vnto a wyse man, a Jewel of gold, and lyke an armelette vpon his right arme. A folishe mans foote is soone in his neighbors house, but one that hath experience, shall bee ashamed at the person of the myghty. A foole wyl peepe in at the window, into the house, but he that is wel nurtured, will stande without. A foolish man standeth herkenyng at the doore, but he that is wise, will be ashamed. The lippes of the vnwise wil be telyng foolyshe thynges, but the words of suche as haue vnderstandyng, shall be weyed in the balance. The heart of fooles is in theyr mouth, but the mouthe of the wyse is in theyr heart. Whē the vngodly curseth the blasphemer, he curseth his owne soule. A pryuye accuser of other men, shall defyle hys owne soule, & be hated of euery man: (but he that kepeth his tongue, and is discrete, shall come to honour.)

The .xxii. Chapter.

A Slouthfull body is moulded of a stone of claye, and euerye man wylle speake to hys dyspayse. A slouthfull body is made of the donge of oxen, and euery one that toucheth hym, must washe his hands agayne. A mysnurtured soonne is the dishonor of ỹ father. A foolysh daughter shall bee lytteli regarded. A wise daughter is an heritage vnto her husbande: but she that commeth to dishonestie, bryngeth her father in heuines A daughter that is past shame, dishonoreth both her father & her husband: the vngodly shal regard her, but they bothe shall despise her. The playinge of Musike is not mete where heauynesse is, euen so is the correction and doctrine of wysedome, euer vnpleasaunt vnto fooles. Who so teacheth a foole, is euen as one that gleweth a potsheard together: as one that telleth a tale to hym that heareth hym not, and as one ỹ raiseth a man out of an heuy slepe. Who so telleth a foole of wysedome, is euen as a man, whiche speaketh to one that is a slepe. Whē he hath told his tale, he saith: What is the matter? when one dieth, lamentation is made for him, because the light fayleth him: euen so let mē mourn ouer a fool: for he wanteth vnderstandynge. Make but lyttle weepyng, because of the dead: for he is come to rest, but the lyfe of the foole is woorse thenne the death. Seuen days do men mourn for hym that is dead, but the lamentation ouer the vnwise and vngodly shoulde endure all the dayes of theyr lyfe.

Talke nat much wyth a foole, and go not with him that hath no vnderstanding. Beware of him, lest it turn thee to trauayle, and thou shalt not be defyled wyth his synne. Depart frome hym, and thou shalte fynde reste, and shalt not be drawen back into his foolishenes. What is heauier then leade?

And

And what ſhould a foole be called els but leade? ¶ Sande, ſalt, and a lump of yron is eſyer to beare then an vnwiſe, fooliſhe, and vngodly man. Like as the band of wodde bound together in the foundation of the houſe can not be looſed: euen ſo is it with the heart that is ſtabliſſhed in the thoughte of councelle. The thoughte of the wyſe ſhall neither feare, nor bee offended at any tyme. Lyke as a fayre playſtered wall in a wynter houſe, and an hygh buyldyng, may not abyde the wynde and ſtorme: euen ſo is a fooles hearte afrayde in his imagination, he feareth at euery thing, and can not endure. (A wauerynge hearte in the imagination of a foole will not euer ſtand in awe, he that abydeth in the commandemẽtes of God, wil alway feare.) He that nyppeth a mans eye, bringeth foorthe teares: and he that prycketh the heart, bringeth forth the mening & thought. Who ſo caſteth a ſtoane at the byrdes, frayeth them away: and he that blaſpheməth his frend, breaketh the frendſhyp: though thou draweſt a ſwearde at thy frend, yet deſpayre not, for thou mayſt come agayn to thy frend. If he ſpeake ſorowfully, feare not, for ye maye be agreed together againe: except it be that thou blaſpheme hym, diſdayne hym, open hys ſecretes, and wounde hym trayterouſly, for all ſuche things ſhall driue awaye a frende. Be faithfull vnto thy neighbour in hys pouertie, that thou mayſt reioyce with him alſo in his proſperitie. Abyde ſtedfaſt vnto hym in the tyme of hys trouble, that thou mayſt be heyre with hym in his heritage. Lyke as the vapour and ſmoke goth out at the ouen before the fyre, euen ſo euyll wordes, rebukes & threatnynges go before bloudſhedyng. Be not aſhamed to defende thy frend: as for me, I wylle not hyde my face from hym, though he ſhould doo mee harme. Who ſo euer heareth it, ſhall beware of hym. ¶ Whoe ſhall ſette a watche before my mouthe, and a ſure ſeale vpon my lyppes, that I fall not wyth theym, and that my tongue deſtroye me not?

tryng in sinne. ✠ Vse not thy mouthe to vnhoneste and filthy talkinge, for in it is the worde of sinne. Remembre thy father and thy mother when thou art set among great men: lest God forget the in their sight, and lest thou doing in thy custome, suffre rebuke, and wishe not to haue bene borne, and so curse the daye of thy nativitie. ✠ The man that is accustomed with ỹ wor-des of blasphemye, wyll neuer be reformed all the dayes of his lyfe. To sinne twyse is to much, but the thirde bringeth wrathe and destruction. An hote stomacke cannot be quenched (euen lyke a burnynge fyre (tyll it haue swalowed vp some thyng: euen so an vnchast man hath no rest in his flesshe, 'till he haue kyndled a fire. All bread is swete to an whoremonger, he will not cease of, tyll he haue his purpose. A man that breaketh wedlocke, and regardeth not his soule, but sayeth: ✠ Tushe, who seeth me? I am compassed aboute with darknes, the walles couer me, no body seeth me: whō nede I to feare? The Hyest wyll not remember my synnes. He vnderstādeth not that hys eyes see all thynges, for all suche feare of men dryueth awaye the feare of God from him: for he feareth onely the eyes of men, and considereth not that the eyes of the Lorde are clearer then the sunne: beholdinge all the wayes of men and the grounde of the depe, and lokyng euen to mens hertes in secrete places. The Lorde God knewe all thynges or euer they were made, and after they be brought to passe also he loketh vpon them all.
✠ The same man shalbe openly punished in the stretes of the citye, and shal be chased abrode lyke a ponge horse foale: and when he thinketh least vp-on it, he shalbe taken. Thus shall he be put to shame of every man, because he would not vnderstand the feare of the Lorde. And thus shall it goo also with every wife, that leaueth her hus bande, and getteth enherytaunce by a straunge marryage. ✠ Fyrste, she hath bene vnfaythfull vnto the lawe of the Hyest. Secondlye shee hath forsaken her owne husband. Thirdly, she hath played the whore in aduoutry, & gotten her children by another man. She shalbe brought out of the congregation, and her children shalbe loked vppon. Her children shall not take rote: as for frute, her braunches shall bring forth none. A shamefull reporte shall she leane behynd her, and her dyshonoure shall not be put out. And they that remayne, shall knowe, that there is nothynge better, then the feare of God: and that there is nothyng swe-ter then to take hede vnto the cōman-dementes of the Lorde. A greate worshyp is it to folowe the Lord, for longe lyfe shalbe receyued of hym.

¶ The .xxiiii. Chapter.

WIsdome shall prayse her self, ✠ and be honoured in God, and reioyse in the myddest of hys people: In the congregations of the hiest shal she open her mouth, and triumphe in the beholding of his power In the myddest of her people shall she be exalted, and wondred at in the holy fulnesse. In the multitude of the chosen she shalbe commēded, and among such as be blessed she shall be praysed, and shall saye: I am come oute of the mouth of the hiest, fyrst borne before al creatures. I caused the light that fai-leth not to aryse in ỹ heauē, & couered all the erth as a cloude. My dwelling is aboue in the heyght, and my seat in the pyller of the cloude. I my selfe alone haue gone round about the compasse of heauen, and peersed the ground of the deepe: I haue walked in the floudes of the sea, and haue stande in all landes: my dominion is in euerye people and in euery nacion, and with my power haue I troden downe the hertes of all, both hye and lowe. In all these thinges also I sought reste, and a dwelling in some enheritaunce. So ✠ the Creatour of all thynges gaue me commaundemente: and he that made mee, appoynted mee a tabernacle, and sayde vnto me: Let thy dwellynge be in Jacob, and thyne inheryteaunce in Israel, & rote thy selfe among my chosen. • I was created from the beginning, and before the worlde, and shall not leaue of vnto the worlde to come. • In the holy habitation haue I serued before him, and so was I stablyshed in Sion. • In the holye citie rested I in lyke maner: and in Jerusalem was my power. I tooke roote in an honorable people, euen in the portion of the Lord, and in his heritage, and kept me in the fulnes of the saintes. I am set vp an hie lyke a Cedar vpon Lybanus, and as a Cypres tree vpon the mount Hermon. I am exalted lyke a palme tree in Cades, and as a rose plant in Jericho. As a fayre Olive tree in the fielde, and am exalted lyke a planteyne tree by the water side. I haue geuen a smell in the stretes, as the Cynamon and Balme, that hath so good a sauoure: yea, & swete odoure haue I geuen as it were Myrre of the best. I haue made my dwellinges to smel as it were of Rosin, Galbanum, of Cloues, and incense, and as Libanus when it is not hewen downe, and myne odour is as the pure Balme. As the Terebinte haue I stretched oute my braunches and my braunches are the braunches of honour and louing sauour. • ✠ As the vyne haue I brought forth fruit of a swete sauour, and my floures are the fruit of honour and ryches. I am the mother of beawtye, of loue, of feare, of knowledge, and of holy hope. • In me is al grace of life and truth. In me is al hope of lyfe and vertue. O come vnto me al ye that be desyrous of mee, and fyl your selues with my fruites, for my spirite is sweeter then honye. and so is my inheritaunce more then the honye combe: the remembraunce of me endureth for euermore. They that eate mee, shall haue the more hunger, and they that drynke me, shall thirste the more. Who so herkeneth vnto me, shal not come to confusion: and they that worcke in me, shal not offende. They that make mee to bee knowen, shal haue euerlastynge lyfe, the couenaunt of the hieft, and the knowledge of the truth. • Moyses commaunded the lawe in the preceptes of righteousnes for an heritage vnto the house of Jacob, and committed the promises vnto Israel. • (Vnto of Dauid hys seruaunt he ordeined and rayled vp a most myghty king, sytting in the seat of honoure for euer more.) Thys spileth wyth wysedome lyke as the kind of Physon, and as the kind of Tigris, when the newe fruites are a growing. • This bringeth a plenteous vnderstanding lyke Euphrates: and filleth it vp, as Jordane in the tyme of harueſt. This maketh nurtoure to breake forth as the lyghte, and as the water Gihon in the haruest. The first hath not knowen her perfectlye, nomore shall the laste seeke oute the ground of her. For her thought is fuller then the sea, and her councel is profounder then the great depe. I wysedome haue caste out fluddes. I am as a great waterbrooke out of the riuer. I am as the ryuer Dorix, and as a water condite am I come oute of the garden of pleasure. I sayde: I wyll water the garden of my yong plants, and fyl the fruite of my byrth: So my water broke became exceading great, and my ryuer approched vnto the sea. For I make doctrine to bee vnto all men as lyght as the fayre morninge, and I shal make it to be euer the clerer. I wil pearse thrugh al the lower partes of the earth. I wil loke vpon al such as be a slepe, and lighten al them that putte their truste in the Lord. I shal yet poure oute doctryne, lyke as prophecye, and leaue it vnto such as seke after wysdome, and their generations shal I neuer fayle, vnto the holy euerlasting worlde. • Behold howe that I haue not laboured for my selfe onelye, but for all them that seke after the truth.

lone of neyghbours. a man and wife that agree wel together. Three thinges there be whiche my soule hateth, & I vtterly abhorre the syght of the. A poore man that is proude. A rych mā that is a liar, & an old body that doteth, and is vnchaste. If thou hast gathered nothinge in thy youthe, what wilt thou finde then in thine age? O howe pleasaunt a thinge is it, when graye headed menne are discrete, and when the elders can geue good counsell? O how comely a thing is wysedome vnto aged men: yea, vnderstanding and councel is a glorious thyng. The crowne of olde menne is to haue much experience: and the fear of God is their worshyp. There be nine thinges, which I haue iudged in my hert to be happye, and the tenth wil I tell forth vnto men with my tong. A man that whyle hee lyueth, hath ioye of his children, and seeth the fal of his enemyes. Wel is him that dwelleth with an houswyfe of vnderstanding, and that hath not fallen with hys tonge, and that hath not bene fayne to serue such as are vnmete for him. Wel is him, that findeth a faythful frende: and well is him whiche talketh of wisdom to an eare that heareth him: O howe greate is hee, that fyndeth wysedome and knowledge? Yet is he not aboue him, that feareth the Lord. The feare of God hath set it selfe aboue al thinges. Blessed is the man, vnto whome it is graunted to haue the feare of God. Vnto whome shall he be likened, that kepeth it fast? The feare of God is the begynning of hys loue, and the beginning of fayth is to cleaue fast vnto it. The heaynes of the hearte is al the punyshmente: and the wickednes of a woman goeth aboue al. Al punyshmente, and plage is nothing in comparison of the plage of the hert, euen so al wickednes is nothing to the wyckednes of a woman. Whatsoeuer happeneth vnto a man is nothinge in comparison of it, that hys euil willers do vnto him: and all vengeaunce is nothing to the vengeaunce of the enuenye. There is not a more wycked heade then the heade of the serpente, and there is no wrath aboue the wrath of a woman. I wyl rather dwel with a lion and dragon, then to keepe house with a wycked wyfe. The wyckednes of a woman chaungeth her face, she shall mouffle her countenaunce as it wer a Beare, and as a sacke shal she shew it among the neyghboures. Her husbande is brought to shame among hys neyghbours, and when he heareth it, it maketh him to syghe. All wyckednes is but lyttle to the wickednes of a woman, the portion of the vngodlye shall fal vppon her. Lyke as to clymbe vp a sandy way is to the feete of the aged, euen so is a wyfe full of woordes to a stil quiet man. Loke not narowly vpon the beawty of a woman, lest thou be prouoked in desire towarde her. The wrath of a woman is dishonor and greate confusion. If a woman get the maistry, then is she contrarye to her husband. A wycked wyfe maketh a sorye hearte, an heauy countenance and a dead wound. Weake handes and feeble knees is a woman that her husband is not the better for.) Of the woman came the begynnynge of synne, and thorow her we all ar dead. Geue thy water no passage, no not a lyttell, neither geue a wicked woman her wyll. If she walke not after thy hande, she shall confounde thee in the syght of thy enemies. Cut her of then from thy flesshe, that shee doo not alwaye abuse thee.

HAppy is the manne that hath a vertuous wyfe, for the nūber of his yeres shalbe double. An honest woman maketh her husband a ioyfull man, and she shall fyl the yeres of his lyfe in peace. A vertuous woman is a noble gyft, which shalbe geuen for a good portion vnto suche as fear God: whether a man be ryche or poore, he may haue euer a mery heart, and a chearefulle countenaunce.

There be thꝛee thinges that my hert feareth, and my face is afrayde of the fourth. Treason in a citie, a sedicious people, and noysome tonges, all these are heauyer then deathe. But when one is geious ouer hys wife, it bꝛingeth paine and soꝛowe vnto the hert: and a woman that telleth out al thinges, is a scourge of the tungue. When one hath an euill wife, it is euen as

By euery hedge shall she sit her downe, and open her quiuer agaynst euery arowe. A louyng wyfe reioyseth her husband, and fedeth hys bones wyth her wysedome. A womã of fewe wozdes is a gyft of God, and to all well nurtured myndes may no
C thinge bee compared. An honest and manerly woman is a gift aboue other gyftes, and there is no wayght to bee compared: vnto a mynde that can rule it selfe. Like as the Sunne when it aryseth, is an oꝛnament in the hie heuen of the Lozd, so is a vertcous wife the bewtye of all her house. Like as the clere lyght is vpon the holye candlestycke, so is the bewtye of the face Exo. 5. d vppon an honest bodye. • Like as the golden pillers are vpon the sockettes of syluer, so are the fayꝛe legges vpon a woman that hath a constant mynd. Perpetual are the foundations that be layed vpon a whole stonye rocke, C so are the commaundementes of God vpon the herte of an holy woman. There be two thinges that greue my hert, and in the third is a displeasure come vpon me. When an experte man of warre suffereth scarsenes and pouertye. When men of vnderstandyng and wisdome are not set by: And whẽ one departeth from righteousnes vnto synne. Who so doth such, the Lozde hath pꝛepared him vnto the swearde. There be two maner of thinges, whiche me thincke to be harde and perylous. A marchaunte cannot lyghtlye kepe him from wꝛong, nether a tauerner him selfe from synne.

fruit, so is the thought of a mãs hert knowen by hys woꝛdes. Pꝛayse no man except thou haue hearde him: foꝛ a man is knowen by hys woꝛdes. If thou folowest ryghteousnesse, thou shalt get her, and put her vpon the as a fayꝛe garment. And thou shalt dwell wyth her, and she shal defend thee foꝛ euer, and in the day of of knowledge thou shalte synde stedfastnesse. The byrdes resoꝛte vnto theyꝛ like, so doth the trueth tourne vnto theym that be occupyed wythal. The lyon waiteth the pꝛaye: so do the synners lurke vppon the woꝛkers of wyckednes. The talkinge of him that feareth God, is nothing but wysedome: as foꝛ a foole he chaungeth as the Moone. If thou be amonge the vndyscrete, keepe thy woꝛdes vntil a conuenient tyme, but amonge suche as bee wyse, speake on hardly. The talking of fooles is abho ousnes and misnurture. • Much swe-ring maketh the hearte to stande by: e to strine wyth such as stoppeth the eares. The stryke of the proud is blud shedding, and their blaspheminge is d.19b heauy to heare. • Who so discouereth secrettes, leseth hys credence, and findeth no frend after hys will. Loue thy frend, and binde thy selfe in faithfulnes with him: but yf thou bewrayest hys secretes, thou shalt not get hym agayne. For lyke as the man is, that destroyeth hys enemye, so is he also that dealeth falsly in the frendshyp of hys neyghbour. Lyke as one that letteth a byrde go oute of hys hande, can not take her agayne: Euen so thou, yf thou geue ouer thy frende, thou canst not gette him agayne: Yea, thou canst not come by him, for he is to farre of. He is vnto thee as a Roe escaped out of the snare, for hys soule is wounded. As for woundes, they may be bounde vp agayne, and an euyl worde may be reconcyled: but whoso bewrayeth the secrettes of a frende, there is no more .19b hope to be hadde vnto him. • Hee that wynketh wyth his eyes, ymagyneth some euil, and no man shall take hym from it. When thou art present, he shal highly commend and prayse thy wordes: but at the last he shal tourne hys tayle, and sclaunder thy saying. Many things haue I hated, but nothing so euil, for the Lorde himselfe also abE horreth such a one. • Who so casteth a .21b stone on hie, it shal fal vpon his owne heade: and he that smyteth with gyle woundeth hym selfe. Who so diggeth a pit shal fal therin (and he that layeth a stone in hys neighbours waye, shall stomble theron) and hee that layeth a snare for another, shalbe taken in it hym selfe. • Who so geueth a wycked .7.b. noysome counceil, it shal come vppon .10a hym selfe, and he shal not know from whence. The proude blaspheme, and are scorneful, but vengeaunce lurketh for them as a lion. They that reioyce at the fall of the righteous shalbe taken in the snare, anguysh of heart shal consume them before they dye. Anger and rigorousnesse are two abominable thynges, and the vngodlye hath them both vpon him.

A manne that beareth hatred agaynst another, howe dare he desire forgeuenes of God? He that sheweth no mercy to a man whi che is lyke hym selfe, howe darre hee aske forgeuenes of hys synnes? If he that is but flesshe, beareth hatred and kepeth it, whoe will intreate for hys synnes? Remember the ende, and let enmity passe, which seeketh death and destruction, and abyde thou in the cõmaundementes. Remember the commaundementes, so shalte thou not be rigorous ouer thy neyghbor. Thinke vpon the couenaunte of the hyest, and B forgeue thy neyghbours ignoraunce. • Beware of stryfe, and thou shalte Ec. 28.a make thy sinns fewer. For an angrie man kyndleth variaunce, and the vngodly disquieteth frends, and putteth dyscord among them that be at peace. Pro. 26 b • The more wodde there is, the more behemente is the fyre: and the myghtier that menne be, the greater is the wrath: and the longer the strife endureth, the more it burneth. In hastye brawling kyndleth a fyre, and an hasty strife sheddeth bloud: A tong also that beareth false witnes, bryngeth death. If thou blow the sparke it shal burne. If thou spit vpon it, it shal go forth, and both these out of the mouth. • The slaunderer and double tonged Ecc. 21.b is cursed, for manye one that be frendes setteth he at variance. is hym that is kept from an euill tong and commeth not in the anger therof, which draweth not the yoke of such,
and is not bounde in the bandes of it.
For the yoke therof is of yron, and the bande of it of stele. The death thereof is a bery euyll death: hell were better for one, then such a tong. But the fire of it may not oppresse them that feare God, and the flame thereof maye not burne thē. Such as forsake the Lorde, shall fall therin: and it shal burne thē, and no man shalbe able to quenche it.
It shall fall vpon them as a Lion: and deuour them as a leopard. Thou hedgest thy goodes with thornes: whye doest thou not rather make dores and barres for thy mouthe? Thou weyest thy golde and syluer: whye doest thou not weye thy wordes also vppon thy in thy tonge, and so fall before thyne enemyes, that lay waite for thee, (and thy fall be incurable, euē vnto death.)

Luke.6.d the commaundement. Lende vnto thy nebour in time of his nede, & pay thou thy neyghbour agayne in due season.
Kepe thy worde, and deale faythfully with him, and thou shalt alway fynde the thynge that is necessarye for thee.
There haue bene many, that when a thyng was lent them, reckened it to be founde, and made them trauayle and laboure, that had helped them. Whyle they receaue any thyng, they kysse the handes of such as geue them, and for their neighbours good they humble their boyce. But when they shoulde paye agayne, they kepe it backe, and geue euyll wordes, and make manye excuses by reason of the tyme; and though he be able, yet geueth he scarse the halfe agayne: and reckeneth the other to be lound. And if he withholde not his money yet hath he an enemye of him, and that vndeserued. He payth B him with cursing and rebuke, and gieueth him euyll woordes for hys good dede. There be manye one whiche are not glad for to lende, not because of euyll, but they feare to lese the thynge that they lende. Yet haue thou pacience with the symple, & withholde not thy mercy from him. Helpe the poore for the commaundementes sake, and let him not go emptye from thee, because of his necessitye. Lese thy money for thy brother and neyghbours sake, and burye it not vnder a stone, where it rusteth and corrupteth. • Gather thy Math.6 treasure after the commaundement of Luk.12 an eye: and afterward shal it arise and paye euery man his reward vpon his heade. It shall fight for thee agaynste thyne enemyes, better then the shylde of a gyaunt or speare of the myghtye.

A good honest man is suretye for hys neyghboure, but a wicked person letteth him come to shame. Forget not the frendshyp of thy suerty, for he hath geuen his soule for thee. The vngod-ly despyseth the good dede of his suertye, and the vnthankefull and ignoraunt leaueth his suertie in daunger.
Some man promiseth for his neygh-boure: and when he hath loste his honestye, he shall forsake hym. Suerti-shyppe hath destroyed manye a ryche man, and remoued them as the waues in the sea. Myghtye people hath it driuen aswaye, and caused theym to wander in straunge countreys. An vngodly man transgressyng the com-maundemente of the Lorde, shall fall into an euyll suertshyp: and thoughe he force him selfe to gette out, yet shal he fall into iudgemente. Helpe thy neyghboure oute after thy power, and beware,

beware that thou thy selfe fall not in ecl.39c suche debte. ¶ The chefe thynge that it lytle or muche that thou haste, holde thee contente withall, and thou shalte not be blamed as a vagabounde: for a mysserable lyfe is it, to go from house to house: and wher a man is fremd, he dare not open hys mouthe. Thoughe one be lodged, and haue meate and drinke, yet shall he be taken as vnwor thye, and heare manye bytter roughe wordes, namelye thus: Go thy waye thou straunger, and prepare a table for thy selfe, and fede me also of that thou haste. Awaye thou straunger (so that he regardeth his honour nomore) my brother commeth into my house, and so he telleth hym the necessitye of hys house. These thynges are heauye to a manne that hathe vnderstandynge: namely, the forbyddynge of the house and that the lender casteth hym in the teeth.

Speake not, where there is no audience: and poure not foorthe wysdome out of tyme, at an importunitie. For their hope standethe in hym, that can helpe theym. And the eyes of the Lord are on them that loue hym. Who so feareth the Lord standeth in awe of no man, and is not afrayd, for the Lord is his hope and comforte. Blessed is the soule of hym that feareth the lord: In whom putteth he his trust? who is his strengthe? For the eyes of the lord haue respect vnto them, that loue hym. He is theyr myghty protection and stronge grounde: a defence for the heate, a refuge for the hote noone day, a succour for stomblyng, and an helpe for fallyng. He setteth vp the soule, & lighteneth the eies. He geueth lyfe & blessyng. He that geueth an offeryng of vnrightuous good, his offeryng is refused: and the scorneful dealyngs of the vnrighteous please not god. (The Lord is theirs onely that pacientely abide hym in the way of the truth, and of righteousnes. The Highest doothe not allowe the giftes of the wicked.) And God hath no delite in the offerings of the vngodly, neither may sin be reconciled in the multitude of oblations. Who so bryngeth an offerynge out of the gooddes of the poore, dothe euen as one that kylleth the sonne before the fathers eyes. The bread of the nedeful is the life of the poore: he that defraudeth him thereof, is a manne of blood. Who so robbeth his neyghbor of his lyuing, dothe as great a synne, as though he slew hym to death. He that defraudeth the labozer of his hire is a bloodshedder. When one buildeth and another breaketh downe, what profite haue they thenne but labour? When one prayeth, and an other curseth, whose voyce will the lord heare? He that washeth himselfe because of a dead bodye, and thenne toucheth the dead agayn, what doth his washyng? So is it with a man that fasteth for his synnes, and doothe theim agayne: Who will heare his prayer? Or what doth his fastyng helpe hym?

Who so kepeth the law, bringeth offerynges ynough. He that holdeth faste the commandemẽt, offreth the right helth offryng. He that is thankful, & recompenseth, offereth fyne flower. Who so is mercifull and geueth almes, that is the ryght thankoffryng. God hath pleasure when one departethe frome synne, and to forsake vnrighteousnes, reconcyliethe vs with hym. Thou shalt not appere empty before ỹ Lord, for all suche is doone beecause of the commaundement of God. The offeryng of the ryghteous maketh the aultar fatte, and a swete smell is it before the Hyest. The offerynge of the righteous is acceptable vnto GOD and shall neuer bee forgotten. Geue God his honor with a cherefull hart, and kepe not backe the fyrstlynges of thy handes. In all thy gyftes shew a mercyful countenaunce, and halowe thy tythes vnto God with gladnes. Geue vnto God accozding as he hath enriched and prospered the: and loke what thyne hand is able, geue with a cherefull eye: for the Lord recompenceth, and geueth thee seuen tymes as muche agayne. Geue no vnrighteous giftes, for suche will he not receyue. Beware of wrongfull offrynges, for the Lorde is a ryghteous Judge: and regardeth no mans person: He accepteth not the persone of the poore, but hee heareth the prayer of the oppressed. Hee despysethe not the desyre of the fatherlesse, nor the wydowe, when shee pourethe oute her prayer before hym. Doothe not GOD see the teares that renne downe the chekes of the wyddowe? Or heare thee hee not the complaynte, ouer suche as maketh her to weepe. For frome her chekes doo the teares go vp vnto heuen, and the Lorde whyche heare the them, dooth accepte theim: who so serueth God after his pleasure, shall bee accepted: and his prayer reacheth vnto the cloudes. Euery

EVery frend sayth: I wyll be frendly vnto hym also. But there is some frend, which is only a frend in name. Remaineth there not heuines vnto deth, whē a companyon & frende is turned to an enemye? O most wicked presumption: From whens arte thou spronge vp, to couer the earth with falshoode and discepte? There is some companion whiche in prosperitie reioyceth with his frende: but in the tyme of trouble, he taketh parte agaynst hym. There is som companion that mourneth with his frend for the belly sake, but when trouble commeth, he taketh hold of the shield. Forget not thy frēd in thy mynde, and thynke vppon hym in thy riches. Seke no councell at thy kynsmen, and hyde thy councell frome suche as beare thee no good wyl. Euery counceller byngeth forthe hys councell. Neuertheless, ther is some that counsaileth, but for his owne profite. Beware of the counceller, and be aduised afore whereto thou wylte vse hym, for he wyll councell for himself. Lest he cast the lot vpon thee, and say vnto thee: Thy way and purpose is good, and afterward he stand agaynst thee, and loke what shall becomme of thee. Aske no councel at hym, that suspecteth thee for an ennemie, and hyde thy councell frome suche as hate thee. Aske no councell at a woman concernyng the thyngs that she longeth for: nor at a fearefull and faynt harted body, in matters of warre: or at a marchaunt how deare he wyll cheape thy wares toward his: or at a byer, of sellyng: Or at an enuious man, of thankesgeuyng: Or at the vnmercyful, of louyng kyndnes: Or (at an vnhonest man, of honestie.) Or at the slouthful of worckyng: Or at an hyrelyng whiche hath no house, or profyt or welth. (An ydle bodye wold not gladly here speake of much labour. Take no such folkes to councell, but be diligente to seke councell at a vertuous man that feareth God, suche one as thou knowest to be a keeper of the commaundementes, whiche hath a mynde after thyne owne mynde, and is sorye for thee when thou stumblest. And holde thy councell faste in thyne hearte: for there is no man more faithful to kepe it, then thou thy selfe. For a mans mynde is sometyme more disposed to tell out, then euen watchemenne that syt aboue in an hie place loking about theym. And aboue all thys, praye the Hyest, that he wylle leade thy way in faithfulnes and truth. Before all thy workes aske councel fyrst: and or euer thou doest any thynge, be well aduised. There bee foure thynges that declare a chaunged hert, wherout there springeth cuyll and good, deathe and lyfe, and a maisterfull tonge that bableth muche. Some man is apt & well instruct in many thyngs, and yet very vnprofitable vnto hym selfe. Some man there is, that can geue wyse and prudent councell, and yet is he hated, and cōtinueth a begger: for that grace is not geuen hym of God to be accepted. An other is robbed of all wysedome, yet is hee wise vnto hym selfe, and the fruite of vnderstandynge is commendable in his mouthe. A wyse manne maketh hys people wyse, and the fruites of his wysedom fayle not. A wyse man shalbe plentuously blessed of God: and all they that see hym, shall speake good of hym. The lyfe of manne standeth in the numbre of the days, but the dayes of Israell are innumerable. A wise man shall obtayn faithfulnes and credence amonge hys people, and hys name shall bee perpetuall. My soonne, proue thy soule in thy lyfe: and if thou se any euil thing, geue it not vnto her. For all things are not profitable for all men, neither hath euery soul pleasure in euery thing. Be not gredy in euery eatyng, and be not hasty vpon al meats. For excesse of meates bringeth sickenes, and glutonie cōmeth at the last to an vnmeasurable heate. Throwe surfete haue many one perished: but he that dieteth hym selfe temperatly, prolongeth his lyfe.

3 HE that applyeth hys mynde to vnderstand the law of GOD dothe diligentely seeke oute the wysedome of them of the old tyme, & exerciseth hymselfe in the Prophets. He kepeth the sayinges of famous mẽ and preaseth to the vnderstandyng of darke sentences of wysedome. He seketh out the mysterie of secrete sayinges, and exerciseth hym self therin cõtinually. He doothe seruice amonge great menne, and appeareth before the prince. He goth into a straunge countrey, and trauayleth thorow it: loke what good or euyll is among men, he proueth it and seketh it out. He purposeth in his heart, to resort early vnto the Lord that made hym, & to praye before the hiest God. He openeth his mouth in prayer, and prayeth for hys sinnes. When the great Lorde wyl, he shalbe filled with the spirite of vnder-3 standyng, that he may then poure out wyse sentences, & geue thankes vnto the Lord in his prayer. He shall order his deuice, and leade his knowledge aright, and geue hym vnderstanding of secrete thynges. He shall shew foorth the science of his lernyng, and reioyce in the couenant of the law of the Lord The whole congregation shall commende his wysedome, and it shall neuer be put out. The remembraunce of hym shall neuer be forgotten, and his 44 name shall continue from one generation to an other. • His wisdome shall be spoken of, amonge the people, & the whole congregation shall openly declare his prayse. Whyle he liueth, he hath a greatter name then a thousand beside: and after his deathe, the same name remaineth vnto him. Yet will I speake of mo men of vnderstãding. for I am full as the Moone. Herken vnto me (ye holy vertuous children) bringe foorth fruite, as the Rose that is planted by the brookes of the fielde, and geue ye a swete smel as Libanus. Flourishe as the rose garland, syng a song of prayse. O geue thankes vnto God ouer all his workes. Geue glorie and honor vnto the Lord, shew his prayse with youre lippes. Yea, euen withthe song of youre lippes, wyth harpes and playinge, and in geuynge thankes vnto him, saye after this maner. • All the workes of the Lord are exceding good, and all his commandements are mete and conuenient in due season. A man nede not to saye: what is that? what is that? for at tyme conuenient they shal all be sought. At his commaundement the water was as a wall, and at the worde of his mouthe the water stode styll. • In hys commaundement is euery thyng acceptable, and reconciled, and his health can not be minished. The workes of all flesche are before hym, and there is nothing hid from his eies. He seeth from euerlastyng to euerlastyng, and there is nothyng to wonderfull or hye vnto hym. A man nede not to saye then, What is this, or that? For he hathe made all thyngs to do good vnto man. His blessyng shall runne ouer as the streame, and moysture the earth lyke a floode of water. Lyke as he moueth the water for drought, soo shall his E wrath fall vppon the Hethen. • Hys wayes are playne and righte vnto the iust, but the vngodly stomble at them. For the good, are good things created from the beginnyng, and euyl thyngs for the vngodly. • All things necessary for the life of mã, ar created frõ the beginning, water, fire, yron, & salt, meale wheat, and hony, milke, & wine, oyle, & clothing. • All these things are created for the beste to the faithfull. But to the vngodly shal al these thyngs be turned to their hurt and harm. There be spirites that are created for vengeaunce, and in theyr rigorousnes haue they fastened theyr tourmentes.

For in due season, they are all pleasant and good. and therefore prayse the Lorde wyth whole hert and mouth, and geue thankes vnto hys name.

¶ The. xl. Chapter.

A Great trauayle is created for all men, and an heuy yoke vpon al men childzen, from the day that they go out of theyr mothers wombe, tyll they bee buryed in (the earthe) the mother of all thynges.

Namely, their thoughtes and imaginations, feare of the herr, councel, meditations, longing and desyre, the day of deathe: from the hyest that syttethe vpon the glorious seate, vnto the lowest and moste simple vpon the earth from hym that is gorgiously arayde, and weareth a crowne, vntyl hym that is but homely and symplye cloathed.

There is nothyng but wrathe, zeale, carefulnes, vnquietnes, and feare of death, rigorous anger, and strife. And in the nyght, when one shoulde reste and slepe vpon his bed, the slepe changeth hys vnderstandyng and knowledge. A lyttle or nothyng is his reste in the sleape, as welle as in the day of labourc. Hee feareth, and is disquieted in the bysyon of hys hart, as one that rommethe out of a battayle: and in the time of health he awaketh and marueleth that the feare was nothinge. Suche thynges happen vnto al flesh, both man and beast: but seuenfold to the vngodly. Moreouer, death, bludshedding, stryfe and swearde, oppression, hunger, destruction and punyshment: • these thyngs ar al created Gn.19. agaynste the vngodlye, and for their sakes came the flounde also. • All that Gen.7. is of the earth shall turne to earthe agayne, and all waters ebbe agayn into the sea. All bribes and vnryghteousnes shalbe put away, but faithfulnes and truth shal endure for euer. The substaunce and goodes of the vngodly shalbe dried vp and sinke away as a water flud, and they shal make a sounde lyke a greate thonder in the rayne. Like as the ryghteous reioyseth when hee openeth his hande, so ¶ shal the transgressours be faint, whē their goodes vanishe and consume away. • The childzen of the vngodlye shal not obtayne many branches, and Ecc.41 the vncleane rootes vpon the hyghe rockes shalbe rooted oute before the grasse by the water side, and vpon the ryuer bankes. Frendlynes, and liberalitye in the increase and blessing of God, is lyke a Paradyse and garden of pleasure: such mercy also and kindnes endureth for euer. To labour and Phil.4 to be content wyth that a man hath, is a swete pleasaunt lyfe: and that is to find a treasure aboue all treasures. To beget chyldzen and to repayre the citie, maketh a perpetual name: but an honest woman is more worthe, then them both. Wyne and minstrelsye reioyce the herte, but the loue of wysedome is aboue theym both. Pypynge and harping make a swete noise, but a frendly tonge goeth beyonde theim both. Thyne eye desyreth fauour and ¶ bewty, but a grene seede time, rather then they both. A frend and companiõ come together at opportunitie, but aboue them both is a wyfe that agreeth wyth her husband. One brother helpeth another in the tyme of trouble, but almes shal deliuer more then them both. Gold and syluer fasten the sete,but a good councell is more pleasaunt then they both. Temporal substaunce and strength lift vp the mind: but the feare of the Lorde more then they both. The seate of the Lord wanteth nothing,and nedeth no help. The feare of the Lorde is a pleasaunt garden of blessyng, and nothyng so bewtyfull as it is. My sonne, lede not a beggers lyfe,for better it were to dye then to begge. Who so loketh to another mans table,taketh no thought for his owne lyuing howe to vphold his life,for he fedeth him selfe with other mennes meate. But a wyse and well nurtoured man wyll beware thercof. Beggynge is sweete in the mouth of the vnshamefast, but in his belly there burneth a fyre.

O Death, how bitter is the remembraunce of thee,to a man that seketh reste and comforte in his substaunce and ryches, vnto the man that hath nothynge to vexe hym, and that hath prosperitie in al things, yea, vnto hym that yet is able to receaue meate? O death,howe acceptable and good is thy iudgemente vnto the nedefull,& vnto him whose strength fayleth, and that is nowe in hys last age,and that in all thinges is full of care and fearefulnes:vnto him also that is in dyspayre, and hath no hope nor pacience? Be not thou afrayed of death: remember them that haue bene bene before thee: and that come after the:this is the iudgement of the Lord ouer all fleshe. And whye wouldest thou be agaynste thys pleasure of the hyest? whether it be ten,an hundred, or a thousande yeres,death asketh not howe long one hath lyued. The children of the vngodly are abhominable children,and so are they that kepe company with the vngodly. The enheritaunce of vngodlye children shall come to naughte, and their posteritye shall haue perpetuall shame and confusion. The children complayne of an vngodly father,and why? for his sake they are rebuked and despysed. Wo be vnto you(O ye vngodly)which haue forsaken the lawe of the hyest God: if ye be borne, ye shalbe borne to cursynge, yf ye dye,the curse shalbe your portion. All that is of the earth,shall turne to earth agayn:so go the vngodlye also out of the curse into destruction. The sorowe of menne is their bodye: but the name of the vngodlye shall be put oute, for it is nothynge woorth. Labour to gette thee a good name,for that shall continue surer by thee,then a thousande great treasures of golde. A good life hath a number of days,but a good name endureth euer. ¶ My children,kepe wisdome in peace: for wysedome that is hyd, and a treasure that is not sene, what profyt is in the both? A man that hideth his foolyshnes, is better then a man that hydeth hys wisdome. Therfore be ye turned at my woordes: for it is not good, inall thynges and alway to be ashamed. True fayth must proue and measure it. Be ashamed of whordom, before father and mother: be ashamed of lesyng, before the prince and men of auctoritie: Of sinne, before the iudge and ruler. Of offence,before the congregation and people: Of vnryghteousnes, before a companyon and frende: Of theft, before thy neyghbours. As for the trueth of God and hys couenaũt,be not ashamed therof. Be ashamed to lye wyth thyne elbowes vpon the bread: Be ashamed to loke vppon harlottes: Be ashamed to turne away thy face from thy frende. Be ashamed to take and not to geue: Be ashamed also to loke vpõ another mans wyfe, and to make manye tryflyng woordes with her mayden,or to stãd by her bedside. Be ashamed to vpbrayd thy frend: whẽ thou geuest any thing,call him not in ỹ teeth withal.

Rehearse not a thynge twyse, and disclose not the woordes, ỹ thou hast hard in secret. Be shamefast and well manered in dede, so shall euerye man fauoure thee. Of these things be not thou ashamed,and accept no person to offende. Namely, of these thynges be not ashamed. Of the lawe of God, of the couenant, of iudgement: to bryng the vngodly frō hys vngodlines vnto ryghteousnesse, and to make hym a good man: to deale faythfully wyth thy neyghboure and companion: to dystribute the heritage vnto thy frendes: to bee diligente to kepe true measure and weyght: to bee content, whether thou getteſt muche or lytle: to deale truely with temporal goodes in byinge and sellinge: to bryngе vp children wyth diligence: to correct an euil seruante: to keepe that thyne is from an euil wyfe: to sette a locke where many handes are: what thou delieueresst and geuest oute to bee kept, to tel it, and to weye it: to wryte vp al thy out geuing and receauinge: to enfourme the vnlearned and vnwyse. Of the aged, that are iudged of the yong. If thou be diligent in these thynges, truely thou shalt be learned and wyse and accepted of al mē. The

The Sunne ouerlooketh all thynges wyth hys shine, and al hys workes are ful of the clearnes thereof. Hath not the Lord brought to passe that hys saintes should tel out all his wonderous woorkes whych the Almighty Lord hath stablished? All thinges endure in his glorye. He seeketh oute the grounde of the depe, and the heart of men, and he knoweth al their ymagination and wysedome. For the Lorde knoweth al science, and he looketh into the token of the tyme. fastened, and set wyth costly precious stones, al bound with golde: and this he brought in his ministration. The stoones were fastened for a remembrance, after the number of the twelue Tribes of Israel. Vppon the myter
there

there was a plate of pure golde, a grauen ymage of holines, a famous and noble worke, garnished, and pleasant to loke vpon. Before him were there seene no suche fayre ornamentes, and these it behoued him alwaye to vse: Ther might none other put them on, but onely his children, and hys chyl-ders children perpetually. Dayelye perfourmed he hys burnte offerynges two tymes. Moyses fylled his han des, and annoynted him wyth holye oyle. This was nowe confirmed him wyth an euerlasting couenaunte, and to hys seede, as the dayes of heauen: namely, that his children shoulde al-way minister before him, and perfozm the office of the priesthode, and wyshe the people good in his name. Before al menne liuing chose he him, that hee should offre incense before the Lorde, and make odours for a swete sauoure and remembrauunce, that he should reconcyle the people of the Lorde wyth hym agayne. He gaue him aucthorite also in hys commaundementes, and in the couenaunt, that he shoulde teach Jacob the statutes and testimonies, and to enfourme Israel in hys lawe. Therfore, there stoode vppe a certayne against him, and had enuye at him in the wildernes: namelye, they that were of Dathan, and Aby-rams syde, and the furious congregation of Chore. This the Lorde sawe, and it displesed him, and in his wroth ful indignation were they consumed.
A great wonder dyd he vpon theym, and consumed theym wyth the fire.
Besides thys, hee made Aaron yet more honorable and glorious. Hee gaue him an heritage, and parted the fyrste fruites vnto him. Vnto hym specialiye he appointed the breade for sustenaunce, (for the priestes dyd eate of the offringes of the Lord) this gaue he vnto hym and hys seede. Els had he no heritage nor portion in the land with the people. For the LORD hymselfe is his portion and inherytaunce. The thirde noble and excellent man is Phinehes the sonne of Eleazar, whyche pleased the God of Israell, because hee had the zeale and feare of the Lorde. For when the people were turned backe, he put himself foorthe ryghte soone, and that wyth a good wyll, to pacify the wrath of the Lorde towarde Israell. Therefore was there a couenaunt of peace made wyth him, that he should be the principal amonge the ryghteous, and the people, that hee and hys posterite should haue the office of the priesthode for euer. (Lyke as there was made a couenant wyth Dauid of the trybe of Juda, that from amonge hys sonnes onely, there shoulde be a kinge:) And that Aaron also and hys seede shoulde be the heritage, to geue vs wysdome in oure hearte, to iudge hys people in ryghteousnes: that hys goods should not come into forgetfulnes, and that their honour mighte endure for euer.

The. xlvi. Chapter.

MAnlye and stronge in battell was Jesus the sonne of Naue, whiche in stede of Moyses the prophet was geuen to be captaine of the people, whiche according vnto hys name was a greate sa-uiour vnto the elect of God, to punish the enemyes that rose vp against Israel, that Israel myghte obtayne the inheritaunce. O howe great, noble, and excellent was he, when he lyft vp hys hand, and drewe out hys sweard agaynst the cities! Who stode so man-lye before hym? For the Lorde hym selfe brought in the enemies. Stode not the Sunne stil at his commaun-dement, and one daye was as long as twoe? Hee called vppon the hyest and most myghty when the enemyes pressed vppon him on euerye syde, and the Lorde hearde him wyth the haile stones. They smote the Hethenish people myghtelye, and in the fallynge downe they slewe al the aduersaries, so that the heathen knewe hys hoste, and al his defence, that the Lord hym selfe fought againste them, for he folo-wed vpon the myghty men of theym.
In the time of Moses also, hee and Caleb the sonne of Jephune, dydde a good worke, which stode againste the enemyes, wythheldе the people from synne, and stylled the wycked murmu-Nu.26.g ryng. ¶ And of syx hundred thousand people of foote, they two wer preserued, to bring theym into the heritage, namelye, a lande that floweth wyth Ios.24.c mylcke and honye. ¶ The Lorde gaue strength also vnto Caleb, whiche remayned wyth him vnto hys age: so that he weante vp into hys hye places of the lande, and hys seede conquered the same for an heritage: that all the childzen of Israel myghte see, how good a thing it is, to be obedient vnto the Lorde. And the iudges or rulers, (euerye one after hys name) whose heart went not a whoryng, nor departed from the Lorde, and that forsooke not the Lorde vnfaithfully, whose re-membraunce hath a good report. Yea their bones florysh out of their place: & their names shall neuer be changed, (but honor remaineth stil with ỹ chil dzen of those holy men.) Samuel the 1Re.10a prophet beloued of the Lord his God, C ordeyned a kinge, and annoynted the princes ouer the people. In the law of the Lorde ruled he, & iudged the cōgregation, and the Lorde had respecte vnto Jacob. The prophet was found diligente in hys faythfulnes: yea, & he is knowen faithfull in his woor-des, because he saw the god of lyght.

1Reg.7a ¶ He called vpon the Lord the almigh ty, when the enemyes preased vppon him on euery syde, what time as hee offered the suckinge lambes. And the lord thondred from heaue, & made his voyce to be heard with a great noise.
He discomfited the princes of Tyre, 3Re.12a and al the rulers of the Philistines.
¶ Before hys laste ende he made pro-testation in the syght of the Lord, and hys annoynted, that he tooke neyther substance nor good of anye manne, no not so much as a shoe, and no manne myght accuse him. After thys he told, that hys ende was at hande, and shewed the king also his end and death, and from the earth like hee vp hys voyce in the prophecy, that the vngod ly people should perysshe.

¶ The xlviii. Chapter

AFterward in the time of king Dauid, there rose vp a Pro-2Re.12. phet called Nathan: For like as the fat is taken away from the offering, so was Dauyd chosen oute of the childzen of Israel. He tooke hys pastyme with the lions, as with kid-des, and wyth beares lyke as wyth when he was yet but yong, and toke awaye the rebuke from hys people, what tyme as he toke the stone in his hande, and smote downe proud Goliath wyth the slinge? For he called vp-on the hiest Lorde, which gaue hym strength in hys ryghte hande, so that he ouerthrewe the myghty gyaunt in the battail, that he myght sette vp the B horne of hys people agayne. ¶ Thus 3Re.11. brought he hym to worshyp aboue all princes, and made him to haue a good reporte in the prayse of the Lord, that he shoulde weare a crowne of glorye.

¶ For he destroyed the enemyes on e-uery syde, rooted out the Philistines 2Reg.5b hys aduersaryes, and brake their horn in sunder, like as it is broken yet this day. In al hys workes he praysed the hiest and holiest, and ascrybed the honour vnto him. With hys whole hert dyd he prayse the Lord and loued hym that made hym. ¶ Hee set syngers also 2par.26b before the aulter, and in their tune hee made sweete songes. Hee ordeyned to kepe the holy daies worshipfully, and that the solemne feastes thorough the whole yeare should be honorably hol den, wyth prayspnge the name of the Lorde, and wyth syngynge betymes in the mornynge in the Sanctuarye.
¶ The Lorde tooke awaye his synnes, C and exalted hys horne for euer. Hee 2Re.12. gaue hym the couenant of the kynge-dome, and the throne of worshyp in Israel. ¶ After him there rose vp the wyse sonne called Salomon, and for 3Re.3.c hys sake he droue the enemies awaye far of. This Salomon reygned with peace in hys tyme (for God gaue him rest from hys enemyes on euery side, that he myght build hym an house in hys name, and prepare the Sanctu-arye for euer) lyke as hee was wel instructe

instruct in hys youth, and filled with wysedome and vnderstandynge, as it were a water floud. He couered & filled the whole lande with similitudes and wise prudent sentēces. His name went abrode in ỹ Iles, because of his peace he was beloued. All lands merualled at his songes, prouerbes, similitudes, and at his peace, & at the name of the Lord God, whiche is called the God of Israel. • He gathered gold as tynne, and he had made as much siluer as lead. He was moued in inordinate loue toward women, and was ouercome in affection. He stayned hys honour and worshyp, yea hys posteritie defiled he also, in bringyng the wrath of the Lord vpon his children, and sorowe after his ioy: • so that his kingdome was deuided, and Ephraim became an vnfaithful and an vnconstant kyngdome. • Nuertheiesse God forsoke not his mercy, neither was he vterly destroyed because of his worke, that he should leaue him no posterity. As for the seede that came vpon hym, which he loued, he brought it not vterly to naughte, but gaue yet a remnant vnto Jacob, & a roote vnto Dauid out of him. Thus rested Salomō with his fathers, and out of his seede he left behynd hym a very foolishnes of the people, and suche one as hadde no vnderstanding: euē • Roboā, whiche turned awaye the people thorowe his counsell: and Jeroboam, the sonne of Nabat, • whyche caused Israell to synne, & shewed Ephraim the way of vngodlynes: In so muche that theyr synnes and mysdeedes had the vpper hande so sore, that at the last they were driuen out of the lande for the same. Yea, he sought out and brought vppe all wyckednes, tyll the vengeaunce came vppon theym.

The. xlviii. Chapter.

Then stode vp • Elias the prophet as a fyre, and his woorde brēt like a creslyte. He brought an hunger vpon them, and in his zele he made theym fewe in numbre. For thye myght not away with the commandementes of the Lord. Thorowe the woorde of the Lord, he shut the heuen, • & thre tymes brought hee the fyre down. While he lyued, he was afrayde of no prince, and no man myghte ouercome hym. There could no woorde deceyue hym, • and after his death, his bodye prophecied. • He dyd wonders in his lyfe, and in deathe were his workes meruailous. For all thys, the people amended not, neyther departed they from theyr synnes, tyll they were caryed away prisoners out of the land, and were scattered abrode in all countreys, so that of them there remained, but a very lyttle people, and a prynce vnto the house of Dauid. Howebeit, some of them dyd ryght, and some heaped vp vngodlynes. • Hezekias made his citie stronge, conueyed water into it, bygged thorowe the stonye rocke with yron, & made vp a well by ỹ water side. In his time cam Sēnacherib vp, & sent Rabsakes to lift vp his hād against Sion, & defied thē with gret pryde. Then trembled their heartes and hands, so that they sorowed lyke a woman trauaylynge wyth chylde.

SImeon • the sonne of Onias the hye preest, whiche in hys lyfe set vp the house agayne, and in hys dayes made faste the temple. The heygth of the temple also was founded of hym, the double buyldynge, and the hye walles of the temple. In hys dates the welles of water flowed out and were exceading full as the sea. He toke care for his people, and deliuered them from destruction. He kepte hys citye and made it stronge, that it shold not be beseged. He dweite in honoure and worshyppe amonge hys people, and enlarged the entraunce of the house, and the courte. He gaue lyghte as the morynge starre in the myddest of the cloudes, and as the mone when it is full. He shyned as the sunne in the temple of God. He is as bryghte as the raine bow in the fayre cloudes, and flowrysshed as the floures and roses in the sprynge of the yeare, and as lyfye lyues by the riuers of water: Like as the braunches vpon the mount Libanus in the tyme of Sommer, as a fire & incense that is kyndled. Lyke as an whole ornamēt of pure gold, set with all maner of precious stones, and as an Olyue tree that is fruitfull, and as a Cipres tree whiche groweth vp an hye. When he put on the garmente of honoure, and was clothed wyth all bewtye: when he wente to the holye aulter, to garnishe the couerynge of the Sanctuary: when he toke the portions out of the Prestes hande, he him selfe stode by the herthe of the aulter, and his brethrē round about in ordre. As the braunches of Cedre tree vpon the mount Libanus, so stode they roūd aboute hym. And as the braunches of the Olyue tree, so stode all the sunnes of Aaron in their glory, & the oblatiōs of ỹ lord in their handes before al the congregation of Israell. And that he might sufficiently perfourme hys seruyce vpon the aulter, and garnishe the offeryng of the hyest God, he stretched oute hys hand, and toke of the drinke offeryng, and powred in the wyne: so he powred vpon the botome of the aulter a good smel vnto the hyest prince. Then began the soonnes of Aaron to synge, and to blowe wyth trompettes, and to make a great noise, for a remembraunce and prayse vnto the Lorde. Then were the people afrayd, and fell downe to the earthe vpon their faces, to worshyp the Lorde their God, and to geue thankes to the almighty God. They songe goodlye also wyth their voyces, so that there was a pleasaunt noyse in the great house of the Lorde. And the people in their prayer besoughte the Lorde the hyest, that he wolde be mercifull, tyll the honour of the Lorde were perfourmed: thus ended they their mynystracyon and seruice. Then went he downe and stretched oute hys handes ouer the whole multitude of the people of Israel, that they shoulde geue prayse and thankes out of their lyppes vnto the Lord, and to reioyce in hys name. He began yet once also to pray, that he myght openly shew the thanksgeuyng before ỹ hyest namely thus: O geue prayse & thanks (ye all) vnto the Lorde oure GOD, which hath euer done noble and great thynges: whiche hath increased oure dayes from our mothers wombe, and dealt with vs according to his mercy: that he will geue vs the ioyfulnes of hearte, and peace for oure tyme in Israell. Whiche faythfullye kepeth hys mercye for vs euermore, and alway deliuereth vs in due season. There bee two maner of people that I abhorre fro my herte: as for the third whom I hate, it is no people. They that sytte vppon the mountaynes of Samaria, the Philistines, and the foolyshe people that dwell in Sichimus. I Jesus the sonne of Syrach Eleazarus of Jerusalem, haue tokened vp these informacions and documentes of wisdome and vnderstandyng in this boke, and poured out the wysdome of my herte. Blessed is he that exerciseth him selfe therin: and who so taketh such to hert shall be wyse for euer. If he doo these thinges, he shall be stronge in all. For the lyght of the Lorde ledeth him.

The. li. Chapter.

I wyll thanke thee, O Lorde and kyng, and prayse thee, O God my sauiour. I will yelde prayse vnto thy name: for thou art my defendoure and helper, and haste preserued my bodye from destruction, from the snare of traytorous tonges, and from the lyps that are occupyed with lyes. Thou haste bene my helper, frome suche as stode vp against me, and hath deliuered me after the multitude of thy mercy, and for thy names sake. Thou hast deliuered me from the roaring of thē that prepared them selues to deuoure me, out of the hande of such as sought after my lyfe: frome the multitude of them that troubled me, and wente aboute to sette fyre vpon me on euerye syde, so that I am not brente in the myddest of the fyre: From the depe of hell, frome an vncleane tongue, frome lying wordes, from the wicked king, and from an vngracious tongue. My soule shall prayse the Lord vnto death, for my life drewe nye vnto hell downe W warde. They compalled me round about on euery syde, and there was no man to helpe me. I loked about me, if there were any man that would suc-coure me: but there was none. Then thought I vpon thy mercy, O Lord, and vpon thy actes that thou hast don euer of olde, namely, that thou deliuerest suche as put their truste in thee, and ryddest them out of the handes of the Heathen. Thus lyfte I vppe my prayer from the earthe, and prayed for deliueraunce from death. I called vp-on the Lorde my father, that he wold not leaue me without helpe, in the day of my trouble, and in the tyme of the proude: I praysed thy name continuallye, yeldynge honoure and thankes vnto it: and so my prayer was herde.

Thou sauedst me frome destruction, and delyueredst me from the vnrygh-teous tyme. Therfore, will I aknow ledge and prayse thee, and magnifye the name of the Lorde. When I was yet but yonge, or euer I went astray, I desired wisdome openly in my prayer. I came therefore before the temple, and soughte her vnto the laste.
E The flourished she vnto me, as a grape

I after her. I bowed downe myne much wisdome: and prospered greatly in her. Therefore I will ascrybe the glory vnto him, that geueth me wysdome: for I am adupted to do theracter. I will be gelous to cleue vnto the thing that is good, so shall I not be confounded. My soule hath wrestled with her, and I haue bene diligent to be occuppyed in her. I lyfte vppe myne lyghtened thorowe wysdome, that I knowledged my folyshnes. I ordred my soule after her, she and I were one heart frō the begynnyng, and I found her in clennesse. And therfore shall I not be forsaken. My hert longed after D her, and I gat a good treasure. Tho-rowe her the Lorde hath geuen me a newe tong, wherwith I will prayse him. ✤ O come vnto me ye vnlearned, Eccl.51. and dwell in the house of wysdome: withdrawe not your selues from her, but talke and comen of these thinges, for your soules are verye thirsty. I opened my mouth, and spake, O come e bye wisdome without money, bow downe your necke vnder her yoke, and youre soule shall receaue wysdome.

She is hard at hand, and is content to be founde. Behold with your eyes, ✤ Eccle.51 how that I haue had but litle labour, and yet haue found much reste. O receaue wisdome, and ye shall haue pien teousnes of syluer and golde in possession. Let your mind reioyse in his mer cye, and be not ashamed of hys prayse.
Worke his worke betymes, & he shall elders: and before the whole people, from the lowest vnto the hyest: before al them that dwelt at Babylon, by the water of Sody. Whiche when they herd it, wept, fasted, and prayed before B the Lord. They made a collection also of money, accordyng to euery mannes power, and sent it to Jerusalem vnto Joachim the sonne of Helchia, the son of Salom priest, with the other priestes and to all the people which were wyth hym at Jerusalem, what tyme as they had gotten the ornamentes of the temple of the Lord (that were taken away out of the temple) that they might bringe theym agayne into the land of Juda, the tenth day of the moneth Siban: namely, syluer vesselles (which Sedechiah the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda had made) after that Nabuchodonosor king of Babilan had taken Jechoniah, with all his princes, lordes, and all the people, and led them captiue from Jerusalem vnto Babylon. Dani.9a The Lorde our God is ryghteous, but we are worthye of confusion and shame: lyke as it is come to passe thys daye, vnto all Juda, and to euery one that dwelleth at Jerusalem: to oure kynges, princes, priestes, prophetes, and to our fathers. We haue sinned before the Lorde our God, we haue not put our truste in hym, nor geuen hym credence, we haue not obeyed him, we haue not herkened vnto the voyce of the Lord our God, to walke in the cōmaūdementes that he gaue vs. Sens the daye that he brought oure forefathers out of the lande of Egypt vnto this present day, we haue bene euer a misbeleuing and an vnfaythfull people vnto the Lord our god: destroying our selues vtterly, & shrinking backe, that we shoulde not heare hys voyce.

Wherfore ther ar com vpon vs gret Leui.26. plagues and dyuerse curses. Lyke as Deu.28. the Lord decreed by Moyses his ser- E uaunte: Whiche brought our forefa- Exod.14. thers out of the land of Egipt, to geue vs a lande, that floweth wyth mylke and hony, lyke as it is to see this day. Neuertheles, we haue not herkened vnto the voyce of the Lorde our God, accordyng to all the workes of the prophetes, whom he sent vnto vs, and to oure rulers: but euery man folowe th hys owne mynde and wycked ymagination, to serue vnto straunge gods, and to do euyll in the sight of the Lord our God.

The.ii. Chapter.

FOr the which cause the Lorde A our God hath performed his Dan.8.b deuice, wherof he certifyeth vs, and our heades that ruled in Jerusalem: yea, and our kynges, our princes with all Israell and Juda. And such plages hath the Lorde brought vpon vs, as neuer came to passe vnder the heauen, like as it is fulfilled in Jerusalem, accordyng as it is wrytten in Deu.28 the lawe of Moyses: that a man shold 4 Re.2 eate the flesshe of hys owne sonne, and Tren.3a the flesshe of hys owne daughter.
Moreouer, he hath deliuered them into the handes of all the kynges, that are round about vs (to be confounded and desolate) and scattered theym abrode in al landes and nacions. Thus are we brought beneth and not aboue, because that are come vppon vs all ready, the Lorde hadde deuised theym for vs: yet wold we not pray vnto the Lorde our God, that we might euery man turne from his vngodly wais. So the Lord hath caused such plagues to come vppon vs: for he is ryghteous in all hys workes, which he hath commaunded vs: whiche we also haue not done, nor harkened vnto his voice, for to walke in the commandements of the Lorde, that he hath geuē vnto vs. • And now thou didst threaten vs, by thy seruanthe Lord: Bow downe your shoulders that I gaue vnto your fathers. If ye in the heate of the son, and in the colde of the nyghte, and dead in greate my-it waste, as it is to se this day: and that for the wickednes of the house of Is-our God, thou hast intreated vs after all thy goodnes, & according to al that great louinge mercy of thyne, like as thou spakest by thy seruant Moses, in Notwithstanding, I am sure ỳ thys captiuitie, they shal remēbre them sel-ues, & lerne to know, ỳ I am the lord theyr God, when I geue theym an hart to vnderstand, and eares to here.

Then

Then shall they praise me in the land of their captiuitie, and think vpon my name. Then shal they turne them frō their hard backes, and from their vngodlynes. Then shall they remembre the thynges, that hapned vnto theyr forefathers, whyche synned agaynste me. So wyll I bryng them agayne into the land, which I promised with an othe vnto their fathers: Abraham, Isaac and Jacob: and they shalbe lordes of it: yea I wil increase them, and not minysh them. And I will make an other couenaunt with them: suche one as shall endure for euer: namely, that I wil be their GOD, and they shalbe my people: and I wil nomore driue my people the childrē of Israel, out of the land that I haue geuē thē.

¶ The. iii. Chapter.

AND now, O Lord almighty, thou GOD of Israell, oure soule that is in trouble, & our spirite that is vexed, crieth vnto thee: Heare vs (O Lord) and haue pitie vpon vs, for thou art a mercyfull God: be gracious vnto vs, for we haue synned before thee. Thou endurest for euer, should we then vtterly perysshe? O Lord almyghty, thou God of Israell: Heare nowe the prayer of the dead Israelites and of their chyldren whiche haue synned before thee, and not hearkened vnto the voyce of the Lord theyr God, for the whiche cause these plagues hang now vpon vs: O Lorde, remembre not the wickednesse of our forefathers, but thynke vppon thy power & name now at this tyme: for thou art the Lord our God, & thee (O Lord) wil we praise. For thou hast put thy feare in our hertes, to the intent that we should call vppon thy name, and praise thee in our Captiuitie: and that wee myght turne frome the wickednes of our forfathers, that synned before thee. Beholde, we are yet this day in our captiuitie, where as thou haste scattred vs to bee an abhomination, curse, and synne: lyke as it happened vnto our fathers also, because of all theyr wickednes and departynge from thee. O Israell heare the commaundements of lyfe, ponder them wel with thyne eares, that thou mayste learne wisedome. But howe happeneth it Israel, that thou arte in thyne enemies land? thou art waxen old in a strange countrey, and defyled with the dead. Why arte thou become lyke them, that go down to their graues? Euen because thou hast forsaken the welle of wyledome. For yf thou haddest walked in the waye of God truely, thou shouldest haue remained styll safe in thyne owne land. Jere. 2.

Yong men haue sene light, & dwelt vpon earth: but the way of reformatiō haue they not knowē, nor vnderstand the pathes thereof: neither haue theyr childrē receaued it, yea, right far is it from thē. It hath not bē herd of in the lande of Canaan, neither hath it bene sene at Themā. The Agarens sought after wisedome, but ẏ which is erthly like as the marchants of the land do. They of Theman are comming also, and they labour for wisedom and vnderstanding: but the way of true wisdom they know not: neither doo they think vpon the pathes therof. O Israel, how great is the house of God? and how large is the place of his possession? Great is he, and hath none ende, yea, and vnmeasurable. What is becom-becoume of thole famous gyantes, that were so great of bodies, and so worthy men of warre? ¶ The. b. Chapter.

O Jerusalem, loke about the toward the East, and behold the ioy that commeth vnto the frō God. For lo, thy sonnes (whom thou hast forsaken, and that were scatred abrode (com gathered together, from ỹ east and west reioysyng in the worde of the holye one, vnto the honoure of God. Put of thy mournynge clothes (O Jerusalem) and thy sorowe, and deck thee with the worshyp and honoure that commeth vnto thee frome God, with euerlastynge glorye. God shal put the garment of righteousnes vpon thee, and set a crowne of euerlastyng worshyp vpon thyne heade: for vpon the will God declare his brightnesse, that is vnder the heauen. Yea, an euerlastyng name shalbe geuen the of God, with peace of righteousnes, and the honoure of Gods feare. Aryse, O B Jerusalem, stand vpō hye: loke about thee toward the easte, and beholde thy children gathered from the East, vnto the weste, whiche reioyce in the holye word, hauyng God in remembrance. They departed from the one fote, and were led away of their enemyes: but nowe shall the Lorde bryng them caryed with honoure, as children of the kyngdome. For God is purposed to bryng downe all stout mountaynes, yea, and all hye rockes, to fyll the valeys, and so to make theym euen with the ground: that Israell may be dilygent to lyue vnto the honour of God. The woddes and all pleasaunt trees shall ouershadow Israell, at the commaundemente of God. For hyther shall God bryng Israell with ioyfull mirth, and in the light of his maiesty: with the mercy and righteousnes, that commeth of him selfe.

and after that will I bring you awaye peaceably from thence. Nowe shal ye see in Babilon, goddes of golde, of syluer, of wood and of stone, borne vpon mens shoulders, to cast out a fear ruines before the heathen. But looke that ye do not as the other: be not yee afrayde, and let not the feare of theym ouercome you. Therfore, whan ye see the multitude of people worshipping theym behinde and before, saye yee in your hertes: O Lord, • it is thou that ought est onely to be worshypped. Deu. 6. c

Myne aungel also shalbe with you, and I my selfe wil care for your soules. As for the tymber of those gods, the carpenter hath polished them. Ye, gilted bee they and layed ouer with syluer, yet are they but vayne thinges and can not speake. Lyke as a wench that loueth peramors is trimly decked, euen so are these made and hanged with gold. Crownes of gold verelye haue their goddes vpon their heades: so the priestes them selues take gold and siluer from theym: and putte it to their owne vses, yea, they geue of the same vnto harlottes, and trym their whoores withal: againe, they take it from the whores, and decke their gods there with. • Yet canne not these goddes deliuer them selues from rust and mothes. When they haue couered theym with clothinge of purple, they wype their faces for the duste of the temple, wherof there is much among them. One hath a scepter in his hand as though he wer iudge of the countrye: yet can he not slea such as offend him. Another hath a sweard or an axe in hys hande, for al that is hee neyther able to defend him selfe from battayle, nor from murtherers. By thys yee may vnderstand, that they be no goddes: therfore see that ye neyther worshyp them, nor feare theym. For lyke as a vessel that a manne vseth, is nothing worth when it is broken, euen so is it with their goddes. Whā they be set vp in the temple, theyr eyes bee ful of duste throughe the feete of those that come in. And lyke as the doores are shut in round aboute vppon hym that hath offended the kyng. Or as it were a deade bodye kepte beside the graue: Euen so the priestes keepe the dores with barres and lockes, leaste their goddes bee spoiled with robbers. They set vp candels, before thē (yea verely and that manye) whereof they can not see one, but euen as blockes, so stande they in the temple. It is sayd, that the serpentes and woormes, which com of the earth, gnawe out their heartes, eatinge theym and their clothes also, and yet they feele it not. Their faces are blacke thorough the smoke that is in the temple. The oules, swalowes, and birdes flye vpon them, yea and the cattes runne ouer their heades. By this ye may bee sure that they are not goddes, therfore feare theym not. The golde that they haue, is to make them bewtiful: for al that, except some body dyghte of their rust they wil geue no shine: and whan they were caste into a fourme, they felte it not. They are boughte for money, and haue no breath of lyfe within theym. • They must be borne vpon mennes shoulders, as those that haue no fete: wherby they declare vnto men, that they be nothing worth. Confounded be they then that worshyppe theym, for yf they fall to the grounde, they canne not ryse vppe agayne of theym selues. Yea though one helpe theym vp, and set them ryghte, yet ar they not able to stand alone, but must haue proppes to set vnder theim lyke dead men. As for the thynge that is offered vnto them, theyr Priests sell it, and abuse it, yea, the priests wyues take therof: but vnto the sicke & poore, they geue nothynge of it, the women with chyld and the menstruous laye handes of their offrynges. By this ye may be sure, that they are no goddes, therfore be not ye afrayd of thē. From whens commeth it then, that they be called gods? The women sytte before the gods of syluer, gold, and woodde, and the priestes syt in theyr temples, hauyng open cloathes, whose heades and beardes are shauen, and haue nothynge vppon theyr heades, rearyng and crynge vpon their gods, as men E do at the feast when one is dead. The priestes also take away the garmētes of the ymages, and decke their wyues and chyldren withall. Whether it be good or euyll that anye man do vnto them, they are not able to recompence it: they can neyther set vp a kynge nor put him downe. In lyke maner they may neyther geue ryches, nor reward m.5.a euyll. ✦ Though a man make a bowe vnto them and kepe it not, they wyll not require it. They can saue no man from death, neither deliuer the weake frō the myghty. They can not restore a blynde man to hys syghte, nor helpe anye man at his nede. They can shew no mercy to the widdow, nor do good to the fatherles. Their gods of wod, stone, golde, and syluer, are but euen as other stones, that be hewen of the mountayn. They that worshyp them, shalbe confounded. Howe shulde they then be taken for goddes? Yea, howe dare men call them gods? And though the Chaldees worshypped them not, hearynge that they were but domme, and coulde not speake: Yet they them selues offer vnto Bell, and woulde fayne haue him to speake: as who say, they coulde fele, that maye not moue.

But when these men come to vnderstandyng, they shall forsake them, for F their gods haue no feling. A great sort of wemen gyrde with coardes, syt in the stretes, and burne Olyue beryes.
Nowe if one of them be conueyed awaye, and lye with anye such as come by: she casteth her neyghboure in the teeth, because she was not so worthe-lye reputed, nor her coarde broken.
Whatsoeuer is done for them, it is but in vayne and losse. Howe may it then be thought or said, that they are gods?
Carpenters and goldesmythes make them, neither be they any other thing but euen what the workeman wyll make of them. Yea, the goldesmythes them selues that make them, are of no longe continuaunce. Howe shulde then the thinges that are made of thē, be goddes? Mayne therefore are the thynges (yea, verye shame is it) that they leaue behind theym for their posterity. For as sone as there commeth any warre or plague vpon them, then the priestes ymagine, where they may hyde them selues with them. Howe can men thinke thē, that they be gods, which nether may defend themselues from warre, nor deliuer theym frome myshortune? For seyng they be but of wood, of stone, of syluer and of golde: all people and kynges shall knowe hereafter, that they be but vaine thin-ges: yea, it shalbe openly declared, that they be no goddes: but euen the wor-kes of mennes handes, and that God hath nothing to do with them. (It is manyfest then that they are no gods, but the workes of mens handes, and no worke of God in theym.) They can set no kyng in the lande, nor geue rayne vnto menne. They can geue no sentence of a matter, neyther defende the lande from wronge. For they are not able to do so much as a crow, that flyeth betwyxte heauen and earthe.
When there happeneth a fire into the G house of those goddes of woode, and syluer, and of golde, the priestes wyll escape and saue theym selues, but the goddes burne as the balkes therein.
They can not withstand any kyng or battell: howe maye it then be thought or graunted, that they be gods? Moze ouer, these goddes of wodde, of stone, of golde, and syluer, may neyther defend themselues from theues nor robbers: yea, the very wycked are stronger then they. These strype them out of their apparell, that they be clothed withall, these take their golde and siluer from them, and so get them away: yet can they not helpe theym selues.
Therfore it is muche better for a man to be a kynge, and so to shewe his power: or els a profytable vessell in a house: wherin he that vseth it, might haue pleasure: yea, or to be a doze in a house, to kepe such thynges safe as be therin, then to such a vayn God. The Sunne, the moone, and all the starres seynge they geue their shyne & syght, are obedient, and do men good. When the lyghtenyng glistreth, all is cleare

The wind bloweth in euery contry: and whan God commaundeth the cloudes to go round about the whole worlde, they dooe as they are bydden, when the fyre is sent downe frō aboue, and commaunded, it burneth vp hylles and woodes. But as for those goddes, they are not lyke one of these thinges, neyther in bewty, neyther strength. Wherfore men shoulde not thinke nor saye that they be goddes, seing they can neyther geue sentence in iudgement, nor do men good. ¶ For so much now as ye are sure that they be no goddes, then feare thē not. For they can neyther speake euil nor good for kinges. They can shewe no tokens in heauen, for the Heathen, neyther shine as the sonne, nor geue lyght as the Moone: yea, the vnreasonable beastes are better then they, for they can get them vnder the roofe, and do them selues good. So can ye be certifyed by no manner of meanes, that they be goddes: therfore feare theym not. For lyke as a skarcrowe in a garden of herbes kepeth nothing, euen so are their goddes of woodde, of syluer and gold: and lyke as a whyte thorne in an orchard, that euery byrde sytteth vpon: yea lyke as a dead body that is cast in the darke. Euen so is it wyth those goddes of woodde, syluer, and gold. By the purple & scarlet whiche they haue vpon them, and sone fadeth away, ye may vnderstande, that they bee no goddes: yea, they theym selues shalbe consumed at the laste, whyche shalbe a greate confusion of the land. Blessed is the godlye man, that hath no ymages, and worshyppeth none, for he shalbe far from reprofe.

AND they walked in the middest of the flame, praysing God and magnifying the Lord. Asarias stode vp, and prayd on this maner. Euen in the middest of the fyre opened hee hys mouth, and sayde: Blessed be thou O Lord God of our fathers) right worthye to bee praysed and honoured is that name of thyne for euermore: for thou art ryghteous in al the thynges that thou haste done to vs: Yea, faithful are all thy workes, thy waies are ryghte, and al thy iudgementes true. In al the thynges that thou haste brought vpon vs, and vpon the holye Citie of oure fathers (euen Jerusalem) thou haste executed true iudgemente: yea accordyng to ryghte and equity haste thou brought al these thinges vpon vs because of our sins. For why: we haue offended, and don wickedly, departinge from thee: • In all thynges haue wee trespalled, and not obeyed thy commaundementes, nor Dan, 9.c kept them, neyther done as thou haste bydden vs, that we myghte prospere. • Wherfore, al that thou haste brought vpon vs, and euerye thinge that thou Bar, 3.d haste done to vs, thou haste done theym in true iudgement: As in deliueryng vs into the handes of oure ennemies, among vngodly and wicked abhominations, and to an vnryghteous king yea, ✠ most frowarde vpon earth. And now we may not open our mouthes, we are becom a shame and reproffe vnto thy seruauntes, and to theym that worshypp thee. Yet for thy names sake (we beseech the) geue vs not vp for euer, breake not thy couenaunte, and take not awaye thy mercye from vs: for thy beloued Abrahams sake, for thy seruaunte Isaacs sake, and for thy holy holy Israels sake. To whome thou hast spoken and promised • that thou wouldest multiplye their sede as the starres of heauen, and as the sand that lyeth vpon the sea shore. For we (O Lord) are become lesse then anye people, and be kept vnder thys daye in all the world, because of our synnes. So that nowe wee haue neither prynce: duke, prophet, burnt offring, sacrifice, oblation, incense, nor sanctuary before thee. Neuertheless, in a contrite hert and an humbled spirit let vs be receaued, that we may obteyne thy mercy. Like as in the burntofferinge of rammes and bullockes, and lyke as in thousandes of fat lambes, so let oure offring be in thy syght thys day, that it maye please thee, • for there is no confusion vnto them, that putte their trust in thee. And nowe we folow thee wyth al our hearte, we feare thee, and seke thy face. Putte vs not to shame, but deale wyth vs after thy louynge kyndnes, and accoʒding to the multitude of thy mercyes. Delyuer vs by thy miracles (O LORDE) and gette thy name and honoure: that all they which do thy seruantes euil, mai be confounded. Let theim be ashamed through thy almyghty powʒer, and let their strengthe bee broken: that they may knowe, howe that thou only art the Lord God, and honoʒ worthy thoroughout al the world. And the kynges seruantes that put theim in, ceassed not to make the ouen hote wyth wylde fyre, dyre strawe, pitch and fagottes, so that the flame went oute of the ouen vppon .a. xlix. cubites: yea, it toke away and brent vp those Caldes that it gat hold vpon beside the ouen. But the Aungel of the Lorde camme downe into the ouen to Asarias, and his felows, and smote the flame of the fyre oute of the ouen, and made, ꝑ middest of the ouen as it had beene a colde wind blowing: so ꝑ the fyre neyther touched them greued them, nor did thē hurt. Then these thre (as oute of one mouth) prayled, honoured, and blessed God in the fornace, saying: • Blessed be thou, O Lord, God of our fathers, for thou art prayse and honour worthy, yea and to be magnifyed for euermore. • Blessed bee the holye name of thy glory, for it is worthy to be prayed, and magnifyed in al worldes. Blessed be thou in the holy temple of thy glorye, for aboue al thinges thou art to be prayed, yea, and more then worthy to be magnifyed for euer. Blessed bee thou in the throne of thy kyngdom, for aboue al, thou art worthy to be wel spokē of, and to be more then magnifyed for euer. ¶ The story of Susanna which is the thirteenth Chapter of Daniel, after the Latin.

THere dwelt a manne in Babilon called Joachim, that tooke a wyfe, whose name was Susanna, the daughter of Helkyas, a very fayre woman and suche one as feared God. Her father and her mother also were godlye people, and taught their daughter according to the law of Moyses. Now Joachim (her husband) was a greate ryche manne, and had a fayre orchard ioyning vnto hys house. And to hym resorted the Iewes cōmenly, because he was a man of reputation amonge them. The same yere were there made two Iudges, such as the Lorde speaketh of: Al the wyckednes of Babylon, commeth from the elders, that is from the iudges, which seeme to rule the people. These came ofte to Joachims.

chims house, and all sache as had any thyng to doo in the law, came thither B vnto theym. Nowe when the people came agayne at after noone, Susanna wente into her husbandes orcharde to walke. The elders seeyng thys, that she went in dayly, and walked: they bourned for lust to her, yea they were almoste out of their wittes, and caste down their eies, that they should not see heauen, nor remembre, that God is a righteous Iudge. For they were bothe wounded with the loue of her, neither durste one shewe another his greefe. And for shame, they durste not tell her their inordinate lust, that they would fayn haue had to do with her. Yet they layde wayte for her carnestly from day to daye, that they myghte (at the least) haue a syght of her. And the one sayde to the other: Vp, let vs go home, for it is diner time. So they went their way from her. When they returned agayne, they came together, enquirynge oute the matter betwixte themselues: yea, the one told the other of his wycked lust. Then appoynted C they a tyme, when they myghte take Susanna alone. It hapned also, that they spyed oute a conueniente tyme, when she went foorthe to walke (as her maner was) and no bodye with
Exo. 2.a her, but two maydens, and thoughte Ma.11.a * to washe her selfe in the gardein, for it was an hotte season: And ther was not one persone there, except the two elders, that had de hydde them selues to beholde her. So she sayd to her maidens, Go fet me oyle & sope, and shut the orchard dooze, that I maye washe me. And they dyd as she bad them, & shut the orchard dooze, and went out themselues at a backe dooze, to fet the thyng that she had commaunded: but Susanna knewe not, that the elders lay there hid within. Now when the maidens wer gone foorthe, the two elders gat thē vp, & ran vpō her, saying: Nowe the orchard doozes are shutte, that no man can se vs: we haue a lust vnto thee, therefore consent vnto vs, & lye with vs. If thou wylt not, we D shall bryng a testimonial agaynst the, that there was a younge felowe with thee, and that thou hast sent away thy maidens from thee for the same cause. Susanna sighed, & saide: Alas, I am in trouble on euery syde: Though I folow your mynd, it will be my deth, & if I consent not vnto you, I can not escape your handes. Well, it is better for me, to fall into your hande without the dede dooyng, then to synne in the syght of the Lorde: and with that she cryed out with a lowde voice: the elders also cried out against her. Thē ranne there one to the orcharde dooze, and smote it open. Nowe when the seruantes of the house heard the crye in the orcharde, they rushed in at the back dooze, to se what the matter was.
So when the elders tolde theym, the E seruantes were greatly ashamed, for why? there was neuer suche a report made of Susanna. On the morowe after, came the people to Ioachim her husband, and the two elders came also, full of mischeuous imagination agaynst Susanna, to bryng her vnto deathe, and spake thus before the people: Sende for Susanna, the daughter of Helchias, Ioachims wife. And immediately they sent for her. So she came with her father and mother, her children, and all her kynrede. Nowe Susanna was a tender persone, and meruailous fayre of face. Therefore the wycked men cōmanded to take of the clothes from her face (for she was couered) that at the leste they myght be satisfied in her beauty. Thē her frendes, yea & all they that knew her, beganne to wepe. These two elders stode vp in the myddest of the people, Leui. 24. * and layd theyr hands vpon the head of Susanna, which wept, & loked vp toward heuen, for her hert had a sure trust in ẏ Lord. And ẏ elders said: As we were walking in ẏ orchard alone, this womā cam in with her two maydēs, whom she sent away from her, & sparred ẏ orchard doozes. With that, a yōg felow (which ther was hid) cam vnto her, and lay with her. As for vs, F we stoode in a corner of the orcharde: And when we saw this wickednesse, we ran to her, and perceiued, that they had medled together. But we coulde not hold hym, for he was stronger thē we: Thus he opened the dooze, & gat him away. Now when we had taken this woman, we asked her, what yong felow this was, but she wold not tell vs. This is ỳ matter, and we be witnesse of the same. The cōmon sort beleued theim, as those that were the elders and iudges of the people, and so they condemned her to death. Sulanna cried oute wyth a loude voice, and sayd: O euerlasting God, • thou serchest. Deut. 4. c cher of secretes, thou that knowest al thynges afore they come to passe: thou wotest, that they haue borne false witnes against me: and behoulde, I muste dye, where as I neuer dyd any suche things, as these men haue maliciously inuented agaynste me. And the Lorde heard her voyce. For whē she was led forth to death, the Lord rayled vp ỳ spirite of a yonge child, whose name was Daniell, whyche cryed with a loude voyce: • I am clean from this blood. Then all the people turned theim towarde hym, & said: What meane these wordes, that thou hast spoken? Daniel stode in the middest of them, and said: Are ye suche fooles, O ye children of Israel, ỳ ye can not discern nor know the truth? Ye haue here condemned a daughter of Israel vnto deth, & know not ỳ truth. Wherfore, Go sit on iudgmēt againe, for they haue spoken false witnes against her. Wherfore the people turned again in all ỳ hast. And the elders (that is, the principall heades) said vnto him: Come, sit downe here amōg vs, & shew vs this matter, seyng God hath geuē thee as great honor as an elder. And Daniel said vnto them: • Put these two asyde, one from another, and then shal I heare thē. When they were put a sunder one from another, he called one of them, & saide vnto him: O thou old cankred carle, ỳ hast vsed thy wickednesse so long: thyn vngracious dedes which thou hast done afore, are now come to light. For thou hast geuen false iudgements, thou hast oppressed the innocent, & letten the guilty go free, where as yet ỳ Lord saith: • The innocent and rightous se thou slea not. Well than, if thou hast seene her, Tell me vnder what tree sawest thou them talking together? He answered: Vnder a Mulbery tree. And Daniel said: Very wel, now thou lyest euen vpon thyne head. Lo the messanger of the Lord hath receaued the sentence of him, to cut thee in two. Then put he him aside, & called for the other, and sayde vnto hym: O thou seede of Canaan, but not of Juda: Fairnesse hath discerned thee, and lust hath subuerted thyne heart. Thus dealt ye afore wyth the daughters of Israel, and they (for feare) consented vnto you: but the daughter of Juda would not abyde your wickednesse. Now tel me than vnder what tree dydst thou take them, speakyng together? He answered: Vnder a pomgranate tree. Then sayd Daniell vnto hym: Very well, now thou lyest also euen vpon thyne head. The messanger of the Lord standeth weytyng with the swerd, to cut the in two, and to slea you both. With that, all the whole multitude gaue a great shoute, and praised God, • whyche alway delyuered them that putt their truste in hym. And they came vppon the two Elders, (whome Daniell hadde connicte wyth theyr owne mouthe: that they hadde geuen false wytnesse:) and dealt with them, euen lykewyse as they wouldē haue doone wyth theyr neyghbours: yea, they dyd • accordynge to the lawe of Moyses, and put theim to deathe. Thus the innocent bloodde was saued the same day. Then Helchiah and hys wyfe prayed GOD for theyr daughter Sulanna, wyth Joachim her husbande, and all the kynredde, that there was no dishonestie founde in her. From that daye forthe was Daniell hadde in great reputation in the syghte of the people. (And Kyng Astyages was layde wyth hys fathers, and Cyrus of Persia reygned in hys steade.)

¶ The story of Bell, and of the Dragō, which is the fourteth Chapter of Daniel, after the Latyn.

Daniel did eate at the kinges table, and was hadde in reuerence aboue all hys frendes. Ther was at Babilō an image called Bel, and there wer spent vpō him euery day. xii. cakes. xl. shepe, & sixe gret pots of wine. Him dyd the king worshyp him selfe, and wente dayly to honoure him: but Daniel worshypped his owne God. And the kyng sayde vnto hym: whye doest not thou worshyp Bel? He answered and sayde: • Because I maye not worshyppe thinges that bee made wyth handes, • but the liuinge God, whiche made heauen and earthe, and hath power vpon all flesh. The kyng sayd vnto him: thinkest thou not that Bel is a lyuing God? Or seest thou not howe much he eateth & drinketh euery day? Daniel smiled, and sayde: O kinge, dysceaue not thy selfe, for this is but made of claye within, & of mettal wythout, • neither eateth hee any thing. Thē the king was wroth, and called for hys priestes, and sayde vnto theym: If ye tel me not whoe is thys, that eateth vp these expenses, ye shal dye: but yf ye can certyfye mee that Bel eateth theym, then Danyell shal dye, for he hath spoken blasphemy agaynst Bel. And Daniel sayd vnto the king: let it so be, according as thou haste saide: The priestes of Bel were lxx. besyde their wyues and chyldren. And the king went wyth Daniel into the temple of Bel. So Bels priestes sayd: Lo, we wil go oute, and set thou the meat there (O king) and poure in the wine: then shut the doze faste, and seale it wyth thyne owne sygnette: and to morowe when thou commest in, yf thou findest not that Bel hath eaten vp all, we wyll suffer death: or els Daniel, that hath lied vpon vs. The priestes thought theym selues sure ynough, for vnder the aultar they had a preuye entraunce, and there went they in euer, and dyd eate vp what there was. So whan they were gone forth, the kinge set meates before Bel. Nowe Daniel had commaunded hys seruauntes to bryng ashes, and these he syfted throughoute al the temple, that the king might see. Then went they out, and sparred the doze, sealing it wyth the kinges sygnette, and so departed. In the nighte came the priestes wyth their wyues and children (as they were wonte to do) and eate and drynke vp al. In the morning betymes at the breake of the day, the kyng arose, and Daniel with hym. And the king saide: Daniell, are the seales whole yet? He answered: Yea (O king) they be whole. Nowe as soone as he had opened the dooze, the king loked vpon the aultare, and cryed wyth a loude voyce: Greate art thou O Bel, and with thee is no disceat. Then laughed Daniel, and held the kyng that he should not go in, and sayde: Behold the pauemente, marcke well, whose foteste ppes are these? The kynge sayde: I se the footesteppes of men, wemen and childrē: therfore the king was angry, and toke the priestes wyth their wyues and chyldren, and they shewed him the priuye dozes, where they came in, and dydde eate vp suche thynges, as were vpon the aulter. For the whiche cause the kynge slewe theym. • and deliuered Bel into Daniels power, which destroyed him and hys temple. And in that same place ther was a great dragon, whiche they of Babilon woorshypped. And the king sayd vnto Daniel: saiest thou that thys is but a god of metall also? lo, hee lyueth, he eateth and drynketh: so that thou canneste not saye, that he is no lyuyng God, therfore worshyppe him. Daniel sayd vnto the kinge: I wyll worshyppe the Lorde my God, • hee is the true lyuynge God Dieus for thys hee is not the God of lyfe. But geue me leaue, (O kynge) and I shal destroye this

Dragon withoute swearde or staffe. The kynge sayde: I geue thee leaue. Then Daniel toke pitch fat and hearye wol, and dyd seeth them together, and made lompes therof: thys he put in the Dragons mouth, & so the Dragon burst in sonder: and Daniel sayd: lo there is he whom ye worshypped.

When they of Babilon herd that, they C toke great indignacion, and gathered them together agaynst the kyng, sayinge: The kyng is become a Jew and he hath destroyed Bell, he hath slayne the Dragon, and put the Prestes to death. So they came to the kyng, and sayde: let vs haue Daniell, or els we will destroy the & thyne house. Now when the kyng sawe that they rushed in so sore vpon him, and that necessitie constrayned him, * he delyuered Daniell vnto them: which caste him into the lyons denne, where he was syxe dayes. In the denne there were seuen lyons, and they had geuen them euery daye two bodyes & two shepe, which then were not geuen them, to the intent that they might deuoure Daniel.

There was in Jewry a Prophet cal-F led Habacuc, whiche had made potage, and broken bread in a depe platter, and was goyng into the field, for to bring it to the reapers. But the Aungell of the Lorde sayde vnto Habacuc: go cary the meate that thou haste into Babylon, vnto Daniell, which is in the lyons denne. And Habacuc sayde: Lorde, I neuer sawe Babylon: and as for the denne, I know it not. Then the Angell of the Lorde toke him by the top, and bare him by the heare of the head, and (thorow a mighty wynd) set him in Babylon vpon the denne. And Habacuc cryed, sayinge: O Daniell * thou

Upon the seuenth daye
G the kyng wet to bewepe Daniel: and when he came to the den, he looked in: and behold, Daniel sat in the myddest of the Lyons. Then cryed the kynge with a loude voyce, saying: Great art thou, O Lorde God of Daniell, and he drewe him out of the lyons denne.

* As for those that were the cause of hys destruction, he dyd caste them into the denne, and they were deuoured in a moment before his face. After this, wrote the kyng vnto all people, kynredes and tongues, that dwelte in all countreys, saying: peace be multiplyed with you. My commaundement is in all the dominion of my realme: that men feare and stand in awe of Daniels God, * for he is the lyuyng God, which endureth euer: his kyngdome abydeth vncorrupt, and hys power is euerlastyng. The prayer of Manasses kyng of Juda, when he was holden captiue in Babylon.

O Lorde Almyghtye, God of our fathers, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, & of the righteous seede of them which haste made heauen and earth, with all the ornament therof, which haste ordeined the sea by the worde of thy commaundement, which haste shut vp the depe, and haste sealed it for thy fearfull and laudable name, whiche all menne feare and tremble before the face of thy vertue, and for the anger of thy threatnyng, the which is inportable to sinners. But the mercy of thy promes is great and vnsearcheable: for thou art the Lorde God moste hygh, about all the earth, longsuffryng, and exceading mercyfull, and repentaunte for the malice malyce of men. Thou Lorde after thy goodnes hast promised repentaunce of the remissiõ of synnes: and thou that art the God of the righteous, hast not put repentaunce of the righteous Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, vnto them that haue synned agaynste thee: But because I haue synned aboue the number of the sandes of the sea, and that mine iniquities are multiplied, I am humbled with many bandes of yron, and there is in mee no breathynge, I haue prouoked thyne anger, and haue done euyll before thee, in committyng abhominacions, and multiplying offences. And nowe I bowe the knees of my herte, requiryng goodnes of the O Lord. I haue synned, Lord I haue synned, and knowe myne iniquitye. I desyre thee by prayer, O Lord forgeue me: forgeue me and destroye me not with mine iniquityes, neyther do thou alwayes remember myne euyls to punyshe them, but saue me (whiche am vnworthy) after thy great mercy: and I will prayse thee euerlastyngly, all the dayes of my life: for all the vertue of heauen prayseth thee, and vnto thee belongeth glorie world without ende. The fyrste Chapter.

After that Alexander the sonne of Philippe, kynge of Macedonia wente forth of the lande of Cethim, and slewe Darius kynge of the Persians and Medes: It happened, that he toke greate warres in hande, wanne verye manye stronge Cyties, and slewe many kynges of the earth: goynge thorowe to the endes of the worlde, and gettynge manye spoyles of the people: In so muche, that the worlde stoode in greate awe of hym, and therefore was he proude in hys herte. Nowe when he had gathered a mighty strong hoost, and subdued the landes and people with their princes so that they became tributaryes vnto hym: he fell sicke. And when he perceaued that he must nedes dye, he called for hys noble estates (whiche had bene broght vp with him of children) and parted hys kyngedome amonge them, while he was yet alyue. So Alexander reygned. xii. yeare, and then dyed. After hys deathe fell the kyngdome vnto hys princes, and they obtayned it euery one in his rowme, and caused theym selues to bee crowned as kynges: and so dyd their children after them many yeres, and much wickednes increased in the worlde. Out of these came the vngracious rote, noble Antiochus the sonne of Antiochus the king (which had bene a pledge at Rome) & he reygned in the. Cxxxvii. yeare of the empyre of the Grekes.

In those dayes went there out of Israel wicked men, which moued much people with their councell, sayinge: Let vs go and make a couenant with the Heathen, that are round about vs: for sence we departed from them, we haue had muche sorowe. So thys deuyse pleased them well, and certayne of the people toke vpon theym lycence to do after the ordinaunce of the Heathen. Then set they vp an open scole (at Jerusalem) of the lawes of the Heathen, and were nomore circumcised: but forsoke the holy Testamente, and ioyned them selues to the Heathē, and were cleane sold to do mischefe. So when Antiochus beganne to be mighty in hys kingdom, he wente about to obtayne the land of Egypt also, that he myghte haue the dominion of two realmes. Upon thys entred he into Egypte with a strong hooste, with charettes, Elephantes, horsmen and a great number of shippes, and beganne to warre agaynst Ptolomy the kyng of Egypte. But Ptolomy was afrayde of hym, and fled: and many of hys people were wounded to deathe.

Thus Antiochus wan many stroge cy-ties, & toke away great good out of the 2mat. 5.c lande of Egipt. * And after that Anti-ochus had smytten Egypt, he turned agayne in the .C. xliii. yere, and went towarde Israell, and came vp to Jerusalem with a myghtye people, and entred proudely into the Sanctuary, and toke awaye the golden aulter, the candlestycke and all the ornamentes therof, the table of the shewbread, the pouryng vessell, the chargers, the golden spones, the vaile, the crown, & the golden apparel of the temple, & brake downe all. He toke also the siluer and golde, the precious Jewelles, and the secrete treasures that he founde. And when he had taken awaye altogether, he caused a great murther of men, & so fulfylled hys malicious pryde, he departed into hys owne lande. Thus D there arose great heauynes and myse-serye in all the lande of Israell. The prynces and the elders of the people mourned, the yonge men and the may-dens were defiled, and the fayre bewty of wemen was chaunged: the bride grome & the bryde toke them to mour-nynge: the lande and those that dwelt therein, was moued: for all the house 2mat. 5.a of Jacob was broughte to confusion.
* After two yeres the kynge sent hys cheke treasurer vnto the cytyes of Iu-da, whiche came to Jerusalem wyth a greate multitude of people, speaking peaceable wordes vnto theym, but all was dyscreate: for when they had geuen him credence, he fell sodenly vpon the cyty, & smote it sore, and destroyed 2mat. 7.b much people in Israell. * And when he had spoyled the cityre, he set fyre on it, castyng downe houses and walles on euerye syde. The wemen and their chyldren toke they captyue, and led away their catell. Then buylded they the cytye of Dauid with a greate and thicke wal, and with mighty towres and made it a strong holde for theym.
Wesyde all thys they set wicked people and vngodly men to kepe it, stored it with weapons and vitayles: gathe red the goodes of Jerusalē, and layed them vp there: thus became it a the-uyshe castell. And thys was done to laye wayte for the people that went into the Sanctuary, and for the cruel destruction of Israel. Thus they shed innocent bloode on euerye syde of the sanctuarye, and defiled it. In so much that the cyteses were fayne to depart, and the citye became an habitacion of straungers, being desolate of her own sede, for her owne natiues were fayne to leaue her. * Her Sanctuarye was Tob. 2.a cleane wasted, her holye dayes were Amos. 8b turned into mourning, her sabbothes were had in derision, and her honoure brought to naught. Loke howe great her glory was afore, so great was her E confusion, and her ioye turned into so- 2mat. 6.a rowe. * Antiochus also the kyng sent out a commission vnto all hys kynge-dome, that all the people shoulde be one. Then they lefte euerye man hys law, and all the Hethen agreed to the commaundement of kyng Antiochus.
Yea, many of the Israelites consented therevnto, offerynge vnto Idoles, and defilyng the Sabboth. So the kynge Antiochus sent his messangers with his commission vnto Jerusalem, and to all the cityes of Iuda: that they should folowe the lawes of the Heathen, and forbad ether burnt offeryng, meateofferyng or peaceofferynge to be made in the temple of God, and that there shold no Sabboth nor hye feast day be kept: but commaunded that the Sanctuary and the holy people of Israel should be defiled. He cōmaunded also, that there should be set vp other aulters, temples and Idoles: to offer vp swynes flesshe, and other vncleane beastes: that men shoulde leaue their chyldren vncircumcised, to defile their soules with all maner of vnclennesse and abhominacions: that they myght so forget the law, and chaunge all the holy ordinaunces of GOD: and that whosoeuer wolde not do accordynge to the commaundemente of kyng An-tiochus, shoulde suffer death. In lyke maner commaunded he thorowout all his realme, and set rulers ouer the peo ple, for to compell theym to do these thynges, commaundinge the cyties of

Iuda

Juda to doo sacrifyce vnto Idolles. Then went the people vnto the heathen by heapes, forsoke the law of the Lorde, and committed muche euyll in the lande: yea, and chaced oute the secrete Israelites, which had hyd themselues in corners and preuye places. The.xv. day of the moneth Casleu, in the.C.xlv. yere, set kynge Antiochus an abhominable Idoll of desolacion vpon the alter of God, and they builded alters throughout all the cities of Juda on euery syde, before the doores of the houses, and in the stretes: wher 1.36.c they brent incense, and dyd sacrifyce. And as for the bokes of the lawe of God, they brente them in the fire, and rente theym in peces. Whatsoeuer he was that had a boke of the Testamēt of the Lorde found by hym, yea, whosoeuer endeuoured hymselfe to keepe the lawe of the Lord, the kynges commaundemente was, that they shoulde put hym to deathe. And thorowe hys auctorite they executed these thinges G euery moneth, vpon the people of Israell that were founde in the cityes.
1.1.9 b The fyue and twenty day of the moneth what time as they dyd sacrifyce vppon the aulter (whiche stode in the steade of the aulter of the Lorde) accordynge to the commaundemente of kyng Antiochus, they putte certayne wemen to deathe, whiche had caused their chyldren to be circumcised: Not only that, but they hanged vp the children by the neckes thorowout al their houses, and slewe the circumcysed of them. Yet were ther many of the people of Israell, whiche determined in them selues, that they wolde not eate vncleane thynges: but chose rather to suffer deathe, then to be defyled with vncleane meates. So because they wolde not breake the blessed lawe of God, they were cruelly slayne. And this great tirannye increased very sore vpon the people of Israell.

A IN those dayes there dyd stand vp one Mathathias the sone of Simeon the Priest (out of the kynred of Joaris) from Jerusalem, and dwelt vpon the mount of Modin, and had fiue sonnes: John called Goddis: Simeon called Thasi: Judas otherwyse called Machabeus: Eleazar other wise called Abaron, & Jonathas, whose surname was Apphus. These sawe the euyll that was done among the people of Juda and Jerusalem. And Mathathias sayd: wo is me, alas that euer I was borne: to se this misery of my people, and the piteous destruction of the holy cityе: and thus to syt so styll, it beyng delyuered into the 1 mac. 2. b handes of the enemyes. Her Sanctuary is come into the power of straungers: her temple is, as it were a man that hathe loste hys good name: Her precious ornamentes are caryed away captyue. Her olde men are slayne in the stretes, and her yong men are fallen thorow the swerd of the enemies. What people is it, that hath not some possession in her kyngdome? Or who hath not gotten some of her spoyles? All her glorye is taken awaye. She was a free woman, and now she is become an handemayden. Beholde our Sanctuary, our bewtye and honoure is wasted awaye, and defyled by the Gentyles. What helpeth it vs then to lyue? And Mathathias rent his clothes, he and his sonnes, and put sackclothe vpon them, and mourned very B sore. Then came the menne thyther which were sent of kyng Antiochus, to compell suche as were fled into the cityе of Modin, for to do sacrifyce and to bourne incense vnto Idols, and to forsake the lawe of God. So many of the people of Israell consented & enclined vnto theym, but Mathathias and his sonnes remayned stedfaste. Then spake the commyssyoners of kynge Antiochus, and sayde vnto Mathathias: Thou arte a noble man, of hye reputacion and greate in thys Cityе, hauynge fayre chyldren and brethren. Come thou therfore fyrste, and fulfyll the kynges commaundement, lyke as all the Hethen haue done, yea, and the men of Juda, and suche as remayne at Jerusalem: so shalte thou and thy children be in the kinges fauour, and enriched wyth golde, siluer and great rewardes. Mathathias answered and spake wyth a loude voyce: Thoughe al nations obey the king Antiochus, and fal away euery man from keping of ỹ lawe of their fathers: though they consente to hys commaundementes, yet wyl I and my sonnes and my brethren, not fal from the lawe of our fa-Acts. 5.b thers, God forbydde we shoulde, that wer not good for vs • that we should forsake the lawe and ordinaunces of God, and to agre vnto the commaun-dement of king Antiochus. Therfore we wil do no suche sacrifyce, neyther spoken these wordes, there came one of the Jewes, whiche openlye in the syght of al, dyd sacrifyce vnto the I-C dols vppon the aulter in the Cityc of Modin, according to the kinges commaundement. Whē Mathathias saw this, it greued him at the hert, so that hys raynes shooke wythall, and hys wrathe kindled for verye zeale of the lawe. Wyth that, he start vp, and kyl-led the Jewe beside the aulter: Yea, and slewe the kynges commissioner, that compelled him to do sacrifice, and destroyed the aulter at the same time: Nu. 25 b such a zeale hadde he vnto the lawe of God • like as Phinches did vnto Zā-thyas cryed wyth a loude voyce thōferuent in the law, & will kepe the co-2 mac. 5.c uenant, let him folowe mee. • So hee and hys sonnes fled in the mountaynes, and lefte al that euer they had in the citye. Many other godlye men also departed into the wildernes wyth their children, their wyues and theyr cattel, and remayned there: for the ty-D ranny increased sore vppon thē. Nowe when the kinges seruauntes, and the host, which was at Jerusalem in the citye of Dauid, hearde that certayne men had broken the kinges commaun dement, and were gone their waye to the wildernes into secrete places, and that there were many departed after them: they folowed vpon thē, to fyght agaynst theym in the Sabboth daye, and sayde: Wil ye yet rebel? Gette you hence, and do the commaundement of kinge Antiochus and yee shal liue. Iosu. 1.c.

They answered: We wil not go forth neyther wil we do the kinges commaundement, to defyle the Sabbothe day. Then beganne they to fyghte against theym, neuertheless they gaue them none other answere, nether cast they one stone at them, nor made faste their preuy places, but layd: We wyll dye al in oure innocencye, heauen and earth shal testify wyth vs that ye put vs to deathe wrongfully. Thus they fought against theim vpon the Sab-both, and slewe both men and cattell, their wyues and their children, to the number of a thousande people. When Mathathias and hys frendes hearde thys, they mourned for theym ryghte sore, and saide one to another: If so be that we al doe as our brethren haue done, and fyght not for oure liues and for the lawes agaynste the heathen: then shal they the sooner rote vs oute of the earth. So they concluded amōg them selues at the same tyme, saying: What soeuer hee bee that commeth to make battaile with vs vpon the Sa-both day, we will fyght against hym, and not dye al, as oure brethren that E were murthered so haynously. Upon this cam the Synagoge of the Jewes vnto them strong men of Israell, all such as were feruent in the law. And al they that were fled for persecution came to helpe theym, and to stande by them: In so much that they gathered an hoste of men: and slue the wycked doers in their gelousye: and the vngodlye menne in their wrath. Some of the wycked fledde vnto the heathen, and escaped. Thus Mathathyas and hys frendes wente aboute, and destroyed the aulters, and cyr-cumcysed the chyldzenne, that hadde not yet receiued cyrcumcisoin: as ma-nye as they founde wythin the coastes of Israell: and folowed myghte-lye vppon the chyldzenne of pryde,

and

and this act prospered in their hands: In so much, that they kept the law against the power of the Gentiles and the kynges, and gaue not ouer theyr dominion vnto wicked doers. After this, when tyme drewe on faste, that Mathathias should dye, he said vnto his sonnes: Nowe is pryde and persecution increased, now is the time of destruction and wrathfull displesure, wherfore (O my sonnes) be feruent in the law, and ieopard your lyues for the Testament of the fathers: & cal to remembrance what actes our fathers dyd in theyr tyme, so shall ye receaue great honour & an euerlastyng name.

A Jos.ca. 8 9, lib. 12. Anti.

THen stode vp Judas Machabeus in his fathers steade, and all hys brethren healped hym: and so dydde all they that helde with his father, & fought with cherefulnes for Israell. So Judas gate his people great honour: he put on a brestplate as a Gyant, and arayed hymselfe with hys harnesse, and defended the hoste with his swearde. In hys acts hee was lyke a Lyon, and as a Lyons whelpe roaryng at hys praye. • He Psl. 101. was an ennemye to the wycked, and hunted theym oute: • and brent vppe 2. Mac. 8 those that vexed hys people. So that hys ennemies fledde for feare of hym, and all the workers of vngodlyneste were put to trouble: suche lucke and prosperitie was in hys hande. Thys grieued dyuers kynges: but Jacob was greatly reioyced thorough hys actes, and he gatte hym selfe a greate name for euer. He wente thorowghe the Cities of Juda, destroyenge the vngodly out of theym, tournynge awaye the wrathe frome Israell, and receaunynge suche as were oppressed: And the fame of hym wente vnto the vttermoste parte of the earthe. Then Appollonius (a prynce of Syria) gathered a myghtye greate hooste of the Heathen, and oute of Samaria, to fight

fyght agaynst Israell. Whiche when Judas perceyued, he wente forthe to mete him, fought with him, slewe him, and a great multitude with him, the remnant fled, & he toke their substance. Judas also toke Appollonius downe swearde, and fought with it all his life long. Now when Heron (another prince of Syria) heard say, that Judas had gathered vnto him the cõgregation and church of the faithfull, he sayd: I wyll get me a name and a praise thoroughout the realme: For I wyll go fyght with Judas, and them that are with hym, as many as haue despised the kynges commandement. So he made him redy, and there went with hym a great myghtie host of the vngodly, to stand by hym, and to be auenged of the children of Israel. And when they came nye vnto Bethoron, Judas went forth against them with a small companye. And whenne hys people sawe suche a great hoste before them, they sayde vnto Judas: Howe are we able (beyng so fewe) to fyghte agaynst so greate a multitude, and so 1.Mac.14.c strong, seeynge we bee so weary, and haue fasted all this daye? * But Judas sayde: It is a smalle matter for manye to be ouercomme wyth fewe: 2.Pa.25 yea, there is no difference to the God of heauen, to delyuer by a great multitude, or by a small company: * for the victorie of the battell standeth not in the multitude of the Hoost, but the ℭ strength commeth from heauen. Behold, they comme agaynste vs with a presumptuous and proude multitude, to destroye vs, oure wyues, and oure children, and to robbe vs. But wee wyll fyght for our lyues, and for oure lawes, and the Lord hymself shall destroy them before our face: therfore be not ye afrayde of them. As soone as he had spoken these woordes, he lept sodeynly vpon them. Thus was Heron smitten, and his host put to flight, and Judas folowed vppon them beyond Bethoron vnto the playn field: where there were slayne eighte hundreth men of them, & the residue fled into the land of the Philistins. Then all the heathen on euery syde were afrayde for Judas and hys brethern: so that the rumour of him came vnto the Kynges eares: for all the Gentyles ℗ coulde telle of the warres of Judas. So when king Antiochus herd these tydinges, he was angry in his mynd: wherefore, he sent forthe, and gathered an hooste of hys wholle Realme, verye stronge Armyes: And opened hys treasourye, and gaue his hooste a yeares wages in hande, commaundynge them to bee readye at all tymes. Neuertheless, when he sawe that there was not moneye ynoughe in hys treasourye, and that thorow the dyscorde and persecution, whyche he made in the lande (to putte downe the lawes that hadde bene of olde tymes, hys customes and Tributes of the lande were mynyshed: He feared that he was not hable for to beare the costes and charges any longer, nor to haue suche gyftes, to geue so lyberallye as hee dydde afore, more then the Kynges that were before him. Wherfore, hee was heaupe in hys mynde, 1.Mac. and thoughte * to goe into Persides, for to take Tributes of the Land, and soo to gather muche money. Soo hee lefte Lysias (a noble man of the kynges blounde) to ouersee the Kynges busynesses, frome the water of Euphrates, vnto the borders of Egypt: and to keepe well hys sonne Antiochus, till he camme again. Moreouer, ℰ he gaue hym halfe of his hoofte, and Elephantes, commytted vnto hym euerye thynge of hys mynde, concernynge those whyche dwelte in Juda and Jerusalem: that hee should sende oute an armye agaynste theym, to destroye, and to roote oute the power of Israelle, and the remnaunte of Jerusalem: to putte oute theyr memorye all from that place, to set strangers for to inhabyte all theyr quarters, and to parte theyr lande amonge them: Thus the kynge tooke the other parte of the Hoofte, and departed from Antioche (a Citie of his Realme) ouer the water of Euphrates, in the hundreth and fyfti. yere, and Iofe. c 10,11,12 Anti.

wente thoꝛowe the hye countreyes. And Lisias chose vnto him Ptolomy the sone of Doziminus, Nicanoꝛ and Gozgias mighty men, and the kinges frendes. These he sent with .xl. thousand fotemen, and .vii. thousand hoꝛsemen, foꝛ to go into the lande of Juda, and to destroy it, as the king cõmaunded. So they went foꝛth withal their powꝛer, and came to Emaus into a playne fielde. When the marchauntes heard the rumoure of them, they and their seruauntes toke very much syluer and golde, foꝛ to bye the chyldren of Israel to be their bondmen: There came vnto theym also yet moo men of warre on euery syde, out of Siria and from the Palestines. Now when Judas and hys bꝛethꝛen sawe that trouble increased, and that the hoste dꝛewe nye vnto their boꝛders, considerynge the kynges woꝛdes whiche he commaũded vnto the people: namely, that they should vtterly wast and destroye them. They sayde one to another: Let vs redꝛesse the decay of our people, let vs fyghte foꝛ oure folke, and foꝛ oure Sanctuary. Then the congregacion were sone ready gathered to fighte, to praye, and to make supplicacion vnto God foꝛ mercy and grace. As foꝛ Jerusalem it laye voyde, and was as it had bene a wildernes. There wente no man in, noꝛ out at it, and the sanctuarye was troden doꝛwne. The aleauntes kept the castell, there was the habitacion of the Heathen. The mirth of Jacob was taken awaye, the pype and the harpe was gone from among them. The Israelites gathered them together, and came to Maspha befoꝛe Jerusalem: foꝛ in Maspha was the place where they prayed befoꝛe tyme in Israell. So they fasted that daye and put sackeclothes vpon them, caste asshes vpon theyꝛ heades, rente their clothes, and layde foꝛth the bookes of the law (wherout the hethen sought the lykenesse of their ymages) and brought the prieستes oꝛnamentes, the firstlynges and the tithes. They sette there also the abstayners (which had fulfylled theyꝛ daies) befoꝛe God, and cryed with a loud voyce toward heauen, saying: What shall we do wyth these: and whither shal we cary them away? Foꝛ thy Sanctuary is troden doꝛwne and defyled, thy Prieستes are come to heauynesse and dyshonoure: and behold, the Heithen ar come together foꝛ to destroy vs. Thou knowest what things they ymagin against vs. Howe may we stand befoꝛe them, excepte thou (O God) bee oure helpe? They blewe oute the trompette also with a loude voyce. Then Judas oꝛdeyned captaynes ouer the people: ouer thousandes, ouer hundꝛedes, ouer fifty, and ouer ten. But as foꝛ such as buylded them houses, maryed wiues, planted theym vyneyardes, and those that were fearefull: he commaunded them euery man to go home agayne, accoꝛdyng to the lawe. So the hoste remoued, and pitched vpon the southsyde of Emmaus. And Judas sayde: Arme youre selues, be stronge (O my chyldren) make you readye agaynst to moꝛowe in the moꝛnyng, that ye maye fight with these people, whiche are agreed together to destroye vs and our sanctuary. Better is it foꝛ vs to dye in battell, then to see our people & our sanctuarye in suche a myserable case. Neuertheles, as thy wyll is in heauen, so be it.

Then toke Gozgias fyue thousand mẽ of fote, and a thousand of the best hoꝛsemen, and remoued by nyghte, to come nye where the Jewes hooste laye, and soo to slaye them sodaynely. Nowe the men that kepte the castell, were the conueyers of theim. Then arose Judas to smyte the chyefe and pꝛyncypall of the kynges Hooste at Emmaus, foꝛ the armye was not yet come together. In the meane season came Gozgias by nyghte into Judas tentes: and when he founde no manne there, hee sought theym in the mountaynes, and thought they had bene fled awaye because of hym. But when it was day, dzente vppe (for by the smoke, they myght vnderstand what was done) they perceauing thys, wer verye sore afrayd: and when they sawe also that Judas and hys hoste were in the feld ready to strike battaile, they fled euerychone into the land of the Heathen.

So Judas tourned agayne to spoile the tentes, where they gat much gold and siluer precious stones, purple and great riches. Thus they went home, and song a psalme of thankesgeuing, and praysed God in heauen: ¶ for he is Psa. 10 gracious, and hys mercy endureth for euer. And so Israel had a great victo-rye in that day. Nowe al the heathen that escaped, came and tolde Lisiaseuerye thynge as it happened. Wherefore Lisias was sore afraide, and grie-ued in hys mynd, because Israell had not gotten suche mysfortune as hee woulde they shoulde, neyther as the king commaunded. The nexte yeare folowing, gathered Lisias thre score thousand chosen men of fote, and fiue thousand horsemen, to fight agaynste them. So they came into Iewry, and D pytched their tentes at Beehoron, where Judas came agaynste theym wyth ten thousande men. And when he sawe so great and myghty an host he made hys prayer and sayd: Blessed be thou (O Sauioure of Israell) 1Re.17 ¶ which diddest destroye the violente power of the gyaunte, in the hande of thy seruaunt Dauid, ¶ and gauest the 1Re.14 hoste of the heathen into the hande of Jonathas (the sonne of Saule) and of hys weapon bearer. Put this host nowe into the hande of thy people of Israell, and lette them be confounded in their multitude and horse menne.
Make theym afrayde, and dyscom-forte the boldenes of their strengthe, that they may be moued through their destruction. Caste theym downe thōrough ỳ swerd of thy louers, thē shall al they ỳ knowe thy name, prayse the with thankesgeuing. So they stroke the battaile, and there were slayne of Lysias host fyue thousande men. Thē Lysias seyng the discomfityng of hys mē, and the manlynes of the Iewes, how they were ready eyther to liue or to dye lyke men. He went vnto Antiochie to choose out men of warre: that when they were gathered together, they myght come agayn into Iewry.

The

Then sayd Judas and hys brethren: Behold, our ennemyes are discomfyted: let vs now go vp, to clense and to repayre the Sanctuary. • Upon thys all the hoste gathered them together, and went vp into mount Sion. Now when they sawe the Sanctuary layd wast, the alter defyled, the dores brent vp, the shrubbes growyng in the courtes, like as in a wood, or vpon mountaynes, yea, and that the prieستes Celis were broken downe: They rent their clothes, made greate lamentation, cast ashes vppon their heades, fell downe flat to the ground, made a great noyse with the trompets, and cryed toward heauen. Then Judas appoynted certayn men to fight against those which were in the castell tyll they had clensed the Sanctuarye. So he chose prieستes that were vndefiled, such as had pleasure in the lawe of God: and they clensed the Sanctuary, and bare out the defyled stones into an vnclean place. And for so much as the auiter of burntofferynges was vnhalowed, he toke aduisement, what he myghte do withall: so he thought it was beste to destroy it (lest it shoulde happen to do them anye shame) for the heathen had defyled it, and therefore they brake it downe. As for the stoones, they layed theym vp vpon the mountayne by the house in a conuenient place: tyll there came a prophet, to shewe, what shold be done with theym. • So they toke whole stones accordyng to the lawe, and buylded a new auiter, such one as was before, and made vp the Sanctuary within and without, and halowed the house and the courtes. They made newe ornamentes, and brought the candlesticke, the auiter of incense, and the table into the temple. The incense layed they vppon the auiter, and lyghted the lampes which were vppon the candlestycke, that they myght burne in the temple. They sette the shewebreade vpon the table, and hanged vp the vayle, and set vp the temple, as it was afore. • And vppon the xxv. daye of the .ix. moneth, whiche is called the moneth of Casleu, in the C.xlviii. yeare, they rose betymes in the mornynge for to doo sacrifyce (accordynge to the lawe) vpon the newe burnt offeryng auiter that they hadde made: after the time and seasō that the heathen had defiled it. The same day was it set vp agayne, wyth songes, pypes, harpes and cymbales. And all the people fell vpon their faces, worshyppyng and thankynge the God of heauen, whiche had geuen theym the victorye. • So they kept the dedicacion of the auiter .viii. dayes, offerynge burnt sacrifyces and thankofferynges with gladnes. They deckt the temple also with crownes & shyldes of gold, and halowed the portes and celles and hanged dores vpon them. Thus there was very greate gladnes amonge the people, because the blasphemye of the heathen was put awaye. So Judas and hys brethren with the whole congregacion of Israell, ordeyned, • that the tyme of the dedicacion of the auiter should be kept in hys season from yere to yere, by the space of .viii. dayes, from the .xxv. day of the moneth Casleu, with mirthe and gladnes. And at the same tyme buylded they vppe the mounte Sion, wyth hye walles and strong towres round about: leaste the Gentyles shoulde come and treade it downe, as they dyd afore. Therfore Judas set men of warre in it, to kepe it: and made it stronge, for to defende Bethsura: that the people might haue a refuge agaynst the Edomites.

IT happened also, that when the heathen round about herd, howe that the auiter and the Sanctuary were set vp in their olde estate: it displeased them very sore, wherfore they thought to destroye the generacion of Jacob that was amonge them: In so muche that they beganne to slaye and to persecute certayne of the people. • Then Judas foughte agaynst the chyldren of Esau in Idumea, and agaynst those whiche were at Arabathane (for they dwelt round about the Israelites) wher he slewe and spoyled a greate multitude of theym. Hee thought also vpon the malice and vnfaythfulnes of the chyldren of Bean, howe they were a snare and stop vnto the people, and howe they layed wayt for them in the hye wope: wherfore he shut theym vp in two towers, & came vnto them, destroyed theym vtterlye and brente vp their towers, with all that were in them. Afterward went he agaynste the chyldren of Ammon, whereof he found a mighty power and a great multitude of people, with Timothy theyr captayne. So he stroke manye battayles with them, whyche were destroied before him. And when he had slayne theym, he wanne Gazer the Citye, with the townes belongyng thereto, and so tourned agayne into Jewrye. The Heathen also in Galaad gathered theym together, agaynste the Israelites, that were in their quarters, to slaye them: but they fled to the castell of Datheman, and sente letters vnto Judas and his brethren, sayinge: The Heathen are gathered agaynste vs on euerye syde, to destroy vs, and nowe they make them redy for to come, & lay sege to ỹ castel, whervnto we are fled, and Timothe is the captayne of their hooste: come therfore, and delyuer vs oute of their handes: for there is a great multitude of vs slayne already. Yea and our brethren that were at Tubin are slayne and destroyed (well nye a thousande men) and their wyues, their chyldren and their goodes haue the enemyes led away captiue. Whyle these letters were yet a reading, beholde, ther came other messaungers from Galile, with rente clothes: whiche tolde euen the same tydynges, and sayde, that they of Ptolomays, of Tyrus and of Sidon were gathered agaynst them, and that all Galilee was filled with enemyes 1.mac.8 c to destroy Israel. ✱ When Judas and the people hearde thys, they gathered together (a greate congregacion) to deuyse, what they myght do for their brethren, that were in trouble and besieged of their enemyes. And Judas sayde vnto Simon his brother: chose thee out certayn men, & go deliuer thy brethren in Galilee: As for me and my brother Jonathas, we will go into Galaadithim. So he lefte Josephus the sonne of Zachary, and Azarias to be captaines of the people, & to kepe the remnant of the host in Jury, commaunded them, saying: Take the ouerlight of this people, and se that ye make no warre against ỹ heathen, vntil the time that we come agayn. And vnto Simon he gaue iii. thousand mẽ for to go into Galile, but Judas hym self had eighte thousande in Galaadithim. Then went Simon into Galile, and stroke dyuers battayls with ỹ Hethen: whom he discomfited, & followed vpon them vnto the port of Ptolomais. And there were slayne of the Heathen almoste .iii. thousande men. So he toke the spoyles of them, and caried away the Israelites, that were in Galilee and Arbatis, with theyr wiues, their chyldren and al that they had, and broughte them into Jewrye with greate gladnesse. Judas Machabeus also and hys brother Jonathas went ouer Jordan, and trauayled .iii. dayes iourney in the wylderne: Wher the Nebuthees met them, and receaued them louyngly, and told them euerye thyng that had happened vnto their brethren in Galaadithim and how that many of them were besieged in Barasa, Bosor, Alimis, Casphor, Mageth and Carnaim (all these are strong walled and Mighty great cityes) and that they were kept in other cityes of Galaad also: and to morowe they are appoynted to bryng their hooste vnto these cytyes, to take them, and to wynne them in one day. So Judas and hys hooste turned in all the haste in the wyldernes toward Bosor, and wanne the cytye, slewe al the males with the swearde, toke all their goodes, and set fyre vpon the cytye. And in the nyghte they toke their iourney from thence, and came to the castell: And betymes in the morenyng when they loked vppe, beholde, there was an innumerable people bearyng ladders and other instrumentes of warre, to take the castell and to ouercome them. When Judas sawe that the battayle began, and that the noyse thereof went vp and range into the heauen, and that there was so greate a crye in the cytye: he sayde vnto hys hoste: fyghte thys daye for your brethren. And so came behinde their enemyes in three companyes, and blewe vp the trompettes, and cryed in their prayer to God. But as soone as Timothes hoost perceaued that Machabeus was there, they fled from hym, and the other slewe theym downe ryghte fore: so that there were kylled of theym the same daye, almoste eyght thousande men. Then departed Judas vnto Masspha, laied siege vnto it, and wanne it, slewe all the males in it, spoyled it, and set fyre vpon it. Frō thence went hee and toke Casbon, Magetb, Bosor, and the other cytyes D in Galaad. * After this gathered Timothy another hoost, which pytched 1 10d their tentes before Raphon beyonde ỹ water. Judas also sent to spye the hooste, and they brought hym worde agayne, sayinge: All the heathen that be rounde about vs, are gathered vnto hym, and the hoaste is verye great: yea they haue hyred the Arabians to helpe theym, and haue pytched theyr tentes beyond the water, and are ready to com and fyght against thee. So Judas went out to mete them. And Timothy sayde vnto the captaynes of the hooste: when Judas and hys hooste come nye the ryuer: if he go ouer fyrst, we shal not be able to withstande him: for whye? he wyll be to stronge for vs. But yf he dare not comme ouer, soo that he e pytche hys tente beyonde the water: then wyll we go ouer, for we shall be stronge ynough agaynst hym. Nowe as soone as Judas came to the ryuer, he appoynted certayne scrybes of the people, and commaunded them, sayinge: see that ye leaue none behynde vppon this syde of the ryuer, but lette euerye man come to the battell. So he went fyrste ouer vnto them and hys people after him. And all the heathen were dyscomfited before him, and let theyr weapons fal, and ranne into the temple that was at Carnaim. Which cytie Judas wanne, and brent the temple with al that were in it: So Carnaim was subdued, and myghte not withstand Judas. Then Judas gathered al the Israelytes that were in Galaadythim, from the least vnto the moost, with their wyues and theyr children (a verye greate hoste) for to E come into the lande of Israel. * So 2 mac. they cam vnto Ephraim, which was a myghtye, great and stronge Citye, and laye in their way. For they could not go by it, nether of the ryght hand, nor of the lefte, but must go throughe it. Neuertheles, they that were in the citie, woulde not let them go thorough, but walled vp the portes with stones. And Judas sente vnto theym with peaceable woordes, saying: Let vs passe through your lande, that wee may go into our owne country: there shall no body do you harme, we wyll but only go through on fote. But thei woulde not let them in. Wherfore Judas commaunded a proclamation to be made throughout the hoste, that euerye man should kepe his order: and so they did their best lyke valeant me. And Judas besyeged the citye al that day and al that nighte, and so wan it: where they slewe as many as wer males, & destroid the city, and spoiled it, and went through al the city ouer thē that wer slain. Then went they ouer Jordane into the plaine felde before Bethsā. And Judas helped those for ward ỹ came behind, & gaue the people good exhortation al the way through til they wer come into the land of Juda. Thus they went vp vnto ỹ moūt Sion, where they offred with mirth 2 Pa. 20 * & thankesgeuing: because there wer none of thē slain, but cam home again peceably. Now what time as Judas and Jonathas wer in the land of Galaad, & Simon their brother in Galile before Ptolomais. Thē Josephus the son of Zachary, and Azarias ỹ captaynes, hearynge of the actes that were donne and of the battelles that were stroken, sayde: Let vs gette vs a name also, and go fyghte agaynste the F Hethen that are round about vs. So they gaue their hooste a commaundemente, and wente towarde Jamnia. Then came Gozgias and hys menne oute of the citie, to fight againste them: Josephus also and Azarias wer chased vnto the bozders of Jewrye, and there were slaine that daye of the people of Israel. ti. M. men: so that there was a great miserye among the peo-1mac.5.b ple, * and al because they were not obedient vnto Judas and his bzethzen, but thought they should qupte theym selues manfullye. Neuertheleſſe they came not of the seede of these men, by whom Israel was helped. But the menne that were wyth Judas, were greatly commended in the syght of all Israel and all heathen, whereſoeuer their name was heard vpon, and the people came vnto them, byddinge them welcome. After thys wente Judas forth wyth hys bzethzen, and foughte agaynste the childzen of Esau, in the lande that lyeth towarde the South, where he wanne the city of Hebzon, and the townes that lye beside it: and as for the walles and towzes rounde about it, he bzent them vp. Then remoued hee to go into the lande of the Philistines, and went thzough Samaria. At the same time were there many pzieſtes slayne in the battayle, which wilfully and wythout aduiſement went out for to fyght to get the honor. And whē Judas cam to Azot Deu.6.a in the Philistines lande, * he brake down their auiters, bzent their ymages of their ydoles, spoyled the cities, and came agayne into the lande of Juda.

The.vi. Chapter,

A NOw when king Antiochus trauayled thzough the hyghe countreis, he herde that Elimais in Persia was a noble and plenteous Citye in siluer and golde, and that there was in it a very ryche temple: where as were clothes, cote armours, and shyelbes of golde, wyche Alexander the son of Philyp kinge of Macedonia (that raygned fyrſte in Grecke land) hadde lefte behind hym. Wherfoze he went aboute to take the citye and to spoyle it, but he was not able: for the citezins were warned of it, and foughte wyth him. And so hee fled and departed wyth great heauynes, and came agayne into Babylon. Moreouer there camme one whyche bzoughte hym tydinges in Perside, * that hys hoſtes whyche were in the 1mac.3c land of Juda, were dzyuen awoy, and howe that Lisias wente forth fyrſte wyth a great power, and was dzyuen awaye of the Jewes: howe that they had won the victozy, and gotten gret goodes out of the hosts that perished, howe they had bzoken downe the ab- 1mac.1.f homination, * which he set vp vpon the altare at Jerusalem, and fenced the Sanctuary wyth hye walles, like B as it was afoze, yea, and Bethsura hys Citye also. So it chaunced, that when the king had herde these wozdes, he was afraid and greued verye sore. Wherfoze he laied him downe vpon hys bed, and fell sicke for verye sorowe: and al because it had not happened as he had deuyſed. And there continued he longe, for hys griefe was euer moze and moze, so that he sawe he muſt nedes dye. Therfoze he sent for hys frendes, and sayde vnto them, the sleye is gone fro mine eies, for the very sozowe and veration of hearte that I haue. For when I consider in my mynd the great aduerſitye that I am come vnto, and the flouds of heauines which I am come in, where as afoze tyme I was so mery, and so greatlye set vp (by reason of my power.) Agayne, considering the euyll that I haue done at Jerusalem, from whēce I toke al the riches of gold and siluer that were in it, and sent to fetch awaye the inhabitours of Jewrye without any reason why: I knowe that these troubles are com vpon me for the same cause. And beholde, I muſte die wyth gret sozow in a strange land. Thē called he for one Philippe a frend of his, whom he made ruler of hys realme, & hys gaue hym the crowne, his roabe, and hys ringe: that hee shoulde take hys soonne Antiochus vnto him, and bryngе him vppe till hee mighte reygne hym selfe. * So the Kynge Antiochus died there, in the hundred foztye and nyne yeare. When Lisias knewe that the Kinge was deade, hee ozdeined Antiochus hys soonne, * whome hee hadde bzoughte vppe, to reygne in his fathers steade, and called him Eupatoz. Nowe they that were in the castell at Jerusalem kept in the Jewes rounde aboute the Sanctuarye, and soughte euer still to dooe theym harme foz the strengtheninge of the Heathen. Wherefoze Judas thoughte to destroye theym, and called al the people together, that they might laye sege vnto theym. So they camme together in the hundzed and fifty yere, and beseged thē, laying fozth their ozdinance & instrumentes of war. Then certaine of them ẏ were beseged, went fozth, vnto whō some vngodly men of Israel ioined thē selues also, & wēt vnto the king, saying: Howe long wil it be, oz thou punish, & auenge oure bzethzen? Wee haue euer ben minded to do thy father seruice, to walke in his statutes, and to obey his cōmaundementes: Therfoze our people fel from vs, and whereseoeuer they found any of vs, they slewe thē: (and spoiled our inheritance) and thei haue not only medled with vs, but wyth al our countreys: and behold this day are they besieging the castel at Jerusalem, * and haue made vp the stronge holde in Bethsura: And yf thou doest not preuente them ryghte soone, they will do moze then these, & thou shalte not be able to ouercome them. When ẏ kyng herd this, he was very angry, & called al hys frendes the captaines of hys footemen, and of al hys horsemen together. He hired mē of war also out of other realmes and oute of the Iles of ẏ sea, which cam vnto him. And the number of hys hoste was an hundzed thousand foote men, and xx. thousande horsemen, and twoe and thyrty Elephantes well exercysed to battayle.

* These came thzough Idumea vnto Bethsura, and beseged it a longe season, and made dyuerse instrumentes of warre agaynste it. But the Jewes camme oute, and bzente theym, and soughte lyke menne. Then departed Judas from the castell at Jerusalem, and remoued the hooste towardes Bethzacharan ouer againste the kynges armye. So the Kynge arose befoze the daye, and bzoughte the power of hys Hooste into the waye to Bethzacaran, where the Hoostes made theym readye to the battayle, blowynge the trompettes. And to pzouoke the Elephauntes to fyghte, they shewed theym the sappe of redde grapes and mulberyes. And dyuyded the Elephauntes amonge the Hoost, so that by euerye Elephante, there stoode a thousande menne well harnessed, and helmettes of steele vppon theyr heades: Yea vnto euerye one of the Elephantes also, were ozdeyned fyue hundzed horsemenne of the beste, whyche wayted of the Elephante, goynge where so euer hee wente, and departed not from hym. Euerye Elephante was couered wyth a stronge towzer of woodde, where vppon were twoe and thyrtye valeaunt menne, wyth weapons to fyghte, and wythin was a manne of Inde to rule the beaste. As foz the remnaunte of the horsemenne, hee sette theym vppon bothe the sydes in twoe partes wyth trompettes, to pzouoke the hoste, and to steere vppe suche as were slowe in the armye. And when the Sunne shone vppon their shieldes of golde, and steele, the mountaynes glysteren agaynst theym, and were as bzyghte as the creslettes of fyre. The Kynges Hooste also was deuyded, one parte vppon the hye mountaynes, the other lowe benethe: so they wente on taknge good heede, and keepynge theyr ozder. And all they that dwelte in the lande, were afrayed at the noise of their Hooste, when the multitude wente soozthe, and when the weaponnes smote together, foz the hooste was both greate and myghtye. das alſo and hys hoſte entred into the battell, and ſlewe .vi. C. men of the kynges armye. Nowe when Eleasar the ſonne of Saura dyd ſee one of the Elephantes decked with the kynges badge, and was a moze goodlye beaſte then the other: he thought the kynge ſhoulde be vpon him, and ieopard him ſelfe to delyuer hys people, and to get him a perpetuall name. Wherefoze he ranne with a cozage vnto the Elephante in the myddeſt of the hooſte, smytynge them dowme of bothe the ſydes, and ſlew many about hym So wente he to the Elephantes fete, and gat hym vnder hym, and ſlewe hym: then fell the Elephante dowme vpon him, and there he dyed. Judas alſo and his men ſeyng the power of the kyng and the mighty violence of hys hooſte, departed from them. And the kynges army wente vp agaynſt them toward Jeruſalem, and pytched their tents in Jewry beſyde mount Sion. Moreouer, the kyng toke truce with 1.mac.46 them that were in Bethſura. But 2.mac.11 when they came oute of the citie (be-
and. 15.d cauſe they had no vitayles within, F and the lande laye vntylled) the kyng toke Bethſura, and ſet men to kepe it, and turned his hoſt to the place of the ſanctuary, and layed ſiege to it a great whyle. Where he made all maner ozdeynaunce, handebowes, fyzy dartes, rackettes to caſte ſtones, ſcozpions to ſhoote arowes, and ſlinges. The Jewes alſo made ozdeynaunce agaynſte theirs, and fought a long ſeaſon. But in the city there were no vitayles, foz it was the ſeuenth yere of the warres and thoſe Heathen that remayned in Jewry, had eaten vp all their ſtoare. And in the Sanctuarye were fewe men left, foz the hunger came ſo vpon them, that they were ſcatered abzoade: euery man to his owen place. So whē 2.mat.6b Liſias heard that Philippe (whom Antiochus the kynge whyle he was yet ſyngyng, had ozdeyned to bzyng vp Antiochus his ſonne, that he myghte be kynge) was come agayne oute of Perſia and Media wyth the kynges hooſte, and thoughte to obtayne the kyngdome. He gat hym to the kynge G in all the haſte, and to the captayns of the hoſte, and ſayd: we decreaſe dayly, and our vitayles are but ſmal: agaīe the place that we laye ſiege vnto, is verye ſtronge, and it were our part to ſee foz the realme. Let vs agree with theſe men, and take truce with them, and wyth all their people, and grant them to lyue after their lawe: as they dyd afoze. Foz they be greued, and do all theſe thynges agaynſt vs, becauſe we haue deſpiſed their lawe. So the kyng and the pzynces were contente, and ſent vnto them to make peace, and they receaued it. Nowe when the kynge and the pzynces had made an othe vnto them, they came oute of the caſtel, and the kyng went vp to moūt Sion. But when he ſawe that the place was well fenſed, he bzake the othe that he had made, and commaūded to deſtroye the wall round about. Then departed he in all the haſte, and returned vnto Antioche, where he found Philip hauing dominion of the citie. So he foughte agaynſt him, and toke the citie againe into his handes.

¶ The. vii. Chapter.

IN the. Cli. yere came Demetrius the ſonne of Seleucus frome the citye of Rome with a ſmall compayne of men, vnto a cytye of the ſea coaſt, and there he bare rule. And it chaunced, that when he came to Antioche the citie of his progenitours, his hooſte toke Antiochus and Liſias to bzinge them vnto hym. But when it was tolde him, he ſayde: let me not ſee their faces: So the hoſte put them to death. Nowe when Demetrius was ſet vpon the trone of hys kyngdome, there came vnto him wycked and vngodly men of Iſrael: whoſe captayne was Alcimus, that would haue bene made hye prieſte. These men accuſed the people of Iſrael vnto the kynge, ſayinge: Judas and his bzethzen haue ſlayne thy frendes, and dzyuen vs out of our owen land. Wherfoze, ſend nowe ſome man (to whom thou geueſt credence) that he maye go and ſee all the deſtruc-destruction, which he hath done vnto vs and vnto the kynges land, and let him be punished with all his frendes B and fauourers. Then the kynge chose Bachides a frende of his, which was a man of greate power in the realme (beyond the great water) and faythfull vnto the kyng: and sent him to see the destruction that Judas had done.

And as for the wycked Alcimus, he made him hie priest, and commaunded him to be auenged of the chyldren of Israell. So they stode vp, and came with a greate hooste into the lande of Juda, sendyng messangers to Judas and his brethren, and speakynge vnto them with peaceable wordes: but vnmac.1b der disceate. • Therfore Judas & hys people beleued not their sayinge, for they sawe that they were come with a great host. After this came the scribes together vnto Alcimus and Bachides, trustyng the beste vnto them.
And first the Assideans required peace of them, saying: Alcimus the priest is come of the sede of Aaron, howe can he dysceaue vs? So they gaue them louyng wordes, and swore vnto them, and sayde: We will do you no harme: neyther your frends: and they beleued them. But the very same day toke they lx. men of them, and slew them, accor-dyng to the wordes that are wrytten. al.79. • They haue caste the flesshe of thy saynctes, and shed their blood rounde aboute Jerusalem, and there was no man that would bury them. So ther C came a greate feare and drede amonge the people, sayinge: There is neyther trueth nor righteousnes in theym, for they haue broken the appoyntmente and othe that they made. And Bachides remoued his hoste from Jerusalem, and pytched hys tente at Betzecha: where he sent forth, and toke many of them that had forsaken him: He slew many of the people also, and cast them into a great pyt. Then committed he the land vnto Alcimus, and left men of warre with him to helpe him, and Bachides hym selfe wente vnto the king. And thus Alcimus defended hys hye prycsthoode, and all suche as vexed Israel, resorted vnto hym: In somuch that they obtayned the lande of Juda, and did muche euill vnto the Israelytes. Now when Judas sawe al the mischefe that Alcimus and hys company had done (yea more then the heathen themselues) vnto the Israelytes: He went forth round about all the borders of Jewry, and punyshed those vnfaithfull renagates, so that they came nomore out into the countrye. So when Alcimus sawe, that Judas and hys people had gotten the vpperhand, and that he was not able to abyde them: he went agayne to the king, and layd al the worste of theym that he coulde. Then the kinge sente Nicanor, one of hys chyefe prynces (which bare euil wil vnto Israel) & comaunded him, ỹ he should vtterlye destroie ỹ people. • So Nicanor came 2 mac. 15 to Jerusalem with a gret host, & sent vnto Judas and his brethren wyth frēdly wordes (but vnder disceat) saying: there shalbe no war betwixt mee & you: I will come with a few mē, to se how ye do, with frendship. Vppon this he came to Judas, & they saluted one another peaceably: but ỹ enemies wer apoynted to take Judas by violēce Neuertheless, it was tolde Judas, that he came vnto him but vnder disceate: Wherfore he gatte hym awaye from him, and would see his face no more. When Nicanor perceyued, that his councell was bewrayde, he went out to fight against Judas, beside Capharsalama: where there wer slain of Nicanors host. 5000. mē: & ỹ residue fled vnto ỹ castel of Dauid. After this cam Nicanor vp vnto mount Sion: and ỹ priestes with the elders of ỹ people went forth to salute him peaceably, & to shew him the burnte sacrifices that wer offred for the king. But he laugh ed them & the people to scorne, mocked them, defiled their offrynges, & spake disdainfully, ye & swore in his wroth, saying: • If Judas and his hoste bee E not deliuered nowe into my handes, 2.mac.14 as soone as euer I come agayne (and fare wel) I shal burne vp this hous.

with that worde he oute in a greate anger. Then the Hypocrites came in, and stode before the aulter of the temple, weppinge, and sayinge. * For so much as thou (O LORDE) hast chosen thys house, that thy name myghte be called uppon therein, and that it shoulde bee * an house of prayer, and petition for thy people: Wee auenged of thys man and hys hoolde, and lette theym bee slayne wyth the swearde, remember the blasphemyes of theym, and suffer theym not to contynue anys longer. Whenne Nycanor was goone frome Jerusalem, he pytched his Tente at Bethoron, and there an host met him oute of Siria. And Judas came to Adarsa with thre thousande men, and made hys prayer vnto God, sayinge: O Lord, * because the messaungers of king Senacherib blasphemed thee, the Aungell wente forth, and slewe an hundred fourscore and fyue thousande of them. Euen so destroye thou this hoost before vs to daye, that other people maye knowe howe that he hath blasphemed thy Sanctuary, & punyshe him accordinge to his maliciousnes. And so the hostes stroke the field, the thyrtene day of the Moneth, * Adar: and Nicanors hoste was discomfited, * & he him selfe was first slayne in the battell. When Nicanors men of warre sawe that he was kylled, they cast away theyr weapõs, and fled, but the Jewes folowed vpõ theym an whole dayes iourney, from Adazer vnto Gazara, blowyng with trompets, and makynge tokens after them. So the Jewes came forth of al the townes there about, and blew out their hornes vpon them, and turned agaynst thẽ. Thus were they all slain, and not one of them lefte. They then toke their substaunce for a praye, and * smote of Nicanors hed, and his right hand (* which he held vp so proudly) and brought it with them, and hanged it vp afore Jerusalem. Wherfore the people were exceedingly reioysed, and passed ouer that day in great gladnes. And Judas ordeyned, that the same day (namely the thirtyth daye of the moneth Adar) shoulde be kept in mirth euery yeare. Thus the lande of Jude was in rest a lytle whyle.

The .viii. Chapter.

I Udas hearde also the fame of the Romaynes, that they were mighty and valeaunt men, and agreeable to all thynges that are required of theym, and make peace with all men, which come vnto them, and how they were doughty men of strength. Besydes that it was tolde hym of their battayles, and noble actes which they dyd in Galacia, how they had conquered them, and brought theym vnder trybute and what great thinges they had done in Spaine: howe that with their wysdome and sober behauoure they had won the mynes of syluer and golde that are there, and obtayned all the land, with other places farre from them: howe they had discomfited and slayne downe the kynges that came vpon them, from the vttermaste parte of the earthe, and howe other people gaue them trybute euery yere. Howe they had slayne and ouercome Philip and Perses kynges of Cethim, and other mo (in battayle) whiche hadde brought theyr ordynaunce agaynste theym: howe they discomfyted greate Antiochus kyng of Asia (that would nedes fyghte wyth theym) haupnge an hundred and twentye Elephantes wyth horsemenne, charettes, and a verye greate Hoofte: howe they toke hym selfe alyue, and ordeyned hym (wyth suche as shoulde raygne after hym) to paye theym a greate trybute. B
* Yea, and to fynde theym good suertyes and pledge: besydes all this, how they hadde taken frome hym India, Media, and Lidia (hys beste landes) and geuen theym to kynge Eumenus. Agayne, howe they perceauyng that the Grecians were commynge to vexe theym: sente agaynste theym a captayne of an Hoofte, whyche gaue theym battayle, slewe many of them, 1 mac.1 &

ledde awaye theyr wynes and chylderne captyue, spoyled theym, tooke possession of theyr lande, destroyed theyr stronge holdes, and subdewed them to be theyr bondemen, vnto this daye. Moreouer, howe that as for other kyngedomes and Iles whyche sometyme withstode theym, they destroyed theim, and brought theim vnder their dominion. But helped euer theyr owne frendes, and those that were confederate with them, and conquered kingdoms both farre and nye, and that whosoeuer hearde of theyr renowne, was afrayde of theym: for whome they woulde helpe to theyr kingdomes, those raigned: and whom it lyked not theym to raygne, they put hym downe. And howe they were come to greate preeminence, hauyng no kynge amonge theym, neyther any man clothed in purple, to be magnified there thorowe, but has ordeyned theym selues a Parliamente, wherin there satte three hundred and twentye Senatoures dayly vppon the counsayle, to dyspatche euer the busynes of the people, and to keepe good order. And howe that euery yere they choose a Mayre, to haue the gouernaunce of all their lande, to whome euerye man was obediente, and there was neyther ciuyl wyll nor dissention among them. Then Iudas chose Eupolemus the sonne of Iacob, and Iason the sonne of Eleazar, and sente theym vnto Rome for to make frendshyppe and a bonde of loue wyth theym, that they myghte take frome theym the bondage of the Grekes, for the Iewes sawe that the Greekes wouldе subdue the kyngdome of Israell. So they wente vnto Rome (a verye greate iourneye) and came into the Parleamente, and sayde: Iudas Machabeus wyth hys brethren and the people of the Iewes hathe sente vs vnto you, to make a bond of frendshyppe and peace wyth you, and ye to note vs as youre louers and frendes. And the matter pleased the Romains right well, wherefore it was written by of the which the Romaynes made a wrytynge in Tables of brasse, and sente it to Ieruſalem: that they myghte haue by theym a memoriall of the same peace and bonde of frendeshyppe after thys manner: God saue the Romaynes, and the people of the Iewes both by sea and by lande, and kepe the swearde and ennemye from them for euermore. If there comme fyrste anye warre vppon the Romaines for any of their frendes throughoute all their domynyon, the people of the Iewes shall healpe theym (as the tyme requyreth) and that wyth all their heartes. Also they shall neyther gene nor sende vnto theyr ennemyes victualles, weapones, money, nor shyppes: but fulfyll thys charge at the Romaynes pleasure, and take nothynge from theym therefore. Agayne, yf the people of the Iewes happen fyrste to haue warre, the Romaynes shall stande by theym wyth a good wyll, accordinge as the tyme wyl suffer. Neyther shal they gene vnto the Iewes enemyes, victualles weapons, money nor shyppes. Thus are the Romaines contente to do, and shall fulfyll their charge wythoute anye dysceyte. Accordynge to these articles, the Romaynes made the bonde wyth the Iewes. Nowe after these articles (sayde they) yf anye of the partyes wyll putte to theym, or take anye thynge from theym: they shall dooe it wyth the consente of bothe: and whatsoeuer they adde vnto theym, or take from theym, it shall stande faste. And as touching the euil that Demetrius hath done vnto the Iewes, we haue wrytten vnto hym, sayinge: Wherefore layest thou thy heauy yoke vpon the Iewes our frendes and louers? Yf they make any complaint of the agayn vnto vs, we shall defende theym, and fyghte wyth thee, by sea and by lande.

The. ix. Chapter.

A mac. 7. f

IN the meane ſeaſon when Demetrius herde that • Nicanor and hys hooſte was ſlayne in the fyelde, hee proceaded further to ſende Bachides and Alcymus agayne into Jewrye, and thoſe that wer in the right wing of hys hooſte with theym. So they wente forthe by the waye that leadeth vnto Galgala, and pytched their tentes beſore Meſaloth, whiche is in Arbellis, and ſwanne the Citie, and ſlewe muche people. In the fyrſte Moneth of the hundred fyftye and two yeare, they brought their hooſte to Jeruſalem, and roſe vp, and cam to Berea, wyth twenty thouſande fote men, and two thouſande horſemenne. Nowe Judas had pytched hys tente at Layſa, wyth three thouſande choſen menne. And when they ſawe the multitude of the other armye that it was ſo great, they were ſore afrayde, and manye conueyed theym ſelues oute of the Hooſte. In ſo muche that there abode no mo of theym but eight hundred menne. When Judas ſawe that his hooſte fayled hym, and that he muſte needes fyghte: it brake hys hearte, that he had no tyme to gather theym together: wherefore the manne was in extreame trouble. Neuertheleſſe, he ſayde vnto theim that remayned wyth hym. Vp, let vs go againſt oure enmenyes, peraduenture wee ſhalbe able to fyght wyth them. But they wouldе haue ſtopped hym, ſayinge: wee ſhall not bee able, therefore lette vs nowe ſaue oure lyues, and tourne agayne to oure brethren, and then wyll we fyghte agaynſt theym, B for we are here but fewe. And Judas ſayde: God forbydde that we ſhouldе flee from theym. Wherefore, yf oure tyme be come, let vs dye manfully for our brethren, and let vs not ſtayn our honor. Then the hoſt remoued out of the tentes and ſtode agaynſte theym. The horſemenne are deuyded in two partes: the ſlynge caſters and archers wente before the hooſte, and all the myghtye menne were formoſt in the fyeld. Bachides hys ſelfe was in the ryght wynge of the battayle, and the hoſte drewe nie in twoe partes, and blewe the trompettes. They of Judas ſyde blewe the trompettes alſo, and the earth ſhoke at the noiſe of the hooſtes, and they ſtrooke a felde from the morowe tyll nighte. And when Judas ſaw that Bachides hoſte was ſtrōgeſt of the right ſide, he toke with hym all the hardye menne, and brake the ryghte wynge of their order, and folowed vpon theym vnto the mount Azot. Nowe when they whych wer of the lefte wynge, ſawe that the ryghte ſyde was diſconfite, they perſecuted Judas and theym that were wyth hym. Then was there a ſore battayle, for manye were ſlaine and wounded of bothe the partyes. Judas alſo hym ſelfe was killed, and the remnaunte fledde. So Jonathas and Simon tooke Judas their brother, and buryed him in hys fathers ſepulchre in the Cytye of Modyn. And all the people of Iſraell made greate lamentation for hym, and mourned longe, ſayinge: Alas, that thys worthye ſhouldе be ſlayne, whyche deliuered the peeple of Iſraell. As for other thynges perteyninge to the battayles of Judas, the noble actes that he diddе and of hys worthyneſſe: they are not wrytten, for they were verye manye. • And after the deathe of Judas, wycked menne came vp in all the coaſtes of Iſrael, and there aroſe all ſuche as woorke vngodlyneſſe. In thoſe dayes was there a great dearth in the lande, and al the countrye gaue ouer theymſelues, and theirs, vnto Bachides. So Bachides choſe wicked menne, and made theym Lordes in the lande. Theſe ſoughte oute, and made ſearche for Judas frendes, and brought them vnto Bachides which auenged hym ſelfe vppon theim with greate diſpyte. And there camme ſo greate trouble in Iſraell, as was not ſence the tyme that no prophete was ſene there. Then came al Judas frendes together, and ſaid vnto Jonathas For ſo muche as thy brother Judas is deade, there is none lyke hym to go forth against our ennemies against Bachides, and such as are aduersaries vnto our people. Wherefore, this day we chose thee for hym, to bee oure Prince and Captayne, to order oure battayle. And Jonathas tooke the gouernance vpon hym at the same tyme, and ruled in stede of hys brother Judas. Whenne Bachides gat knowledge thereof, he sought for to slea him. But Jonathas and Symon his brother, perceauynge that, fledde into the wildernesse of Thecua with all theyr companye, and pitched theyr tentes by the water poole of Asphar. Whyche whenne Bachides vnderstoode, he camme ouer Jordane wyth all hys hooste vppon the Sabbothe daye. Nowe hadde Jonathas sente hys brother John (a Captayne of the people) to praye hys frendes, the D Nabuthites, that they woulde lende theym theyr ordynaunce, for they had muche. Soo the chylderne of Jambri camme out of Madaba, and tooke John and all that he hadde, and went their way withall. Then came word vnto Jonathas and Symon his brother, that the chylderne of Jambri, made a great mariage, and broughte the bryde from Madaba wyth greate pompe: For she was daughter to one of the nobleste princes of Canaan. Wherefore, they remembred the blood of John theyr brother, and went vp, and hydde theym selues, vnder the shadowe of the mountayne. So they lyfte vppe theyr eyes, and loked, and beholde, there was muche a doo, and greatte repayre: for the brydegroome camme forthe, and hys frendes, and hys brethren, mette them wyth tympanyes, instrumentes of musyke, and many weapons. Thenne Jonathas, and they that were wyth hym, roase out of theyr lurkynge places agaynst them, and slewe many of theym. As for the remnant, they fledde into the mountaynes, and they tooke all theyr substance. Thus the mariage was turned to mournyng, and the noyse of theyr melodye, into lamentation. And soo whenne they hadde auenged the bloode of theyr brother, they tourned agayne vnto Jordane. Bachides hea-E rynge thys, came vnto the very border of Jordane wyth a greate power vppon the Sabboth daye. And Jonathas sayde to hys companye: Lette vs gette vppe, and fyght agaynst our ennemies: For it standeth not wyth vs to daye, as in tyme paste: Beholde, oure ennemyes are in oure waye, the water of Jordane vppon the one syde of vs, with bankes, fennes, and woodes of the other syde, so that there is noo place for vs to departe vnto. * Wherefore, crye nowe vnto Heauen, 1.pa.10.8

wer of youre ennemyes. Soo they strooke the battayle. And Jonathas stretched oute hys handes, to smyte Bachydes, but he fledde backwarde. Then Jonathas, and they that were wyth hym, leapte into Jordane, and swymmed ouer Jordane vnto hym, and there were slayne of Bacchydes syde that daye a thousande men. Therfore Bachydes wyth hys hoste tourned agayne to Jerusalem, and buylte vppe the Castelles and strong holdes that were in Jewry, Jericho, Emaus, Bethoron, Bethell, Thamnata, Phara, and Topo, wyth hyghe walles, wyth portes, and wyth lockes, and sette menne to keepe theym, that they myght vse theyr malyce vpon Israel. Hye walled vp the Citye Bethsura, Gazarah, and the castell of Jerusalē also, & prouyded them with men and vytayles. Hee tooke also the chiefest mens sonnes in the countrey for pledges, and putte theym in the Castell at Jerusalem to be kepte. Afterwarde, In the hundred fyfty and three yeare in the seconde moneth, Alcimus commaunded, that the walles of the innermoste Sanctuary should bee destroyed, and the buyldynges of F the Prophetes also. And whenne hee beganne to destroye theym, the thynges, that hee wente aboute, were hyndered: For he was smytten wyth a palsye, and hys mouthe shut, so that he coulde no more speake, nor

worldes ſtaunde anye of hys howſe: concernynge hys buſyneſſe. Thus dyed Alcimus in greate myſerye, at the ſame tyme. And whenne Bachides ſawe that Alcimus was deade, hee tourned agayne to the kynge, and ſo the lande was in reſt two yeres. Thenne all the vngodlye menne helde a counſayle, ſayenge: Beholde, Jonathas, and hys companye are at eaſe, and dwell wythout care. Wherefore, lette vs bryng Bachides hither, and hee ſhall take theym all in one nyghte. Soo they wente and gaue Bachydes thys counſayll, whyche aroſe to comme wyth a greate hoſte, and ſente Letters pryuylye to hys adherentes, whyche were in Jewry, to take Jonathas, and thoſe that were wyth hym, but they myghte not, for the other had gotten knoweledge of theyr deuyce. And Jonathas tooke fyftye menne of the countreye (whyche were the ryngleaders of theym, and ſlewe theym. Thenne Jonathas and Symon wyth theyr companye departed vnto the Cytie Bethbeſſen, whyche lyethe in the wylderneſſe, and repayred the decaye thereof, and made it ſtronge. Whenne Bachydes knewe thys, hee gathered all hys hooſte, and ſente worde to theym that were of Jewry. Thenne cam̃e hee, and layde ſyege to Bethbeſſen, and foughte agaynſte it a longe ſeaſon, and made Inſtrumentes of warre. Nowe Jonathas lefte hys brother Symon in the Citie, and wente forthe hym ſelfe into the Countreye, and camme wyth a certayne noumbre, and ſlewe Odares, and hys bretherne, and the chylderne of Phaſeron in theyr Tentes: ſo that he beganne to bee ſtrong, and to increaſe in power. As for Simon, and hys companye, they wente oute of the Cytie, and brente bppe the Inſtrumentes of warre, and foughte agaynſte Bachydes, and diſcomfyted hym. And Bacchydes was ſore vexed, becauſe hys counſayle and trauayle was in vayne. Wherefore hee was wroathe at the wycked menne (that gaue hym counſayle to comme into theyr lande) and ſlewe manye of theym. Thenne purpoſed hee wyth hys companye, to goe awaye into hys owne Countreye: whereof, whenne Jonathas hadde knowledge, hee ſente Imbaſſadours vnto hym, for to make peace wythe hym, and that hee ſhoulde deliuer hym hys pryſoners agayne. To the whyche, Bacchides conſented gladlye, and dydde accordyng to hys deſyre: yea and made an othe, that hee ſhoulde neuer doo hym harme all the dayes of hys lyfe. So he reſtored vnto hym all the pryſoners that hee had taken oute of the lande of Juda, and thenne tourned and wente hys way, into hys owne lande, neyther proceeded hee anye further to come vnto the borders of Juda. Thus Iſraell hadde noo more warre. And Jonathas dwelte at Machemas, and beganne there to gouerne the people, and deſtroyed the vngodlye menne out of Iſraell.

A Joſe. ca. 2.3,li.13

IN the hundred and thre ſcore yeare camme Alexander, the ſoonne of noble Antiochus, and toke Ptholomais, whoſe Cytezens receaued hym, and there hee reygned. Whenne Demetrius hearde thereof, hee gathered an exceedynge greate hooſte, and wente forthe agaynſte hym to fyghte. Wherefore Demetrius ſente letters vnto Jonathas, wyth louynge wordes, and prayſed hym greately. For he ſayde: Wee wyll fyrſte make peace wyth hym, beefore hee bynde hym ſelfe wyth Alexander agaynſte vs: elles hee ſhall remember the euylle that we haue doone agaynſt hym, his brother and hys people. And ſoo hee gaue Jonathas leaue to gather an hooſte, to make weapons, and to bee confederate wyth hym, and cõmanded the pledges that were in the caſtell to bee

bee delyuered vnto hym. Then came Jonathas to Jerusalem, and red the letters in the audience of al the people and of theym that were in the castell. And therfore wer they sore afrayd, because they heard, that the king had geuen hym licence to gather an hoost. Thus were the pledges deliuered vnto Jonathas, wyche restored them to their elders. Jonathas also dwelt at Jerusalem, and began to buylde vp, & to repayre the citie: commaundyng the workmen to wall it, and the mounte Syon round about with free stone, to be a strong hold, and so they dyd. As for the Heathen, that were in the Castelles, whiche Bachydes had made vp, they fled: so that euery mã left the B place, and went into his own cõtrey Only at Bethsura remained certaine of the Jewes, which had forsaken the law and commandements of God, for Bethsura was their refuge. Nowe when kyng Alexander herd of the promises that Demetrius had made vnto Jonathas, and when it was tolde hym of the battailes and noble actes, wyche he and his brethren had done, and of the greate trauailes, that they had taken, he said: where shal we fynd suche a man? Well, we will make him our frend, & be confederate with him. Vpõ this, he wrote a letter vnto him, with these words: King Alexander saluteth his brother Jonathas. We haue heard of thee, that thou art a valiaunt man, and mete to be our frend: wherfore, this day we ordeyn thee to be the Hye Priest of thy people, and to bee called the kynges frend. (Upon this, he sent hym a purple clothyng, and a crowne of gold) that thou mayst consyder what is for our profit, and kepe frendshyp toward vs. So in the seuenth moneth of the hundred & three score yeare vpon the solemne feast day of the tabernacles, Jonathas put the holy raiment vpon hym. Then gathered he an host, & made many weapons. Whiche when Demetrius hearde, he was meruailous sory, and sayd: Alas, what haue we don, that Alexãder hath preuented vs in getting ỹ frendshyp of the Jewes, for hys owne defence? Yet will I write louyngly vnto thẽ also, yea, and promyse them dignities and rewardes, that they may be of my syde. Wherupon he wrote vnto them these wordes. Kyng Demetrius sendeth gretynge vnto the people of the Jewes: Whereas ye haue kept your couenant toward vs, and continued in our frendshyp, not enclynyng to our enemies, we were glad, whẽ we herd therof. Wherfore, remayne still, and be faythfull to vs: and we shall well recompence you for the thynges that ye haue don on our party: we shal release you of many charges, and geue you rewardes. And nowe I dyscharge you and all the Jewes frome tributes, I forgeue you the customes of salt, and release you of the crowne taxes, of the third part of sede, & half of the fruites of trees which is myne owne dewty. These I leaue for you from this day D forth: so that they shall not be taken of the lande of Juda, nor of the three cytyes which are added thervnto out of Samaria and Galile, from thys daye forthe for euermore. Jerusalem also with all thynges belongynge therto, shalbe holy and free, yea the tithes and tributes shall pertayne vnto it. As for the power of the castell whiche is at Jerusalem, I rempt and geue it vnto the hye priest that he may set in it such men, as he shal chose to kepe it. I freely delyuer all the Jewes that are prisoners throughout all my realme: so that euery one of them shalbe fre from paying any tribute, yea, euen of their cattell. All the solempne feastes, Sabbothes, newe moones, the dayes appoynted, the three daies before and after the feast, shalbe free for all the Jewes in my realme: so that in them no man shal haue power to do any thing or to moue any bufynes agaynst anye of them in any maner of cause. There shal thirty thousand also of ỹ Jewes be wrytten vp in the kinges host, and haue their wages payed as all other men of warre of the kynges shoulde haue: and of them shalbe ordeined certaine to kepe the kinges strõg holdes:

yea, and ſome of them ſhall be ſet ouer the kynges buſynelle, that they maye faythfully deale with the ſame. The Jewes alſo ſhal haue prynces of their owne, and walke in theyr owne lawes, as the kyng hath commaunded in the land of Juda. And the thre cyties that are fallen vnto Jewry, from the countrey of Samaria and Galilee: ſhalbe taken as Jewry, and be vnder one: nether be ſubiect to any ſtrāge Lord, but to the hyghe Prieſt. As for Ptholomais, and the land pertayning therto, I gene it vnto the Sanctuary at Jeruſalem, for the neceſſary expences of the holye thynges. Moreouer, I wyll geue euery yeare fiftene thouſand Sicles of ſyluer out of the kynges checker (whiche pertayneth vnto me) to the worke of the Temple: yea, and looke what remayneth (whyche they that had our matters in hand in tymes paſt haue not payde) the ſame ſhall they geue vnto theym alſo. And beſydes all thys, the fyue thouſande Sicles, whiche they tooke yearely of the rentes of the Sanctuarie, ſhal belonge vnto the Prieſtes, that doo ſeruice. Item, whoſoeuer they be, that flee vnto the temple at Jeruſalem, or within the libertes therof, where as they are fallen into the kinges danger for any maner of buſynes they ſhalbe pardoned, and al the goodes that they haue in my realme, ſhall be free. For the buyldynge alſo and repayrynge of the worke of the Sanctuary, expences ſhall bee geuen out of the kynges Checker: Yea, and for the makynge of the walles rounde aboute Jeruſalem, for the breakynge downe of the olde, & for the ſettyng vp of the ſtrong holdes in Jewry, ſhall the coſtes and charges be geuen out of the kynges
1. Ma. 7. Checker. But when Jonathas & the people hearde theſe wordes, they gaue no credence vnto theym, neyther receaued theym: for they remembred the great wyckednes that he had done vnto Iſraell, and howe ſore he hadde vexed them. Wherfore, they agreed vnto Alexander, for he was a prince that had delt frendly with theym, & ſo they ſtode by him alway. Then gathered kyng Alexander a great hoſt, & brought his army againſt Demetrius. So the two kynges ſtroke battaile together, but Demetrius hoſte fledde, and Alexander folowed after, and fell vppon theym. A myghty ſore fielde was it, continuyng tyl the Sun went downe and Demetrius was ſlayne the ſame daye. And Alexander ſente Ambaſſadours vnto Ptholomee the kynge of Egypte with theſe wordes, ſayinge: For ſo muche as I am come agayn to my realme, and am ſet in the throne of my progenitours, & haue gotten the dominion, ouercommed Demetrius, conquered the land, and ſtriken a field with hym, ſo that wee haue diſcomfyted bothe hym and hys hoolke, and ſytte in the throne of hys kyngdome. Lette vs nowe make frendſhyppe together, gene me thy daughter to wife: ſo ſhall I bee thy ſonne in lawe, and bothe geue thee rewardes, and her greate dignitie. Ptholomee the kyng gaue anſwere, ſayinge: Happy bee the daye, wherein thou arte come agayne vnto the lande of thy Progenitoures, and ſette in the throne of theyr kyngdome. As nowe wyll I fulfyll thy wrytyng: but mete mee at Ptholomais, that we may ſee one another, & that I may mary my doughter vnto thee, accordyng to thy deſire. So Ptholomee went out of Egypte wyth hys doughter Cleopatra, and came vnto Ptholomais, in the. Clxii. yeare: where kyng Alexander mette hym, and he gaue Alexander his daughter Cleopatra, and maryed them at Ptolomais wyth great worſhip, like as ỹ maner of kyngs is to be. Thē wrot king Alexāder vnto Jonathas, that he ſhold com & mete him. So he went honorably vnto Ptolomais, and ther he met the two kings, & gaue them great preſentes of golde and ſiluer, & founde fauour in their ſight. And there came together agaynſt Jonathas certayne wicked men & vngracious perſons of Iſrael, making complaintes of hym, but the kyng regarded them not. As for Jonathas, the kyng commaunded to take of hys garmentes, & to clothe him in purple: and so they did. Then the kinge appoynted him to sytte by him, and sayde vnto hys princes: Go wyth him into the middest of the Cytye, and make a proclamation, that no man complayne agaynste him of anye matter, and that noman trouble hym for anye maner of cause. So it happened, that when hys accusers sawe the worshyp whyche was proclaimed of him, and that hee was clothed in purple, they fled euerychone. And ỹ king made much of him, wrote him among hys cheefe frendes, made him a Duke, and partaker of hys dominiõ. • Thus Jonathas went agayne to Jerusalẽ, with peace and gladnes. In the. clxv. yere came Demetrius the son of Demetrius from Creta into hys fathers land: wherof when Alexander hearde tel, he was ryght sorye, and returned vnto Antioch. And Demetrius chose Apollonius, (whyche had the gouernance of Celosiria) to be hys captain. So he gathered a great host, and came vnto Jamnia, and sent word vnto Jonathas the hye priest, sayinge: Darest thou wythstand vs thy selfe alone? As for me, I am but laughed to scorn and shamed, because thou prouedst thy strength agaynst vs in ỹ mountains. Now therfor, if thou trustest in thyn owne strength, come downe to vs into the playne fielde, and there lette vs proue our strẽgth together: thou shalt find, that I haue valiant men of war with me, and shalt knowe whome I am, and the other that stand by me. Whych say, that your foote is not able to stand before our face, for thy fathers haue ben twyse chased into their owne land. And now, how wilt thou be able to abyde so great an host of horsemen and fotemen in the fyeld wheras is nether rock, stone nor place to fle vnto? When Jonathas heard the woordes of Appollonius, he was moued in hys minde: wherfore he chose. x. thousand men, and went out of Jerusalẽ, and Simon hys brother met him for to helpe him: And they pitched their tẽtes at Joppa, but the city kept him forth: for Joppa was an hold of Apollonius: Then Jonathas laid siege to it, and they that were in the Cyty, for very feare let him in, and so Jonathas wanne Joppa. Apollonius hearinge of thys, toke three thousand horsemen wyth a great hoste of fote, and wente as thoughe he woulde go to Azotus, and came immediatly into the playne felde: because he had so many horsmen and put hys truste in them. So Jonathas folowed vppon him to Azotus, and ther they stroke the battel. Now had Appollonius left a thousand horsmen behind them preuely in the tẽtes And when Jonathas knew that such wayte was layde behinde them, they wente round about the enemies host, and shot dartes at the people from the morning to the euening. As for Jonathas people, they kepte their order as he had commaunded them, and the enemyes horses were euer laboringe. Then brought Simon forth his host and set them against the fotemen. For the horsemen wer wery already. So he discomfited them, and they fledde. And they that were scatred in the feld, gat them to Azotus, and came into the Temple of Dagon their Idoll, that they myghte there saue their lyues. But Jonathas set fyre vpon Azotus and all the Cytyes rounde aboute it, and toke their goodes: • and brente vp the temple of Dagon wyth al theym that were fled into it. Thus were slayn and brent wel nye. viii. M. mẽ, Soo Jonathas remoued the hooste from thence, and broughte theym to Ascalon: where the men of the Cytye came forth, and met hym wyth great worshyp After thys went Jonathas and hys hooste agayne to Jerusalem, wyth greate substaunce of good. And when kynge Alexander hearde these thynges, he thought to do Jonathas more worshyppe, and sent hym a collar of golde, as the vse is to bee geuen vnto suche as are of the kynges nexte bloode. He gaue hym also the Cytye of Acaron (wyth the landes belonging therto in possession.

Ioſe. ca. 7. lib. 13.

AND the kyng of Egipte gathered an hoſte (like the ſand that lieth vpon the ſea ſhoze) and many ſhips: & ſwente about thzoughe diſceate to obtayne the kingdome of Alexander, and to ioyne it vnto hys owne realme. Upon thys he toke hys iourney into Syrya, and was letten into the Cyties, and men came forth to mete hym: for kyng Alexander had commanded theim ſo to do, becauſe he was hys father in law. Now whē Ptolome entred into any Citie, he left men of war to kepe it, & this he did thzoughout al the cities.

2. Mac. 10. c

And when hee came to Azotus, they ſhewed hym the temple of Dagon, & Azotus that was bzente by, with the other things which wer deſtroyed, & dead bodies caſte abzode, & the graues that they had made by the waye ſyde, for ſuche as were ſlaine in the fyelde. And told the kyng that Jonathas had done al theſe thynges, to thintente they myght get him euil will. But the kyng ſaid not a wozd therto. And Jonathas met the kyng with gret honoz at Joppa, where they ſaluted one another, and toke their reſt. So whē Jonathas had gon with the kyng vnto the water that was called Eleutherus, he turned againe to Jeruſalem. Nowe Ptolomi had gotten the dominion of the cities vnto Seleucia vpon the ſea coaſt, ymagining wicked councels againſt Alexander, and ſente ambaſſatours vnto Demetrius ſaying: Com let vs make a bond betwixt vs, ſo ſhal I gene the my daughter that Alexander hath, and thou ſhalt reygne in thy fathers kingdome. I repente that I gaue Alexander my daughter, for he goeth about to ſley me. And thus he ſlaundred Alexander, becauſe he wold haue had hys realme. Thus he tooke his daughter from him, gaue her vnto Demetrius, and forſoke Alexander ſo that his malice was openly knowē. And Ptolomi came to Antioch, where he ſet two croſwnes vpon his owne head, the croſwne of Egypt and of Aſia. In the mean ſeaſon was kyng Alexander in Cilicia, for they that dweit in thoſe places, rebelled againſt him. But whē Alexander herd of this: he cam to war agaynſt hym. Then kynge Ptholompe brought foorth his hoſt, and met hym with a myghty poſwer, and chaſed him aſwaye. Then fled Alexander into Arabie, ther to be defended, and kyng Ptolomies honoure increaſed. And Zabdiel the Arabian, ſmote of Alexanders head, and ſent it vnto Ptholome. But the third day after, dyed kyng Ptholomee himſelf: and they whom he had ſette in the ſtrong holdes, were ſlayne of thoſe that were within the Cities. ¶ And Demetrius reigned in the hundzed and ſeuen and ſixtie yere. At the ſame tyme gathered Jonathas theim that were in Jewry, to lay ſiege vnto the caſtell, which was at Jeruſalem, and ſo they made many inſtrumentes of warre againſt it. Then went ther certayn vngodly perſons (whiche hated their owne people) vnto kyng Demetrius, and told him that Jonathas beſeged the caſtel. So when he heard it, he was angry, and immediatly cam vnto Ptholomais, & wzote vnto Jonathas, that he ſhould not lay ſiege to the caſtelle, but come and ſpeake with hym in al the haſt. Neuertheles, whē Jonathas hearde it, he commanded to beſiege it. He choſe alſo certayn of the elders and prieſtes of Iſrael, and put hymſelfe in the perill, and toke wyth hym gold, ſiluer, clothyng, and diuers preſents, and went to Ptolomais vnto the kyng, and found hym gracious. And though certaine vngodly men of hys owne people made complaynte vpon him, yet the kyng intreated him, lyke as hys predeceſſoures had done beſoze: and promoted hym in the ſight of all his frendes, confyrmed hym in the hye prieſthode, with all the woorſhyp that he had afoze, and made hym hys chief frend. Jonathas alſo deſired the kynge, that he would make Jewrye free, with the three head cities of Samaria, and the landes pertaynyng therto: Upon this did Jonathas promyſe hym. iii. the kyng consented, and gaue Jonathas writyng of the same, contryning these wordes: kyng Demetrius sendeth gretyng vnto his brother Jonathas and to the people of the Jewes: We sende you here a copy of the letter whiche we wryte vnto our elder Lasthenus, concernynge you that ye D shoulde knowe it. Kyng Demetrius sendeth gretyng vnto Lasthenus his elder. For the faythfulnes that oure frendes the people of the Jewes kepe vnto vs, and for the loueynge kyndnes whiche they beare toward vs: we are determined to do them good. Wherfor we ordeyne all the coastes of Jewry with three cityes, Lydda and Ramatha (which are added vnto Jewry frō Samaria) and all the landes pertaynyng thervnto, to be freely separated for such as do sacrifyce in Jerusalem: both concernyng the paymentes whiche the kyng toke yearely afore tyme, and the frutes also of the earthe and trees. As for other tithes and tributes that belonged vnto vs, we discharge them therof from this tyme forth. In like maner we graunt vnto them all the customes of salt and crown tares, whiche were broughte vnto vs. And this fredome shal they haue firme and stedfast, from this time forth for euermore. Therfore see that ye make a copye of these our letters, and deliuer it vnto Jonathas: that it maye be kepte vpon the holy mount in a conuenient E place. After thys, when Demetrius the kyng sawe that his lande was in reste, and that no resistance was made him: he sent awaye all his hoste, euery man to his owne place, excepte an armye of straungers, whom he brought from the Iles of the heathen, wherfore all hys fathers hoost had euyll
M.127 wyll at hym. ¶ Nowe was there one Triphon (that had bene of Alexanders part afore) which when he sawe that all the hoost murmured agaynste Demetrius: he went to Emalcuel the Arabian (that brought vp Antiochus the sonne of Alexander) and laye sore vpon him, to deliuer hym thys yonge Antiochus: that he myghte reygne in his fathers steade. He tolde hym also, what gret euill Demetrius had done and how his men of warre loued him not: and so remayned there a long season. And Jonathas sente vnto kynge Demetrius, to drine them out which were in the castell at Jerusalem, and in the other refugyes, for they did Israell greate harme. So Demetrius sente worde vnto Jonathas, sayinge: I will not onely do these thynges for thee and thy people, but at tyme conuenyent I will do both thee and thy people great worshyppe. But nowe F thou shalte doo me a pleasure, if thou wylte sende me men to helpe me: for all mine army is gone fro me. So Jonathas sent hym three thousand stronge men vnto Antioche, and they came vnto the kyng, wherfore the kyng was very glad at their cōmyng. But they that wer of the citie (euen an hundred and twenty thousande men) gathered them together, and wolde haue slayne the kynge, which fled vnto his court, and the citezens kept the stretes of the citye, and beganne to fyght. Then the kynge called for the Jewes helpe, whiche came vnto hym all together, and wente abrode thorowe the citye, and slewe the same daye an hundred thousande men: set fyre vpon the citie, gat many spoyles in that day, and deliuered the kyng. So when the citezens sawe that the Jewes had gotten their will of the citye, and themselues dysappoynted of their purpose, they made their supplicatiō vnto the king, sayinge: Graunte vs peace, and let the Jewes ceasse from troublyng vs and the citye, and vpon thys they caste away their weapons. Thus thei made peace, and the Jewes gat great worshyp in the syght of the kynge, and in the sight of al that wer in his realme, and were spoken of thorowoute the kyngdom: and so they came agayn to G Jerusalē, with great goodes. So the kynge Demetrius sat in the trone of of his kyngdome, and had peace in his lande: Neuertheles, he dyssembled in all that euer he spake, and withdrewe hym selfe frome Jonathas, neyther rewarded him accordyng to the benefites whiche he had done for hym, but troubled hym verye ſore. After thys came Triphon agayne with yonge Antiochus, which reygned and was crowned kyng. Then there gathered vnto him all the men of warre, whom Demetrius had put away: theſe fought agaynſt Demetrius, whiche fled and turned his backe. So Triphon toke the Elephantes, and wan Antioche. And yong Antiochus wrote vnto Jonathas, ſaying: I confirme thee in thy preſthode, and make thee ruler of .iiij. countreis, that thou mayeſt be a frend of the kynges. Upon this he ſent him golde veſſels to be ſerued in, and gaue him leaue to drinke in golde, to be clothed in purple, and to weare a colar of golde. He made his brother Symon alſo captayne, from the coaſtes of Tirus vnto the borders of Egipt. Then Jonathas toke his iourney, and went thorowe the cityes beyond the water of Jordane, and all the men of warre of Siria gathered them vnto him for to helpe him. So he came vnto Aſcalon, and they of the citye receaued him honorably, and from thence wente he vnto Gaza, but they wouldе not let him in: wherfore he layed ſiege vnto it, burnyng vp and ſpoylyng the places that were about the citie. And the citezens of Gaza ſubmitted themſelues vnto Jonathas, whiche made peace with them, but toke of their ſonnes to pledge, ſente them to Jeruſalem, and went thorowe the countrey vnto Damaſcus. Now when Jonathas herd that Demetrius prynces were come into Cades (whiche is in Galilee) with a great hooſte, purpoſyng to put Demetrius out from medlyng in the realme: he came agaynſt thim, and left Simon his brother in the land: whiche came to Bethſura, and layed ſege to it a long ſeaſon, and diſconfited them. So they deſyred to haue peace wyth him, which he granted them, & afterward put them out from thence, toke the citye & ſet men to kepe it. And Jonathas with his hooſte came to the water of Geneſar, and betymes in the mornyng gat them to the playne field of Aſor. And beholde, the hooſtes of the Heathen met them in the fielde, and layed watch for them in the mountaynes: ſo that when Jonathas came agaynſt them: the other whiche were layed to watche) roſe out of their places, and fought, and they that were of Jonathas ſyde, fled euerye man: and there was not one of them left, except Mathathias the ſon of Abſalomus, and Judas the ſonne of Calphi, the captayne of the hoſt. Then Jonathas rent his clothes, layed earth vpon hys head, made his prayer, and turned agayne to them in the field: where they fought together, and he put theym to flighte. Nowe when hys owne men that were fled, ſawe this: they turned agayne vnto hym, and helped him to followe vppon all their enemyes vnto their tentes at Cades. So there were ſlayne of the Heathen the ſame daye three thouſande men, and Jonathas turned agayne to Jeruſalem.

JOnathas ſeeynge that the tyme was mete for hym, choſe certayne men and ſent them vnto Rome for to ſtablyſhe and to renue the frendeſhyp with them. He ſente letters alſo vnto Sparta, and to other places in like maner. So they wēt vnto Rome and entred into the councel, and ſayd: Jonathas the hye Prieſt and the people of the Jewes ſente vs vnto you, for to renue the olde frendeſhype and bonde of loue: Upon thys the Romaynes gaue them fre paſporte, that men ſhould leade them home into the lande of Juda peaceably. And this is the copy of the letters that Jonathas wrote vnto the Spartians. Jonathas the hye Prieſte with the elders, prieſts, and other peple of the Jewes ſende gretynge vnto the Spartians their brethren. There were letters ſente longe a go vnto Onias the hye Prieſt, from Arius, which then reygned amonge you: that ye are oure brethren, as the writynge made there vpon, ſpecifyeth. And Onias entreated the embaſſadour that was ſent honorably rably, and receaued the letters: where in there was mencion made of the bond of loue and frendshippe. But as for vs, we nede no suche wrytynges: for why? we haue the holy bookes of scrypture in our handes to oure comforte: Neuertheles, we hadde rather sende vnto you, for the renuynge of the brotherhode and frendeshyppe: leaste we shoulde be straunge vnto you: for it is longe sens the tyme that ye sente word vnto vs. Wherfore in the sacrifyces that we offer and other ceremonyes vpon the hye solemne dayes and other, we alway remember you with out ceasynge (lyke as reason is, and as it becommeth vs to thynke vpon our brethren) yea and are ryghte glad of youre prosperous honoure. And though we haue had greate troubles and warres, so that the kynges about vs haue foughtē agaynst vs: yet wold we not be greuous vnto you, nor to other of oure louers and frendes in these warres. For we haue had helpe from heauen, so that we are deliuered and our enemyes subdued. Wherfore we chose Numenius the sonne of Antiochus. and Antipater the sonne of Jason, and sente them vnto the Romaynes, for to renue the olde bonde of frendeshippe and loue with them. We commaunded them also to come vnto you to salute you, and to delyuer you oure letters, concernynge the renouacion of our brotherhode. And nowe ye shall do right well, to geue vs an answere thervnto. And this is the copy of the wrytynge, whiche Arius the kynge of Sparta sente vnto Onias. Arius kyng of the Spartians sendeth gretyng vnto Onias the hye prieste. It is foūd in writing, that the Spartians and Jewes are brethren, & come oute of the generacion of Abraham. And nowe for so much as this is come to our knowledge, ye shall do well, to wryte vnto vs of youre prosperitye. As for vs, we haue written our mind vnto you: Our catell and goodes are yours, and yours ours. These thinges haue we commaunded to be shewed vnto you. When Jonathas hearde, that Demetrius princes were come forth to fyghte agaynste him wyth a greater hoste then afore, he wente frō Jerusalem, and mette them in the land of Hemath, for he gaue them not space to come into hys owne country. And he sente spyes vnto their tentes whyche came agayne and tolde hym, that they were appointed to come vpon hym in the nyght season. Wherefore when the sunne was gone down Jonathas commaunded hys men to watche all the nyghte, and to be readye wyth wepons for to fyghte: and set watchemenne rounde aboute the hooste. But when the aduersaryes hearde that Jonathas was readye wyth hys menne to the battaile, they feared, and were afrayde in their hertes, and kindled fyres in their tentes, brake vp, and gat them awaye. Neuertheless Jonathas and hys companye knewe it not til the morynge. for they sawe the fyres bournynge. Then Jonathas followed vpon them but hee myghte not ouertake them, for they were gone ouer the water Eleutherus. So Jonathas departed vnto the Arabians (which were called Zabadei) slewe them, and tooke theyr goodes. Hee proceaded further also, and came vnto Damascus, and went through al that countrye. But Simon hys brother tooke hys iourney, and came to Ascalon & to the next stronge holdes: departyng vnto Joppa, and wanne it. For he hearde that they woulde stande of Demetrius partye: wherefore hee sette menne of warre in the Cytye, to keepe it. After thys camme Jonathas home agayne and called the elders of the people together: and deuysed wyth them for to buylde vp the stronge holdes in Jewrye, and the walles of Jerusalem, to set vp an hie wal betwixt the castell, and the Cytye, for to separate it from the city, that it myghte bee alone, and that men should nether bie nor sell in it. Vpō this they came together for to build vp the citie, & for so much as the wal vpon the broke of the weste syde called Caphetah was fallē down they repaired it: & Simō set vp Adiadah in Sephelah, and made it strong setting portes and lockes vpon it. ¶Now E when Tryphon purposed to reygne 1 mac. 11. in Asia, to be crowned, and to slay the kyng Antiochus: he was afraide that Jonathas would not suffer him, but fyght against him. Wherfore he went aboute to take Jonathas, and to kyll him. So he departed, and came vnto Bethsan. Thē went Jonathas forth agaynst him to the battel wyth forty thousand chosen men, and came vnto Bethsan also. But when Tryphon sawe that Jonathas camme wyth so great an hoste to destroy him, he was afrayde, and therfore he receaued hym honorably, commended him vnto all hys frendes, and gaue him rewardes, and comaunded his men of war to be as obedient vnto him as to him selfe. And sayde vnto Jonathas: why haste thou caused thys people to take suche trauayle, seing there is no warre betwyxte vs? Therefore send thē home agayne, and chose certayne menne to wayte vpon the, and come thou with me to Ptolomais: for I will geue it thee, wyth the other stronge holdes, menne of warre and their officers. As for me, I must departe, this is onelye F the cause of my comming. Jonathas beleued hym, and did as he sayd, putting away hys hoste which wente in to the lande of Juda. He kept but .iii. M. by hym, wherof he sent, ii. M. into Galile, and one. M. wente wyth him selfe. Now as soone as Jonathas entred into Ptolomais, the citezins sparred the gates of the citie, and toke hym, and slewe all theym wyth the swearde, that came in wyth hym.

Then sent Tryphon an hoste of fotemen and horsemen into Galile and in to the great playne fyelde, to destroye al Jonathas companye. But when they knewe that Jonathas was taken, and all they slayne that wayted vpon him: they toke counsel together and came forth ready to the battel. So when they whych followed vpon thē, sawe that it was a matter of lyfe, they turned backe againe. As for the other they wente into the lande of Juda peaceably, and bewayled Jonathas, and them that were wyth him rygh sore. And Israel made greate lamentation. Then al the heathen that wer round about them, sought to destroye theim. For they sayd: nowe haue they no captayne, nor anye manne to helpe them. Therfore let vs ouercome them and rote out their name from amongs menne.

NOwe when Simon hearde
B that Tryphon gathered a gret hoste, to come into the land of Juda, and to destroye it: and sawe that the people was in greate fearefulnes and care: hee came vp to Jerusalem, and gathered the people together, and gaue theym exhortation, sayinge: Yee knowe what great battels I and my brethren and my fathers house haue fought for the lawe and the Sanctuarye, and what maner of troubles we haue sene: through occasion whereof sake, and I am lefte alone. And nowe let not me spare myne owne lyfe in any maner of trouble, for I am no better then my brethren, but will auenge my people and the Sanctuarye, oure childzen and our wyues: for al the heathen are gathered together, to destroy vs of verye malice. ¶ These woordes ¶ hertes of the people wer kindled together, so that they cried with a loude voyce, saying: Thou shalt be our captayne in steade of Judas and Jonathas thy brethren, order thou our battel, and whatsoeuer thou commaundest vs, we shal do it. So he gathered all the men of warre, making haste to fy-B nish al the walles of Jerusalē, which he made stronge round aboute. Then sente he Jonathas the son of Absalomus wyth a freshe hoste vnto Joppa, which draue them oute that were in the castel, and remayned there hym selfe. Tryphon also remoued from Ptolomais wyth a greate armye to come in to the land of Juda, and Jonathas with him in ward. And Simon pitched hys tentes at Adda before the playne fyelde. But when Tryphon knew,

knewe that Simon stode by in stead of his brother Jonathas, and that he wolde warre againste him: he sente messaungers vnto him, saying: wher as we haue kepte Jonathas thy brother, it is for mony that he is owyng in the kinges accompte, concernynge the busines that he had in hand. Wher fore send nowe an. C. talentes of syluer and hys two sonnes for suertye, that when he is letten forth, he shall not forsake vs: and we shall send hym agayne. Neuertheless Simon knew that hee dyssembled in hys wordes: yet commaunded he the mony and chil dren to be deliuered vnto hym: leaste he shoulde be the greater ennemye agaynste the people of Israel: and say, because he sent him not the mony and the children: therefore is Jonathas C dead. So Simon sente him the chyldren and an hundreth talentes, but he dyssembled, and would not let Jonathas go. Afterwarde came Triphon into the land to destroye it, and went round about by the waye that leadeth vnto Ador. But whersoeuer they went, thyther went Simon and hys hoaste also. Nowe they that were in the castel, sent messangers vnto Triphon, that he should make haste to com by the wildernes, and to send thē victualles. And Triphon made readye all his horsemenne, to come that same nyghte. Neuertheles it was a verye greate snowe, so that hee came not in Galaadithim. And when he drew nie Baschama, he slue Jonathas and his sonnes there, and then tourned for to go home into hys owne lande. Then sent Simon for to fette hys brothers dead coarse, and buryed it in Modyn hys fathers Citye. So al Israel bewayled hym with great lamentation and mourned for him very longe. And Simon made vppon the sepulchre of hys father and hys brethren, a buylding hye to loke vnto, of free stone behynde and before, and set vp seuen pillers one againste another (for his father, his mother, and four brethren) & set gret pillers round about & armes vpon them for a perpetuall memory, & carued ships beside the armes: that they myght be sene of men sayling in the sea. Thys sepulchre whiche hee made at Modin, stādeth yet vnto this day. Nowe as Triphon went forth to walke with the yonge Antiochus he slewe hym trayterously, and reygned in his steade, crowned hym selfe kynge of Asia, and dyd muche euyll in the land. Simon also built vp the castels in Jewrye, makinge thē stronge with hye towres, great walles, portes and lockes, and layed vp vitayles in the stronge holdes. And Symon chose certayne men, and sent theym to kyng Demetrius: to desyre hym that he would discharge the lande from al bondage, for Triphon had spoyled it very sore. Wherupon Demetrius the kyng answered him, and wrote vnto him after this maner. Demetrius the kynge sendeth gretinge vnto Simon the hye priest hys frend, with the elders and people of the Jewes. The goldē crowne and precious stone that ye sent vnto vs, haue we receued: and are readye to make a stedfaste peace with you: yea, and to write vnto our officers, for to release you, concernyng the thynges wherin we made you frē: and the appointment that wee make with you, shalbe fyrme and stable.
D Jose. ca. 10. li. 13.
The stronge holdes whiche yee haue builded, shalbe your owne. As for any ouersyghte or faute committed vnto this day, we forgiue it: & the crowne taxe that ye oughte vs also. And wher as was any other trybute in Jerusalem, it shal nowe bee no trybute: and loke who are mete among you to be in our courte, let thē be written vp, that there may be peace betwixt vs. Thus the yocke of the Heathen was taken from Israel in the hundred and seuētenth yere. And the people of the Jewes began to write in their letters, & and acts on thys maner. In the first yere of Simon the hye priest & prince of the Jewes, In those daies went Simon vnto Gaza, and besieged it round about, where he set vp ordynance of warre. And wanne a towre which he toke. the towɛr leapte into the citye, which was in a great feare: In so much that the people of the citye rente their clothes, and clymed vp vpon the walles with their wyues and childzen, beseechyng Simō to be at one with them, ✠ sayinge: Dealewarde vs not after our wickednes, but be gracious vnto vs, and we shall doo thee seruyce. Then Symon for very pitye would fyghte nomoze agaynst them, but put theym out of the citye, and cansed the houses (wherin the ymages were) to be clensed, and so entred the citie with Psalmes of prayse, geuynge thankes vnto the Lozde. So when he had caste all abhominations out of the citie, he set such mē in it as kept the lawe of God, and made the citye stronge, and buylded a dwellynge place for hym selfe. Now, when they in the castel at Jerusalē wer kept so straytly, that they coulde not come forthe into the countrey, and myght neyther bye nor sell: they were very hungry, and manye of thē famished vnto death: In so much that they besoughte Symon to be at one with theym, whiche he graunted them. So he put them out frō thence, and clensed the castell from fylthines. And vpon the .xxiii. daye of the second moneth in the .Clxxi. yere they entred into it wyth thankesgeuyng & braunches of palme trees, with harpes, crowdes, cymbals & lutes, singing psalmes, and songes of prayse vnto God, for that the great enemie of Israell was ouercome. And Simon ordeyned that the same day sholde be kept euery yere in gladnesse, and made strong the hyll of the temple that was beside the castell, where he dwelt hym selfe wyth his company. Simon also perceauing that John hys sonne was a mightye man of armes, made hym captayne of all the hostes, and causeb him to dwell at Gaza.

¶ The .xiiii. Chapter.

IN the .Clxxii. yere gathered ✠ king Demetrius his host, and departed vnto Media, to get hym helpe for to fyghte agaynste Tryphon. Nowe when Arsaces the king of Persia and Media hearde, that Demetrius was entred within hys borders, he sente one of his princes, to take him alyue: and to bryng hym vnto hym. So he went and slew Demetrius host, toke hym selfe, broughte hym to Arsaces which kept him in warde. And all the lande of Juda was in reste, so longe as Symon lyued: for he soughte the wealth of hys people, therefore were they glad to haue hym for their ruler, and to do hym worshyp alwaye. Symon wan the citye of Joppa also for an hauen towne, and made it an entraunce into the Iles of the sea. He enlarged the borders of hys people, and conquered them more land: He gathered vp manye of their people that were prisoners: he had the dominion of Gaza, Bethsura, and the castell, which he clensed from fylthynes, and there was no man that resisted hym: So that euery man tilled his ground in peace, the lande of Juda, and the trees gaue their fruite and encrease. The elders sat all in iudgemente, and toke their deuice for the wealth of the lande: the ponge men put on worshyp and harnesse vpon them. He prouided vitailes for the cities, and made goodlye stronge holdes of them: so that the fame of hys worshyp was spoken of vnto the ende of the worlde. For he made peace thorowout the land, and Israell was full of mirthe and ioye. Euerye man sat vnder hys vyne and syggetrees, and there was no man to fraye them away. Ther was none in the lande to fighte agaynst theym, for then the kynges were ouercome. He helped those that were in aduersitye among his people, he was diligent to see the lawe kept: as for such as were vngodlye and wycked, he toke theym away. He set vp the Sanctuarye, and encreased the holy vessels of the temple. When the Romaines and Spartians had gotten worde, that Jonathas was dead they were ryght sory. But when they hearde that Symon his brother was made hye Priest in his steade, and how he had wonne the land agayne with the cities in it: they congregation at Jerusalem. And this is the coppe of the letters, that the Spartians sente: The Senatours and citezens of Sparta sende greting vnto Simon the great Priest, with the elders, priestes, and the other people of the Jewes their brethren. Whē your ambassadors that were sent vnto oure people, certifyed vs of youre worshyppe, honoure and prosperous wealthe: we were glad of their commynge, and haue written the errande which they spake before the councell of the people: namely, that Numenius the sonne of Antiochus, and Antipater the sonne of Jason the Jewes ambassadors are come vnto vs, for to renue the olde frendshyppe with vs.

Upon this the people consented, that B the men should be honorablye intrea-ted, and that the copy of their errannd should be written in the special bokes of the people, for a perpetuall memory vnto the Spartians: yea, and that we should sende a coppe of the same vnto Simon the greate priest. After thys, dyd Symon sende Numenius vnto Rome, with a golden shyeld of a thou sande pound weyght, to confyrme the frendeshyp with them: whiche when the Romaynes vnderstode, they sayd: What thankes shall we recompence agayne vnto Simon and his childrē?
For he hath stablyshed hys brethren, and ouercome the enemyes of Israel. wherefore they graunted hym to be free. And all thys wrote the Jewes in tables of brasse, and nayled it vnto the pyllers vppon the mounte Sion.
The coppe of the writynge is thys.

in the .Clxxii. yeare in the thirde yere of Simon the hye Priest, in the great congregacion of the priestes, rulers of the people, and elders of the countrey at Asarame, were these wordes open-lye declared. For somuch as ther was C much war in our lande, therfore Symon the sonne of Mathathias (come of the childrē of Jareb) & his brethrē, put them selues in peryl, and resysted the enemies of their people: that their Sanctuary and lawe myght be main teyned, and did their people great wor shyp: Jonathas in lyke maner, after he had gouerned hys people, and bene their hie priest, died: & lieth buried beside hys elders. After that wold theyr enemyes haue troden theyr holy thin-ges vnder fote, destroied their land, & vtterly walled their sanctuary. Thē Simon withstode them, & fought for his people, spēt much of his owne mo ney, weaponed the valeant men of his people, gaue thē wages, made strong the cities of Juda, with Bethsura lieth vpō the borders of Jewry (wher the ordeinaunce of their enemies laye sometime) and set Jewes there for to kepe it. Yee made faste Joppa also F which lyeth vpō the sea, & Gaza borderth vpō Azotus, (where the enemies dwelt afore) & there he set Jewes to kepe it: & whatsoeuer was mete for subduing of the aduersaries, he layed he therin. Now when the people sawe the noble actes of Simon, & what wor shyp he purposed to do for thē, his god ly behautour, & faithfulnes, which he kept vnto thē, & how he sought by all waies the wealth of his people, because he did al thys, therfore they chose him to be their prince, and hie priest. And in his time they prospered wel by him so that the Heathen were taken oute of their lande: and they whyche were in the Cytye of Dauyd at Jerusalem in the castell (where they wente oute, and defyled all thynges that were aboute the Sanctuarye, and dyd great harme vnto clenelines) and Simon put men of the Jewes in it, for the defence of the land, and Cytye, and set vp the walles of Jerusalem. G And king Demetrius confirmed him in his hie priesthode, made hym hys frend, and did him greate worshippe.
For hee hearde that the Romaynes called the Jewes their frendes, lo-uers and brethren, how we honorablye they receiued Simons ambassadors:

howe the Jewes and prieſtes conſen ted, that he ſhould be their prince and hye Prieſt perpetually (till God ray= ſed vp the true prophete) and that he ſhould be their captaine to care for the Sanctuary, and to ſet officers vppon the workes therof, ouer the land: ouer the weapons, ouer the houſes of de= fence to make prouiſion for the holye thynges, and to be obeyed of euerye man, and all the writynges of the lande to be made in hys name, that he ſholde be clothed in purple and golde, and that it ſholde be lawfull for none of the people nor prieſtes to breke any of theſe thynges, to withſtande hys wordes, nor to call anye congregacion in the land without him: that he ſhold be clothed in purple, and weare a col= lar of golde: And if there were anye whiche diſobeyed or brake this ordi= naunce, that he ſhoulde be puniſhed.
So all the people conſented to alowe Simon, and to do accordyng to theſe wordes: Simon alſo him ſelfe toke it vpon him, and was content to be the hye Prieſt, the captayne and prynce of the Jewes and prieſtes, and to go= uerne them all. And they commaun= ded to make this writynge in tables of braſſe, and faſten it vnto the cōpaſſe of the Sanctuarye in an open place': and laye vp a coppye of the ſame in the treaſury, that Simon and his poſte= ritye might haue it.

The.xv. Chapter.

¶ MOreouer kynge Antiochus the ſōne of Demetrius ſent letters from the Iles of the ſea, vnto Simon the hye prieſte and prynce of the Jewes, and to all the people, conteining theſe wordes: An= tiochus the kynge ſendeth gretynge vnto Simon the hye prieſt and to the people of the Jewes. For ſo much, as certayne wicked men haue gotten the kyngdome of oure progenitours, I am purpoſed to chalenge the realme agayne, and to reſtore it to the olde eſtate. wherefore, I haue gathered a great hoſte and made shyppes of war, that I may go thorowe the countrey, and be auenged of them whiche haue deſtroyed our land, and waſted many cityes in my realme. And therefore now I make the free alſo from all the tributes, wherof all kynges my pro= genitours haue diſcharged thee: and from other cuſtomes (wherfrom they haue releaſed thee) whatſoeuer they be: yea, I geue thee leaue to ſmite mo= ney of thyne owne within thy lande.
As for Jeruſalem, I will that it be holye and free: and all the weapons and houſes of defēce, which thou haſt buylded, and kepeſt in thyne handes, ſhalbe thyne. Where as any thynge is or ſhall be owynge vnto the kynge, I forgeue it thee, from this tyme forthe for euermore. And when we haue ob= tayned our kingdome, we ſhall do the thy people and the temple great wor= ſhyp: ſo that your honour ſhalbe kno= wen thorowout the whole world. In the. C. lxxiiii. yeare went Antiochus into his fathers land, and all the men of warre came together vnto hym, ſo that fewe were left with Triphon.
So the king Antiochus folowed vp= pon him, but he fled vnto Dora, whi= che lyeth by the ſea ſyde: for he ſawe that there was myſchefe cōmyng vn= to him, and that his hoſt had forſaken him. Then came Antiochus vnto Do ra with an. C. and twenty thouſande men of armes vpon foote, and eyghte thouſand horſemen. So he compaſſed the citye round about, and the ſhippes came by the ſea. Thus they vexed the city by land and by water, in ſo much that they ſuffered noman to go in nor out. In the meane ſeaſon came Nu= menius (and they that had bene with hym) from the citye of Rome, hauyng letters wrytten vnto the kynges and prouinces, wherein were conteyned theſe wordes: Lucius the mayre of Rome ſendeth gretynge vnto Ptolo= my the kyng. The Imbaſſadoures of the Jewes our frendes beynge ſente from Simon the hye prieſt, and from the people of the Jewes, came vnto vs for to renewe the old frendſhyp and bond of loue, & brought a ſhild of gold weying a thouſande pounde, whyche we were content to receaue of them.

Wherfore

wherfore we thoght it good to write vnto the kynges and prouinces, to do them no harme, nor to take parte agaynste theym, their cityes nor countries, neither to mayntayne their enemyes agaynst them. If there be anye wycked persons therefore fled frome their countrey vnto you, deliuer them vnto Symon the hye prieste, that he may punishe them accordyng to their owne land. The same wordes wrote the Romaynes also vnto Demetrius the kynge, to Attalus, Araba, Arsaces and to all regions: as Sansanes, to them of Sparta, Delo, Mido, Sidon Caria, Samos, Pamphilia, Licia, Halicarnassum, and to the Rhodes, to Faselis, Coo, Sida, Arado, Gortina, Gnydum, to Cipres and Cyren. And of euery letter they sent a copy to Simon the hie priest, and to the people of D the Jewes. So Antiochus the kyng brought his hooste vnto Doza the seconde tyme to take it: where he made diuerse ordinaunce of warre, and kept Eriphon in, that he shoulde not come forth. Then sente Simon to Antiochus two thousande chosen men to helpe hym with golde, syluer and other pleteous geare: Neuertheles, he would not receaue them, but brake all the couenaunt whiche he made with Symon afore, and withdrewe hym selfe from hym. He sente Athenobius also a frende of hys vnto Simon, for to reason with him, saying: Ye withholde fro me Joppa and Gaza (with the castell that is at Jerusalem) whiche are cities of my realme, whose borders ye haue destroyed and done great euyll in the land, hauyng the domination in many other places of my kingdome. Wherfore delyuer nowe the cities whiche he haue taken, with the tributes of the places that ye haue rule vppon without the borders of Jewry: Or els geue me fiue hundred talentes of syluer: yea, & for the harme that ye haue done in the cityes, and for the tributes of the same, other fyue hundred talētes. If no, we shall come E and fyght against you. So Athenobius the kynges frend came to Jerusalem, and when he sawe the great worship and honoure of Simon in golde, siluer, and so great plenty of ornamentes: he maruayled and told Simon as the king commaunded him: Then answered Simon, and sayde vnto hym:
* As for vs: we haue neither taken other mens landes, nor withholdē thē, Jud. 11 C but onely our fathers heritage, which oure enemyes had vnryghteously in possession a certayne time. This heritage of our fathers haue we chalēged in processe of tyme. And wher as thou complainest concerninge Joppa and Gasa, they dyd greate harme to oure people and in our lande, yet wyll we geue an hundred talentes for thē. Neuertheles, Athenobius answered him not one woorde, but tourned agayne wrothfully vnto the kinge, and tolde him al these wordes, and the great dignitye of Symon, with al that he had sene, and the kinge was very angrye. In the meane tyme fled Eriphon by shyp vnto Dorthosaida. Then ỳ king made Cendebius captayne of the sea coste, and gaue him an hoste of footemen and horsemenne, commaundinge him to remoue the host toward Jewrye, and to build vp the citie of Cedrō to make vp the portes, and to war agaynste the people of the Jewes. As for the king him selfe: he folowed vppon Eriphon. So Cendebius came vnto Jamnia, and began to vexe the people, to tread doun Jewry, to take 1. ma. 16 the people prisoners, to slay them, and
* to builde vp Cedron: where he sette horsmen and other men of warre, that they might com forth and go through the stretes of Jewry, like as the king had commaunded him.

¶ The. xvi. Chapter.

THen came John vp from * Ga A za, and tolde Symon hys fa- 1 mac. 3 ther, what Cendebius had don among theyr people. Upon this, called Symon two of hys eldest sonnes, Judas and John, and sayd vnto them: I and my brethren, and my fathers house, haue euer frome oure youthe youth vp vnto thys daye foughten a-gayuſte the ennemyes of Iſraell, and God gaue vs good fortune to deliuer Iſraell ofte tymes. And nowe for ſo much as I am olde, be ye in ſteade of me and my brother, to go forth & fight for oure people and the helpe of God be with you. So he choſe. xx. M. figh ting men of the countrye, with horſe men alſo, which went forth agayuſte Cendebius, and reſted at Modin. In the morning they aroſe, and went into the playne fielde: and beholde, a myghty great hoſte came againſt thē, both of footemen and horſemē. Now was ther a water broke betwixt thē, and Iohn remoued the hoſt towarde them. And when he ſawe that the peo ple was afrayde to go ouer the water brooke, he went ouer fyrſte hym ſelfe:

and the men ſeing hys, folowed him.
Then Iohan ſette hys horſmenne and B footemen in order, the one by the other, for their enemyes horſemen wer very many. But when they blewe vp the prieſtes trompettes, Cendebius fled with hys hoſte, whereof many were ſlayne, and the remnaunt gat them to their ſtrong holde. Iudas alſo Iohās brother was wounded at the ſame tyme. And Iohn folowed ſtill vppon the ennemies, til hee came to Cedron, mac. 15 which he builded. The enemies fled alſo vnto the towres that were in the feldes of Azotus, and thoſe did Iohn burne vp. Thus there were ſlaine. xi. thouſand men of them, and Iohn turned agayn peceably into Iewry. And in the feld of Iericho was Ptolomy the ſonne of Abobus made captayne: which becauſe he had aboundance of ſiluer, and gold (for he had maried the daughter of Simon the hie prieſte) waxed proud in his mind, and thoght to conquer the land, ymagining falſe-hed againſte Simon and hys ſonnes, to deſtroye them. Nowe as Simon was going about throughe the cities that were in the country of Iewrye, and caring for theym: he came downe to Iericho with Mathathias & Iudas hys ſonnes, in the. C. xxvii. yere in the. xii. monthe called Sabat. Thē Ptolomye the ſonne of Abobus recei-ued theym (but with dyſceate) into a ſtronge houſe of hys, called Doth, C which he had builded, wher he made them a banckette. So when Simon and hys ſonnes were mery and dron ken wel, Ptolomy ſtode vp with his men (whom he hadde hyd there) and tooke their weapons, entred into the banket houſe, and ſlew Simon with hys twoe ſonnes, and certayne of hys ſeruauntes. Such great vnfaythfułnes dyd Ptolomye in Iſrael, and re-compenced euil for good. Then wrot thys Ptolomy the ſame vnto Kynge Antiochus, requiringe hym, that hee ſhould ſend him an hoſte to helpe him and ſo he ſhould deliuer him the land with the cities & tributes of the ſame.
He ſent other men alſo vnto Gaza, for to take Iohn: and wrote vnto the cap taines to come to him, and he ſhoulde geue them ſiluer, gold and rewardes.
And to Ieruſalem hee ſente other, to D take it, and the Sanctuarye. Thē ran ther one before, and told Iohn in Ga za, that hys father and hys brethren were ſlaine, and howe that Ptolomy had ſent to ſlaye hym alſo. whē Iohn hearde thys, he was ſore abaſhed, and layed handes of them that were come to deſtroye hym, and ſlewe theym, for he knewe, that they went about to kil him. As for other thinges concerning Iohn: of hys warres, of hys noble actes (wherein he behaued him ſelfe manfully) of the buyldyng of walles whiche he made, and other of hys de-des: They are writtē in the chronicles of hys prieſthode, from the tyme forth that he was made hye prieſte after hys father.

THe bretherne of the Iewes, which be at Ierusalem, and in the Lande of Iewry, wysshe vnto those bretheren of the Iewes, that are thorowe out Egypt: good fortune, heith, and peace. What tyme as Demetrius reigned in the. B the people that was at Ierusalē and in Iewry, the counsel and Iudas himselfe, sente this wholsome salutation vnto Aristobulus kynge Ptolomees maister, whiche came of the generation of the anoynted Priestes: and to the Iewes that were in Egypte: In so muche as God hathe deliuered vs from great perylles, we thanke hym highly: In that we resisted so mygh-ty a King. And why? he brought men out of Persis by heapes, to fyght against vs, and the holy citie. For as he-was in Persis (namely, the Captaine with the great hoofte) he perished in the temple of Naneas, beeyng diceyued thorowghe the deuice of Naneas prieftes. For as he was purpofed to haue dwelt there, Antiochus and his frendes came thyther, to receyue muche money for a dowrye. Soo when Naneas Prieftes hadde laide foorthe the money, hee entred wyth a fmalle companye, into the compaffe of the temple, and fo they fhutte the Tem-C ple. Nowe whenne Antiochus entred by opening the preuy entrance of the temple, the prieftes ftoned the captayne to death, hewed them in pieces that were wyth hym, fmoate of theyr heades, and threwe them oute. In all thynges God be prayfed, which hathe delyuered the wycked into oure handes. Where as we are nowe purpofed to kepe the purification of the temple vpon the. xxv. day of the moneth Cafof the fyre, whyche was geuen vs, when Nehemias offered, after that he had fet vp the temple and the aultare. For what tyme as oure fathers were ledde away vnto Perfis, the prieftes (whyche then fought the honoure of God) tooke the fyre preuyly from the Aulter, and hyd it in a valleye, where as was a deepe dreye pyt: and therein they kepte it, fo that the place was vnknowen vnto euery man. Nowe after many yeares, when it pleafed God that Nehemias fhould be fent frome Leui. 6.& the kynge of Perfia, • hee fente the 10.a.16.c

(whych had hyd the fyre) to feeke it. And as they tolde vs, they founde no fyre, but thicke water. Then cōmanded he thē to drawe it vp, & to brynge it him, & ỹ offrings withall. Now whē the facrifices wer laid on & ordred, the prieft Nehemias cōmanded to fprynkle them & the wod with water. Whē this was don, & the time com that the Sun fhone, which afore was hid in ỹ cloude: ther was a great fyre kindled. In fomuche ỹ euery man meruailed.

Nowe

Nowe all the Prieſtes prayed, whyle the ſacrifice was a making. Jonathas prayed fyrſte, and the other gaue aunſwer. And Nehemias prayer was after this maner: O Lord God, maker of all thynges, thou fearefull & ſtrong, thou ryghteous and mercyfull, thou that art onely a gracious kyng, onely liberall, onely iuſt. Almyghty and euerlaſtyng, thou that deliuereſt Iſrael from all trouble, thou that haſte choſen the fathers, and halowed them receiue the offring for the whole people of Iſrael, preſerue thyn owen portion, and halowe it, gather thoſe together, that are ſcatterd abroade from vs: deliuer theym that are vnder the Heathens bondage, looke vpon them which are deſpiſed and abhorred, that the Hethen may know and ſe, how that thou art our GOD. Punyſhe them that oppreſſe, and proudely put vs to diſhonour. Set thy people agayne in thy holy place, * lyke as Moſes hathe ſpoken. And the Prieſtes ſong pſalmes of thankeſgeuyng, ſo long as the ſacrifice endured. Now when the ſacrifice was brente, Nehemias commaunded the great ſtones to be ſprinkled with the reſt of the water. * Whiche whenne it was doone, there was kindeled a flame of theim alſo: but it was conſumed, through the light, that ſhyned from the altar. So when this matter was knowen, it was tolde the kyng of Perſia, that in the place wher the Prieſts which were led away, had hyd fyre, there appered water in the ſtede of fyre: and that Nehemias and hys company had purified the ſacrifices wythall. Then the kynge conſyderyng and pondryng the matter diligently, made hym a Temple to proue the thyng that was done. And when he found it ſo in dede, he gaue the prieſtes many gyftes and dyuers rewardes: yea, he toke them with his owne hande, and gaue them. And Nehemias called the ſame place Nephthar, whiche is as much to ſaye, as a clenſyng: but many men call it Nephi.

The.ii. Chapter.

IT is found alſo in the wrytinges of Jeremie the Prophete, that he commaunded theym, which were caried away, to take fyre, * as it is ſaid afore. * He commaunded theym alſo, that they ſhoulde not forget the lawe and commaundementes of the Lord, and that they ſhould not erre in theyr myndes, when they ſee ymages of ſiluer and gold with their ornamentes. Theſe and ſuche other thynges commanded he theim, and exhorted them, that they ſhould not lette the lawe of God go out of their herts. It is writen alſo, howe the Prophete (at the cõmandement of God) charged them to take the tabernacle and the Arke with them: and he wente forthe vnto the mountayne, where Moyſes clymed vp, * and ſawe the heritage of god. And when Jeremie came there, he found an open caue, wherin he layde the Tabernacle, the Arke, and the alter of incenſe, and ſo ſtopped the hole. There came certayn men together alſo folowyng hym, to marke the place, but they coulde not fynde it. Whyche whenne Jeremye perceyued, he rebooued theym, Sayenge: As for that place, it ſhall bee vnknowen, vntyll the tyme that GOD gather hys people togyther agayne, and receyue theym vnto mercye. Thenne ſhall GOD ſhewe theym theſe thynges, and the maieſtie of the LORDE ſhall appeare, and the clowde alſo, lyke as it was ſhewed vnto Moyſes: and lyke as whenne Salomon deſyred, that the place myght bee ſanctifyed, and it was ſhewed hym. therfore is it consumed. In like maner Salomon kept the dedication (or halowyng) eight days. In the Annotations and writyngs of • Jeremy, wer these thynges put also: and howe he made a librarie, and howe he gathered out of all countreis, the bookes of the Prophets, of Dauid, the Epistles of the Kynges, and of the presentes. Euen so Judas also, toke what he learned by experience of warre, and suche thynges as hath happened vnto vs, he gathered them altogether, and so wee haue them by vs: If ye desyre to haue the same, send som body to fetch them vnto you. Whereas we then are about to celebrate the purification, we haue writen vnto you. Therfore, ye shall doo well, yf ye kepe the same dayes.

We hope also, that the God (whyche delyuered hys people, and gaue them all the heritage, kyngdom, priesthode, and Sanctuarye, • that he promysed them in the lawe) shall shortly haue mercy vppon vs, and gather vs togyther, from vnder the heauen into hys holy place: for he hath saued vs from great perils, & hath clensed the place. As concernyng Machabeus, and hys brethren, the purificatron of the great temple: The dedication of the aultar: yea, and of the warres that concerne noble Antiochus, and • Eupator hys soonne, of the shynynges that camme downe frome heauen, vppon those, whyche manfully defended the Iewes. For though they were but few, yet defended they the wholle Lande, droue away the ennemies hoste, recouered agayne the Temple, that was spoken of thorroughout all the worlde: delyuered the Citie: doyng they best that the lawe of the Lord, which was put downe, myght with all tranquillitie be restored agayn vnto the Lorde that was so mercyfull vnto them. As touchynge Jason also of Cyrene, wee haue vndertaken compendiously to bryng into one boke, the thynges that were comprehended of hym in fyue. stories and actes (and that because of so dyuers matters) haue vndertaken so to comprehende the storyes: that suche as are dysposed to reade, myght haue pleasure and pastime therin: and that they whyche are diligent in such thynges, myghte the better thinke vpon theym, yea, and that whosoeuer reade theym, myght haue profit therby. Neuertheless, we our selues that haue medled with this matter for the shortening of it, haue taken no small labour, but great diligence, watchinges and trauayle. Lyke as they that make a feaste, wouide fayne do other menne pleasure: Euen so we also (for many mens sakes) are very well content to take the labour, where as we maye shortly comprehend, the thinges that other mē haue truly writtē. For hee that buildeth an house a newe, must prouide for many thinges, to the whole building: but he that paynteth it afterwarde, seketh but onely what is comly, mete and conuenient to garnish it withal: Euen so do we also in lyke maner. And why? he that begynneth to wryte a storye for the fyrste, must with his vnderstanding gather the matter together, set hys woordes in order, and diligently seke out of euerye parte. But he that afterwarde wyl shorten it, vseth fewe woordes, and toucheth not the matter at the largest: Let this be sufficient for a Prologe, nowe wil we begin to shewe the matter: for it is but a folysh thinge to make a long Prologe, and to be short in the storye it self.

Neuertheiesse, when he might not o-then was chefe Lorde in Celosyria and Phenices) and told him, that the treasury in Jerusalem was ful of innumerable money, and howe that the common goods (which belonged not vnto the offerynges) were exceading great also: yea, and howe it were possible, that al these myght come vnder the kinges power. Now when Ap-polonius had shewed the king of the monye, as it was tolde him: the kyng called for Heliodorus hys steward, & sent him wyth a commaundement, to bring him the same money. Immedi-atlye Heliodorus tooke hys iourney, but vnder a colour, as though he wold go through Celosiria & Phenices, to visit the cities, but hys purpose was to fulfil the kyngs pleasure. So when he cam to Jerusalē, & was louingly re ceiued of the hie preest into the cuy: he tolde what was determined, concerning the money, and shewed the cause of hys comminge: he asked also if it were so in dede. Then the hye preeste told him, that there was suche money layed vp for the vpholding of wydo-wes and fatherlesse chyldren, & howe a certayne of it belonged vnto Hyrca-nus Tobias a noble man: and that of the money (which that wicked Symon had bewrayed) there were foure hundred talentes of siluer, and .ii. hun other people also came oute of their houses by heapes vnto the common prayer, beause the place was lyke to cam together through ỹ stretes with heapye clothes aboute their brestes.

The virgins also that were kept in, ran to Onias, some in the walles, other some loked out of the windowes yea, they all helde vp their handes toscourged hym of bothe the sydes, and gaue hym many stripes without ceasyng. • With that fell Heliodorus sodenly vnto ẏ ground. So they toke hym vp (beyng compassed about with great darknes) and bare hym out vpon a biere. Thus he that came with so many runners and men of warre, into the sayd Treasory, was borne out where as no myght helpe him: and so the power of God was manyfest and knowen. He laye styll domb also, by the power of god destitute of all hope, and syke. And they prayed the Lorde that he had shewed his power vppon his place and temple, whiche a lyttle afore was full of feare and trouble: and that thorow the reuelation of the almyghty Lorde, it was fylled wyth ioy and gladnesse. Then certain of Heliodorus frendes prayed Onias, that in all the haste he wold call vpon god, to graunt hym his lyfe, whiche was geuing vp the ghost. So the hie priest considerynge the matter, and leste the kyng should suspecte, that the Iewes had done Heliodorus somme euyll: he offred an helth offring for hym. Now when the hye priest had obteyned hys petition, the same yong men in ẏ same clothyng appeared, and stoode beside Heliodorus, saying: Thanke Onias the Hye priest, for • for his sake hathe the Lord graunted thee thy lyfe: therfore, seing that god hath scurged thee, geue him prayse and thankes, & shewe euery manne his myghte and power. And when thei had spoken these wordes, they appered no more. So Heliodorus offered vnto God, & made great vowes vnto hym, whiche had graunted hym his life, thanked Onias, toke hys host, and went agayn to the king. Then testified hee vnto euery man of the great workes of God, that he had sene with his eyes. And whenne the kynge asked Heliodorus, who were mete to be sent yet ones again to Ierusalē, he sayd: If thou hast an enemy or aduersary vnto thy realme, sende hym thyther, and thou shalt haue hym punished, if he escape wyth hys lyfe: for in that place (no dout) there is a speMac. 3. cial power and working of God. For hee that dwelleth in heauen, visiteth and defendeth that place: and all that come to do it harme, he punisheth and plagueth them. This is now the matter concernynge Heliodorus, and the kepyng of the treasory at Ierusalem.

THis Simon now • (of whom we spake afore) beeynge a bewrayer of the moneye, and of hys owne naturall countrey, reported the worste of Onias: as thoughe he had moued Heliodorus vnto this, and as though he had ben a brynger vp of euil. Thus was he not ashamed to cal him an enemy of the realme that was so faythfull an ouerseer and defender of the Citie, and of his people: ye, and so feruente in the lawe of God. But when the malice of Simon increased so farre, that thorowghe hys frendes, there were certayne manslaughters committed: Onias considered the peryll that myght come thorowghe thys stryfe, and howe that Appollonius, (namely the chiefe Lord in Celosiria, and Phenices (was all set vppon tyranny, and Simons malice increased the same: he gat hym to the kyng, not as an accuser of the Citesyns, but as one that by himself intēded the cōmon wealth of the whole multitude. For he sawe it was not possible to lyue in peace, neither Simon to leue of from hys foolyshnesse, except the kyng did looke thereto. But after the deathe of Seleucus, when Antiochus (whiche is called the noble) tooke the kyngedome: Iason, the brother of Onias laboured to be hye priest. For he came vnto the kyng, and promised him thre hundrethe and .ix. talentes of syluer, and of the other rentes .lxxx. talentes. Besides this he promised hym yet an C. & fifty, if he might haue the scholé of the children, and that he might call them of Ierusalē, Antiochians. Whiche when the kyng had graunted, and he had gotten the superiorite, hee beganne immediatly to drawe his kinsmenne to the custome of the Heathen, put put downe the thinges that the Jewes had ſet vp of loue, by John the father of Eupolemus whyche was ſent ambaſſatoure vnto Rome, for to make the bond of frendſhyp and loue. He put downe all the Jewes and Libertyes of the Jewes, and ſet vp the wicked ſtatutes. He durſt make a high ryng ſcole vnder the caſtell, & ſet fayre yonge men to learne the matters of whores & brothels. This was nowe the begynnyng of the heathenyſh and ſtraunge conuerſacion, brought in thorowe the vngracious & vnheard wickednes of Jaſon, whiche ſhoulde not be called a prieſt, but an vngodly perſon. Inſo much that the prieſtes wer nowe no more occuppyed about the ſeruice of the aulter, but deſpiſed the temple, regarded not the ceremonyes: yea, gaue their diligence to learne to fight, to wraſtle, to leape, to daunce, and to put at the ſtone, not ſetting by the honoure of the fathers, but lyked the glorye of the Grekes beſte of all: for the whiche they ſtroue perpiouſly, and were gredye to folowe their ſtatutes, yea their luſte was in all thynges to be lyke them, which afore were their enemyes and deſtroyers. Theſe wer kept enerye fyfthye yeare.

What tyme as the * Olympiades ſportes were played at Tyrus (the kinge him ſelfe beynge preſente) thys vngracious Jaſon ſent wicked men, bearynge frome theym of Jeruſalem (which nowe wer called Antiochias) iiii.C. drachmas of ſyluer for an offering to Hercules. Theſe hadthey that carted them deſired them vnder ſuche a faſhion, as though they ſhoulde not haue ben offred but beſtowed to other vſes. Neuertheles, he that ſente them ſente theym to the intente that they ſhould be offred vnto Hercules. But becauſe of thoſe that were preſente, they were geuen as to the makyng of ſhyppes. And Appolinus the ſonne of Meleus was ſet into Egipt becauſe of the noble men of kynge Ptolomye Philometor. Nowe when Antiochus perceaued that he was put oute from medlyng in the realme, he ſought hys owne profite, departed frome thence, came to Joppa, and then to Jeruſalē, where he was honorably receyued of Jaſon, and of the citie, & was brought in with torche light, and with greate prayſe: and ſo he turned his hoſt vnto Phenices. After .iii. yere Jaſon ſent E Menelaus, the aforeſayde Symons 1.ma.4 q brother, to beare the money vnto the kyng, and to bryng hym aunſwer of other neceſſary matters. But he (ſoone he was prayſed of the kyng for magnifying of hys power) turned the prieſthode vnto hymſelfe, layeng vp .iii.C. talentes of ſiluer for Jaſon. So whē he had gotten the commaundementes from the kynge (he came hauyng nothynge that becommeth a prieſte) but bearyng the ſtomacke of a cruell tyrant, and the wrath of the wyld brute beaſt. Then Jaſon (whyche hadde 1.ma.3 b diſceaued his owne brother (ſeeynge that hee hym ſelfe was begyled alſo, was fayne to flee into the lande of the Ammonites, and Menelaus gatte the dompnion. But as for the money that he promiſed vnto the kyng, he did nothyng therein, when Soſtratus the ruler of the Caſtell required it of him For Soſtratus was the man that gathered the Cuſtomes, wherfore they were bothe called before the kynge. Thus was Menelaus putte oute of the prieſthoode, and Lyſimachus hys brother came in hys ſtede. Soſtratus alſo was made Lord of the Cipryans. F

It hapened in the meane ſeaſon, that the Tharſians and Mallotians made inſurrection, becauſe they were geuen for a preſente vnto kynge Antiochus concubine. Then camme the kyng in all the haſte, to ſtyll them agayne, and to pacifye the matter, leauyng Andronicus there to bee hys debitie, as one mete therfore. Nowe Menelaus ſuppoſynge that he had gotten a ryghte conueniente tyme, ſtole certayne veſſels of gold out of the temple, & gaue them to Andronicus for a preſent: and ſome he ſolde at Tyrus, and in the cyties thereby. Whyche whenne Onias knewe of a suertye, hee reproued him: but he kepte hym in a Sanctuary beside Daphnis, that lyeth by Antioche. Wherfore Menelaus gat hym to Andronicus, and prayed hym that he wold slay Onias. So when he came to Onias, he counceled hym craftelye to come out of the Sanctuary, geuing him his hand with an othe (howebeit he suspecte hym) and then he slewe Onias, without any regard of righteousnesse. For the whiche cause not onely the Iewes, but other nacions also toke indignation, and were displeased for the vnrighteous death of so godly a man. And when the kynge was come agayne frome Cilicia, the Iewes and certayne of the Greekes went vnto him, complaynyng for the vnryghteous death of Onias: Yea, Antiochus him selfe was sorye in hys mynd for Onias, so that it pitied him and he wepte, remembryng his soberness and manerly behauour. Wherfore he was so kyndled in hys mynde, that he commaunded Andronicus to bee striped out of his purple clothing, and so to be led thorow out the citye: yea, and the vngracious man to be slayne in the same place where he committed his wickednes vpon Onias. Thus the Lorde rewarded him his punyshment, as he had deserued. Now when Lisimachus had done manye wycked dedes in the temple thorow the counceil of Menelaus, and the voyce came abrode: the multitude gathered them together agaynste Lisimachus: for he had caryed out nowe much gold. So when the people arose, and were full of displeasure, Lisimachus armed .iii. M. vnthryftes to defende hym: a certayne tyraunt beynge their captayne, which was growen bothe in age and woodnesse. But when the people vnderstode the purpose of Lisimachus, some gat stones, good strong clubbes, and some cast asshes vpō Lisimachus. Thus there were manye of theym wounded, some beynge slayne, and all the other chased away. But as for the wicked churchrobber him selfe, they, kylled hym beside the treasurye. Of these matters therfore ther was kept a courte agaynst Menelaus. Nowe when the kynge came to Tirus, they made a complaint vnto him of Menelaus, concerning this busines, and the ambassadours were three. But Menelaus went and promised Ptolomy, to geue him much money, if he would perswade the kynge. So Ptolomie went to the kyng into a court (wher as he was set to coole him) & brought him out of that mynd. Insomuch ỳ he discharged Menelaus from the accusacions, that notwythstandynge was cause of al mischefe, and those pore mē whiche yf they had tolde their cause, yea, before the Scithians, they shulde haue bene iudged innocente, theym he condemned to death. Thus were they soone punyshed, which folowed vpon the matter for the citye, for the people, and for the holy vessel. Wherfore, they of Tyrus toke indignacion, and buried them honorablye. And so thorowe the couetousnes of them that were in power. Menelaus remayned styll in auctority, increasing in malice to the hurt of the citesens.

At the same tyme Antiochus made hym ready to go agayne into Egipt. Then were there A sene at Jerusalem forty dayes long, horsemen, runnynge to and fro in the ayre, which hadde rayment of golde, and speares. There were seene also wholle hoostes of men weaponed, and horses, runnyng in an order, how they camme together, howe they healde foorthe theyr shyeldes, howe the harnessed menne drewe out their swoordes, and shot theyr dartes. The shyne of the golden weapons was sene, and of all maner of armure. Wherfore euery man prayed, that those tokens mighte turne to good. Nowe when there was gone forthe a false rumour, as though Antiochus hadde ben dead, Jason toke a M. men, and came sodenly vpon the city. The citi- B sens ranne vnto the walles, at the laste was the citye taken, and Menelaus fled into the castell. As for Jaſon, he ſpared not hys owne cytesens in the ſlaughter, neither considered he what greatte euyll it were, to destroye the prosperytie of hys owne kynsemen: but dyd as one that hadde gotten the victorye of hys ennemyes, and not of hys frendes. For all this gatte he not the superiorytie, but at the laſte receaued confuſyon for hys mal-2 mac.4.c ipye', • and fledde agayne lyke a vagabounde into the lande of the Ammonytes. Finallye, for a rewarde of hys wickednes he was accuſed before Are tha the kynge of the Arabians. In ſo muche that he was fayne to flee from cytye to cytye, beynge deſpiſed of euery man as a forſaker of the lawes, and an abhominable perſon. And at the laſte (as an open enemye of hys owne natural countrey and of the cytesens (he was dryuen into Egypte. Thus he that afore put many out of their owne natyue land, perysshed from home him ſelfe. He wente to Lacedemon, thynkynge there to haue gotten ſuccoure by reaſon of kynred. And he that afore had caſten manye one vnburyed, was throwen out hym ſelf, no man mournyng for him, nor puttyng him in hys graue: ſo that he neyther enioyed the buriall of a ſtraunger, neyther was C he partaker of hys fathers ſepulcre.

Now when this was done, the king ſuſpect that the Jewes woulde haue fallen from hym: wherfore he came in a great diſpleaſure out of Egipt, • and 1.mac.1.c toke the cytye by vyolence. He commaunded his men of warre alſo, that they ſhoulde kyll and not ſpare, but ſlaye downe ſuch as withſtode them, or clymed vp vpon the houſes. Thus was there a great ſlaughter of yonge men, olde men, wemen, chyldren and virgines. In three dayes were there ſlayne. lxxx. M. fourty thouſande put in preſon, and no leſſe ſolde. Yet was he not content with this but durſt go into the moſte holy temple (Menelaus that traytoure to the lawes and to hys owne naturall countrey, beynge hys gyde) and with hys wicked handes toke the holy veſſell, which other kynges and cityes had geuen thyther for the garnyſhyng and honour of the place: them toke he in his handes vnworthelye, and defiled them. So mad D was Antiochus, that he conſydered not, how that God was a lytle wroth for the ſynnes of them that dwelte in the citie, for the which ſuch confuſion came vpon that place. • And why: yf Judi.5.d

Neuertheleſſe, God hath not choſen the people for the places ſake, but the place for the peoples ſake: and therefore is the place become partaker of the peoples trouble, but afterward ſhall it enioye the wealth of them. And lyke as it is now forſakē in the wrath of almightye God, ſo when the greate God is reconciled, it ſhalbe ſet vp in hye worſhyppe agayne. So when Antiochus E had taken a. M. and. viii. He lefte debities there, to vexe the people: At Jeruſalem left he Philip a Phrygian, in maners more cruell then him ſelfe that ſet him there: At Garitim he left Andronicus and Menelaus, whiche were more greuous to the citezens then other. • Nowe as he was 1.mac.18

When he came nowe to Jeruſalem, he fained peace, and kept him ſtyll vntyll the Sabboth daye. And then he commaunded hys men to take them to their weapons (for the Jues kept holy day) and ſo he ſlew all them that were gone forth to the open play, runnyng here and there thorowe the cytye with hys men weaponed, and murthured a greate number. • But 1.mac.1.f

NOt long after this, ſente the kynge a meſſanger of Antioche, for to compel the Jewes to alter the ordinances of the fathers and the law of God, to defile the temple that was at Jeruſalem, and to call it the temple of Jupiter Olympius: and that they ſhoulde be in Gazarim, as thoſe whiche dwell at the place of Jupiter the harborous. Thys wicked ſedition of the vngodly was heauy vpon all the people: for the temple was full of voluptuouſnes, bybbing and bollyng of the heathen, of rybaldes and harlottes together. The women went into the holy place, & bare in that was not laufull. The aulter alſo was full of vnlaufull thynges, which the lawe forbiddeth to lay vpon it. The Saboths were not kept, the other ſolemne feaſtes of the lande were not regarded. To be plain, there durſte no man bee a knowen that hee was a Jewe. In the day of the kynges byrthe they were compelled parforce to offre: and when the feaſte of Bacchus was kept, they were conſtrained to weare garlandes of yuie, and ſo to go aboute to the honoure of Bacchus. Moreouer, thorowghe the counceil of Ptholomie, there wente out a commaundement in the next cities of the heathen, that they ſhold intreat the Jewes in like maner, namely, to compell theim for to do ſacrifice after the lawes of the Gentiles: and who ſo wouldе not, to put theym to death. A piteous thyng was it to ſee. There were two women accuſed to haue circumcided their ſonnes, whom when they had ledde round about the cittie, (the babes hanging at their breſtes, they caſt them downe headlynges ouer the walles. Somme that were crept in dennes, and had kept the Sa boath were accuſed vnto Philyp, and brente in the fyre: becauſe that for the feare of God, they kept the commandement ſo ſtyffely, and would not defend them ſelues. Now I beſeche all thoſe which rede this boke, that they refuſe it not for theſe falles of aduerſitie: and iudge the thynges (that are happened) for no deſtruction, but for a chaſtening of our people. And whyle whē God ſuffred not ſinners ſo long to folowe their own mynde, but ſhort ly punyſheth them, • it is a token of his great louyng kyndnes. For this grace haue we of god more then other people, that he ſuffreth not vs long to ſynne vnpunyſhed, like as other nations, that when the day of iudgement commeth, he may punyſhe them in the fulneſſe of their ſinnes. If we ſynne, he correcteth vs, but he neuer withdraweth his mercy from vs: & though he punyſhe with aduerſitie, yet dothe he neuer forſake his people. But let this that we haue ſpoken now with few wordes, be for a warnyng & exhortation of the heathen. Now will we come to the declaryng of the matter. Eleazar, one of the principal ſcribes, an aged man, and of a well fauoured countenance, was conſtreyned to gape with open mouthe, • and to eate ſwines fleſh. But he deſiring rather to die gloriouſely, then to lyue wyth ſhame, offred himſelf willingly to the martyrdom. Now when he ſaw that he muſt nedes go to it, he toke it patiently: for he was at a poynt with him ſelfe, that he would conſent to no vnlaufull thing for any pleaſure of lyfe. Thei that ſtode by being moued with pitie (but not aright) for the old frendſhip of the man, toke him aſide priuily, & praied him, that he wold let ſuch fleſhe be brought hym, as wer laufull to eate, & then to make a countenance as thoughe he had eaten of the fleſhe of the ſacrifice, lyke as the king commanded, for ſo he myght be deliuered from death, and ſo for the olde frendſhyp of the mienne, they ſhewed hym this kyndnes. But he began to conſyder his diſcrete and honorable age his noble and worſhipful ſtocke, and howe that from hys youth vp, he had bene of an honeſt and good conuerſation: yea, and howe conſtantly he had kept the ordynances and lawes cõmaunded by God, wherefore he gaue them thys anſwere, and ſaid: Yet had I rather firſte be layed in my graue. For it becommeth not myne age, ſaide hee) in anye wyſe to diſſemble, whereby many yonge perſons mighte thynke, that Eleazar being .lxxx. yere olde and tenne, were nowe gone to a ſtrange life: and ſo through myne hypocriſie (for a litle tyme of a tranſitorye lyfe) they myght be diſceaued: by thys meanes alſo ſhoulde I defyle myne age, and make it abhominable. 1 mos. 1 a

For thoughe I were not delyuered from the torments of men, yet ſhould I not eſcape the hande of almyghtye God, neither alyue nor dead: wherfore I wyl dye manfully, and do as it becommeth myne age. Wherby I maye peraduenture leaue an example of ſtedfaſtnes for ſuch as be yong, if I wyth a ready minde and manfullye dye an honeſt death, for the moſt worthy and holye lawes. When he had ſaide theſe wordes, immediatly he was drawen to the torment. Nowe they that ledde him, and were mylde a litle afore, beganne to take diſpleaſure, becauſe of the woordes that hee ſaide: for they thought he had ſpoken them of an hie mynde. But when hee was in hys martyrdome, hee mourned and ſayde. Thou (O LORD) which haſt the holy knoweledge: knoweſt openlye, that where as I might be delyuered from death, I ſuffer theſe ſore paines of my bodye: but in my mynde I am wel content to ſuffer them, becauſe I feare the. Thus thys man dyed, leauynge the memoriall of hys death for an example, not only vnto yonge men but vnto all the people, to be ſtedfaſte and manly.

The .vii. Chapter.

IT happened alſo, that there were ſeuen brethren (wyth their mother) taken, and compelled by the king, againſte the lawe to eate ſwynes fleſhe: namelye wyth ſcourges and lethern whyppes. And one of them which was ye chiefe: ſaid: What ſekeſt thou, and what requireſt thou of vs? As for vs, wee are ready rather to ſuffer death, then to offende the lawes of God, and the fathers. Then was the kyng angrye, and bad heate cauldrons and braſen pottes. Whyche when they were made hote, immediatly he commaunded the tong of him that firſte ſpake, to be cut out, to pulle the ſkinne ouer hys heade, to pare of the edges of hys handes and fete: yea, and that in the ſyghte of hys mother and the other of hys brethren. Nowe when he was cleane marred, he commaunded a fyre to be made, and ſo whyle there was any breth in him, to bee fryed in the cauldron: In the which when hee had bene longe payned, the other brethren wyth their mother exhorted him to dye manfullye, ſayinge: The Lorde God ſhal regard the trueth, and comforte vs, lyke as Moyſes teſtifieth and declareth in hys longe, ſayinge: and hee will haue compaſſion on hys ſeruauntes. So when the firſte was deade after thys maner, they broughte the ſeconde, to haue him in deriſion, pulled the ſkyn wyth the heare ouer hys head, and aſked him, yf hee woulde eate ſwynes fleſhe, or he were payned in the other members alſo throughout hys bodye. But he anſwered boldly, and ſaide: I wyll not do it. And ſo was he tormented like as the firſt, and when he was euen at the geuinge vp the ghoſte hee ſayde: Thou mooſte vngracious perſon putteſt vs nowe to death, but the kinge of the worlde ſhall rayſe vs vp whyche die for hys lawes) in the reſurrection of euerlaſting lyfe. After him, was the thyrde had in deryſion, and when he was required, hee putte oute hys tonge, and that ryght ſoone, holdynge forth hys handes manfully and ſpake with a ſtedfaſt faith. These haue I of heauen, but nowe for the lawe of God I deſpyſe theym: for my truſt is, that I ſhal receaue theym of him agayne. In ſo much that the kinge and deu. 32. c. B Gen. 11 a

C when hee was deade also, they vexed the fourth wyth tormentes in like maner. So when hee was nowe at hys death, he sayd: It is better that we being put to death of men, haue our hope John. 5 c and trust in God, for he shall raise vs vp againe. * As for thee, thou shalte haue no resurrection to lyfe. And when they had spoken to the fyfthe, they tormented him. Then looked he vnto the king and sayde: thou haste power among menne, for thou arte a mortal man also thy selfe to do what thou wilt, but thinke not, that God hath forsaken our generation. Abyde thee, tary stil a while, and thou shalte see the great power of God, howe he wyl punyshe thee and thy seede. After him they brought the sixt, which being at the point of death, sayde: Bee not disceaued O king, for this we suffer for oure owne sakes, because wee haue offended our God, and therefore marueylous thinges are shewed vpon vs. But thinke not thou whiche takest in hand to striue agaynst God, that thou shalt escape vnpunished.
D Thys excellente mother (worthye to be wel reported of, and had in remembraunce) sawe her seuen sonnes die in one day, and suffered it pacientlye, because of the hope that she had in God, yea, she exhorted euery one of them in especial, and that boldly and stedfastly wyth perfite wisdome, waking vp her wymishe thought with a manlye stomake, and sayd vnto them: I canne not tel howe ye came in my wombe, for I neither gaue you breth nor soul, no nor life: It is not I that ioined the membres of youre bodies together, but the maker of the world, which fashioned the byrth of man, and beganne al thinges. Euen hee also of hys owne mercye shal geue you breath and lyfe agayne, lyke as ye nowe regarde not your owne selues for hys lawes sake. Nowe thought Antiochus that shee had despysed him, therfore he lette her go wyth her reysones, and began to exhorte the yongest sonne (which yet was left) not only wyth wordes, but swore vnto hym wyth an oth, that he shoulde make hym a ryche and welthy man (yf he woulde forsake the lawes of hys fathers) yea, and that he should geue him what soeuer were necessary E for him. But whē the yong mā wold not bee moued for all these thynges, he called hys mother, and counceiled her to saue her sonnes life. And when he had exhorted her wyth many wordes, she promised him that she shoulde speake vnto her sonne. So she turned her vnto him (laughing the cruel tyrante to scorne) and spake with a bold voyce: O my sonne, haue pity vppon me, that bare the nine moneths in my wombe, ẏ gaue thee sucke, norished, & brought thee vp vnto thys age. I beseeche thee (my sonne) looke vpon heauen and earth, and all that is therein, and consider, that God made theym, and mannes generation of naught: so shalt thou not feare thys hangeman, but suffer death stedfastlye, like as thy brethren haue done: that I maye receaue thee agayne in the same mercye wyth thy brethren. While shee was yet speaking these wordes, the yonge man sayde: Whom loke ye for? Wherfore do ye tarye? I wyll not obeye the Leu. 11. a kinges commaundemente, * but the F lawe that God gaue vs by Moyses. As for thou that ymaginest all myschefe agaynst the Iewes, thou shalte not escape the hande of God, for wee suffer these thynges, because of oure sinnes. And thoughe God bee angrye wyth vs a litle while (for our chastening and reformation) yet shal he bee at one agayne wyth his seruauntes. But thou O shameful and moste abhominable person) Pryde not thy selfe through vaine hope, in beinge so malicious vpon the seruauntes of God: for thou hast not yet escaped the iudgement of the God which is almyghty, and seeth al thinges. My brethrē that haue suffered a litle payne, are nowe vnder the couenaunt of euerlastynge lyfe: but throughe the iudgemente of god, thou shalt be punished rightously for thy pryde. As for mee (lyke as my brethren haue done) I offer my soule & my body for ỹ lawes of our fathers, calling vpon God, that he wil sone be 2.mac.2.c merciful vnto our people: yea, & with paine and punishmente • to make the confut, ỹ he only is God. In me now and in my brethrē ỹ wrath of almighty God is at an end, which ryghteously is falle vpon al our people: Then ỹ kinge beinge kindled in anger, was more cruel vpon him then vpon al the other, and toke indignation, that hee was so vyghtelye regarded. So thys yong man dyed vndefiled, and put hys trust stil in the Lord. Laste of all after the sons, was the mother put to deth also. Let this now be ynoughe spoke, concerning the offringes, and extreme cruelnes.

So they called vppon the Lorde, that he wold haue an eye vnto his people, whiche was troden downe of euerye man: to bee gracious vnto the temple that was defiled of the vngodlye: to haue compassion vpon the destruction of the citye, which was shortlye lyke to be layed waste, to heare the voice of the bloud that cryed vnto hym, to remember the moste vnryghteous deathes of yonge innocente children, the blasphemies also done vnto his name

But specially he made such chases by nyght, in so muche that hys manlines was spoke of euery where. So when Philip sawe that the man encreased by lytle, and lytle, and that the matter prospered wyth him for the moste part: he wrote vnto Ptolemy (whych was a captayne in Celosiria and Phenices) to helpe hym in the kinges busines. • Then sente hee 1.ma.3.c

And immediatly he sente to the cityes of the Sea coste, requiring them for to bye Jewes to be their seruauntes and bond men, promising to sel them. lxxx. and tenne for one talente: but he considered not the wrath of almighty God, that was ¶ to comme vppon him. When Judas knewe of this, hee tolde the Jewes that were with hym of Nicanors comming. Nowe were there some of them fearefull, not trustinge vnto the ryghteousnes of God, and fled their waye. But the other that remayned, came together, and besought the Lord to deliuer them from that wicked Nicanor, which had solde theym or euer he came nie them: and though he wold not do it for their sakes, yet for the couenaunte that hee made wyth their fathers, and because they called vpon hys holye and glorious name. • And fyghte, it happened, that Antiochus came agayne with dyſhonoure. But when he cam to Egbathana, he gatte knowledge what was hapened vnto Nicanor & Timotheus. Howbeit he was auancyng hymselfe in his wrath, hee thoughte hee was able to auenge the iniurie that was done to them, vpon the Iewes: and therfore cõmanded to make ready his charet, hastyng on hys iourney without ceassyng, the iudgement of God prouokynge hym, because he had spoken so proudly, that he would come to Ierusalem, & make it a graue of the Iewes. But the lord God of Israell, that seeth al thyngs, smote hym with an inuisible plague, whiche no man coulde heale. For as soone as he had spoken these wordes, there came vpon hym an horrible pain of his bowels, & a sore grefe of the armes. And that was but right: for hee had martired other mennes bowells with dyuers and strange tormentes: howbeit, he woulde in no wise ceasle from his malice. Yea, he was yet the prowder and more malicious against the Iewes. But whyle he was cõmandyng to make haste in the matter, it hapned that he fell downe violently frome the charet, so that it brooseb his body, and dyd hym greate payne. And so he that thought he myght command the flouds of the sea (so proude was he beyond the condition of man) & to wey ẏ hie mountaynes in a paire of balance, was nowe brought down to the grounde, and carped vppon an horslytter, knowledging the manifest power of God vpon hym: so that the wicked body of his was ful of wormes, which in his payn fell quick out of his flesshe: In soo muche that his hoste was greued with the smell and stinke of hym. Thus he that a lyttell afore thought he myght reache to the starre of heauen, hym myght no man nowe abyde nor beare, for the vehemence of stynke. Therfore, he beyng brought frome his great pride, began for to come to the knowledge of hym selfe: for the punyshment of God warned hym, and his payn increased euermore and more. And when he himselfe mighte not abide his owne stynke, he said these wordes: It is reason to bee obedient vnto God, and that a manne desyre not to bee lyke vnto hym.

This wycked person prayed also vnto the Lorde, of whom he should haue obteyned no mercy. And as for the citie that hee camme vnto so hastily, to bryng it downe to the grounde, and to make it a graue for dead men: nowe he desyreth to deliuer it free. And as touchyng the Iewes, whome he had iudged not worthy to bee buried, but woulde haue cast theim out for to bee deuoured of the foules and wyld beastes, saying, that he woulde haue destroyed bothe olde and young: Nowe he promysed to make theym lyke the cittisens of Athens. And where as he had spoiled the holy temple afore, nowe he maketh promise to garnish it with great gifts, to increase the holy ornaments, & of his owne rentes to beare the costes and charges belongyng to the offrynge: yea and that he wold also become a Iew himselfe, to go thorow euery place of ẏ world, & to preache the power of God. But when his paynes wold not cesse, (For the ryghteous iudgemente of God was comme vpon hym) out of a very despayre, hee wrote vnto the Iewes a Letter of Intercession, conteynynge these wordes: The kyng and prince Antiochus wysheth vnto the vertuous Citesyns of the Iewes, muche healthe and good prosperitie: If yee and your chylderne fare well, and yf all thynges go after your mynd: wee geue great thankes. In my sycknes also doo I remembre you louyngely: for as I came out of Perſia, and was taken with sore dysease: I thoughte it necessarye to care for the common wealthe. Neyther despayre I in my selfe, but haue a good hope to escape this sycknes. But considerynge that my father ledde an hoste sometyme in the hygher places: and shewed whoe shoulde succeyne after hym, that (yf there happened any controuersye, or any harde thyng were declared) they in the lande myght know their chief Lorde, that there should be no insurrection. 1.mac.4.e Machabeus now & his company (through the helpe of the

the same day that the strangers polluted the temple, it hapned vpon the very same day it was cleased again: namely, * the. xxiii. days of the month called 1.mac.3.c Casleu. They kept viii. daies in gladB nes like as in the feast of the tabernacles: remembring that not long afore, they held the feast of the tabernacles vpon the mountains & in dennes like beastes. And in the same token they bare grene bowes, braunches and palmes, before him that had geuen them good fortune to clēse hys place. They agreed also together, & made a statute, that euery yeare those days should be solemnely kept of al the people of the Jewes. Howe Antiochus then (that was called the noble) died, it is sufficiently told. Nowe wil we speake of Eupator the son of that wicked Antiochus, howe it happened with him, and so with fewe wordes to comprehende the aduersitie that chaunced in the warres. When he had taken in the kingdom, he made one Lisias (which had bene captayne of the hoste in Phenices and Siria) ruler ouer the matters of the realme. For Ptolomy that was called Macron, beinge the ruler for the Jewes (and specially, to sit in iudgement for suche wronge as was done vnto them) vndertooke to deale peaceably with them. For the which cause he was accused of the frendes be fore Eupator: and when he was suspect to be a traytoure (because he had lefte Cyprus that Philometor hadde committed vnto him: and because hee departed from noble Antiochus, that he was come vnto) he poysoned hym self, and died. Nowe when Gorgias C was gouernour of the same places, he toke straungers: and vndertooke ofte times, to warre with the Jewes.
Moreouer the Idumeans that helde the strong holdes, receaued those that were driuen to Jerusalem, and tooke in hande to warre also. * But they 1.mac.5.e that wer with Machabeus besought and prayed vnto the Lorde, that hee would be their helper, and so they fell vpon the stronge holdes of the Idumeans, and wanne many places by strength: Such as cam agaynst them they slew, and killed no lesse of all together (thē twēty thousand.) Neuer theless, some no lesse then nine thousand were fled into two strong towres, hauinge all mauer of ordinaunce D to withstande theym. Then Machabeus leauing Symon, Josephus, Jathens, and those that were wyth them (which wer very many) wēt to besiege them, and to fyght where most nede was. But Machabeus & his cōpany laid sege to it cherefully four dais. Nowe they that were wythin, trusting to the strength of the place, cursed and banned exceedyngely, and made great crakyng with wicked wordes. Neuertheless, vppon the fifthe daye in the mornynge, twentye yong men of Machabeus companye, beynge set on fyre in theyr myndes (because of the blasphemye) came manfully vnto the wall, and wyth bolde stomackes, they and theyr other companyons clymed vp vpon the towres, vndertakyng to sette fyre vpon the portes, and to bourne those blasphemous persones quicke. Two dayes were they destroyenge the castelle, whiche when they founde Timotheus, (that was crepte into a corner) they killed hym, and slewe Cereas hys brother, in lyke maner, with Appollophanes. When this was done, they song Psalmes, wyth prayses and thankesgeuynge vnto the Lorde, whyche hadde doone so greate thynges for Israell, and geuen them the victorye.

NOt lōg after this, Lysias the kynges steward, and a kinsman of his (whiche had the gouernance of his matters) toke sore displeasure for the thynges that had happened, and when he had gathered ixxx. Elephantes. ☞ he cam into Jewry and then to Bethsura (a castell of defence) lying in a narowe place .v. furlonges from Jerusalem, and wan it. Now, when Machabeus and his cōpanye knewe, that the stronge holdes 2 ma. 10 c were taken, • they fell to their prayers with weepynge and teares before the Lord. And al the people in lyke maner besought him, that he wouldе sende a good aungell to deliuer Israell. Machabeus him selfe was the fyrste that made him readye to the battell, exhortyng the other that were with him, to leopard them selues, and to helpe their brethren. And when they were going forthe of Jerusalem together with a 2. mac. 3 d ready and willyng mynd, • there appeared before them vpon horsebacke a man in whyte clothyng with harnes of gold, shaking his speare. Then they praysed the Lorde altogether, whiche had shewed them mercy, and were cōforted in their mindes: in so much that they were readye, not onely to fyghte with men, but with the moste cruell beastes, yea, and run thorow the wals of syon. Thus they went on wylling ly, hauing an helper from heauen, and the Lorde mercifull vnto them. They fell mightely vpon their enemies like lyons, brought down .xi. M. fotemen .xvi. Neuertheles, the man was not without vnderstādyng, but considered by him selfe that hys power was mynyshed, and vondred howe the Jewes beynge defended by the helpe of almighty God, were not able to be ouercome: wherfore he sent them word, and promised, that he would consent to all thynges whiche were reasonable, and to make the kynge their frende. To the which prayer of Lisias, Machabeus agreed, seinge in all thynges the commen wealth, and whatsoeuer Machabeus wrote vnto Lisias concernynge the Jewes, the kynge graunted it. For there were letters, wrytten vnto the Jewes from Lisias, concernyng these wordes. Lisias sendeth greting to the people of the Jewes. John and Absalon which wer sent from you, deliuered me writynges, and required me to fulfyl the thinges concerning their errand. Therfore loke what might be graunted, I certified the kyng therof: and whatsoeuer was conuenients, I agreed therto. If ye now wil be faithfull in the matters, I shall endeuour my selfe hereafter also to do you good. As concernyng other thinges by euerye artycle thereof: I haue committed them to your messangers, and to those whom I sente vnto you, to commen with you of the same, fare ye wel. In the .C. and .xlviii. yere, the .xxiiii. daye of the moneth Dioscorinthius. Now the Kynges Letter conteyned these wordes. Kinge Antiochus sendeth gretyng vnto his brother Lisias. For so much as our father, • is nowe dead, 2 mac. 9. b our will is, that they whiche are in our realme, lyue without anye insurrection, and euery man to be diligente in his owne matters. We vnderstand also, that the Jewes wolde not consent to oure father, for to be brought vnto the custome of the Gentiles, but stiffly to kepe their owne statutes: for the which cause they require of vs also, to let them remayne styll by their owne lawes. Wherfore, our mynd is, E that thys people shall be in reste: we haue concluded and determyned also, to restore them their temple agayne, that they maye lyue accordynge to the vse and custome of their forefathers. Thou shalt do vs a pleasure therfore, if thou send vnto them and agre with them: that when they are certifyed of our mynd, they may be of good chere, and loke to their owne weale. And thys was the letter, that the kynge wrote vnto the Jewes: Kyng Antiochus sendeth gretyng vnto the counsel, & the other people of the Jewes: If ye fare wel, we haue our desire: as for vs, we are in good health. Menelaus laus came and told vs, how that your desire was to come downe to youre people, which are with vs. Wherfore, F those that will come, we geue thē free lybertye, vnto the.xxx. daye of the moneth of Aprill, that they maye vse the meates of the Jewes and their owne lawes, lyke as afore: and none of them by any maner of waies to haue harme for thynges done in ignorannce. Menelaus whom we haue sent vnto you shall commen with you at large, fare ye well. In the. Cxlviii. yere, the. xv. day of the moneth of Aprill. The Romaynes also sent a letter, concernyng these wordes. Quintus Mennius & Titus Manilius embassadors of the Romaynes, sende gretynge vnto the people of the Jewes. And therefore write shortely agayne, that we may know your mynd: Fare wel. In the. Cxlviii. yere, the. xv. day of the moneth of Aprill.

A When these couenaūtes were made, Lisias went vnto the kynge, and the Jewes tylled their grounde. But Timotheus, Apollonius the sonne of Gemei, Jerome and Demophon the prond, Nicanor the captayne of Cypers, and they that laye in those places: wold not let them lyue in reste and peace. They of Joppa also dyd euen such a shamefull dede. They prayed the Jewes that dwelte among them, to go with their wiues and children into the shyppes, whiche they hadde prepared, and dyd with them, as though they had ought them no euyll will. For so much then as there was was gone forth a generall proclamacion throwe the city because of peace, they consented therto, and suspect nothynge, but when they were gonne forthe into the deepe, they drowned no lesse then. ii. C. of theym. When Judas knewe of thys crueltie shewed vnto hys people, hee commaunded those that were wyth him to make them redy, exhortyng thē to cal vpon God the righteous iudge: went forth against those murtherers of hys brethren, set fyre in the hauen by nyghte, brente vp the shippes, and those that escaped frō the fyre he slew wyth the swearde. And when he had B done thys, he departed as thoughe he would come againe, and roote out all thē at Joppa. But when he had gotten woorde, that the Jamnites were minded to doe in lyke maner vnto the Jewes which dwelt among them, he came vpon the Jamnites by nyghte, and set fyre in the hauē wyth ŷ ships so that the light of the fyre was seene at Jerusalem vpon a ii. C. and fortye furlonges. Nowe when they were gone frō thence. ix. furlonges, in their iourney toward Timotheus. v. thousand men of fote, and v. C. horsmen of the Arabians, fought wyth him. So when the battel was earnest, & prospered wyth Judas thrōugh the helpe of God: the residue of ŷ Arabians being ouercome, besought Judas to bee at one with thē, and promised to geue him certain pastures, and to doo hym good in other thynges. Judas thynking that they should in dede be profytable concerning many thinges, promised them peace: wherevpon they shoke handes, and so they departed to their tents. Judas went vnto a citie, which was verye faste kepte wyth brydges, fensed rounde aboute wyth walles, and dyuerse kindes of people dwelling therin, called Calpin. Thei C that wer within it, put such trust in the strēgth of the walles, and in their stoare of victuailes: that they were the slacker in theyr doynges, cursinge and reuylynge Judas wyth blasphemies, and speakynge suche woordes as it becometh not. But Machabeus callinge vpon the greate Prynce of the worlde (whiche wythout anye battel rams, or ordinance of war did *caste downe the walles of Jericho, Josu. 6.

in the tyme of Josue) fell manfully vppon the walles, toke the citie, (and thorowe the helpe of the Lorde) made an exceadynge great slaughter: In so muche that a lake of two fourlonges brode whiche laye thereby, semed to flowe with the bloode of the slayne. Then departed they frō thēce. viii. C. and. l. furlonges, and came to Caraea vnto the Jewes that are called Tubianei. But as for Timotheus, they coulde not get hym there: for (not one matter dyspatched) he was departed from thence, and had left certaine men in a very strong holde. But Dositheus and Sosipater, whiche were captaynes with Machabeus, slew those that Timotheus had left in the house of defence, euen. x. M. men. And Machabeus prepared him with the. vi. M men that were about hym, set them in order by companyes, and went forthe against Timotheus, which had with hym an. C. and. xx. M. men of foote two. M. and fiue. C. horsemen. When Timotheus had knowledge of Judas commynge, he sente the women, chyldren and the other baggage vnto a castel called Carnion. (For it could not be won, and was hard to come vnto, the wayes of the same places were so narowe) and when Judas company came first in sight, the enemies wer smytten with feare, thorowe the presence of God: which seeth all thinges: In so much that they flying one here, another there, wer rather discomfyted of their owne people, and wounded with the strokes of their owne swerdes. Judas also was verye earnest in folowynge vpon theym, punyshynge those vngodly, and slew. xxx. M. men of them. Timotheus also him selfe fel into the handes of Dositheus, and Sosipater, whom he besought wyth many prayers, to let him go with his life: because he had many of the Jues fathers and brethren in prison, which (if they put hym to deathe) myght be disapointed. So when he had promised faythfully to delyuer them agayn, accordynge to the condycyon made, they let him go without harme, for the health of the brethren. And when Judas had slayne. xxv. M. he went from Carnion. Nowe after that he hadde chased away and slayne his enemies, he remoued the host toward Ephron a stronge citie, wherin dwelte manye dyuerse people of the heathen, and the stronge yonge men kepte the walles, defending them myghtely. In this tyme was much ordinaunce and prouysion of dartes. But when Judas and hys companye hadde called vppon almyghtye God (which with his power breaketh the strength of the ennemyes) they wanne the Citie, & slewe xxv. M. of theym, that were wythin. From thence went they to the Cytie of the Scithians, which lyeth. vi. C. furlonges from Jerusalē. But when the Jewes which were in the Cytye testified, that the citezins dealt louingly wyth them: yea, and intreated them kindly in the tyme of their aduersitie, Judas and hys companie gaue theim thankes, desiring them to be frendlye styl vnto them: and so they came to Jerusalem, the hie feast of the wekes being at hand. And after ỳ feast of Pentecost they went forth againste Gorgias the gouernour of Idumea, with thre. M men of fote, and four. C. horsmen. Which when they met together, it chaunsed a fewe of the Jewes to be slaine. And Dositheus one of the Bachenors a myghty horseman, toke holde of Gorgias, and woulde haue taken him quicke. But an horseman of Thratia fel vpon him, and smote of his arme, so that Gorgias escaped and fled into Moresa. Whē they nowe that wer of Gorgias side, had foughtē lōg & wer wery: Judas called vpō ỳ Lord, ỳ he wold be their helper, and captayne of the feld: and with that, he beganne wyth a mannelye voyce to take vp a songe of prayse, and a crye: In so much that he made the enemies afrayde, and Gorgias men of warre toke theyr flight. So Judas gathered his hoofte, and came into the cytie of Oduila. And when the seuenthe day cam vpon them, they clensed them selues (as the custome was, and kept the Sabboth in the same place. And vpon the daye folowyng, Judas and his company came to take vp the bodyes of them that were slayne, and to burye theym in their fathers graues. Nowe vnder the cotes of certayne Jewes which wer slayn, they found Jewels that they had take out of the Deu.7.c. temple & from the Idols of the Jamniters: which thinge is forbidden the Jewes by the law. Then euery man sawe, that thys was the cause, wherfore they were slayne. And so euerye man gaue thankes vnto the Lord for his ryghteous iudgement, which had opened the thing that was hid. They fell downe also vnto their prayers, & besought God, that the sawte which was made, myghte be put oute of remembraunce. Beysdes that, Judas exhorted the people earnestly, to kepe them selues from suche synne: for so muche as they sawe before they eyes: that these men wer slaine for the same offence. So he gathered of euery one a certayne, in so much that he brought together two thousande drachmas of syluer, whiche he sente vnto Jerusalem, that there might a sacrifice be offered for the mysdede. In the whiche place he dyd well and right: for he had some consideration and pondrynge of the lyfe that is after thys tyme. For if he had not thoght that they, which were slayne, dyd yet lyue, it had bene superfluous and vayne, to make anye prowe or sacrifyce, for them that were dead. But forsomuch as he sawe ỳ they which dye in the fauoure and belefe of God, are in good reste and ioye, he thoughte it to be good and honorable for a reconcilynge, to doo the same for those which were slayne, that the offence might be forgiuen.

1.mac.6d IN the .Cxlix. yeare gat Judas knowledge, that Antiochus Eupator was comming with a great power into Jury, and Lisias the stewarde and ruler of hys matters wyth hym, hauyng an.C. and.x.M. men of fote. v.M. horsemen. xxii. Elephātes, and thre.C charettes. Menelaus also ioyned him selfe with them (but with great dyscreate) and spake fayre to the kyng, not for any good of the countrie but because he thoughte to haue bene made some greate man of auctorite. But the kyng of kynges moued Antiochus mynde agaynst this vngodly person, and Lisias informed ỳ king, that thys Menelaus was the cause 2.mac.4d of all myschefe: so that the kynge commaunded to take him, and (as the maner of them is) to put him vnto death in the same place. There was also in the same place a tower of .L. cubites hye heaped with asshes: but aboue it was so made, that men myghte looke downe on euery syde. Whereinto the king commaunded that shamefull person to be cast among the asshes, as one that was cause of all vngraciousnes. And reason it was, that the vnthryft should dye such a death, and not to be buried, for he had done much mischefe vnto the alter of God (whose fyre and asshes were holye) therefore was it right, that he him selfe also shoulde be destroyed with asshes. But the kyng B was wood in hys mynde, and came to shewe hym selfe more cruell vnto the Jewes, then his father was. Whiche when Judas perceaued, he cōmaun- 2ma.10.8 ded the people to call vpon the Lorde night and daye, that he woulde nowe helpe them also, lyke as he had doone alwaye: For they were afrayde to be put from their lawe, from their naturall countrey, and from the holy temple: and not to suffer the people (whiche a lytle whyle afore began to recouer) to be subdued agayne of the blasphemous nacions. So when they had C done this together, and besoughte the Lorde of mercy, with weppng and fastyng thrce dayes longe, flat vpon the grounde: Judas exhorted them, to make them selues ready. But he and the elders together deuised, to go forth first with their people, afore ỳ king brought his host into Jewry, and afore he besyeged the cite, and so to commyt the matter vnto God. Wherfore he ascribed the power of all things vnto God the maker of the worlde, exhorting his people to fyghte manfully (yea, euen vnto vnto death) for the lawes, the temple, the cityte, their owne native countrey, and to defend the citezens: and set hys host before Modin. He gaue them also that were with him, a token of the victory of God, chosing out of ỹ manyest yong men, wēt by night into the kinges pauilion, slew of the host. xiiij M. men, and the greatest Elephantes with those that sat vppon them. Thus when they had brought a great feare and rumour among the tentes of their enemyes: and all thinges went prosperously with them, they departed in the breake of the day, God being their helper and defender. Now whē the kynge perceaued the manlynes of the Iewes, he went about to take the stronge places by crafte, and remoued his host vnto Bethsura, which was a well kepte house of defence of the Iewes: but they were chased awaye, hurt and discomfited. And Judas sent vnto them that were in it, such thinges as were necessary. In the Jues host also there was one Rhodocus, which tolde the enemyes their secretes: but they sought him oute, & when they had gottē him, they put him in prison. After this did the kyng cōmen with thē ỹ were in Bethsura, take truce with them, departed, & stroke a battell with Judas, whiche ouercame hym. But when he vnderstode, that Philyppe (whō he had left to be ouerseer of his businesses at Antioche) began to rebel agaynst him, he was astonyed in hys mind: so that he yelded himself vnto ỹ Iewes, and made theim an othe to do whatsoeuer they thought ryght. Now when he was reconciled with theym, he offered, made muche of the temple, gaue greate gyftes vnto it, embraced Machabeus, makynge hym captayne and gouernour from Ptolomays vnto the Gerrenes. Neuertheles, when he came to Ptolomays, the people of the cytye were not contente with the bonde of frendeshyppe: for they were afraide, that he wold breake the couenaunt. Then went Lisias vp into the seat, & enformed the people, shewed them the cause why, and pacified thē. So he came again to Antioche. This is nowe the matter concernynge the kinges iourney, and hys returne.

The. xiiii. Chapter.

After three yeres was Judas informed how that Demetrius the son of Seleucus was come vp with a great power & ships, throughe the hauen of Tripolis, to take certaine commodious places and contreys, agaynst Antiochus and his captaine Lisias. Nowe Alcymus (which had bene hie preest, and wilfully defyled him selfe in the time of the mixting) seing that by no meanes hee coulde bee helped, nor haue anye more entraunce to the aultare: he camme to king Demetrius in the hundred and one and fyftye yeare, presenting vnto hym a crowne of golde, a palme and an olyue tre: which (as men thought) belonged to the temple, and that daye he helde hys tonge. But when he had gotten opportunitie for hys madnesse, Demetrius called him to coūcel, and asked him what thinges or counsails the Iewes leaned vnto. Hee answered: The Iewes that bee called Assidei (whose captayne is Judas Machabeus) maintayne warres, make insurrections, and will not lette the realme be in peace. For I beinge depriued of my fathers honor (I meane the hye preesthoode) am come hither: partlye because I was faithful vnto ỹ king, & partly because I sought the profit of the citezēs. And why, al our people throughe ỹ wickednes of thē are not a litle troubled. Wherefore, I beseech the O king consider al these thinges diligētly, & thē make some prouision for the land, & ỹ people, acording to ỹ kindnes ỹ ỹ hast offred vnto thē. For as lōg as Judas hath ỹ vpperhande, it is not possible ỹ wē can liue in peace. Whē he had spokē these wordes, other frēdes also hauing euil will at Judas, set ỹ kinge Demetrius on fyre against him. Which immediatly sēt Nicanor (ruler of ỹ Elephāts), a captaine into Iewry, cōmaunding him to take Judas hym self alyue, but to slay thē ỹ wer wt him, & to make Alcimus hie preest of ỹ great temple thē. Then they ỹ flew out of Iewry frō Judas came to Nicanor by flockes, thinking the harme and decaye of the Iewes to be their welfare. Nowe when the Iewes herd of Nicanors commyng, and the gatherynge together of the Heathen, they ſprynkled them ſelues 2 ma.10c with earth, * and beſought him, whiche made them hys people, and euer defended his owne portion with euidente tokens, that he would preſerue theym ſtyll. So at the commaundemente of the captayne, they remoued from thence, and came to a towne called Deſſau. And Simon Judas brother fell in hande with Nicanor, but thorowe the ſodayne commyng of the enemyes, he was afrayde. Neuertheleſſe, Nicanor hearyng the manlynes of them that were with Judas, and the bolde ſtomakes that they hadde to fight for their natural countrey, durſt not proue the matter with bloodſhedyng. Wherfore he ſent Poſſidonius, Theodocius and Mathias before, to geue and to take peace. So whē they had taken long aduyſement there vpon, and the captayne ſhewed it vnto the multitude, they were agreed in one mynd to haue peace. And they appoynted a day to ſyt vppon theſe matters quietlye amonge them ſelues, the ſtoles alſo wer brought and ſet forth. Neuertheleſſe, Judas commaunded certayne men of armes to wayte in conueniente places, leſte there ſhould ſodaynely aryſe any euyll thorow the enemyes. And ſo they commoned reaſonably together. Nicanor, whyle he D abode at Jeruſalem, ordred him ſelfe not vnreaſonably, but ſente away the people that were gathered together. He loued Judas euer with his hert, and fauoured him. He prayed him alſo to take a wyfe, and to brynge forth children. So he maryed, lyued in reſt, and they led a commen life. But Alcimus perceauynge the loue that was betwyxte them, and howe they were agreed together, came to Demetrius, and tolde him that Nicanor had taken ſtraunge matters in hand, and ordeyned Judas (an enemie of the realme) to be the kynges ſucceſſour. Then the kynge was ſore diſpleaſed, and thorowe the wycked accuſations, which Alcimus made of Nicanor, he was ſo prouoked, that he wrote vnto Nicanor, ſayinge: that he was very angrye for the frendeſhyppe and agreemente, which he had made with Machabeus Neuertheles, he cōmanded him in all the haſt, ỹ he ſhould take Machabeus preſoner, and ſende him to Antioche. Which letters whē Nicanor had ſene E he was at hys wyttes ende, and ſore greued, that he ſhold breake ỹ things wherin they had agreed: ſpecially, ſeynge Machabeus was the man, that neuer did him harme. But becauſe he mighte not withſtande the kynge, he ſought opportunitie to fulfill his commaundemente. Notwithſtandynge, when Machabeus ſawe that Nicanor began to be churliſh vnto hym, & that he intreated hym more roughlye then he was wont, he perceaued that ſuch vnkindnes came not of good, and therfore he gathered a fewe of his men and withdrewe him ſelfe from Nicanor, which when he knewe that Machabeus had manfully preuented him he came into the great and moſt holye temple: and commaunded the prieſtes (which were doyng their vſuall offerynges) to deliuer him the man. And when they ſware that they could not tel wher the mā was whō he ſought, he ſtretched out hys hand, * and made 1.mac.7a an othe ſayinge: If ye will not deliuer me Judas captyue, I ſhall remoue thys temple of GOD into the playne felde, I ſhall breake down the aulter, & conſecrate this temple vnto Bacchus. After theſe wordes he departed. Then the Prieſtes lyfte vp their F handes toward heauen, and beſought hym that was euer the defendoure of theyr people, ſayinge: Thou, O Lorde of all, whiche haſte nede of nothynge, wouldeſt that the temple of thy habitation ſhould be amonge vs. Therefore nowe O moſt holy Lorde, kepe this houſe euer vndefiled, which lately was cleanſed. Nowe was there accuſed vnto Nicanor, one Raſis an

Elder-

Alderman of Jerusalem, a louer of the whole citie, and a man of good repoꝛt: which foꝛ the kynd herte that he bare vnto the people, was called a father of the Jewes. Thys man ofte tymes, when the Jewes were mynded to kepe them selues vndefiled, defended and deliuered them, beyng content stedfastly to spend hys bodye and G his lyfe foꝛ hys people. So Nicanoꝛ wylyng to declare the hate that he bare to the Jewes, sent fyue hundred men of war to take him: foꝛ he thoght if he gate hym he shoulde bꝛynge the Jewes in great decay. Nowe when the people beganne to rushe in at hys house, to bꝛeake the doꝛes, and to set fyꝛe on it: he beyng nowe taken, wold haue defended hym selfe wyth hys swearde: choosynge rather to dye manfully, then to yelde hym selfe to those wycked doers: and because of his noble stocke, he had rather haue bene put to extreme cruelty. Notwithstanding, what tyme as he mysled of his stroke foꝛ hast, and the multitude fell in violentlye betwyxte the doꝛes, he ranne boldely to the wall, and cast hym selfe downe manfully amonge the heape of them whiche gaue soone place to hys fall, so that he fell vpon his belly. Neuertheles, whyle ther was yet bꝛeath within hym, he was kyndled in hys mynde, and whyle hys bloode gushed out exceadyngly (foꝛ he was very soꝛe wounded) he ranne thoꝛow the myddest of the people, and gat hym to the toppe of a rocke. So when his blood was nowe gone, he toke out his owen bowelles with both hys handes, and threwe them vpon the people callyng vppon the Lꝛde of lyfe and spꝛete to rewarde hym thys agayne, and so he dyed.

A 1.mac.7d NOw when * Nicanoꝛ knew that Judas was in the countrey of Samaria, he thought with all hys powꝛer to stryke a fyelde with him vpon a Sabboth day. Neuertheleſſe, the Jewes that wer compelled to ge with hym, sayde: O doo not so cruelly and vnkyndly, but halow the Sabboth day, and woꝛshyp hym that seeth all thynges. Foꝛ all this, yet said the vngracious persone: 3.re.20c
* Is there a myghtye one in heauen, that commaunded the Sabboth daye to be kept? And when they sayd: yea: the lyuyng God, the myghty Lꝛd in heauen, * commaunded the seuenthe daye to bee kepte, he sayde: And I am myghty vppon earth, to commaunde them foꝛ to arme theym selues, and to perfourme the kynges busynes. Not withstanding, he might not haue his purpose. Nicanoꝛ had deuysed with B greate pꝛide to ouercome Judas, and to bꝛyng away the victoꝛie: But Machabeus had euer a fast confidence and a perfect hope in God, that he wolde healpe hym, and exhoꝛted his people, not to bee afrayde at the commyng of the heathen, but alwaye to remembꝛ the healpe that had ben shewed vnto them from heauen: yea, and to be sure nowe also, that almyghty God wold geue them the victoꝛy. He spake vnto them out of the Law and Pꝛophetes, puttyng them in remembꝛance of the battailes, that they had stryken afoꝛe, and made theym to bee of a good courage. So when theyꝛ hertes wer pluckt vp, he shewed them also the disceytfulnesse of the Heathen, and howe they wouldе keepe no couenaunt noꝛ othe. Thus he weaponed theym, not wyth the armour of sheld and speare, but wyth wholsome wꝛdes and exhoꝛtations. He shewed them a dreame also, wherthoꝛowe he made theim all C glad, whiche was thys: He thought that hee sawe Onias (whyche hadde bene hye Pꝛieste, a vertuous and louynge man, sad, and of honest conuersation, wel spoken, and one that had bene exercysed in godlynesse, frome a chylde, holdyng vppe hys handes towarde Heauen, and pꝛaysenge foꝛ his people. After thys, there appered vnto hym an other man, whyche was aged, honourable, and glozious. And Onias sayd: Thys is a louer of the bꝛethꝛen, and of the people of Israel.

This is he that prayeth much for the people and for al the holy citie: Jeremye the prophete of God. He thought also that Jeremy helde out the ryght hand, and gaue vnto Judas a sweard of gold, saying: Take this holy sword a gifte from God, wherewith thou shalt smite downe the enemies of the people of Israel. And so they wer wel conforted through the wordes of Judas, and tooke corage vnto thē, so that the yonge menne were determined in their mindes to fyght, and to bide stifly at it: In so much that in the thynges whiche they tooke in hande, their boldnes shewed the same, because the holy citie and the temple were in peril: for the which they toke more care, then for their wiues, children, brethrē and kynsefolckes. Agayne, they that were in the Citie, were more carefull for those which were to fight. Nowe when they were al in a hope that the iudgement of the matter was at hand and the enemies drewe nie, the hoste being set in aray, the Elephantes and horsemen euery one standinge in hys place: Machabeus considered the comming of the multitude, the ordenance of dyuerse weapons, the cruelnes of the beastes, and helde vp hys handes
D toward heuen, calling vpon the Lord Jud.7.c. that doth wonders, • whiche geueth not the victory after the multitude of weapons and power of the hoste (but to them that please him) accordinge to hys owne wil. Therefore in his prayer he sayde these woordes. O Lorde, Iuiac.7.e • thou that diddest send thyne Angell in the tyme of Ezekiah king of Juda and in the hoste of Sennacherib slewest in hundred foure score and fyue thousand: send now also thy good angel before vs, (O Lorde of heauens) in the fearefulnes and dreade of thy myghty arme, that they whiche come agaynst thy holy people to blaspheme them, maye be afraid. And so he made an ende of hys wordes. Then Nicanor and they that were with hym, drewe nye with shawmes and songes but Judas and hys companye with prayer and calling vpon God. With their handes they smote, but with their heartes they prayed vnto the Lorde, and slewe no lesse then .xxxv. M. menne. For through the presente helpe of God they wer gloriously cōforted. Nowe when they lefte of, and were turning agayne with ioye, they vnderstoode that Nicanor him selfe was slaine with the other. Thē they gaue a great shout and a crye, praising the almyghty Lord with a loud voice.
E And Judas (which was euer ready to spend hys body and lyfe for hys citezins commaunded to smite of Nicanors head, with hys arme and hand and to be brought to Jerusalem. Whē F he came there, he called all the people, and the Priestes at the aulter with those that were in the castell, and shewed them Nicanors heade, and hys wycked hande, whiche he hadde presumptuously holden vp againste the temple of God. He caused the tongue also of that vngodlye Nicanor to be cut in lyke prces, and to be caste to the foules, and the cruel mannes hande to be hanged vp before the temple. So euerye manne gaue thankes vnto the Lorde, sayinge: blessed be he that hath kepte hys place vndefyled. As for Nicanors heade, hee hanged it vp vpon the hie castell, for an euidente and playne token of the helpe of God. And so they agreed altogether to kepe that day holye, namelye the thyrtenth daye of the moneth Adar, whyche in the Sirians language is called the next day before Mardocheus day.

Thus was Nicanor slayne, and frō that time forth the Jewes had the citty in possessi-on: And here wil I now make an ende.
